Goods were shipped deliverable to the order of the shippers or their assigns. The bill of lading stated that "freight for said goods was to be paid as per charter-party, with average accustomed, reserving lien in full on cargo for full amount as stipulated therein." The charter-party showed "that H. and Co. undertook to supply a full cargo for the ship, and that R. H., agent for the ship, agreed with H. and Co. that the said ship should proceed to London dock, or any other suitable dock, for loading salt at party's option, or so near thereto as she can safely get, to be at all times afloat and in safety, and then load for the charterer's agent a full and complete cargo of salt, not exceeding what the master considers sufficient cargo, which the charterers engage to ship, not exceeding what she can reasonably carry with her stores, provision, and furniture, and being so loaded shall therewith proceed to Calcutta, or so near thereto as she may safely get, and there deliver as per bills of lading, and on being paid freight at the rate of twenty-three shillings per ton." The freight to be paid thus: "£500 by charterer's acceptance at two months on sailing, less 2½ per cent. insurance; or cash on sailing, less 5 per cent. interest and insurance, at charterer's option, and the balance in cash in delivery as master requires, at current rate of exchange; 2 per cent. commission to charterers in lieu of consignment."

Held that "a sum of money payable before the arrival of the ship at her port of discharge, and payable by the shippers of the goods at the port of shipment, is not freight in the strict legal acceptation of the term, with all the incidents of freight in giving the shipowner the right of lien, unless it is stipulated for." Here the owners had a lien upon the goods for freight, notwithstanding that the bill of exchange for £500 had been given. Thomas v. Ogle, Bourke's Rep., A. O. J., 100.

The plaintiff chartered a ship of which he was master to one C. H. C., of Calcutta, under a charter-party by which it was agreed that the ship (which was then at Melbourne) should proceed to certain ports and there load a cargo for Calcutta, "the cargo to be delivered to the charterer at Calcutta, on being paid freight at and after the rate of the lump sum of £1,150 for the full reach of the ship; the said freight to be paid on the unloading and right delivery of the cargo as customary, less any advances that may have been made." On the arrival of the ship at Calcutta C. H. C. requested the plaintiff to deliver the cargo to the defendants as his agents, which the plaintiff agreed to do on having payment of the freight guaranteed by the defendants. The defendants were bonâ-fide holders of the bills of ladlng which had been signed by the plaintiff in respect of the cargo. They sent to the agents of the plaintiff in Calcutta the following letter: "As it will be necessary for us for the protection of our interests to get delivery of the cargo, and as we do not care about further trouble in the matter, we agree to guarantee payment of the balance of freight due on the charter-party, less any claims for short delivery," &c. On unloading there was found to be a deficiency in quantity between the goods mentioned in the bills of lading and those actually shipped and delivered. Held that notwithstanding this the plaintiff was entitled to the whole of the freight specified in the charter-party, and was justified in keeping the cargo until the freight was paid. J. S. Dods and others v. C. F. Stewart, 8 B. L. R., 340; and 17 S. W. R., C. R., 340.

7.—Charter-Party.

The plaintiffs chartered a ship of the defendant, and by the charter-party it was stipulated that the said ship, being tight, staunch, and strong, should receive from the plaintiffs a full cargo of rice or grain, and being so loaded should therewith proceed to St. Denis, the freight to be paid there on right delivery of cargo. The penalty for non-performance of the charter-party was to be the estimated amount of freight. The plaintiffs began to load on May 3rd, and continued doing so until June 10th, having then shipped very nearly the full cargo; they then stopped loading in consequence of a notice from the defendants that the ship was leaking. In consequence of the leakage the cargo had to be shifted, and a portion of it, found to be damaged, had to be replaced after the leak was stopped. The charges of shifting the cargo and the cost of the cargo substituted were paid by the defendant. Considerable delay occurred in consequence of the leak, and the loading was not completed until the end of July. On May 28th, when the plaintiffs had loaded a portion of the cargo, and had obtained bills of lading, they drew a bill of exchange at sixty days for the value of the cargo covered by the bills of lading on their agent at St. Denis, which they sold to the Comptoir d'Escompte de Paris, hypothecating the cargo for the amount of their draft. Other similar drafts were subsequently drawn and sold. When the plaintiffs received notice of the leakage, they in anticipation of the delay which would occur in consequence, arranged with the Comptoir d'Escompte that the bills should not be forwarded forthwith, but should be held by the Comptoir d'Escompte, and renewed by the plaintiffs on the completion of the loading, the plaintiffs paying interest on the bills in the meantime at 9 per cent. per annum. On renewing the bills the plaintiffs, in consequence of the difference in the rate of exchange, were out of pocket Rs. 400. In an action against the owner for breach of the charter-party in not supplying a ship tight, staunch, and strong, as stipulated, the plaintiffs sought to recover, as damages arising out of such breach of the charter-party, the interest paid by them on the drafts in pursuance of their arrangement with the Comptoir d'Escompte, the sum they had to pay on renewing the bills, a further sum for interest on bills they could not negotiate in consequence of not being able to obtain bills of lading from the defendant, and the value of the stamps on the bills which had been cancelled in pursuance of the plaintiff's arrangement with the Comptoir d'Escompte. Held that such damages were too remote. Robert and Charriol v. Issal, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 20.

A charter-party made between the defendants (the owners of the Seaforth) and H. and C. (the freighters), provided that the owners should employ at the ports of discharge the consignee nominated by the freighters to transact the ship business there inwards and outwards on the customary terms, not exceeding 2½ per cent. on amount of freight payable inwards and 5 per cent. outwards.

H. and Co. nominated the plaintiffs to transact the ship's business in Bombay (a port of discharge) with the knowledge and consent of the master of the Seaforth, and the plaintiffs accepted and acted under such nomination.

The defendants refused to pay the plaintiffs' commission on the outward freight of the Seaforth, on the ground that, under the circumstances under which such freight was procured, the plaintiffs were not under the charter-party entitled to receive commission on it.

Held that the plaintiffs were sufficiently within the consideration of the charter-party to maintain a suit for the breach of such clauses of it as were inserted for their benefit.

Meaning of the mercantile expression of ship "going seeking" discussed. Blackwall and Co. v. Jones and Co., 7 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 144.

8.—Salvage.

Where a ship is in condition of actual peril, and the services of a tug are sought for, and directed to the purpose of releasing her from that condition, such services are salvage services. But where there is nothing in those services as regards risk or exertion or other conduct of the salvors to make them differ from ordinary towage services, their reward should be estimated as for towage with salvage liberality. The "Alabama," Harrison, master, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 139.

In estimating the value of salvage service, the Court is bound to consider the time, labour, skill, enterprise, and risk of the salvors, as well as the value of the property engaged in the service, and also the degree of danger from which the property is rescued and the value of the property so rescued.

Steamboats are entitled to a higher rate of reward than other vessels by reason of the promptness with which they are enabled to render services in such cases. The "Lady Joceleyn," 2 Mad. Rep., 355.

A dinghee laden with gilders valued at Rs. 20,000 was being propelled across the river when a squall coming on and the dinghee being in some danger, the gilders were taken on board a flat for safety, and kept there till the squall subsided. Held that the owners of the flat had no claim for salvage, and that 150 rupees was a fair remuneration for services rendered. Urna Churn Chetty v. W. Gordon, 1 Hyde's Rep., 212.

9.—Collision.

The owners of the ship A. having obtained a decree against the T. for damages occasioned by collision, the T. appealed on the grounds, 1st, that she was not liable, as she had a harbour-master on board, who was in charge of the ship at the time of the collision; 2nd, that the mere fact of her cable having some hours previously jammed, and thereby rendered it necessary for her to take up a comparatively unsafe position, her being in which was the immediate cause of the accident, did not render her liable; and, 3rd, the A. could not recover damages, as she was bound to be ready at her moorings in case of any emergency, and might have avoided the collision if she had been so. Appeal dismissed without costs.

Held that an accident to the gear of a ship does not of itself alone render her liable for damages for a collision of which it is a remote occasion.

That a ship at anchor in the port should keep a look-out, and be ready to take all reasonable means for her own safety in an emergency. The "Thaletta," "Anne," Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 87.

The ship Thames was lying a mere hulk, waiting for repair, when a bore drifted her stern foremost up the river, and she came into collision with another ship. No negligence was proved against the master, and the accident was held to be inevitable, and no costs were decreed on either side. Hadjee Abdoola Rohoman Moosan v. The Owners of the ship "Thames," Bourke's Rep., O. A. J.. 21.

The ship T. having got adrift in a dark night, in consequence of a collision, the harbour-master tried to anchor her, but failing to, as her cable jammed, finally brought her up inside the ship A., which was moored off the Howrah side of the Hooghly, this being the only berth the T. could then secure. The next flood swung both ships, and the T. fouled the A., damaging her, and causing her to part her cables, in consequence of which she suffered further damage from subsequent collisions. The owners of the A. sued the T. for the whole damage done. The defence was that the promovents, by adopting certain precautions, might have prevented the accident; that the T. being in charge of the port authorities was not liable, and that no care or skill on her part could have prevented the accident.

The T. did not allege a liability of any of the vessels subsequently collided with. Judgment was given for the plaintiffs for the whole amount of damages sued for.

Held that liability for damages occasioned by collision rests, primâ-facie, on the colliding vessel. That a ship in port is bound to be prepared for such exigencies only as might be expected to arise from the circumstances she knew to surround her, that is, a ship is protected by the port rules from liability for damage only when it is due to the acts or omissions of the officials in charge of her. Held also that the ship is liable for all the consequences occasioned by an accident that results from any defect in her equipment, or want of care or skill of her crew, &c. The "Thaletta," William Harvey, master, Bourke's Rep., Ad., 1.

The ship H. in charge of a pilot (acting as harbour-master) when proceeding across the bow of the ship I. S., which was at anchor, to take up a clear mooring, came into collision with and slightly damaged her, and this suit was for the damage so occasioned. Both sides relied on Act XXII of 1855 and the Port Rules of 1856, the plaintiff contending that the officer in charge was not such officer as the said Act and Rules referred to; and the defendant that he was. The suit was dismissed with costs.

Held that a ship is primâ-facie liable for damages occasioned by a collision resulting from an error in judgment of the officer in charge of her. Held also that a vessel is exempted from liability for the fault of a pilot in charge of her,—first, where a master is authorized to employ a pilot, and is exempted from responsibility if he elects to do so; and, secondly, where the employment of a pilot is compulsory, and the owners of the vessel so employing him are relieved from responsibility for his misconduct. That the legislation regarding the employment of pilots and other officers in the port of Calcutta is contained in Act XXII of 1855 and the Port Rules of 1856. That where no special requisition is made by the port authorities, under Rules 2 and 7, a ship may move at her discretion in the port. That it is unlawful, under Section 12 of Act XXII of 1855, to moor a vessel in the port without having a port officer on board to take command of the ship. The "Hanover," James Browne, master, Bourke's Rep., Ad., 15.

One who has sued for damages caused by a collision at sea, and out of the jurisdiction of the High Court, subjects himself to a cross-suit for damages caused by the same collision, although himself residing out of the jurisdiction of the Court.

An order rejecting, for want of jurisdiction, a plaint brought under such circumstances, was set aside on appeal, and the costs of the appeal ordered to be costs in the suit. Bombay Coast and River Steam Navigation Company v. Rénd Hebunt, 4 Bom. Rep., O. C., 149.

1.—STATUS.

The law allows a person the right to cease to be a Hindoo or Mahometan in the fullest sense of the word, and to become a Christian, and to claim for himself and his descendants all the rights and obligations of a British subject. Hogg v. Greenway and others, 2 Hyde's Rep., 3.

A. stated that he was born in 1848; that his great-grandfather was, according to the tradition of the family, a European (but of what country in Europe he did not know) residing at Madras, and his great-grandmother, a native Hindu or Mahometan; that he did not know whether his great-grandfather and great-grandmother were married, or who his grandmother was, or whether his grandfather was married; that his father married a lady bearing an English name; that he himself and all his relations were Christians; that he was born in Calcutta, and knew of no relatives in Europe. Held that he was a legitimate descendant of a European British subject, and therefore his age of majority was twenty-one years. Plaintiff being a minor, his suit was not dismissed, but he was directed to appoint a next friend to sue for him. Rollo v. Smith and others, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 11.

A deaf and dumb person is not on that account alone to be deemed incompetent to sue or to be sued. Buggee Ram v. Buldeo Singh, 2 N. W. R., 414.

2.—GUARDIAN AND WARD.

A minor is bound by all acts of his guardian done in good faith, particularly if he, when he comes of age, gives an acknowledgment to the guardian admitting himself liable for all debts of his ancestor, and for all debts incurred by his guardian, except certain specified ones. Hurro Chunder Chowdhry v. Bungsee Mohun Dass, 1 W. R., Mis., 16.

Suits for or against minors can only proceed when they are duly represented by a guardian or next friend. Sama Soondery Debia v. Grish Chunder Banerjee, 3 W. R., Act X R., 138.

The appellants made a claim upon the respondents in respect of certain bonds given during their minority by their executor and guardian. On attaining majority, the respondents, being desirous of avoiding payment, were advised that they could only do so by instituting a suit to which the executor must be a party, and in which a settlement of his accounts would be required. Rather than do this, they came to terms with the appellant in order to obtain time for the payment of the debt by instalments, and a kistbundee was accordingly executed. Held that the respondents could not now, after the death of their guardian, dispute their liability for a debt which they had thus deliberately undertaken to pay. Gholab Khoonwarree Bebee v. Eshur Chunday Chowdhry, 2 W. R., P. C., 47.

Suit for the recovery of a minor's share of the consideration paid for a mouroree lease granted by the minor's co-proprietors on their own behalf and as his guardians, in order to raise money required for the expenses of the joint estate, which lease was cancelled (on the suit of the minor when he came of age) so far as his share was concerned.

Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover without proof of fraud, and that the evidence tendered by the plaintiff (namely, the record of the case instituted by the minor for the cancelment of the lease) was not admissible to prove the allegation of fraud. Doorga Churn Bhuttacharjee v. Shoshee Bhoosun Mitter, 5 W. R., S. C. C., Ref., 23.

Where the father of a minor lent on account a sum of money to the defendant, and died without having received back the money, and the account was continued with the defendant by the mother and guardian of the minor, and a balance was struck during the minority of the infant, it was held that the cause of action arose at the time such balance was struck; and that, as the cause of action accrued to the minor during his disability, his representatives could sue to recover the balance at any time during the time of disability, and that a claim by the minor on attaining his majority, or, if he should die, by his representative, would not be barred if preferred within three years from the cessation of the disability. Further, the extension of the period of limitation conceded to a minor on account of legal disability is not affected by the fact that during his minority he is represented by a guardian. Mahipatrave Chundrarav v. Nensuk Anandrav Shet Marvadi, 4 Rom. Rep., A. C. J., 199.

Held that a decree obtained against a minor and his property represented by an unauthorized guardian may be set aside by a lawful guardian without imputation of fraud or collusion, and that such decree would have no effect, and will not be binding on the minor and against his property. Mussamut Khooshalo v. Subookh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 175.

Where the plaintiff was a minor, and his interest could not primâ-facie be alienated,—Held that the onus of proving that due enquiries were made as to the necessities for the loan, and that it was incurred by the manager for the benefit of the estate, lay on the defendant.

It is not necessary to show that such necessities actually existed, but that reasonable enquiry was made as to the existence of such necessities, and the object for which the loan was intended. Poolunder Singh v. Ram Pershad, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 147.

A minor's estate is not liable under bonds contracted by his guardian otherwise than for the minor's benefit, and without legal necessity. Dhamoo Lall and others v. Government, 11 W. R., 240.

Held that there was no error in law in an order of a lower Appellate Court directing that a minor should be excluded from the category of defendants in a suit, inasmuch as the minor, not having been represented by a guardian, would not be bound by any decree of the Court, as the law does not recognize any act of a minor when not having a guardian before the Court. Radhakishore Surmah v. Ram Chunder Doss and others, 11 W. R., 300.

Although purchasers are not bound to look to the application of the purchase-money, or to enquire whether there were goods sufficient to redeem the mortgage, and so to obviate the necessity of a sale of a minor's property, yet the purchaser not proving necessity or not satisfying himself of the existence of necessity, and the unwillingness of the minor's mother to dispose of the property in his minority, are sufficient legal grounds for reversal of the sale. Gomain Sircar v. Praunath Goopto, 1 W. R., 14.

The bonâ-fide act of a guardian for the benefit of a minor's estate, in giving a farm of the estate, is not one which a Court ought to set aside except for strong reasons. Huro Mohun Mookerjee v. Kaleenath Mookerjee, 2 W. R., 270.

A guardian cannot grant his ward's lands in perpetuity except on clear proof of benefit to the minor. Oddoyto Chunder Koondoo v. Prosunno Koomar Bhuttacharjee, 2 W. R., 325.

The guardian, at the time of the suit, and not the former guardian of a minor, is held liable, to the extent of the funds in his hands belonging to the minor, for a debt incurred for the benefit of the minor. Sheikh Azeemooddeen Ahmed v. Moonshee Auther Ali, 3 W. R., 137.

A. sued B. to recover possession of an hereditary jote, of which he alleged he had been dispossessed by B. during his minority. B. raised the defence of relinquishment by A.'s grandmother and guardian. The Lower Court decided on the merits against A., but on special appeal the High Court held that it was not shown that the relinquishment was for the benefit of the minor, and therefore the decree of the Court below must be reversed.

On review, Loch, J., held that the judgment of the High Court on special appeal must be reversed as being ultra vires, for that the question of injury to the minor was not urged in the Court below; no issue was raised on that point, and even if the relinquishment of the jote by the guardian did turn out to the disadvantage of the minor, that was not sufficient ground for setting aside the act of the guardian as invalid, provided that, at the time it was done, it appeared to be for the interest of the minor and was done in good faith.

Glover, J., held that the conclusion of the High Court on special appeal was justified, but was willing to remand the case to the Judge below to find the fact whether or not the relinquishment by the guardian was made in good faith for the interest of the minor. Muthuranath Dutt v. Kadernath Mookerjee, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 127.

The validity of a compromise effected by the father as the natural guardian of an expectant heir during his minority, by which immediate possession of half the property was obtained on the surrender of all claim to the reversion of the other half, was declared to depend on whether the transaction was at the time one reasonably beneficial to the minor. Lall Boodhmul v. Lala Gouree Sunkur, 4 W. R., 71.

Where a person representing herself as a guardian neither took out a certificate under Act XL of 1858, nor obtained the permission of the Court under Section 3 of that Act to appear in the suit without a certificate,—Held that the minor was not bound by any act of the alleged guardian, nor was he bound to sue within three years from the order passed by the Court under Section 246, Act VIII of 1859, rejecting her petition of objection to a sale of attached property. Sreenath Coondoo v. Hurree Narain Mudduck, 7 W. R., 399.

Where a party after attaining full age allowed his mother to give him out to the world as a minor, and as his guardian to mortgage his ancestral property, and permitted the mortgagee to retain possession for five years,—Held that he could not afterwards turn round and repudiate arrangements which were made for his benefit, and for which an innocent party had given valuable consideration. Purmessur Ojah v. Mussamut Goolbee and others, 11 W. R., 446.

If a guardian or next friend of an infant retain an attorney to act for the infant, no contract is created between the attorney and the infant upon which the attorney can sue the infant for costs. Radhanauth Bose v. Suttoprosono Ghose, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 269.

The acts of guardians on behalf of minors must show the strictest good faith, and must be based on considerations of actual necessity and advantage, not on calculations of possible benefit. In this case the Court refused to sanction a compromise effected between the guardian and the widow, by which the minor received immediate possession of half the property as consideration for the surrender of the reversion of the other moiety, no interest or advantage to him being shown in the arrangement. Bodh Mull v. Gouree Sunkur, 6 W. R., 16.

Sale by a guardian of a minor upheld, there being proof of pressing valid necessity, and no proof either of undue advantage taken of the guardian by the purchaser, or of the existence of fiduciary relations between the guardian and the creditors, or of the inadequacy of the price at the time when the property was sold. Komola Pershad Narain Singh v. Nokh Lal Shahoo and others, 6 W. R., 33.

Held that the institution of a suit by a guardian on behalf of minors, without due authority having been obtained, is illegal. Mussamut Dhunraj Kooeree v. Rajah Roodur Pertab Singh, 3 Agra Rep., 300.

In the absence of a competent and unobjectionable male relative, ready and willing to act as guardian ad litem of an infant, the mother of the infant may be appointed such guardian, if there be no objection to her on any ground but that of her sex. In the matter of Danapa bin Soobrao, 1 Bom. Rep., 134.

Though the lender of money borrowed by the guardian of a minor for the payment of a family debt is bound to enquire into the necessity for the loan, and to satisfy himself as well as he can that the guardian is acting for the benefit of the estate, yet if he does so enquire and acts honestly, the real existence of an alleged sufficient and reasonably created necessity is not a condition precedent to the validity of his charge, and he is not, under such circumstances, bound to see to the application of his money. Maha Beer Pershad Singh v. Dumreeram Opadhya, W. R., 1864, 166.

Held that the act of the guardian was binding on the minor unless it be proved that it was an unreasonable one, and that the payment by the debtor before any certificate was obtained was not an invalid payment. Motee Ram Sahoo v. Nawab Khuleeloollah and others, 3 Agra Rep., 338.

Guardians appointed by Civil Courts ought to file the accounts of their estates annually as required by law. A guardian is not necessarily accountable for sums paid by him in discharge of debts barred by limitation. Chowdhry Chuttersal Singh v. The Government, 3 W. R., 57.

The guardian at the time of the suit, and not the former guardian of a minor, held liable to the extent of the funds in his hands belonging to the minor for a debt incurred for the benefit of the minor. Sheikh Azeemooddeen Ahmed v. Athur Ali, 3 W. R., 137.

A mother as guardian has no power to make a compromise on behalf of a minor daughter, unless the compromise is beneficial to the daughter's interests. Ranee Roushun Jahan v. Syed Enaet Hossein, W. R., 1864, 83.

A father, as guardian of his minor son, can sue to recover damages for personal injuries received by the son. Modhoo Soodun and another v. Kaemoollah Biswas, 9 W. R., 327.

When a sale by the guardian of a minor is reversed, with a direction that the purchaser be reimbursed the amount of his purchase-money, he having been a bonâ-fide purchaser for valuable consideration, the minor is liable for the purchase-money. Agooree Hurrihur Churn v. Gonga Persad Oopadhya, W. R., 1864, 208.

The sale of a minor's property is reversible when it can be shown that the purchaser did not satisfy himself of the necessity of the sale, and bought in spite of the unwillingness of the minor's mother to have the property disposed of during her son's minority. Gomain Sircar v. Prannath Goopto, 1 W. R., 14.

A sale by an elder brother during a younger brother's minority having been set aside, and the vendee ejected, the vendee alone, and not the vendor, whose connection with the property ceased with the sale, is liable for mesne profits received and expended by the vendee whilst in possession. Shurutchunder Dey Sircar v. Jadubnarain Nundee, 1 W. R., 90.

A suit is not premature when brought by the guardian of minors to set aside a sale made by an adult member of a joint Hindu family without the consent of his wards. Sheo Pershad Jha v. Gunga Ram Jha, 5 W. R., 221.

In a suit to set aside a sale effected by plaintiff's mother during his minority, it appearing that plaintiff, eleven months after attaining his majority, signed for his mother a written statement in another suit, to the effect that the property had been sold by her to the defendant, and that he in that suit conducted his mother's defence, which was that the purchaser from her was entitled to what he claimed, it was held that he must be considered to have acquiesced in and ratified the sale. Kebulkristo Dass v. Ramcoomar Shah, 9 W. R., 571.

The plaintiff was entitled, in right of her deceased husband, to the equity of redemption in a mortgaged estate. Her guardian, in collusion with the mortgagee, instituted a foreclosure suit, in which she was represented by the guardian who submitted to a decree; and under that decree the property was sold, and the defendant became the purchaser,—Held that the defendant being a bonâ-fide purchaser, the sale was not liable to be set aside. Khettermoney Dassee v. Kishenmohun Mitter and others, Marsh., 313.

In a suit in which it is not necessary for a minor defendant to take an active part, no guardian is ever justified in taking any step prejudicial to his ward. If he can do nothing positively for the minor's benefit, he ought to leave the matter to the Court. Court of Wards on behalf of Raj Coomar Sheoraj Nundun Singh v. Raj Coomar Deo Nundun Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 143.

Where an act done by a guardian is one arising naturally out of the management of the minor's estate, and especially where it is concurred in by other co-sharers of the same property, the liability for such act attaches not to the guardian, but to the estate. Gireewar Singh v. Maddun Lall Dass, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 252.

In the case in which Regulation X of 1793 has no application, the Court may, under Section 3, Act XL of 1858, allow a friend or relative of the minor to institute a suit on his behalf, and where the guardian omits to take steps for the protection of the infant the Court may allow another person to sue for the benefit of the latter. An infant is as much bound by a judgment in his own action as if of full age, and if an application for review is made on his behalf it must be subject to the conditions of the 376th and 377th Sections of the Code of Civil Procedure. Madhoo Soodun Singh v. Rajah Pritha Bullub Paul, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 231.

A suit by the plaintiff's guardians for the plaintiff's mother's share in certain dower resulted in a decree for Rs. 62,913 calculated on the allegation in the plaint that such share was a third of the entire amount of dower. That suit having been sold by the plaintiff's guardians for the alleged sum of Rs. 51,000, the plaintiff brought the present suit to set aside that sale as collusive.

Held that it was incumbent on the defendants in this suit to prove that they paid the Rs. 51,000 to the plaintiff when he came of age, or at least that the money reached the plaintiff's hands when he came of age.

A compromise set up by the defendants in the present suit having been rejected, a decree was given to the plaintiff for the sum of Rs. 62,913, awarded in the original suit. That decree was upheld in appeal; but as it was alleged that on the facts stated in the plaint in the original suit the plaintiff's mother's share of the dower was an eighth, and not a third, the Privy Council held that plaintiff ought not to benefit by that mistake, if it was a mistake, and they accordingly left it to the lower Court to enquire into that point, and to let execution go for the eighth or the third share, according as the fact might turn out. Moulvie Abdool Ali v. Mozuffur Hossein Chowdry, 16 S. W. R., P. C., 22.

A widow defending a suit as guardian of her minor son cannot be made liable in her own person as well as representing the heirs of her husband. Brojo Mohun Mojumdar v. Roodronauth Surmah, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 192.

The Court of Wards is not "a person" within the meaning of Section 7, Act XL of 1858, and is not entitled to administer to an estate by virtue of a will or deed executed by a private person. Rowshun Jehun v. The Collector of Purneah, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 295.

In a suit against a minor's father as the minor's guardian during the minor's minority, where the good faith of the parties is not impugned, the minor is liable.

In the absence of any valid reason to the contrary, execution may be taken out by means of a warrant for the arrest of the minor's person. Sheraputtoollah Chowdry v. Abedoonissa Bibee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 374.

From the fact that, in a former suit, plaintiff's mother was arrayed amongst the parties as guardian of plaintiff, then a minor, as well as from the line of defence which she adopted, and in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it was presumed that she had the permission of the Court to appear and represent the minor's interest in that suit; and the question raised in the present suit having already been raised and decided in the former suit, the plea of res-adjudicata was held to apply. Bonomally Kesh v. Hemghessur Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 492.

A Collector appointed guardian, under Section 12 Act XL of 1858, has power to make arrangements for a minor's education, and is not so far amenable to the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts. Ræmendra Bhuttacharjee v. Collector of Rajshayhye, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 113.

The plaintiff on coming of age sued to set aside a sale of his ancestral property which had been made by his guardian during minority. No legal necessity was proved, but it appeared that he had the benefit of the sale proceeds. A decree was passed in his favour, but subject to the condition that he should first refund the proceeds of sale. Paran Chundra Pal v. Karunamayi Dasi, 7 B. L. R. 90; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 268.

Where application is made under Act IX of 1861, and an estate is taken charge of by the Collector under Section 12, Act XL of 1858, the interference of the Civil Court is precluded alike by the former Act (Section 7) and by the latter. Rajah Mohessur Roy v. The Collector of Rajshaye, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 263.

A manager has no authority to deal with the claims or debts and liabilities attaching to the estate of a minor without having taken out a certificate under Act XL of 1858. An order for a certificate may be revoked under Section 21, Act XL of 1859, if the Judge sees sufficient cause for its revocation in the conduct of the party in whose favour it was granted. Tusneef Hossein v. Bibee Sookhoo, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 453.

Where a Judge cancels his own order under Act XL of 1858 appointing the Collector to take charge of a minor's estate, a friend of the minor on behalf of the minor as the party interested is at liberty to appeal under the provisions of Section 28. Sheo Pershun Chobey v. The Collector of Sarun, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 256.

The marriage of a minor is not a sufficient cause within the meaning of Section 21, Act XL of 1858, for withdrawing a certificate as manager granted under that Act; there must be some neglect in the performance of duty, or some cause of a similar kind rendering it improper to continue the manager in the appointment.

Where two persons were fighting to get hold of the property, and the probability was that the minor would suffer if the property lay in the hands of either, the Court could not say that either person was a fit person to be appointed manager and therefore, under Section 12, ordered the property to be made over to the charge of the Collector, with direction to appoint a manager of the property and a guardian of the person of the minor. Musst. Ingoodumba Koer v. Musst. Mircha Koer, 17 S. W. R., C. B., 269.

Held that the lower Court could not, in the summary department, pass an order declaring invalid a sale of a house made by a manager as being beyond the scope of Section 18, Act XL of 1858, and granting an injunction to prevent the demolition of such house, but should have left the title of the parties to be established in a regular suit. Mukrumunnissa v. Abdool Indbar, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 171.

It is not necessary that a party who represents the interests of a minor should take out a certificate under Act XL of 1858 before he can be heard on behalf of the minor, or be able to institute or defend a suit on his behalf, but the Court is competent under Section 3 of that Act to permit any relative of the minor to institute or defend a suit on his behalf although a certificate of administration has not been granted to such relative. Bonomally Kish v. Hungesshur Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 492.

It is undoubtedly the duty of guardians scrupulously to regard the interests of minors in dealing with their estate, and the Court will, when necessary, enforce the performance of this duty. But the interests of infants would seriously suffer if a notion were to prevail that guardians were bound for their own security to contest all claims against an infant's estate, whether well or ill-founded, and such a notion might prevail if the compromise of a claim of debt confirmed by a decree of a Court were to be set aside after sixteen years without distinct proof of fraud. Lakraj Roy v. Mahtabchaund, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 117.

Held that the lower Appellate Court had properly exercised its discretion under Act XL of 1858, when it found that the minor plaintiff was not properly represented, in refusing to allow decree to be passed against him so as to be binding upon him when he came of age. Baboo Dhoondh Bahadoor Singh v. Baboo Priag Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 314.

It is not necessary to institute a regular civil suit in order to obtain the revocation of a certificate of guardianship. Mahomed Nukskund Khan v. Musumut Afzul Begum, 3 N. W. R., 149.

Guardians of a minor cannot be held personally liable for torts committed by such minor. Luchman Dass v. Narayan and others, 3 N. W. R., 191.

Guardians ad litem should always be appointed by the Court in which the litigation is pending. 5 Mad. Rep., Rul. VIII.

3.—Minority.

A purchase from a minor is not ipso facto invalid. L. Renni v. Gunga Narain Chowdhry, 3 W. R., 10.

A minor when he comes of age is not precluded from suing in his own name for anything that his guardian, either through ignorance or negligence, has omitted to prosecute. Koylash Chunder Sircar v. Gooroo Churn Sircar, 3 W. R., 43.

Section 2, Regulation XXVI of 1793, extends the term of minority of proprietors of estates paying revenue to Government from the end of the 15th to the end of the 18th year, in respect of all acts done by such proprietors, both as to matters connected with real estate and matters of personal contract.

Minors have a qualified power of contracting, and an implied or express contract for necessaries is binding absolutely on a minor.

As a minor cannot himself, by reason of insufficient capacity for business, state and settle an account so as to be bound thereby, so neither can he authorize another party to do for him that which he cannot do himself. Bykuntnath Roy Chowdhry v. N. P. Pogose, 5 W. R., 2.

The acts of a minor are only voidable, and not absolutely void. The purchaser of the right, title, and interest of a judgment-debtor sued to obtain immediate possession of the property purchased at a sale held in execution of a decree, after setting aside an usufructuary mortgage executed by the judgment-debtor while a minor.

Held that the sale in execution merely transferred to the purchaser the reversionary right of the judgment-debtor in the property, after the satisfaction of the usufructuary mortgage, and not the right to set aside an act done during minority.

Held that until a transaction by a minor was avoided by some distinct act on attaining majority, it must be considered valid. Hari Ram v. Jitan Ram, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 426; S. C., 12 W. R., 378.

The age of majority fixed by Act XL of 1858 is not only for proprietors of land paying revenue to Government, but for all persons not being British subjects. Lakhikant Dutt v. Jugabundhu Chuckerbutty, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 79; S. C., 11 W. R., 561.

Regulation XXVI of 1793 (fixing 18 years as the legal age for the exercise of the powers of a proprietor of an estate paying revenue to Government) applies to a co-sharer, as well as to the proprietor of an entire estate. Ranee Roushan Jahan v. Syed Enaet Hossein, W. R., 1864, 83.

When a certificate of guardianship has been granted under Act XL of 1858, it is by the terms of that Act, and not by reference to Mahometan or Hindu law, that the period at which the ward is to be considered of full age must be determined. Mahomed Arsud Chowdhry v. Oosun Bebee, 2 W. R., 217.

Every person, not being a European British subject, who has not attained the age of 18 years, is a minor for the purposes of Act XL of 1858; and unless he is a proprietor of an estate paying revenue to Government, who has been taken under the jurisdiction of the Court of Wards, the care of his person and the charge of his property are subject to the jurisdiction of the Civil Court, and he is a minor, whether proceedings have been taken for the protection of his property or the appointment of a guardian, or not. Mudhoosoodun Manji v. Debegobinda Newji, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 49; 10 W. R., F. B., 36.

According to Section 2, Regulation XVI of 1793, the minority of a proprietor of an estate paying revenue direct to Government extends to the end of the eighteenth year. Beer Kishore Suhye Singh and others v. Hur Bullub Narain Singh and others, 7 W. R., 502.

Act IX of 1861 applies to Pegu and also to minors, the lawful children of European natural-born British subjects. Recorders appointed under Act XXI of 1863 possess all the jurisdiction relative to minors referred to in Section 1, Act IX of 1861, or intended to be given by that Act. In re W. H. Hutton and another, 3 W. R., Recorder's Ref., 5.

Where a bond (usufructuary mortgage) was signed in presence of a Deputy Commissioner by the agent of a minor, in open Court, and duly registered by him, the transaction was held to be the same as if the minor himself had executed the deed. Hurree Ram v. Jeetun Ram, 12 W. R., 378.

A minor interested in contesting the execution and validity of an alleged will by her father having been improperly joined with the alleged executors of the said will as co-plaintiff, the decrees of the Courts below were reversed and the suit remanded, in order that the minor might be made a defendant, and a guardian ad litem appointed to protect her interests. Krishnabái v. Sonábái, 2 Bom. Rep., 327.

A suit on behalf of a minor for partition will lie, if the interests of the minor are likely to be prejudiced by the property being left in the hands of the co-parceners from whom it is sought to recover it. Kamakshi Ammal v. Chidambara Reddi, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 94.

Where property belonging to three brothers, one of whom was a minor, was sold for an ancestral debt on which execution proceedings had been taken, the rights and interests of the two elder brothers alone being advertised for sale, and the deed of sale making no mention of the minor's rights and interests,—Held that the minor's rights and interests were not conveyed to the purchaser. Neetye Roy v. Oodit Roy and others, 10 W. R., 241.

The father, if a proper person, cannot be deprived of his legal right to the custody of his legitimate children of whatever age. 2 & 3 Vict., c., 39, which gives a discretionary power to a Judge in England, has not been extended to this country; therefore the law applicable to cases which occurred in England previous to the passing of that statute is applicable here. Re Holmes, 1 Hyde's Rep., 99.

The High Court, in its equitable jurisdiction, has authority to interfere with the legal right of a father to the custody of his child, if he be an improper person. Re A. F. Curran, an infant, 1 Hyde's Rep., 143.

The holder of an estate paying revenue direct to Government, whether the settlement of that estate be temporary or permanent, is a proprietor within the meaning of Section 3, Regulation XXVI of 1793; and the minority of such a proprietor extends to the end of the 18th year. Anromonee Dibea v. Tumeejoodeen Chowdhry and others, 7 W. R., 181.

A sale under Regulation XXVI of 1793 does not extinguish under-tenures or incumbrances created by the delinquent or those through whom he claims. Juggomohun Bukshee v. Roy Mothooranath Chowdhry and others, 7 W. R., P. C., 18.

In a suit by a minor through her guardian for the recovery of property sold more than 3 years before the plaint was filed, plaintiff was held to be entitled to rely on the provisions of Section 11 of Act XIV of 1859, and to be therefore not barred by limitation. Ramghose v. Greedhur Ghose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 429.

Under Act XIV of 1859 the disability of a minor is to be considered absolute, and any benefit which the minor is to have accrues to him, not during his disability, but when his disability ceases. Mussamut Phoolbus Kooer v. Lall Juggessur Sahi, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 340; Bikramujut Lall v. Mussamut Phoolbus Kooer, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 340.

A Judge, in the exercise of his jurisdiction under Act XL of 1858, is justified in having respect to the religion professed by the father of a minor, and in passing such orders with regard to the custody of the person of such minor as he may hold to be in accordance with what would have been the minor's father's wishes had he been alive to express them.

Where a mother under colour of a change of religion forms a connection or leads a life which by persons professing her husband's faith would be deemed immoral, she thereby ceases to be a proper person to be entrusted with the education of the children of her deceased husband.

If the Court finds a case made out for its interference, it will not be deterred from the exercise of its powers because the persons setting it in motion may be actuated by motives other than the interests of the minor. Skinner v. Orde, 2 N. W. R., 275.

Appellant having presented a petition to a Zillah Judge under Act IX of 1861, claiming the possession and custody of his two minor children alleged to be detained by their mother, the parties being European British subjects,—Held that such Judge had no power to entertain the application. Shunum, 2 N. W. R., 79.

Where a person (a native of this country)has not attained the age of eighteen years, he is not competent to institute and maintain a suit without the intervention of a guardian appointed under Section 3 of Act XL of 1858. Noor Ahmed v. Lutta Pershad, 2 N. W. R., 189.

A suit against a minor whose estate exceeds Rs. 250 in value cannot be proceeded with unless he be represented by a person holding a certificate of administration under Act XX of 1864. The plaintiff may apply to the District Judge to appoint an administration if none such has been appointed. Dhondiba Lakshuman v. Kusa, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 219.

The Bombay Minors Act (XX of 1864) does not apply to minors who are not resident within the Presidency of Bombay.

A foreign guardian will not be recognized in the Courts in this country in a suit brought by such guardian to recover, on account of a minor, profits arising from immoveable property.

Where a suit was brought by the agent of a minor's guardian appointed by H. H., the Gaikwád of Buroda, it was ordered that the proceedings should be amended by describing such agent as the next friend of the minor, in which capacity he was then permitted to sue. Maganbhái Purshetamadás v. Vithold bin Náráyan Shet, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 7.

A Court ought not to make a decree by consent against an infant without ascertaining that it is for the benefit of the infant that such a decree should be pronounced. Ram Churn Ruba Bukshu v. Mungh Sircar, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 232.

A conveyance by a minor may be voided by him when he comes of age; but unless after coming of age he promptly does some act to repudiate the contract it must be taken to be ratified. Doorga Churn Sahu v. Ram Naraín Doss, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 172.

A contract made by a minor, though voidable is not necessarily void, and if made for a consideration which is of the nature of a necessity is not even voidable. If a minor remains quiet for a considerable period after attaining his majority without doing anything to repudiate the contract, a Court of Equity is bound to presume that the consideration was of such a character as to bind him, or that he has, after coming of age, ratified the contract, unless his silence can be explained, or the contract impeached on its merits. Boiddonath Dey v. Ram Kishore Dey, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 166.

In a suit for possession of landed property, which originally belonged to plaintiff's father,—Held that any act done by the widow, and any decree given against her, as sole proprietor of the lands, and not as guardian, would not bind the plaintiff. Bahur Ali v. Sookea Bibee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 65.

Appeal from an order of the High Court, confirming an order of the Zillah Judge, removing an infant ward and her property from the custody and guardianship of her mother and the mother's second husband. The minor was the issue of a Christian marriage, the child of a Christian father, who was massacred at Delhi in 1857, and was under the protection of her mother, who was of Mahometan ancestry. In 1867 the mother and second husband, after cohabiting together for some time, both became Mahometans, and contracted a Mahometan marriage, the second husband being already the husband in Christian marriage of a living Christian wife. The Privy Council, without relying on the rule in force in the Courts of Chancery requiring that, in the matter of religious education, great and (in absence of controlling circumstances) paramount weight should be given to the expressed or implied wishes of the deceased father, affirmed the order of the High Court, being of opinion that, from the very necessity of the case, a child in India, under ordinary circumstances, must be presumed to have his father's religion, and his corresponding civil and social status, and that therefore it was ordinarily, and in the absence of controlling circumstances, the duty of a guardian to train his infant ward in such religion.

The Privy Council agreed with the High Court in doubting the validity of the Mahometan marriage, and suggested, in the selection of a school in such cases, the desirableness of having some independent person as guardian, to whom the ward could apply, in whom the Court and the ward could confide, and whose duty it would be to communicate to the Court any matter which might arise. Skinner v. Orde, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 77.

In a suit against a minor's father, as the minor's guardian, during the minor's minority, when the good faith of the parties is not impugned, the minor is liable. Sherafutoollah Chowdry v. Abedoonissa Bibee, 17 S. W. R., C. R. 374.

Held that the Judge had not improperly exercised the discretion vested in him, by Act IX of 1861, S. 3, in not removing a minor of 5½ years old from the custody of his natural mother. Senamonee Dossee v. Joy Doorga Dassee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 551.

Held that a Hindu of the age of seventeen years was competent to apply for the execution of a decree obtained by a deceased person of whom he was the representative. Reg. V. of 1827, Sec. VII, Cl. 3, does not prevent a Hindu less than eighteen years of age from suing, but restricts him to a particular period, after which he is no longer a minor. Gangádhar Raghunáth v. Cheinnáje Keshav Dámle, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 95.

A suit by a guardian on behalf of a minor is the suit of the minor, and is governed by the law of limitation applicable to the minor. Sreemutty Suffuroonissa Bibee v. Moonshee Noorul Hossein, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 419.

Minors, right of — Jurisdiction of Civil Court. Hari Prusad Iha v. Maddan Mohun Thakur, 8 B. L. R., Ap., 72; 17 S. W. R., C. R., 217.

An infant cannot sue except by next friend, and where an objection is made on the ground of the disability of the plaintiff the suit ought to be dismissed. G. Chinniah v. Banhun Saib, 5 Mad. Rep., 435.

An application was made to a Moonsiff for the custody of a minor daughter, which on appeal to the Civil Judge was dismissed. On appeal to the High Court—held, all the proceedings must be quashed. The application should have been made in the principal Civil Court of original jurisdiction in the district. Mussamut Harasundari Baistab v. Mussamut Jayadurga Baistabi, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 36.

4.—Managers.

A manager has no authority to borrow money on a bond which does not recite for what purpose it is required, and the greater portion of which is said to have been previously borrowed by the principal Maharajah Jugunnath Sahee Dee v. Heera Ran Chuckerbutty, 6 W. R., 43.

A lender to the manager of a minor's estate is bound to satisfy himself that the loan is for the benefit of the estate. Lallah Bunseedhur v. Koowar Bindeseree Dutt Singh, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 165.

A manager of the estate of a minor appointed by will is liable to removal only upon proof of actual malversation, or that by reason of mental incapacity, conviction of felony, or by some other incapacitating cause, he has become incapable of managing the property; but not merely on the ground that another person would manage the property better.

He is, it seems, subject to removal upon summary application under Act XL of 1858, Section 21; but if the ground upon which his removal is applied for involves an investigation of accounts, such investigation must be made in a regular suit under Section 19, previous to such summary application under Section 21. Mudhoosoodun Singh v. The Collector of Midnapore, Marsh., 244.

Where a case is started showing that elder sons are neglecting their duty as managers of an estate to the material injury of a minor son, the Judge is bound to institute enquiry.

Where particular persons have been appointed by will to be managers, and any of them become incapable and refuse to act, it does not follow that others should be appointed in their stead.

Where managers by becoming vedantists are incapable themselves of performing ceremonies contemplated in the will, they may make over to any person concerned the requisite expenses for such ceremonies. Anund Coomar Gangooly v. Rakhal Chunder Roy and others, 8 W. R., 278.

The conveyance of property while the owner is a minor is not necessarily inoperative; if the sale is effected by the guardian, and acquiesced in by the minor when he comes of age, it may be valid notwithstanding. Kummuroodeen Shaikh v. Shaikh Bhadhoo and others, 11 W. R., 134.

An appeal from an order under Act XL of 1858, appointing a person to be guardian of a minor and manager of his property, bears no value and cannot be carried to her Majesty in Council. Mussamut earee Daye v. Hurbuns Koer, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 299.

Where a manager is appointed under Act XL of 1858, the Civil Court has no authority to restrict or limit by description or otherwise the nature or extent of the minor's property. Sheo Prosunno Chokey v. Gopal Surn, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 529.

Where the trusts of manager and guardian are vested in different persons, an action instituted on behalf of the minor with the sanction of the Court of Wards is properly brought by the manager. Madhoo Soodun Singh v. Rajah Prittha Bullub Paul, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 231.

5.—Powers of the Court with regard to Minors.

The Court of Wards is not prevented by Act XL of 1858 from taking a minor and his estate under its protection by reason of a certificate of administration granted by the Civil Court under that Act. Mudoosoodun Singh v. The Collector of Midnapore and R. Watson and Co., 3 W. R., 83.

In appointing a manager of a minor's estate a Judge has to consider not only the nearness of kindred, but also the suitableness of the person to be appointed. Khoodee Monee Dossee Ghossanee v. Koylash Chunder Ghose, 4 W. R., Mis. A., 22.

A mother brought a suit on behalf of her minor son to recover from her step-son, the managing member of the family, the minor's share in the family property. Held that the only ground upon which such a suit could be maintained is that of malversation. The Court may relieve the minor from his brother's authority, and appoint another guardian, but a case requiring relief must be made out. Alimelamal v. Arunachellam Pillai, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 169.

Where an application is made for a certificate under Act XL of 1858, a party asserting certain rights adversely to the minor cannot be admitted as a party to the record, but must seek his remedy in a regular suit. Where the will propounded by an applicant is a genuine document the certificate prayed for must be granted, notwithstanding the existence of any "natural guardian," no discretion being left to the Court in such a case. Puroma Soonduree Dossee v. Tara Soonduree Dossee, 9 W. R., 343.

An unsuccessful application by the grandmother of a minor for a certificate under Act XL of 1858, is no bar to her suing under a neeumpattro alleged to have authorized her to represent the minor. Ranee Shoobhudra v. Ranee Prem Moyee, 5 W. R., Mis., 36.

Where an application was made by a Hindu female for a certificate of administration under Act XL of 1858 in respect of an estate which she alleged to belong to an adopted son,—Held that the Judge ought merely to have enquired whether the boy was a minor, and whether the petitioner, being a near relative, was a fit person to be entrusted with the charge of the minor's property. Brohmo Moyee Chowdhrain v. Chittur Monee Chowdhrain, 8 W. R., 45.

The Court (having already held that the Civil Courts cannot interfere with an order of the Board of Revenue directing the removal of a minor to the Wards Institution in Calcutta) declined to pass an order to stay the minor's removal pending an appeal to the Privy Council, holding that it had no power to make such order. The Collector of Beerbhoom v. Mundakinee Debee, 1 W. R., Mis., 7.

Where a testator makes due provision for the guardianship of his minor son, Act XL of 1858 does not contemplate the interference of the Court in its summary jurisdiction. Anund Coomar Gangooly v. Rakhal Chunder Roy and others, 8 W. R., 278.

Act XL of 1858 declares that a person shall not be competent to institute a suit in Court in respect of property of which he claims the charge until he shall have obtained a certificate; but not that every act of a guardian who has not such a certificate shall be null for the want of one. Mussamut Shooghury Koer v. Boshisht Narain Singh and others, 8 W. R., 331.

Where the grandmother of minors applied for certificates under Acts XL of 1858 and XXVII of 1860, the father consenting and approving, it was held that there was nothing in the law to prevent the certificates being granted if the applicant was competent and willing to take them. Mussamut Oomrao Doolbaen v. Syud Aga Meer, 12 W. R., 119.

A certificate of guardianship to her minor son may be allowed to a widow after the certificate of administration has been granted to another party. Sreemutty Sham Manna v. Ramdyal Goohoo, 1 W. R., Mis., A., 3.

Where a minor claimed an estate as adopted son,—Held that a certificate appointing a guardian under Act XL of 1858 would not, until his adoption was proved, entitle the minor or his guardian to interfere with the possession of the estate by the deceased's widow, who denied the adoption, and claimed the estate as heiress. Panch Cowree Mundul and others v. Bhogobutty Dossee, 6 W. R., Mis., 47.

Act XL of 1858 does not empower a Judge to remove summarily a guardian not appointed by the Court, but under a will of the minor's grandfather. Srimati Lakhi Priya Dasi v. Nabin Chandra Nag, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 37; S. C., 11 W. R., 370.

A female whose estate is under the management of the Court of Wards cannot, without the consent of the Court of Wards, give up her rights in favour of the next heir. The Government v. Monohur Dos, W. R., 1864, 39.

That the persons who sue on behalf of minors are their natural guardians is not a sufficient reason for neglecting the directions of law which require that the minors shall be represented by persons who have obtained certificates, or by persons, who when the property is of small value, are specially permitted by the Court to sue or defend the suit on behalf of minors. The fact that the defendant's pleader did not press the objection does not relieve the Judge from the duty imposed on him of seeing that the minors were properly represented. Zorawar Singh v. Jawahir Singh, 3 Agra Rep., 167.

A stranger cannot bring an action on behalf of a minor without a certificate under Act XL of 1858. Goberdhun v. Girwar and others, 3 Agra Rep., 92.

It is not the policy of Act XL of 1858 to prevent parties from performing their natural duties by the younger members of their family who may be deprived of their parents, and it should not be considered as an axiom that an uncle or other near relative will necessarily defraud a minor, and ought therefore to be refused a certificate under that Act. Mahomed Saleh v. The Government, W. R., 1864, Mis., 26.

6.—Rulings under Act XL of 1858.

A father cannot sue on behalf of his minor son without having obtained the certificate prescribed by Act XL of 1858, and any decision passed in the case would be irregular, as being passed in the absence of the party primâ facie principally interested. Shiam Soonder v. Narain Doss and others, 2 Agra Rep., 343.

A Judge is not precluded, by reason of a will and the existence of executors under the will who have taken out certificate under Act XL of 1858, from enquiring into a complaint against the executors. Nund Coomar Gungopadhya v. Rakhal Chunder Roy and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 123.

Without a certificate under Act XL of 1858 a Court may refuse to hear even a natural guardian of right. When the Court in the exercise of the discretion vested in it does hear him, the absence of the certificate will not vitiate the proceedings. Lalla Bhoodmul v. Lalla Gowree Sunkur, 4 W. R. 71.

The private acts of a natural guardian without a certificate under Act XL of 1858 are not vitiated by law. Lalla Bhoodmul v. Lalla Gowree Sunkur, 4 W. R., 71.

A father cannot sue on behalf of his minor sons without a certificate under Act XL of 1858, unless allowed to do so by the Court under the provisions of the said Act. Madho Rao Apa v. Thakoor Pershad and others, 3 Agra Rep., 127.

Held that the plaintiff, not being legally or formally appointed manager or guardian of minor's estate or person, was incompetent to maintain the suit on his (the minor's) behalf, especially when the minor's natural father has been appointed as such under Act XL of 1858, and has not been discharged from his office. Setul Pershad v. Birj Mohun Dass, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 25.

A surbarakar cannot sue on behalf of a minor without permission of the Court, or a certificate under Act XL of 1858. Thakoor Bodh Singh v. Lochun Singh, 4 Agra Rep., 220.

In the grant of a certificate to a guardian under Act XL of 1858, unless under peculiar circumstances, fitness is to be preferred to mere nearness of relationship. Aman Khan v. Mussamut Hoseena Khatoon, 9 W. R., 548.

The lapse of six years was held to be no sufficient ground for a Judge's refusal to enquire into the merits of an application for a certificate under Act XL of 1858, that law providing no limitations as to the time within which such applications are to be made. Puroma Soondery Dassee v. Tara Soondery Dossee, 9 W. R., 343.

A Civil Court may defer passing orders on an application for a certificate under Act XL of 1858, pending an enquiry by the Collector as to the alleged fraud of the manager, and the state of the accounts and the assets of the property. Mohesh Chunder Sein v. The Collector of Dinagepore, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 312.

The order of a Judge, rejecting an application for the removal of a guardian under Act XL of 1858, is appealable. Mahindronauth Mookerjee, In the matter of the petition of, 7 B. L. R., Ap., 6; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 493.

The fact that a guardian, appointed under Act XL of 1858, had executed a bond without an order of the Court was held not to be sufficient ground for removing him from office. Brijendro Narain Roy v. Bussunt Coomar Ghose, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 300.

Act XL of 1858 authorizes a Court to select a guardian irrespective of the law of the parties (e.g., Mahometan law) but does not prevent the selection of a guardian indicated by such law if he be a fit person. Where charges of immorality were brought against the holder of a certificate under Act XL of 1858, it was held to be the duty of the Judge to enquire into the truth of the charges and the fitness of the certificate-holder. Mohunuddy Begum v. Mussamut Oomdutoonissa, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 454.

A certificate under Act XL of 1858 having been granted to a party as guardian of an adopted minor, it was objected that the minor's adoption had not been legal. Held that as there was no doubt of the fact of adoption, whether the adoption should on enquiry prove legal or not, the certificate was rightly given, and as the objector did not claim to be appointed guardian, he had no locus standi to object to the appointment of another person. Kist Kishore Roy v. Issur Chunder Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 166.

The Civil Court to which the charge of minors and their property is entrusted by Act XL of 1858 is the Court of the Judge of the district. Mussamut Mohamuddee Begum v. Mussamut Oomdutoonissa, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 271.

Under the Mitackshara law a brother's widow is not entitled to the management of her husband's share of a joint family property. Order giving her a certificate under Act XL of 1858 set aside, but certificate of guardianship allowed to stand. Sheonundun Pershad Singh v. Mussamut Ghunsham Kooeree, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 237.

Section 3.

A person who does not hold a certificate under Act XL of 1858 is not debarred by Section 3 from representing a minor as plaintiff or defendant in a suit; but the Court has the fullest discretion, when the property is of small value, or for any other sufficient cause, to dispense with the production of a certificate. Sreemunt Koondoo v. Sharoda Soonduree Dossee, 8 W. R., 197.

Under Section 3, Act XL of 1858, a Court may, in its discretion, if the property be small, or for any other sufficient reason, allow any relative of a minor to sue on his behalf, although a certificate of administration has not been obtained by that relative. Hurendur Lall Sahoo v. Maharajah Rajendur Purtap Sahee, 1 W. R., 260.

A grandmother is not competent to represent her minor grandson without having obtained the certificate prescribed by Section 3, Act XL of 1858. Mussamut Rutnee and others v. Misser Roghobere Dyal, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 278.

A mother may be allowed, under Section 3, Act XL of 1858, to sue as guardian of her minor son without having taken out a certificate. Mussamut Munra Jhunna Koonwar v. Laljee Roy, 1 W. R., 121.

A Court of Small Causes constituted under Act XI of 1865 is competent, under Section 3, Act XL of 1858, to allow any relative of a minor to institute or defend a suit in his behalf without a certificate of administration, where it has jurisdiction in relation to the subject-matter of the suit. Khanto Bewah v. Nund Ram Nath, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 369.

In a suit for a kubuleut against and for himself and as guardian of a minor, the defendant denied that he was the guardian, but the Deputy Collector holding that he had a share in the land, and was also guardian, gave a decree against both. The aunt of the minor then applied for a re-hearing, and on being refused appealed. In appeal the Judge held that L. could only have been made liable as guardian if he held a certificate under Act XL of 1858, and that the minor's estate was exonerated from the decree. Held that, under Section 3, Act XL of 1858, the Judge had authority to permit the aunt to represent the minor without a certificate under that law, but he should have sent back the case for trial on the merits as between plaintiff and such representative. Sheoburrut Singh v. Lalljee Chowdry, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 202.

When a Court of first instance allows a mother to institute a suit on behalf of her minor son, the Judge on appeal has no reason to dismiss the suit on the technical grounds that no certificate had been granted to her under Section 3, Act XL of 1858.

It is not necessary for the mother to describe herself as guardian in the plaint, when the suit is evidently brought by her as mother of her minor son. Gooro Monee Debia v. Ram Kuniol Sandee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 144.

A certificate under Section 3 of Act XL of 1858 is purely an authority for the administration of property, and ought not to be issued where there is neither present right nor prospective possession. Nobin Chunder Shaha v. Rajnarain Shaha, 9 W. R., 582.

Section 3, Act XL of 1858, gives discretion to the Court to admit a party to sue without a certificate. Anund Chunder Ghose v. Komul Narain Ghose, 2 W. R., 219.

Sections 4, 5, and 6.

The summary enquiry provided by Section 6 of Act XL of 1858 refers to the grant of the certificate to the parties claiming it, but no part of the Act allows third parties to demand an enquiry into matters which have nothing to do with the genuineness of the grant. Meltoon Bibee v Gibbon, 12 W. R., 101.

Under Sections 4, 6, and 7, Act XL of 1858, the Court has power to appoint a guardian other than the father of a minor, for the purposes of instituting suits and protecting the property of the minor. Mussamut Etwari v. Ram Narayan Ram, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 71 ; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 230.

One manager cannot shift off the responsibility from himself and resign the appointment, and another one take up the appointment without the provisions of Section 6, Act XL, 1858 (requiring issue of a notice of such application or the fixing of a day for the hearing of the application) being duly carried out. Mussi. Ingodumba Koer v. Mussi. Mircha Koer, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 269.

Held by Loch, J., that the word "residence" used in Section 5, Act XL of 1858, is not the place where the minor may be dwelling at or about the time when the application for a certificate under the Act is made, but the paternal family house or the family residence of the minor in which every member of the family has an interest, and in which they usually reside ; Ainslie, J., being of opinion that though ordinarily that might be taken to be the meaning of the word, yet circumstances might arise in which it might be taken to mean otherwise. Sheikh Mahomed Hossein v. Akbur Hossein, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 275.

Section 7.

Act XL of 1858 comprises the cases of all minors not under the Court of Wards and not being European British subjects, and acts irrespective of the Mahometan law, which can be no guide to the Civil Court in determining whether an applicant should or should not have letters of administration.

Section 7 looks as much to the fitness of the relative as to his propinquity ; and when two relatives claim the right to administer, the Court is at liberty to disregard the latter qualification and look to the former. Akima Bibee v. Azeem Sarung, 9 W. R. 334.

Under Section 7, Act XL of 1858, a manager appointed to the estate of a minor cannot in any way get rid of or resign that trust without the permission of the Court, and without duly accounting to his successor for all moneys received and disbursed by him. Kala Pershad Singh v. Poorne Debia, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 398.

Under Section 7, Act XL of 1858, a person claiming a right to have the charge of the property of a minor by virtue of a will is entitled, if the will be a genuine instrument, to a certificate of administration, notwithstanding the existence of a natural guardian of the minor in the person of his mother. Bhoobun Mohinee Deba v. Poornoo Chunder Bannerjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 99.

The Civil Court has power by summary proceedings, for any sufficient cause, to recall a certificate of administration granted under Section 7 of Act XL of 1858 to a person claiming a right to have charge of the property of a minor, by virtue of a will or deed, or to a near relative of the minor, and to direct the Collector to take charge of the estate, or may grant a certificate to the public curator, &c., and exercise the other powers conferred upon the Court by Section 21, notwithstanding the manager could not be compelled to render his accounts without a regular suit. Khaja Surwur Hossein Khan and others v. Mussamut Nimnee Beebee, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 200.

The Civil Court has power by summary proceedings, for any sufficient cause, to recall a certificate of administration granted under Section 7 of Act XL of 1858, to a person claiming a right to have charge of the property of a minor, by virtue of a will or deed, or to a near relative of the minor, and to direct the Collector to take charge to the estate, or may grant a certificate to the public Curator, &c., and exercise the other powers conferred upon the Court by Section 21, notwithstanding the manager could not be compelled to render his accounts without a regular suit. Khaja Surwur Hossein Khan and others v. Mussamut Nimnee Beebee, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 200.

Section 14.

Under Section 14, Act XL of 1858, an estate ceases to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court of Wards when any of the co-proprietors attain majority; but the Judge may, on the representation of the Collector, direct him to retain charge of the persons and shares of the still disqualified proprietors during the continuance of their disqualification, or until such time as it is otherwise ordered. Sufferoonissa Beebee v. Gholam Hossein Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, Mis., 2.

Section 21

A Zillah Judge, having ordered the grant of a certificate under Act XL of 1858 to a widow with reference to the property of her deceased husband, afterwards at the instance of the Collector, and on hearing all the parties claiming or objecting, set aside his order and directed the Collector to take charge of the estate. Held that the order, though the Judge professed to make it under Section 12, Act XL of 1858, was really made under Section 21. Chunder Coomar Roy v. Collector of Jessore, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 243.

An applicant for a certificate under Act XL of 1858 having alleged that the appointed guardians had neglected their charge in various ways, the Judge called upon the guardians to produce their accounts, and on their failing to do so took away their certificate, and gave it to the applicant.

Held that the Judge would have been justified by Section 21 in cancelling the guardians' certificate, if sufficient cause were shown; but he had no authority to do what he did, the accounts which a Judge can call for under that section being those which a discharged guardian is to furnish to his successor in office, and the only way in which a guardian retaining office can be made to furnish such accounts is by a regular suit brought by a relative or friend of the minor.

Held that before appointing a guardian the Judge should satisfy himself, under Section 9, of the applicant's fitness for the office. Ram Dyal Gooye v. Amirt Lall Kamaroo, 9 W. R., 555.

A certificate granted under Section 7, Act XL of 1858, may, under Section 21, be recalled summarily without the accounts having been previously taken in a regular suit under Section 19, where the application of the recall is based on charges of waste and mismanagement. Nannee Bibee v. Khojah Surwar Hossein and others, 7 W. R., 522.

A Judge has no power under Section 16 or 21, Act XL of 1858, to order a discharged guardian of a minor to file his accounts. Section 21 refers to the procedure as between discharged guardians and their successors, and not to a case where the contest is between the owner of the estate and a discharged guardian. Doolun Singh v. Torul Narain Singh, 4 W. R., Mis., 3.

A person apprehending danger to the health or life of a minor should ask the Court's interference under Section 21, Act XL of 1858. Maharajah Fuckhee Narain Aung Bheem v. Sooruj Monee Pat Mohadaye, 2 W. R., Mis., 6.

Section 26.

Discussion as to the proper construction of Section 26. Monsoor Ali v. Ramdyal, 3 W. R., 50.

Section 28.

Only persons who claim a right to have charge of property in trust for a minor under a will or deed have a right to make applications under Act XL of 1858, and they alone have a right of appeal under Section 28. A mere creditor has no locus standi in the proceedings before the Judge, and not right to have his objections gone into. Meltoon Bibee v. Gibbon, 12 W. R., 101.

7.—MARRIAGE.

The marriage of an East Indian, domiciled in Calcutta, with the sister of his deceased wife, is not void under 5 and 6 Wm. IV., c. 45. Das Merces v. Cones, 2 Hyde's Rep., 65.

A married woman is capable of contracting in respect of her separate estate.

The doctrines of the Roman and English law upon the subject examined. Nárayanan Chetty v. Jensen and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 383.

Marriage is a valuable and not merely a good consideration. Chintalapati Chinna Simhadriraj v. The Zemindar of Vizianagram and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 128.

A nikah marriage falls within the purview of Sections 494 and 495 of the Penal Code. Queen v. Judoo Mussulmanee and Beedhy Bewah, 6 W. R., Cr., 60.

Jewels given to a married woman during coverture by a relative or a stranger,—Held to be property belonging to the separate use of the wife. Held, further, that the subsequent investment of the same in the purchase of real estate conveyed to the wife does not cause a change in the nature of such property. Cohen v. Auction and Co., 1 Hyde's Rep., 130.

A deed conveying the interest of a native married woman in land will not be set aside on the ground of want of legal advice or misapprehension, where the husband is aware of the alienation, and it is not shown that there is a gross inadequacy of price. Monohur Doss v. Khoolsun Begum and others, Cor. Rep., 121.

It is not necessary that knowledge of a separation between husband and wife should be brought home to the plaintiff in an action for goods sold and delivered to the wife after separation where plaintiff has long dealt with the wife as the husband's agent. Sham Chund Doss v. W. H. Cox, Cor. Rep., 82.

A Parsee residing in Bombay after the passing of Act XV of 1865, but before it came into operation, contracted a second marriage during the lifetime of his wife, from whom he had not been divorced, and whom he moreover wilfully deserted for two years.

On appeal from an order by the Judge of the Parsee Chief Matrimonial Court rejecting a plaint for divorce by the first wife, on the ground that the subject-matter of the plaint did not constitute a cause of action under Section 30 of Act XV of 1865, and Act VIII of 1859, Section 32,—Held that the facts alleged in the plaint did not amount to "bigamy coupled with adultery," nor to "adultery coupled with wilful desertion," within the meaning of Section 30 of Act XV of 1865, as a second marriage contracted by a Parsee husband during the lifetime of his first wife was not unlawful before the Act came into operation, nor did the provisions of the Act in any way affect the validity or the consequence of such a marriage. Arabae v. Jamasjee Jamshedjee and another, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C., 113.

8.—RESTITUTION OF CONJUGAL RIGHTS.

The Supreme Court of Bombay, on its Ecclesiastical side, declared incompetent to entertain a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights at the instance of a Parsee wife against her husband. Ardaseer Cursetjee v. Perozeboye, 4 W. R., P. C., 91.

A decree in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights should not decree possession of the person of the wife, but should declare the husband entitled to his conjugal rights, and order the wife to return to his protection. Koobur Khansama v. Jan Khansama, 8 W. R., 467.

A suit by husband against wife for restitution of conjugal rights will lie in the Civil Courts. Held (by Jackson, J., and Macpherson, J.) that the decree in such a suit ought to be declaratory only, and to be enforced in case of disobedience by attachment. Held (by Seton-Karr, J.) that the wife may be ordered to be delivered over to her husband. Jhotun Beebee v. Ameer Chand, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 317.

In suits for restitution of conjugal rights the decree should be in the form that the wife do return to her husband, with which decretal order if she fails to comply she may be dealt with under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to attachment and imprisonment for non-performance of the act decreed, for a wife cannot be delivered in execution as a chattel. Mussamut Toofeah and others v. Jussouda, 2 Agra Rep., 337.

Held that a decree for restitution of conjugal rights should be passed in the form that the husband is entitled to conjugal rights, that his wife do return to live with him, and that her parents do not interfere in any manner to prevent her so doing. Ram Topal v. Madhoo and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 111.

Held that a suit by a husband to recover possession of the person of his wife will lie. Hur Sookha v. Pooran, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 115.

In a suit for restitution of conjugal rights the proper form of decree is a direction to the wife to return to cohabitation, which direction on disobedience by her may be enforced as provided in Section 200, Act VIII of 1859. Mussamut Imamund v. Mahomed Mujidoollah, 4 Agra Rep., 88.

A suit will not lie by a husband to recover possession of the person of his wife; but a suit will lie by the husband, in the nature of a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights, for a decree declaratory of those rights, to be enforced, in case of disobedience, by the imprisonment of the wife or the attachment of her property, or both (Seton-Karr, J., dubitante). Chotun Beebee v. Ameer Chand, 6 W. R., 105.

Quære,—Whether under the present procedure the Court can enforce its order upon a wife to return to her husband, by giving her over bodily into her husband's hands. Such disobedience would seem to fall within Section 200 of the Code, and to be enforceable only by imprisonment, or attachment of property, or both. Judoonath Bose v. Shumsoonnisa Begum, 8 W. R., P. C., 3.

A Civil Court cannot pass a decree for the recovery of the person of a wife, the proper order being for the restitution of conjugal rights. Melaram Nudial v. Thanooram Bamun, 9 W. R., 552.

9.—DIVORCE.

The Indian Divorce Act was intended to apply to such marriages as are recognized as marriages by Christians, and not to polygamous contracts, such as are the unions known as marriages to the Mahometan law.

Such polygamous contracts are not subject to the jurisdiction of the Courts created by the Indian Divorce Act of 1869.

Semble,—That where persons of that faith are married according to the Mahometan law, and either party becomes a convert to Christianity, a claim for restitution of conjugal rights cannot be supported. Zuburdhust Khan v. His Wife, 2 N. W. R., 370.

Motion to make decree Nisi absolute. Willis v. Willis, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 52.

A certain amount of money had been paid by one Hindu to another in consideration of a promise by the latter that he would give his sister in marriage to the former. The girl's mother was alive. In a suit for recovery of the amount on the ground that the latter had failed to fulfil his promise, held that the suit would lie. Jogeswar Chuckrabutti v. Panch Kauri Chuckrabutti, 5 B. L. R., 395; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 154.

When a wife obtains a decree for judicial separation on the ground of her husband's cruelty and adultery, and there is nothing to impeach her own conduct, the Court will allow her to have the custody of the children. Macleod v. Macleod, 6 B. L. R., 318.

A District Judge ought in all cases to enquire into, and set out in his judgment, the facts relied on as giving jurisdiction to the Court to pronounce a decree of dissolution of marriage. Durand, N., in the matter of, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 416.

A suit is not maintainable by a wife for an allowance from her husband on an agreement, for which the sole consideration is a stipulation that the wife is not to communicate with or molest her husband, such stipulation falling within the general rule that a deed of separation entered into by husband and wife without the intervention of trustees is void. Hughes v. Hughes, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 250.

The High Court has jurisdiction to admit a petition for divorce, where the parties are resident, and the adultery is committed, in the District of the 24-Pergunnahs.

Principle on which the Court will assess damages discussed. Kelly v. Kelly and Saunders, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 67.

In an application for alimony, it is sufficient to set out the fact of the marriage in the petition; an affidavit to that effect is unnecessary. In making the application, it is sufficient to show the Court that there has been a ceremony which might be a valid marriage; and therefore where the petitioner was shown to be the respondent's deceased wife's sister alimony was granted. Crump v. Crump, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 101.

Pending a suit for divorce by the husband, an application by the respondent that an estimate of her probable costs of suit should be made by the taxing office, and the amount thereof as estimated should be paid out of Court to her, was refused; but the Court granted an application that the respondent's costs incurred should be taxed, and the amount thereof be paid out of Court to her proctor. Kelly v. Kelly and Saunders, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 5.

The petitioner sued for a divorce on the ground of his wife's adultery. The adultery was admitted, but the respondent proved that her husband had been guilty of various acts of cruelty towards her, which disentitled him to have an unconditional divorce, and claimed on this ground a right to a judicial separation with alimony, under Section 15 of the Indian Divorce Act. She was at the time of the suit living with the co-respondent.

Held that the respondent was not entitled to a decree for judicial separation with alimony. The Court has discretion, under Section 14 of the Act, to refuse a decree for divorce if the petitioner has been guilty of cruelty, although the cruelty may have been condoned.

Sections 13, 14, and 15 of the Indian Divorce Act commented on. Gordon v. Gordon and Saran, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 136.

The respondent is entitled to have brought into Court letters written by her to the petitioner, while the facts to which they speak were fresh in her memory. If the petitioner has none he should make an affidavit to that effect. Gordon v. Gordon, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 100.

Where a wife is living apart from her husband under such circumstances that she does not pledge her husband's credit, the Court will not grant alimony. Gordon v. Gordon and Dr. Saran, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 13.

Alimony may be ordered to commence from the date of the service of the citations, and to run until the final decree. Kelly v. Kelly and Saunders, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 4.

In a suit for dissolution of marriage, where at the time of the presentation of the petition the respondent does not reside within the jurisdiction of the Court, the jurisdiction of the Judge and the right of the petitioner to petition him will depend on where the parties "last resided together." Wingrove v. Wingrove, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 416.

A wife brought a suit for a dissolution of marriage on the ground of her husband's adultery and desertion. The desertion took place twenty-four years before the suit was brought, and ever since the husband had made his wife an allowance. Latterly his circumstances had considerably improved. The Court gave a decree for dissolution, but in determining the suitable amount of permanent alimony it took into consideration the circumstances of the husband at the time of the desertion, and refused to give the wife the full advantage of the present improved circumstances of the husband. Smyth v. Smyth, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 153.

A husband brought a suit for divorce against his wife on the ground of her adultery; the co-respondent appeared in that suit. The respondent appealed on the ground (inter alia) that, on the evidence, the Court ought to have held that the adultery was not proved. Held that in that appeal the co-respondent was not entitled to be heard in opposition to the appeal.

The Court has power under Section 37 of Act IV of 1869 to order permanent alimony to the wife when a husband obtains a divorce on the ground of her adultery. When the marriage is dissolved on account of the adultery of the wife she is not entitled to have access to the children of the marriage. Kelly v. Kelly and Saunders, 5 B. L. R., 71.

Principle on which the Court will grant permanent alimony. Ord v. Ord, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 34.

Divorce, suit for—Adultery—Wife's costs. Broadhead v. Broadhead, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 9.

Where a man and woman, after cohabiting for some time, became Mahometans and contracted a Mahometan marriage, the man being already the husband in Christian marriage of a living Christian wife, the Privy Council, agreeing with the High Court, N. W. P., doubted the validity of the Mahometan marriage. Skinner v. Orde, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 77.

The defendant, a married woman living with her husband, both domiciled in British India and resident in Calcutta, where they had been married on 21st May, 1866, and having property to which she was absolutely entitled under the provisions of the Indian Succession Act, signed a promissory note in favour of the plaintiff for a debt due by her to the plaintiff, at the same time giving a verbal promise to pay the amount out of her own property. In a suit on the promissory note, in which the husband and wife were made parties, the wife pleaded her coverture,—Held that she was liable to pay the amount of the promissory note out of her own property, and the Court would, if necessary, make a personal decree against her.

The defendant was at the time of making the promissory note of the age of 19 years. The evidence showed that her father was born at sea, and lived the greater part of his life at Calcutta. It was not shown of what country his parents were, or whether the ship in which he was born was a British ship. The defendant pleaded minority at the time of making the note. Held the defendant was not a European British subject, and not exempted from the operation of Act XL of 1858. She therefore attained her majority at 18 years. Archer v. G. J. Watkins, 8 B. L. R., 372.

Case in which the prisoner, notwithstanding that he had been convicted by the Sessions Judge, was acquitted by the High Court on the ground of insanity, under Section 393 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, and directed to be kept in safe custody, pending the orders of the local Government to be applied for by the Judge. Queen v. Pursoram Doss, 7 W. R., Cr., 42.

The prisoner was convicted of murder, and sentenced to death; but before confirming the sentence, as doubts were entertained of her sanity, the case was referred to the Sessions Judge, with instructions for further inquiry. Queen v. Arzao Bebee, 2 W. R., Cr., 33; Queen v. Sheikh Mustafa, 1 W. R., Cr., 1.

A prisoner who is insane and unaccountable for his actions, and therefore incapable of making his defence, instead of being tried, should be dealt with according to Sections 389 and 390, Code of Criminal Procedure. Queen v. Kalai Sheikh, 3 W. R., Cr., 57; Queen v. Shah Mahomed, 3 W. R., Cr.,

70; Queen v. Noorkhan Chowdhry, 1 W. R., Cr., 11; Queen v. Sheikh Mustafa, 1 W. R., Cr., 15.

Where a Magistrate has kept in custody an insane prisoner, and reported the case to Government, his successor, instead of striking off the case, is bound to resume the investigation under Section 391, Code of Criminal Procedure. Queen v. Rughooa, 6 W. R., Cr., 3.

Where an accused person was found after examination to be of unsound mind,—Held that the Magistrate should not have proceeded to acquit the prisoner, and directed him to be kept in custody, but should have stayed further proceedings. Queen v. Dataram, 6 W. R., Cr., 54.

The enquiry as to alleged lunacy under Act XXXV of 1858 must be made by the Judge, and not by a subordinate Court, to which the Judge can only issue commission under Section 8 of the enactment, in cases where the alleged lunatic resides at a distance more than fifty miles from the place where the Court is held. Ordinarily to such enquiries the members of the family are proper and sufficient parties, but other persons interested may, under special circumstances, be permitted to take part. Thakoor Ram Purgass Singh and others v. Syud Ameer Ali, 3 Agra Rep., Mis., 3.

When, on the trial of a prisoner, the Court entertains doubts as to his sanity full enquiry upon the point is necessary. Reg. v. Heera Poonja, 1 Bourke's Rep., 33.

A Judge, instead of striking off a case because an alleged insane person does not appear after service of notice, ought in such event to prosecute the enquiry contemplated by Act XXXV of 1858. Mussamut Moorut Koonwar v. Dhurm Narain Singh, 2 W. R., Mis., 7.

A Collector appointed under Section 11, Act XXXV of 1858, to take charge of the estate of a lunatic, cannot sue himself on behalf of the lunatic, but must appoint a manager for the purpose. Goureenath and another v. The Collector of Monghyr and another, 7 W. R., 5.

Section 5, Act XXXV of 1858, never intended that an alleged lunatic should be summoned into a public Court as a witness, and subjected to examination as a witness by the vakeel of the person on whose petition the enquiry was instituted. R. T. Allen for petitioner, 7 W. R., 246.

Applications made under Section 293 of the Lunacy Act XXXV of 1858 must be verified. Busrut Ally Chowdhry v. Eshan Chunder Roy, mookhtear, on behalf of Arfanissa Chowdhrain, 7 W. R., 267.

A lunatic had been for a number of years in involuntary confinement in Bhowanipore Lunatic Asylum, within the jurisdiction of the Court of the Judge of the 24-Pergunnahs, and was possessed of property out of that jurisdiction. On an application to the Judge to appoint a manager of his property,—Held that as the lunatic was residing within the jurisdiction of the Court of the 24-Pergunnahs, the Judge could, under Act XXXV of 1858, Section 2, enquire into the fact of his insanity, and order a manager to be appointed to the estate. J. C. Durant v. Chundranath Bhuttacharjee, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 246.

Where a prisoner was declared by the Civil Surgeon to be insane at the time he was called on to make his defence, it was held that it was irregular to acquit him; proceedings should have been stayed, and the prisoner detained, pending the orders of Government. In the case of Romon Audheekaree, 10 W. R., Cr., 37.

The application for an enquiry under the Lunacy Act, Act XXXV of 1851, should be verified, and proper notice should be given to the alleged lunatic or his friends in case of necessity. In examining him the greatest care and delicacy should be observed, and everything likely to cause unnecessary pain or excitement to him avoided. If also he be a person of rank, exempted from personal appearance in Court in ordinary civil proceedings, his personal appearance in Court in an enquiry into the state of his mind should be dispensed with. Maharajah Jugunnath Sahee Deo v. Burra Lall Opendronath Sahee Deo, 5 W. R., Mis., 54.

A Magistrate rightly commits for trial at the Sessions a prisoner charged with murder, whom he finds to be sane at the time of the preliminary investigation, although he was insane when he committed the act.

When a prisoner is found to be insane at the time of his trial, the proper procedure applicable to his case is that prescribed by Sections 391 and 392 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Queen v. Ram Ruttun Doss, 9 W. R., Cr., 23.

A Court cannot, under Act XXXV of 1858, make over charge of the property and person of an alleged lunatic to a guardian until it has adjudged him to be of unsound mind and incapable of managing his affairs. Bholanauth Mookerjee v. Grish Mohinee Debia, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 259.

On an enquiry as to the fact of lunacy under Act XXXV of 1858, any finding as to the actual time when the lunacy began is beyond the jurisdiction of the judicial officer making the enquiry.

Where the fact of lunacy was admitted, and the question was the date at which it commenced, the evidence of a planter in the neighbourhood as to common report for years in the village as to the lunacy having been admitted by the Lower Court, the Judicial Committee refused to reject it.

The rule as to the admission of evidence laid down by Dr. Lushington in Unide Rujaha Bommaranze Bahadur v. Pemmasamy Venkutadry Naidoo followed. Bodduarayan Singh, by revivor, and Ajodhya Prusad Singh v. Umrao Singh, 6 B. L. R., 509; and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 6.

On an application for the appointment of a guardian to the estate of a lunatic under Act XXXV of 1858, the Judge should only appoint a person to take charge of the estate of the lunatic, without specifying of what that estate consists. Nitambini Chowdrain v. Shashi Mukhi Chowdrain, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 24; and 12 S. W. R., C. R., 518.

Where the mother of an alleged lunatic presented a petition to the Collector, and the Collector, after certain enquiries, forwarded it to the Judge for orders thereon,—Held that no application was regularly before the Judge under Act XXXV of 1858, for if the application was one by the mother it was bad for want of verification, and if by the Collector it was also bad because he was not the duly constituted agent of the lady, and did not himself formally move the Judge under Section 3 of that Act, or, if he acted under either Section 16 or 27, Act IV of 1870, he had no authority to set the Civil Court in motion without the order of the Court of Wards. Chuckursurun Narain Singh v. The Collector of Sarun, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 180.

1.—MISCELLANEOUS.

A Hindu widow cannot sue as representative of her husband when sons are alive, nor will a petition filed by the sons in a suit brought by her as such representative (in which petition the sons state that she has always been in possession of the property and is entitled to sue) cure the defect in her title.

Held also that, in the absence of proof that the widow was the next reversioner after the sons, even a disclaimer by the sons prior to the institution of the suit, if it did not amount to an absolute assignment to the widow, would not entitle her to sue. Ram Kannye Gossamee v. Meernomoyee Dossee, 2 W. R., 49.

The doctrine of the Hindu law that a widow succeeding as heir to her husband cannot recover property of which he was not possessed, does not apply when the husband has a vested interest under a will or deed, the actual enjoyment being postponed. Hurosoondery Dabea Chowdraney v. Rajessaree Dabea, 2 W. R., 321.

By Hindu law, the assignee of a debt can sue the debtor in his own name. Kadar Vocha Sahib v. Rangas Nayak, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 150.

A widow under the Court of Wards cannot, in the summary department, appeal from an order passed by the Judge in execution of a decree assented to by the Court of Wards. Kustoora Koomaree v. Binoderam Sein, 4 W. R., Mis., 5.

Where a widow who is under age is properly represented in a suit, the matter stands precisely as if she were of age and acted on her own behalf, and as representative of the entire estate, involving the interests of her deceased husband and her minor sons. She has the same control with respect to compromise as she has with respect to the assertion of rights and appeal against an adverse decision. Tariney Churn Gangooly v. Watson and Co., 12 W. R., 414.

A Hindu woman may at all times sue either alone or jointly with her husband. Bhoyrub Chunder Doss and another v. Madhub Chunder Poramanick, Hyde's Rep., 281.

Purdanushin women, or women who according to the usage of the country ought not to be compelled to appear in public, are not exempt from arrest in execution of a decree. The Maharani of Burdwan v. Srimati Baradasundari Debi, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 31; 10 W. R., F. B., 21.

Held (by Macpherson, J.) that accumulations are not income, and cannot be dealt with by a Hindu widow as such; they should be treated in the same way as the corpus of the estate. Grose v. Amirtamoye Dasi, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 3; S. C., 12 W. R., A. O. J., 13.

A Hindu becoming a Byragee, if he chooses to retain possession of, or to assert his right to, property to which he is entitled, may be doing an act which is morally wrong, but in which he will not be restrained by the Court.

A. became a Byragee, and went on a pilgrimage. He alleged that before his departure he made over his property to B., on the condition that it should revert to him on his return. B. sold it to C. Upon his return after several years A. claimed the property from C., who refused to give up possession. D. purchased A.'s rights, and then sued the widow of C. to obtain possession. She denied that the property was made over to B. upon trust for A. on his return, and contended that the suit was barred under Clause 12 of Section 1 of Act XIV of 1859. The lower Appellate Court held that it was not barred, on the ground that B.'s possession was not adverse. On special appeal the case was remanded, that it might be found whether B. had been in possession in trust for A. or adversely to him for more than 12 years. Jagannath Paul v. Bidyannad, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 114; 10 W. R., 172.

The trade of prostitution is recognized and legalized by Hindu law. Chalakonda Alasani v. Chalakonda Katna Chalam, 2 Mad. Rep., 56.

Each holder of a crotriyam conferred for lives can only alienate his own life-interest. Sundarati Mudali v. Valinaki Ammal, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 465.

Semble,—An adopted son may succeed to a crotriyam.

Semble,—A widow may succeed to a crotriyam during life. Sundalati Mudali v. Valinaki Ammal, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 471.

Civil Courts cannot compel Hindus, against their will, to ask other Hindus to their houses or their entertainments. Joy Chunder Sirdar and others v. Ramchurn and others, 6 W. R., 323.

Where a contract is proved to have been entered into, but no memorandum thereof in writing has been signed by the parties, a Hindu defendant is not entitled to plead the Statute of Frauds. John Borradaile and another v. Chinnsook Buxyram, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 70; 1 Hyde's Rep., 51.

A Government promissory note is not a "corody," and therefore not immoveable. Doorga Dayee v. Poorun Dayee, 5 W. R., 141.

Under the Hindu law Government promissory notes ought to be treated as personal property. Mussamut Doorga Dayee v. Mussamut Poorun Dayee, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 128.

Plaintiff brought a suit to procure delivery to her of a share of land purchased with money, subject to the provisions of a deed of partition executed by her husband and the undivided members of his family. Plaintiff's husband has been since 1854 absent in a foreign country. Held that the plaintiff sufficiently represented her absent and divided husband to enable her to sue for his share. Pápammál v. Rámaswámi Chetti, 2 Mad. Rep., Ap., 365.

Held that the mother who is in possession of her daughter's shares in her husband's estate in lieu of dower is not at liberty to sell them, and the sale can be invalidated, although the daughters may not be entitled to immediate entry upon their shares. Mussamut Ghufoorun Bebee v. Khwajeh Mustukedeh and others, 3 Agra Rep., 300.

The Pattam, or office of dignity in a family governed by the Aliya Santána law, is indivisible, and, whether the family be divided or not, the Pattam, no special arrangement having been made about it, descends to the eldest male of the surviving members of the family.

The passage set out in a note to the case of Munda Chetti v. Timmaju (1 M. H. C., Rep., 380) is not a correct interpretation of the original canarese text of Bhutala Pandiya's work. Timmappa Heggade v. Mahalinga Heggade, 4 Mad. Rep., 28.

In a suit between Hindus in the Bombay Mofussil damages may be recovered for mere verbal abuse, without proof of actual damage resulting therefrom to the plaintiff. Kashirám Valad Krishna v. Bhadu Bápuji, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 17.

There is no difference between the position of a Rajah holding an impartible raj, and that of an ordinary zemindar, in respect of his power to relinquish the property in favour of his next legal heir. Such a relinquishment is not forbidden by the Hindu law. Luchmee Narain Singh v. Gibbon, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 197.

Under the Benares law a man's immoveable property, though self-acquired, is not within his power of disposal so absolutely by gift in his lifetime as to enable him to give it all to one son or grandson in exclusion of the rest. Maha Sookh v. Budree, 1 N. W. R., 103.

ADMINISTRATION—(See ADMINISTRATION).

The sale by a widow (who has obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 to collect the debts due to her husband's estate) of a money decree belonging to her husband's estate, cannot be set aside except on the ground of fraud, either as not being the heir and selling what she had no power to transfer, or as making a paper transfer to avoid the effect of execution. Bhagwan Doss v. Luchmee Narain, 2 W. R., Mis., 19.

Where a sale of landed property was made by a Hindu widow as administratrix to the estate of her deceased husband,—Held that she had power to dispose of the land for any purpose for which as administratrix she might properly do so.

Held also that an improper disposal of the property was not to be presumed against a purchaser from her, but that the sale must be taken to be proper and valid, unless it appeared that to the purchaser's knowledge she was for an unlawful purpose converting the estate. Held also that she having the right to sell as administratrix, it could not be presumed that she sold as a widow. Loganada Mudali v. Rasvami and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 384.

The security required from the administrator of effects of a deceased Hindu extends, as in the case of an English administrator, only so far as to cover the personalty of the deceased. In the goods of Gour Chunder Thakoor, deceased, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 229.

A widow is entitled (in preference to a cousin who also claimed as surviving partner) to a certificate to collect the debts, joint as well as separate, of her late husband. Roy Baboo Shib Golam Sahoo Bahadoor v. Mussamut Gunga Koonwaree, 1 W. R., Mis., 32.

A Hindu widow, as holder of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, is not necessarily the proper person to continue a suit for the recovery of immoveable property, though she is entitled to do so as heir of the deceased, if he died without issue, and was the sole owner of the property. Sevinthia Pillay v. Mootoosawmy and others, 8 W. R., 2.

3.—Adoption.

A Hindu died after having made a hibbanama or deed of gift, giving the bulk of his property to the eldest son of one of his brothers, designating him as his pallok-putra. The donee thereof died without issue, but leaving a widow him surviving. On the death of his widow his cousins sued his step-brother for possession of their share of his property, on the allegation that he had been adopted by their uncle, and consequently the relationship between him and his step-brother had been severed, and that they were equally entitled with the step-brother to succeed. The defendant denied the fact of the adoption. The High Court held that the intention to adopt and the fact of adoption were proved by the terms of the deed of gift.

Held, by the Privy Council, reversing the judgment of the High Court, that the words of the hibbanama [" but as I had no son or daughter, I took you as my pallok-putra, in the month of Aghran 1211, B. S. (1803), with the anumati (permission) of your parents, for the purpose of securing future oblations of water and funeral cake, and having brought you up like a son, performed the ceremonies of your Sangskar, &c., and have constituted you my representative"] were not those which properly import the adoption of a son by gift—Dattaka Putra.

Held that the presumption which arose from the religious duty of a childless Hindu to adopt was, in this case, opposed to as strong a presumption that a Hindu would not break the law by giving in adoption an eldest or only son.

In estimating the value of a suit, the costs must not be included in the amount in dispute. Nilmadhab Dass v. Biswambhar Dass, 3 B. L. R., P. C., 27; S. C., 12 W. R., P. C., 29.

A registered deed of permission to adopt, which contained no words of devise, was held not to be of a testamentary character, there appearing no intention on the part of the maker that the document should contain any disposition of his estate, except so far as such disposition might result from the adoption of a son under it. An adopted son, as such, takes by inheritance, and not by devise. A son cannot be adopted to the great-grandfather of the last taker after the lapse of several successive years, when all the spiritual purposes of a son, according to the largest construction of them, would have been satisfied.

When the estate of a son is unlimited, and that son marries and leaves a widow his heir, she acquires a vested interest in her husband's property as widow, and a new heir cannot be substituted by adoption to defeat that estate, and take as an adopted son what a natural born son would not have taken. By the mere gift of power of adoption to a widow, the estate of the heir of a deceased son vested in possession cannot be defeated and divested. Bhoobun Moye Debia v. Ramkishore Acharjee, 3 W. R., P. C., 15.

According to Hindu law a power to adopt may be given verbally. The widow of a childless member of a divided Hindu family is entitled to a life-interest in her husband's estate after the death of an adopted son before attaining majority. Soonder Koomaree Debea v. Gudadhur Pershad Tewaree, 4 W. R., P. C., 116.

A suit to set aside the adoption of a second son must be made within 12 years from cause of action. Radhakissen Mahapater v. Sreekissen Mahapater, 1 W. R., 62.

A Hindu will contained the following clause: "I give out of my two-anna share of the whole of my personal estates Rs. 7,000 to my mother (one of the defendants) and Rs. 5,000 to my wife (the plaintiff). Besides the two-anna share of the wealth in ready money and landed property which remains, you, my brother, will keep under your own charge; you are at present malik of the whole of the property; you will perform all acts; you will cause one of your sons to be received in adoption." The brother died leaving a will, by which he committed to his wife and mother the charge of his own property and that of his brother, and also the duty of giving his son in adoption to his brother. The defendants, viz., his wife and mother, proved the will, and took possession of the property. The plaintiff omitted to adopt. Her husband died in 1851, and the suit was brought in 1867.

Held that the estate descended to the widow, plaintiff, subject to the two legacies, notwithstanding her refusal to adopt; and that she did not forfeit it even if she refused to adopt. Prasannamayi Dasi v. Kadambini Dasi, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 85.

An attempt at a false adoption of a son does not render a widow liable to the penalty of absolute forfeiture of the property for the benefit of reversioners. Komul Monee Dossee v. Alhammonee Dossee, 1 W. R., 256.

Although the exercise of an act of adoption by the widow of a Hindu who died without male issue, and made in accordance with his request, divested the property from the widow and vested it in the adopted son, the widow sued for an undivided share in the joint property, and a decree was made directing her to be put in possession. Held that the widow must be assumed to have prosecuted the suit only as guardian for her adopted son; that the decree must be considered to be for his benefit, and that she was put in possession as trustee for him and accountable to him as guardian and trustee for the profits of the property, being entitled herself to a maintenance out of it. Dhurmo Doss Pandey and others v. Mussamut Shama Soondery Debia, 6 W. R., P. C., 43.

Plaintiff sued as the widow of an adopted son for the property of the adoptive father, and also on the ground that the adopted son was the devisee of the adoptive father. The Civil Judge decided that the adoption of the plaintiff's husband was invalid according to Hindu law, and that the devise, having been made to the plaintiff's husband as adopted son, was invalid.

Held (reversing the decision of the Civil Judge) that as the language of the testator sufficiently indicated the person who was to be the object of his bounty, the person so indicated was entitled to take, although the testator conceived him to possess a character which in point of law could not be sustained. Javani Bhai v. Jivar Bhai, 2 Mad. Rep., 462.

A sale in execution of a decree against an adoptive mother is good as against the adopted son, when made, not personally, but as guardian of the adopted son, and not for a personal debt, but for payments made by co-sharers of Government revenue on account of the adopted son to preserve their joint property. The estate of the adopted son is not liable for a debt without proof that the debt is other than personal. Roopmonjooree Chowdhrance v. Ramlall Sircar, 1 W. R., 144.

The theory of an adoption is a complete change of paternity; the son is to be considered as one actually begotten by the adoptive father, and he is so in all respects save an incapacity to contract marriages in the family from which he was taken. Narasamal v. Balaramacharlu, 1 Mad. Rep., 420.

A Hindu whose adoption is invalid is entitled to maintenance in his adopter's family (overruled, 363). A son, whether adopted or begotten, can claim maintenance of his father until put into possession of his share of the ancestral estate.

As against an adopted son suing for his share of the ancestral estate, the Law of Limitation does not begin to run until the allotment of such share has been demanded and refused. The share of an adopted son is one-fourth of the share of a son born to the adoptive father after the adoption. Ayyávu Muppanár v. Niladatchi Ammál and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 45.

Where an adoption had been acquiesced in for a period of thirty-three years, it was presumed that the necessary consent of some person competent to give away the adopted son had been obtained. Anandráv Siváji et al. v. Ganesh Eshvant Bikil, 7 Bom. Rep., Ap., XXXIII.

A childless Hindu is bound to adopt a son if at all anxious for his own salvation, and what is required to be done for that end is not optional with him, but an imperative obligation. Rajendro Narain Lahoree v. Saroda Soondaree Debia, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 548.

The decision of an Appeal Bench of the High Court upon a point of law, or the construction of a document in the case before them, is not necessarily binding on a single Judge of that Court, where the same question again arises in another suit before him.

A Hindu testator died, leaving a widow, and leaving also a will which contained the following clause: "My wife is supposed to be pregnant with child; if a daughter be born she will in that case adopt the twain mentioned below (the plaintiff and one S. G.), and whatever property there shall exist, consisting of moveable and immoveable, my executors shall divide into three equal shares, and give the same to the daughter and adopted sons on their attaining the age of majority. S. G. died; no child was born by the widow. The plaintiff having attained his majority brought a suit for declaration of his title, alleging that he had been duly adopted under the will; but that, whether he had been adopted or not, he was entitled under the will to a share in the moveable and immoveable property of the testator. No valid adoption took place,—Held that there was no gift by implication to the plaintiff. The testator only intended him and S. G. to take under the will in the event of their being adopted. Prossonomoye Dassee v. Dossmoney Dossee not followed. Abhai Charan Ghose v. S. M. Dasmani Dassi, 6 C. L. R., 623.

The Sudder Ameen having held an adoption proved, the Principal Sudder Ameen, on appeal, reversed that decision on the facts. The case came before the High Court on special appeal, and the decision then given was appealed to England, and special leave was given by her Majesty to appeal against the decision of the Principal Sudder Ameen. The decision of the High Court on the law was admitted to be good, but the Judicial Committee reversed the finding of the Principal Sudder Ameen on the facts.

Deeds though unregistered (registration not being compulsory), when proved by all the attesting witnesses, and against which there is no evidence on the other side, ought not to be set aside on mere suspicion of perjury and forgery. Kali Chundra Chowdry v. Shib Chundra Bhaduri, 6 B. L. R., 501; and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 12.

According to Hindu law sons acquire rights only in the property which belonged to their father at the time of their birth, and have no legal claim to property of which a bonâ-fide disposition, effectual as against their father, had been made long before they were born.

The right of an after-born son to share as a coparcener divided property depends upon his mother being pregnant with him at the time of a partition.

The father of the plaintiffs adopted the third defendant. After the adoption the wife of the father gave birth to a son. Thereupon the father effected a division of the property with the adopted son, and gave the latter a larger share than he was entitled to receive by law. The father married a second wife, and the plaintiffs were the issue of the marriage.

Held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to a partition of any portion of the property which fell to the share of the adopted son. Yekeyamian v. Agniswari, 4 Mad. Rep., 307.

In order to establish a valid adoption in a Brahmin family, proof of the performance of the datta homam is not essential.

The giving and receiving a boy who is capable of being adopted is sufficient to constitute a valid adoption according to Hindu law. Singamma v. Vinjamuri, 4 Mad. Rep., 165.

A suit to set aside the adoption of a second son must be made within 12 years from cause of action. The maxim "ignorantia legis nil excusat" applies to questions of the Hindu law of inheritance and adoption, as well as to other laws. Radhakissen Mahapater v. Sreekissen Mahapater, 1 W. R., 62.

A bond executed by a widow in possession of a zemindary was held binding on the adopted son of the late zemindar, the inference from the evidence being that the bond was given for debts which the defendant (the adopted son), as owner of the zemindary, might be liable to pay, and that by his own acts he had admitted that he actually was liable to the payment. Chetty Colum Coomara Vencatachella Raddyar v. Rajah Rungasanwey Jyengar Bahadoor, 4 W. R., P. C., 71.

P., a Hindu inhabitant of Calcutta, of the Sudra caste, having two wives,—M., the elder wife, and N., the younger,—but no issue by either of them, adopted two sons, the plaintiff and S. This double adoption took place on one and the same occasion, but the plaintiff went through the necessary ceremonies in point of time before S. P. gave the plaintiff in adoption to his wife M., and S. to his wife N. P. afterwards died, leaving M. N., the plaintiff, and S., and leaving property and a will, in which he said,—

"Having adopted two sons, I have given my elder son to my elder wife to bring him up, and they both are respectively nurturing the two sons as sons born of their own womb. For the purpose of protecting and preserving the property after my decease, I appoint my elder uterine brother A. executor, and my said two wives M. and N. executrixes. If either of these my two sons depart this life without issue (which God forbid !), I direct either of my wives whose foster son shall have died to take another son in adoption pursuant to this my direction, and having done so, should a similar misfortune happen, she shall have the option of adopting other sons in succession, and that son shall inherit the share of my deceased son. Further, besides one-half share of the moveable and immoveable properties of which I am possessed jointly with my elder uterine brother, whatever, &c., belonging to me in my separate, &c., account, my said executor and executrixes shall become possessed of the whole after my decease, and shall recover my dues and pay the undermentioned legacies, &c., &c. Afterwards, when my adopted sons shall have attained their ages of majority, my executor and executrixes shall account for and give them their shares on their becoming of age. If they continue to be unanimous, well and good; if not, they may divide and receive their respective shares of the property and live separate as to food, &c., &c."

The executor and two executrixes proved the will. Afterwards S. died, an infant and unmarried, and thereupon N., his mother in adoption, assuming to act under the will, adopted the defendant O. in his place, the other son, the present plaintiff, still living.

The plaintiff and O. afterwards, while still infants, filed a bill by their next friend against P.'s executor and executrixes for the administration of the estate. N. afterwards died before the present suit, which was brought by the plaintiff against M., the surviving wife, and O., praying that the plaintiff might be declared the only son and heir of P., and that an account might be decreed against the defendants. Held by the Court below that the adoption by P. of two sons at the same time was void; that consequently there was no validly adopted son living at the time N. exercised the power given her by the will, and that the adoption by her of O. was valid.

Secondly, by the Court below and the Court of Appeal, that there was a clear designation of the plaintiff and S., and of O., the subsequently adopted son, to enable them to take under the will.

Thirdly, by both Courts, that the administration suit was no bar to the present suit.

And held by Trevor, J., dissenting from the rest of the Court on the appeal, that the instrument executed by P. was partly a will and partly a permission to adopt; that as to the first part of the instrument, there was sufficient designation of the persons as held by the rest of the Court; and as to the second part, that it was a condition precedent to any one taking under that permission that he should be a validly adopted son according to the Hindu law. Monemothanath Day v. Onothanath Day and Nemoyemoney Dassee, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 24; Bourke's Rep., O. C., 189.

According to Hindu law, a second adoption (the first adopted son still existing and remaining in possession of his character of a son) is invalid. The acquiescence of the first adopted son, after he came of age, in the division of property made by the adopting father between his two adopted sons, was not equivalent to a previous consent (binding on the first adopted son) to the disposition of the ancestral property by the father, but was binding on the first adopted son with regard to other property of which the father had the power of disposing by an act inter vivos without the consent of the first adopted son. Atchama v. Ramanhadha Baboo 7 W. R., P. C., 57.

When a Hindu lady adopted a son in the lifetime of her husband, the fact that she carried on a law-suit during his lifetime, calling herself his wife and the mother of the adopted son, and that neither the husband nor any one else denied the adoption, would be strong corroborative evidence that the adoption was made not only with the husband's consent, but that the ceremonies usual on the occasion of an adoption were done in his actual presence. Tincowrie Chatterjee v. Denonath Banerjee, W. R., 1864, 155.

Circumstances under which Court will require strict proof of power to adopt, and under which it will assume the power to have been given. The acquiescence of parties interested in opposing an adoption is not primâ-facie evidence of its validity. The precise contingency contemplated by the donor of the power must happen to make an adoption valid. Mohindrolall Mookerjee v. Rookiney Dabee, Cor. Rep., 42.

In cases of adoption careful scrutiny is necessary. The party seeking to establish an adoption is bound to produce the best evidence procurable. The rule for testing the validity of a deed of adoption is contemporaneity of execution and publication of the deed of permission. In the absence of original deed, all the circumstances bearing upon the alleged deed, and all the probabilities for and against its genuineness, must be considered. Roopmonjoree Chowdrain v. Ramlal Sircar, 1 W. R., 144.

In a former bonâ-fide litigation to which the defendant was no party, the status of the plaintiff as an adopted son was in issue and disposed of in his favour. Held that that was good evidence of the adoption in this case, in the absence of better evidence for the defendant. Seetaram v. Juggobundo Bose, 2 W. R., 16.

An adoption made by a Parsee immediately before his death would render extremely improbable the execution of a will by him a very short time previous thereto, and therefore call for very clear proof to establish its existence.

Although in cases of adoption by dhurm-putr (a partial adoption) it is not indispensably necessary that a declaration should be made on the third day after the decease, yet it is usual to make such a declaration and to take a writing from the dhurm-putr.

In the absence of any such writing, and upon the whole evidence, the adoption in this case was pronounced to be as a paluk-putr, and not merely as a dhurm-putr. Homabhaee v. Punjeabhaee Dosabheen, 5 W. R., P. C., 102.

According to Hindu law, neither registration of the act of adoption, nor any written evidence of that law having been completed, is essential to its validity.

In no case should the rights of wives and daughters be transferred to strangers or to more remote relations, unless the fact of adoption by which this transfer is effected be proved by evidence free from all suspicion of fraud, and so consistent and probable as to give no occasion for doubt of its truth. Although the Hindu law does not require that adoptions should be acknowledged in writing, it is usual, when persons in the situation of a zemindar adopt sons, to acknowledge such adoption in writing, to give notice to the ruling power, and to invite the neighbouring zemindars and others to be present at such an adoption. Sutroogun Sutputty v. Sabitra Dye, 5 W. R., P. C., 109.

(d) Rights of Adopted Son.

Held (following the rule of the Privy Council in the case of Shumbhoo Chunder Chowdhry, dated 6th February, 1835) that, according to the authorities on Hindu law and the weight due to them, an adopted son succeeds, not only lineally, but collaterally, to the inheritance of his relations. Tara Mohun Bhuttacharjee v. Kripa Moyee Debia, 9 W. R., 423.

Under the Hindu law an adopted son has all the rights of a son born. When, however, an adopted son rests his title on a confirmatory sunnud, he is bound to prove the sunnud. Maharajah Juggernath Sahaie v. Mussamut Mukkun Koonwar, 3 W. R., 24.

An adopted son has all the rights and privileges of a son born, and is also entitled to succeed to the stridhun of his mother in the absence of daughters, in like manner as a son born, whether there be a will in his favour or not.

A woman cannot execute a will regarding any property she inherits from her husband or father. But she can dispose of the stridhun by gift, will, or sale, except immoveable property given to her by her husband.

A son adopted by one wife may succeed to a co-wife's stridhun. Teencowree Chatterjea v. Dinonath Banerjea, 3 W. R., 49.

Where a Hindu has adopted a son, he acquires the right of a son in the hereditary immoveable property of the adoptive father; and he cannot be deprived of these rights by the adoptive father afterwards assuming to adopt a second son, and settling the hereditary property upon such second adopted son, coupled with declarations that the first son was disinherited. According to Hindu law, an adoption of a second son during the lifetime of a previously adopted son is inoperative.

A childless Hindu adopted A. as his son; afterwards he adopted B. as his son and made a will, dividing his property, ancestral as well as acquired, between A. and B. A. filed a petition denying the right of his adoptive father to adopt B., and protesting against the will; but afterwards he signed a consent to the will. Held that as the father afterwards endeavoured to deprive A. of all his rights, as well those under the will as by the adoption, the consent did not bind A., since it was given on the basis of a family arrangement, from which the adoptive father afterwards departed.

Semble,—That if the consent were given by A. in ignorance of his right it would not be binding upon him. Sudanund Mohaputtur v. Bonomalee and others, Marsh., 317.

According to Hindu law, an adopted son succeeds not only lineally, but also collaterally, to the inheritance of his adoptive father's relations. Sumbhoochunder Chowdhry v. Naraini Debia, 5 W. R., P. C., 100.

Where money derived from ancestral estates is invested, before the adoption of a son, in the purchase of immoveable property, which continues to exist at the time of the adoption, the adopted son has equally a vested right in that property as he has in any other similar immoveable property which the father had it in his power before the adoption to alienate, but which he did not alienate. Sudanund Mohapattur v. Soorjoomonee Dayee and others, 11 W. R., 436.

An adopted son represents his adoptive father, and is entitled to the share which his father would have obtained. When he comes to share with heirs other than the legitimately begotten sons of his adoptive father in the property of kinsman, he takes the same share that they would have. Tara Mohun Bhuttacharjee v. Kripa Moyee Debia, 9 W. R., 423.

Adoption is tantamount to the birth of a son to the adopter, and the property inherited from the adopter must be regarded as ancestral; during the lifetime of his father a son cannot claim to have a specific share declared and defined, but is only entitled to a decree declaring the property to be ancestral. Heera Singh v. Burzar Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 256.

Property vests in an adopted son immediately on his adoption, though he be a minor. A Hindu widow having power to adopt cannot be compelled to act up to that permission. Sreemutty Deeno Moyee Dossee v. Doorga Pershad Mitter, 3 W. R., Mis., 6.

An adopted son is not actually precluded from questioning acts done by his mother during his minority or before his adoption; but a sale by a widow, with the consent of all legal heirs at the time existing, and ratified by decrees of Court, is binding on reversionary as well as on an adopted son adopted long after the sale. Rajkisto Roy v. Kishore Mohun Mojoomdar, 3 W. R., 14.

A member of a Hindu family cannot, as such, inherit the property of one taken out of that family by adoption. The severance of an adopted son from his natural family is so complete that no mutual rights as to succession to property can arise between them. Rayan Krishnamachariyar v. Kuppannayyanger, 1 Mad. Rep., 180.

The adopted son of one whose alleged adoption has been held invalid can make no claim through his adoptive father to be maintained by the alleged adopter. The natural rights of a person adopted remain unaffected when the adoption is invalid.

Quære,—Whether a right to maintenance can descend as an estate. Bâwani Sankara Pundit v. Ambabây Amaral, 1 Mad. Rep., 363.

A son adopted by the widow of a deceased Hindu (in respect of whose estate no probate, letters of administration, or certificate of heirship has been granted), is the legal representative of the deceased, and as such is entitled to maintain a suit, under Act XIII of 1855, for the benefit of the persons, if any, entitled to compensation for the injury occasioned to them by the death of the deceased against those whose negligence caused that death.

Such an adopted son is not, however, entitled to have any portion of the damages awarded in the suit allotted to him as a child of the deceased. Quære,—Whether a son, if adopted by deceased in his lifetime, would be entitled to damages under that Act.

Measure of damages in actions brought under Act XIII of 1855. Vinâyak Raghunâth v. The Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company, 7 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 113; Sorabji Rutanji v. G. I. P. Railway Co., 7 Bom. Rep., 119; Rutanabai v. G. I. P. Railway Co., 7 Bom. Rep., O. C., 120.

(e) Who may or may not be Adopted.

The Hindu law does not allow of the adoption of a paluk-putro. Kalee Chunder Chowdhry v. Shib Chunder, 4 W. R., 281.

The adoption of a grand-nephew is not repugnant to Hindu law. An adopted son cannot succeed to his adoptive maternal grandfather's estate when there are collateral male heirs. Morun Moyee Debeah v. Beejoy Kishen Gossamee, W. R., F. B., 121.

The adoption of an only son is, when made, valid according to Hindu law. Chinna Gaurdan and another v. Kumara Gaundar, 1 Mad. Rep., 54.

According to Hindu law an orphan cannot be adopted. Subbalurammal v. Ammakutti Ammal, 2 Mad. Rep., 129.

An adopted son cannot adopt his own natural brother. In the Audhra country, as in Bengal, a Brahmin cannot adopt his sister's son. In Bengal a Brahmin's widow cannot adopt her uncle's son. Narâsamal v. Balaramacharlu, 1 Mad. Rep., 24.

It is now well-settled law that the adoption of a sister's son by a Hindu of the Vaishya caste is valid. Ganpatrâv Vireshnag et al. v. Vithobâ Khandâppâ et al., 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 130.

The adoption of an only son is invalid according to Hindu law. Rajah Upendro Lal Roy v. Srimati Rani Prasannamayi, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 221; S. C., 10 W. R., 347.

The Hindu law does not prevent a leper from giving his son in adoption. Anund Mohun Mozoomdar v. Gobind Chunder Mozoomdar, W. R., 1864, 173.

The adoption by a Sudra of an only son as a kurta putro is not illegal under Hindu law. Mussamut Tikdey v. Lalla Hurreelall, W. R., 1864, 133.

A male cannot be adopted into a family governed by the law of Aleya Santâna. Munda Chetti v. Temuju Hensu, 1 Mad. Rep., 381.

(f) Who may or may not Adopt.

In the Marâtha country a Hindu widow may, without the permission of her husband, and without the consent of his kindred, adopt a son to him if the act is done by her in the proper bonâ-fide performance of a religious duty, and neither capriciously nor from a corrupt motive.

An elder Hindu widow has the power to adopt a son to her deceased husband without the consent of a younger widow. Rakhmâbâi v. Râdhâbâi, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 181.

A Hindu widow has no power to adopt a son to her deceased husband if she has been expressly prohibited from doing so by her husband in his lifetime.

Whether according to the Marâtha school she can adopt without the authority of her husband given prior to his decease, quære. Where a Hindu childless husband, when at the point of death, positively refuses to adopt a son, and died without retracting that refusal, it was held that a subsequent adoption by his widow was null and void, as authority from her husband to adopt could not in such a case be implied (per Westropp, J.)

Dictum of the High Court of Madras, "that the opinion of Devanda Bhatta must have been that the assent of the husband stood upon the same footing, and was of the same scope, in the case of giving and receiving" (a son in adoption by the wife) questioned.

Where an adoption by a young Hindu widow is set up against her and to defeat her rights, the Court will expect clear evidence that at the time she adopted she was fully informed of those rights, and of the effect of the act of adoption upon them; and if it find that fraud or cajolery was practised upon the widow to induce her to adopt, or that there has been suppression or concealment of facts from her, it will refuse to uphold the adoption. Bayabai v. Bala urf Venkutesh Rama Kant, 7 Bom. Rep., Ap., 1.

An adoption is not invalidated by the mere fact of the adoptive father being a minor, if he has attained the years of discretion. Such an adoption is not attended by any civil disability. Rajendro Narain Lahoree v. Saroda Soondaree Debia, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 548.

A Hindu widow, who has become unchaste, is living in concubinage and is in a state of pregnancy resulting from such concubinage, is incompetent to receive a son in adoption. Sayainlall Dutt v. Sudamini Dasi, 5 B. L. R., 362.

A widower can make a valid adoption according to Hindu law. Semble,—The Hindu law does not prohibit an adoption by a man who has not been married. N. Chandvasekharuda v. N. Bramhana, 4 Mad. Rep., 270.

A widow succeeding as heir to her own son does not lose the right to exercise the power of adoption. By making an adoption she divests her own estate only. Bykant Mony Roy v. Kristo Soondery Roy, 7 W. R., 392.

A widow in the Mithila province is capable of adopting in the kritima form without her husband's consent. Boobe Singh and others v. Mussamut Busunt Koeree and others, 8 W. R., 155.

A claim to adopt disallowed in the case of a Hindu woman, who, so long as any male member of her husband's family was alive, took no steps to carry out her husband's permission to adopt, but who, as soon as the last male member died, and the property devolved on his widow, tried to obtain possession by means of the alleged dormant permission to adopt. Gobind Soonduree Debia v. Juggodumba Debia, 3 W. R., 66.

A widow can adopt a son without the consent of her husband according to Hindu law.

Where a widow adopted a son with the assent of the majority of the surviving kindred of her husband, the adoption was held to be valid.

In such a case, if the requirement of consent of the sapindas be anything more than a moral precept, the assent of any one of the sapindas will suffice. Anundayi, alias Kunjara Natcaiar, and others v. Ram Parvatvurdani Natchiar and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 206.

A widow cannot make a valid adoption without either the authority of her husband or the assent of his sapindas. Arundadi Ammál v. Kuppammàl, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 282; Collector of Madura v. Sreemata Vijaya, 2 Mad. Rep., 206.

According to the Hindu law current in the Dravida country, a widow not having her husband's permission may, if duly authorized by his kindred, adopt a son to him.

The question, Who are the kinsmen whose assent will supply the want of positive authority of the deceased husband? must depend upon the circumstances of the family in each case. There must be such evidence of the assent of the kinsmen as suffices to show that the act is done by the widow in the bonâ-fide performance of a religious duty, and not capriciously or from a corrupt motive. The widow cannot adopt where there is a prohibition by the husband, direct or implied. Collector of Madura v. Muta Ramalinga Sathuputhy, 1 B. L. R., P. C., 1; S. C., 10 W. R., P. C., 17.

An adoption may be made either by a man in his lifetime, or by one of his wives after his death under a power conferred upon her for that purpose by her husband. Haradhun Mookerjee v. Mothoo ranath Mookerjee and others, 7 W. R., P. C., 71.

Under the Hindu law, current in Mithila, a Hindu widow has power to adopt a son in the kritrima form, with or without her husband's consent, but such son would not, by virtue of such adoption, lose his position in his own family, nor would he succeed to the property left by the husband of his adoptive mother, but would be considered her son, and entitled to succeed to her only. The Collector of Tirhoot, on behalf of the Court of Wards v. Hurropersaud Mohunt, 7 W. R., 500.

A Hindu died leaving a son (who afterwards died a minor and unmarried), a widow, and three daughters. On the death of the minor the widow succeeded to the property, and, under a will of her late husband, adopted in 1851 a son of her husband's brother. The widow died in 1866. One of the daughters, as guardian of her infant son born in 1853, brought a suit to set aside the will, and with it the adoption, and for recovery of possession of the property left by her minor brother. The defence set up was that the will was genuine; that the plaintiff should have sued within twelve years from the adoption; and that she had in 1851 admitted the adoption in having accepted a dur-putnee from the guardian of the adopted son.

Held that the cause of action accrued on the death of the adoptive mother, and not from the date of the adoption.

Held that the acknowledgment of the adoption by the plaintiff before the birth of her son would not bar his right.

Held that the onus was upon the adopted son to prove the validity of the adoption, and not upon the plaintiff suing as heir to prove its invalidity, even though he alleged fraud, and adduced no evidence in support of it.

Held that the doctrine of Hindu law that a "permission is to be presumed in the absence of prohibition," Dattaka Chandrika, Section 1, verse 32, relates to a giver, and not to a receiver in adoption. Tarini Churn Chowdhry v. Saroda Sundari Dasi, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 145; S. C., 11 W. R., 468.

Uninterrupted and undisputed possession for a long period of time constitutes sufficient primâ-facie evidence of title; but if this possession is admitted to be under an adoption it will avail nothing if the adoption fails. In the district of Bareilly the authority of the husband is essential to the validity of an adoption. Rajah Haumin Chull Singh v. Koomer Gunsheam Singh, 5 W. R., P. C., 69.

No cause of action to set aside illegal acts of an adopting mother arises to the adopted son, either from the date of his obtaining possession or from the date of the final decisions in any case brought for him or against his mother, or by or against him to prove or disprove the validity of his adoption. Kishen Mohun Koond v. Muddun Mohun Tewaree, 5 W. R., 32.

According to the Hindu law prevailing in Western India an orphan cannot be adopted. Balvantrâv Bhâksar v. Bayâbai, 6 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 83.

A formal adoption is not invalid because it has not received the sanction of the ruling power, and (where the ruling power does not interfere) an adoption without such sanction entitles the adopted son to succeed to property of the nature of a service watan. Rámchundra Vásudeb v. Nánâji Zimâji, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 26.

An adoption amongst Sudras is not necessarily invalid because the person adopted is an only son and is married, and has been given in adoption by his mother after her husband's death and without his authority.

There is nothing in the books of authority amongst Hindus to show that a Vaishya who has undergone the ceremony of Vilhut-Vida is incapable of adopting a son. If a custom to that effect exists it should be proved by satisfactory evidence. Mhálsái bái v. Vithobâ Khandáppá Gulve, 7 Bom. Rep., Ap., XXVI.

The doctrine that the consent of all her husband's relatives is requisite to make an adoption by a Hindu widow valid is erroneous. Gopal Shrídhar Dikshit Patvardhan v. Naro Vinayak Dikshit Patvardhan and another, 7 Bom. Rep., Ap., XXIV.

According to the highest authorities in repute in the Marátha country the express sanction of the husband is indispensable to render valid an adoption made by the wife in his lifetime.

Comparative weight, as legal authorities on this side of India on the question of adoption, of the Mitákshará, Mayákha, Dattaká Mimamsá, Dattaká Chandriká, Smriti Chandriká, Viramitrodayá, Dharmasindha, and the Nirnayasindha pointed out.

Dictum in the case of The Collector of Madura v. M. Ramalinga Sathapati "that the opinion of Devanda Bhatta must have been that the assent of the husband stood upon precisely the same footing, and was of the same scope, in the cases of giving and receiving" (by the wife in adoption) questioned. Náráyan Bábáji and Sundrubai v. Nánâ Manchar et al., 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 153.

The consent of the party adopted is essential to the validity of an adoption in the Kritrima form. Luchmun Lall v. Mohun Lall Bhoya Gayal, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 179.

A Hindu Sudra adopted the plaintiff, his brother's son, 1247 (1840), who upon the death of his adoptive father performed his sradh, and obtained possession of all his property as such adopted son. The adoption had not been questioned except in 1256 (1849), when the defendant sued the plaintiff, who was then still a minor, through his guardian, and obtained possession from the plaintiff of certain of the property of the deceased, on the ground that the adoption was invalid. The plaintiff now, within twelve years of such dispossession, sued to recover possession, stating that the decree in the former suit had been obtained by the defendant in collusion with the guardian. The defence was that the adoption was invalid, the proper ceremonies not having been performed. The Court refused to entertain such defence.

Per Bayley, J.—Ceremonies which are necessary to be observed for a valid adoption among Hindus of the superior classes are not necessary in the case of an adoption by a sudra. In the case of adoption by a sudra of a brother's son, mere giving and taking may be sufficient to make the adoption valid. Nittanund Ghose v. Krishna Doyal Ghose, 7 B. L. R., 1, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 300.

Where it was not intended by the widow that her adopted son should succeed her in the management and enjoyment of the property with her consent, she may resist the claim of the adopted son to eject her, on the ground of the invalidity of the adoption under the Hindu law, notwithstanding her previous treatment and recognition of the plaintiff as her adopted son and her acknowledgment having been received and acted upon by the authorities without question. In cases of adoption in the dattaka form, it must be proved that the widow had the authority of her husband to adopt, and that she made the adoption when the boy adopted was under six years of age, and with the prescribed ceremonies. Although, according to the Dattaka Mimansa, the ceremony of homa, or burnt-offering, is an essential part of adoption, it is not necessary that it should take place in the dwelling of the adopted. Thakoor Oomrao Singh v. Thakooranee Mahtab Koonwar, 2 Agra Rep., 103.

The weight of authority is against the validity of the adoption of one upon whom the Upanayana has been already performed. In strictness, there is no authority upon the other side. Venkatesaiya v. Venkatacharlu and others, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 28.

A simultaneous adoption of two sons is invalid. In order to constitute a valid adoption there must be an actual bodily transfer and giving in adoption of the son by the natural to the adoptive parent.

Assuming that the testator, in using the words, "According to our Shastras, the said two adopted sons will perform our obsequies, and shall become successors of our ancestral and self-acquired property," intended to make a substantive gift to named individuals,—Held that the gift is inoperative if the individuals do not fulfil the character of adopted sons. Siddesorry Dossee v. Doorgachurn Sett and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 22; S. C., Bourke's Rep., O. C., 360.

Objection that the respondent's adoption was not valid because made when the adopter was under pollution in consequence of the death of a relative. Upon a conflict of evidence as to the time of the relative's death, the Privy Council decided in favour of the respondent. The period of pollution according to Hindu law is sixteen days. Ramalinga Pillai v. Sudasiva Pillai, 1 W. R., P. C., 25.

Held that the adoption by a Hindu widow of an only son, if valid in every other respect, cannot be set aside by reason of the adopted being an only son of an advanced age.

An adoption by a widow has a retrospective effect, and, relating back to the death of the deceased husband, entitles the adopted son to succeed to his estate. A document purporting to be a deed of adoption does not require to be stamped. Ráje Vyankatrav Anandráv v. Jayavantravbin Malharrav Ramadive, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 191.

Consanguinity does not invalidate an adoption where the parties involved do not belong to any of the three regenerate castes. An adoption de facto must be supposed to be a valid adoption until it is set aside, and a party so adopted is entitled to object to other parties receiving a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860. Nunhoo Sing v. Purm Dhan Sing, 13 W. R., 336.

4—Alienation by Widow.

A conveyance by a Hindu widow, without necessity, of ancestral property, can only operate as a conveyance of her life-interest. The purchase of a kismut sold for Government revenue does not destroy the pre-existing rights of the holders of the tenure. Reversioners are as much entitled to have a sale of their share in such a kismut set aside as a sale of any other property by the widow without necessity. Tarinee Churn Banerjee v. Nund Coomar Banerjee, 1 W. R., 47.

A purchaser is not bound to prove the necessity of a sale. Ramkulpo Mundul v. Shohocharree Dossee, 4 W. R., 64.

Where a Hindu widow sells as guardian of her minor son and for his maintenance, the purchaser need only satisfy himself of the necessity of the sale, and is not bound to see to the application of the money. Radha Kishore Mookerjee and another v. Mirtoonjoy Gow and others, 7 W. R., 33.

A sale by a manager with necessity may be valid, although the vendor does not describe himself as manager. Jodunath Chuckerbutty and another v. James Tewdee and others, 11 W. R., 20.

A sale by a Hindu widow of her husband's estate, under legal necessity, cannot be set aside upon payment of the amount which it was necessary for the widow to raise, or in the proportion which that sum bears to the amount for which the estate was sold. Sugeeram Begum v. Juddobuns Suhaye and others, 9 W. R., 284.

Where certain landed property in the possession of a Hindu widow was sold, on the alleged ground of necessity, and the execution of the deed of purchase was attested by the then next heir, it was held that the assent implied in such attestation was not conclusive in law as to the necessity for the sale, though the fact of persons most interested in contesting such a sale being called in to execute the deed is the strongest possible proof of good faith on the part of the purchaser. Madhub Chunder Hajrah v. Gobind Chunder Banerjee, 9 W. R., 350.

In a suit by reversioners to set aside a deed of sale by a Hindu widow of part of her husband's estate, on the ground that the money which it was necessary to raise could have been raised by other means, it was held that if the widow sold a larger portion of the estate than was necessary to raise the amount which the law authorized her to raise, the sale would not be absolutely void as against the reversioners, who could only set it aside by paying the amount which the widow was entitled to raise with interest.

Held also that if a widow elects to sell when it would be more beneficial to mortgage, the sale cannot be set aside as against the purchaser, if the widow and the purchaser are both acting honestly. Phool Chund Lall v. Rughoobuns Suhaye, 9 W. R., 107.

A recital in a deed of sale by a Hindu widow of her deceased husband's property, setting forth that the alienation was necessary for the purpose of paying his debts, is not of itself evidence of such necessity; nor does the attestation of a relative import his concurrence. Such a transaction may become valid by the consent of the husband's kindred, but the kindred in such case must generally be understood to be all those who are likely to be interested in disputing the transaction. At all events there ought to be such a concurrence of the members of the family as suffices to raise a presumption that the transaction was a fair one, and justified by Hindu law. Rajlakhi Debi v. Gokul Chandra Chowdhry, 3 B. L. R., P. C., 57; S. C., 12 W. R., P. C., 74.

Purchase from a Hindu widow is invalid, but the purchaser may remain in possession during the widow's lifetime, on proof of his purchase being preferable to an alleged gift made by the widow to the defendant. Chundernath Surma v. Romanath Surma, 1 W. R., 69.

A purchaser from a childless Hindu widow is bound to satisfy himself as to her right to sell. If he does not act with due care in the matter he cannot be said to have acted legally in good faith, although he may have fully believed, or taken for granted, that all was right. Ramdhone Bhuttacharjee v. Ishanee Dabee, 2 W. R., 123.

The existence of a debt, the liquidation of which is provided by lease of ancestral property, is no justification for alienation of such property by a Hindu widow during her life-tenancy. Teluck Roy and others v. Phoolman Roy and others, 7 W. R., 450.

Held that a widow who is in possession of her husband's estate in lieu of her dower is not competent to alienate the whole estate permanently, but can only sell what belonged to her by right of inheritance. Mussamut Kummar-ool-nissa v. Mahomed Hussun, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 287.

A Hindu widow cannot endow an idol with her husband's property or a portion thereof, to the detriment of the reversioners. Kartick Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Gour Mohun Roy, 1 W. R., 48.

The burden of proving property (the subject of a gift by a Hindu widow) to be stridhun rests with those claiming under her. A deed of alienation by a childless Hindu widow of her late husband's property is not good against any one, unless made either with the consent of the immediate heirs, or under one of those exigencies which give a widow a power of sale. Sreemutty Chunder Monee Dossee v. Joykissen Sircar, 1 W. R., 107.

A conveyance by a Hindu widow, without proof of necessity to justify an alienation of ancestral property, can only operate as a conveyance of her life-interest. Taranee Churn Banerjee v. Nund Coomar Banerjee, 1 W. R., 47.

A widow is not competent to alienate property which she has purchased with funds derived from her husband's estate after his death, and purchases with such funds would not belong to the widows otherwise than as the land from which the money arose belonged to them. Nihal Khan and others v. Hur Churn Lall, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 219.

A conveyance by a Hindu widow, for other than allowable causes, of property which has descended to her from her husband, is not an act of waste destroying the widow's right and vesting the property in the reversioners, but is binding only during the widow's lifetime.

The reversioner can, during the wife's lifetime, sue to obtain a declaration that the conveyance is not binding beyond the lifetime of the widow, and also to prevent waste. Muchooram Sein v. Gour Huree Ghooee, W. R., F. B., 165.

A Hindu widow, entitled to a life-estate only, granted a putnee of the lands. Held, first, that this did not work a forfeiture entitling the reversioners to enter. Secondly (Steer, J., dissenting), that the reversioners were not entitled to have the putnee set aside. Thirdly, that the putneedar, being a party to the suit, was entitled to appear against that part of the decree which declared that the act of the widow has caused a forfeiture of her state, as well as against the part of it which set aside his putnee. Loll Lomder Doss v. Hurrykissen Doss, Marsh., 113.

A pilgrimage to Benares is not a legal necessity to justify a sale by a Hindu widow. Huromohun Audhikaree v. Sreemutty Auluck Monee Dossee, 1 W. R., 252.

A Hindu widow's right to alienate moveable property inherited from her husband, without the consent of his heirs, is absolute.

With respect to immoveable property inherited from her husband, a Hindu widow is little more than a tenant for life and trustee for the heirs of her husband, and she is restricted from alienating it by her sole independent act, unless for necessary subsistence, or for purposes beneficial to the deceased. Beechur Bhugwan v. Baee Lukmee, 1 Bom. Rep., 56.

A deed of alienation by a childless Hindu widow is only valid when made either with the consent of the immediate heirs or under one of those exigencies which give a widow a power of sale. Sreemutty Chunder Monee Dossee v. Joykissen Sircar, 1 W. R., 107.

A sale by a Hindu widow of land inherited by her from her husband is valid only when made of necessity, and for certain purposes; but on this point, where the plaintiff in a suit to set aside such a sale, has relied in the Court below solely on the ground that the land had been devised inconsistently with the exercise of the widow's power of sale, the Appellate Court will be satisfied with evidence less complete and positive than would otherwise have been required. Rangasvami Ayyangar v. Venjeelattaumal and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 28.

A mere declaration of necessity is not enough to justify a purchase from a Hindu widow. Gungagobind Bose v. Sreemotee Dunnee, 1 W. R., 60.

When the legal necessity for a sale by a Hindu widow is questioned, its existence must be shown by the party standing on the conveyance. Bisso Nath Roy v. Lall Bahadoor Singh, 1 W. R., 247.

In the case of an alienation by a Hindu widow, the mere fact that a sale istahar is proved to have been issued about the time of the transfer, is not evidence of necessity. Nund Koomar Mundul and others v. Gayetra Dossee and others, 6 W. R., 323.

The purchaser from a Hindu widow who is still living is entitled to possession of the property sold, whether there was necessity for the sale or not. Bogooa Jha v. Lall Doss, 6 W. R., 36.

Where a party does not sue as an heir of a Hindu widow or her husband to set aside a sale by her on the ground of its illegality under the Hindu law, but sues as a decree-holder to have the same set aside as fraudulent, he cannot raise the question of necessity. Kishen Bullub Mahatab v. Rughonundur Thakoor and others, 6 W. R., 305.

A widow has no power to dispose by will of immoveable property inherited by her from her husband. The word "inherited" used in the Mitackshara in regard to a woman's stridhun does not include immoveable property so as to make it her peculium, but refers only to personal property over which alone she has absolute dominion. Guburdhun Nath v. Onoop Roy, 3 W. R., 105.

A childless widow Ranee has no power to alienate her deceased husband's property as against his collateral heir by a wasseeutnamah, a deed of gift. Keerut Singh v. Koolahul Singh, 5 W. R., P. C., 131.

Family jewels, if part of the ancestral property, are not transferable by a widow except for special purposes; and acts of waste on the part of the widow in regard to her husband's property, if proved, would be a ground for withdrawing a certificate granted to her under Act XL of 1858. Bhagwanee Koonwar v. Parbutty Koonwar, 2 W. R., Mis., 13.

There is no rule of Hindu law which compels a widow alienating any portion of her late husband's property to have recourse to a mortgage, instead of to a sale, to raise funds for her maintenance. The question whether she has exceeded her powers or not depends upon the necessities of the case. Nabakumar Haldar v. Bhabasundari Dasee, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 375.

K., a Hindu widow, while in possession granted a putnee lease of property which was afterwards sold and purchased by B.

Held that if there was no legal necessity to justify the alienation, the putneedar acquired no more than the life-interest of the widow, but if there was, then B.'s purchase was subject to the pottah granted by the widow as a valid alienation of prior date. Bissonath Chunder v. Radha Kristo Mundle, 1 W. R., 554.

The widow of an undivided Hindu has no right to sell his property for payment of his debts, even though it be self-acquired. Namasiyvayo Chetti v. Sivagami and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 374.

A sale by a widow of property derived from her husband, who is divided in interest from his own family, is valid for her life. Such a sale will not be set aside at the instance of a divided brother of the husband. Bhagavatamma v. Pamapana Yaud and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 393.

Held that a Hindu widow having a life-interest only in immoveable property inherited from her husband, has an independent power of sale over the same to the extent of such life-interest and no further. Mayaeram Bhairam v. Motiram Govindram, 2 Bom. Rep., 331.

A Hindu widow has power, with the consent of the reversionary heirs, to make a valid alienation, for religious purposes, of property, moveable or immoveable, left by her husband.

Where a Hindu widow dedicated property by deed to the worship of an idol, and the property was given to trustees in trust, after the death of the widow, to permit the male heirs of her late husband to receive the rents,—Held that such heirs were entitled to actual possession and to the rents of the estate, provided they devoted it according to the provisions of the deed to the worship of the idol. Brajanath Baisakh v. Matilal Baisakh, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 92.

Held (by Glover, J.) that where the family property was small there was no reasonable necessity for contracting a large loan to provide for the minor's investiture according to the Hindu religion. Doorhyar Roy v. Dulsingar Singh, 12 W. R., 367.

Held that a widow cannot under Hindu law dispose of immoveable property given to her by her husband which has become a portion of her stridhun. Gunput Singh v. Gunga Pershad, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 230.

A childless Hindu widow who is the nearest heir of her deceased husband has, under the Mitackshara law, an absolute right over all the moveable property left by him, and can alienate it to any one she pleases. Douga Dayee v. Poorun Dayee, 5 W. R., 141.

In a sale by a Hindu widow under necessity, where the vendee pays a fair price and acts bonâ fide, the mere fact of only two-thirds of the purchase-money being paid to creditors does not invalidate his conveyance, as he is not bound to see to the application of the purchase-money. Ram Gopal Ghose v. Bullodeb Bose, W. R., 1864, 385.

A conditional sale is an alienation, the validity of which a reversioner to a Hindu widow is by Hindu law entitled to question. Odit Narain Singh v. Dhurm Mahtoon, W. R., 1864, 263.

A Hindu widow takes, with her husband's estate, the power of alienation, and conveyances made by her give a good title, liable only to the superior claim of such of her husband's heirs as may be alive at the time of her death.

The sale of a Hindu widow's rights and interests in her husband's estate, in execution of a money-decree against her, does not touch the estate. Ram Sheouk Roy and others v. Sheo Gobind Sahoo, 8 W. R., 519.

Semble,—A sale by a Hindu widow for a just debt, made in conformity with the Hindu law, and with the consent of the reversioner, may be valid, although the debt creating the necessity for the sale was a debt, not of the ancestor's time, but of the widow's own contracting. Soobunkurry Dosse v. Chand Money Dosse, 7 W. R., 335.

A sale by a Hindu widow is not invalid if made without collusion. But the sale is limited to the widow's life-interest, and the reversioner is only entitled to a declaration that the sale will not affect or prejudice his interests beyond the widow's life. Ramgutty Kurmoker v. Boistub Churn Mozoomdar, 7 W. R., 167.

A Hindu widow has full right to alienate any portion of the estate in her possession, if the benefit of her husband's soul requires such a sacrifice, even though the act by which that benefit is to be secured is to be performed by a male member of the family. Chowdhry Junmenjoy Mullick v. Rusomoye Dossee, 10 W. R., 309.

Where a Hindu widow held under a decree only a life-interest in certain land or in the money which subsequently represented that land, any one holding in her place the same decree can have no higher position than she had, and cannot have the money without security. Under such a state of facts the consent of the immediate reversioner, during the widow's lifetime, cannot dispense with the necessity of taking such security. G. Rodgers v. Bama Soondery Debia, 6 W. R., Mis., 22.

A party claiming immoveable property by virtue of an alienation by a Hindu widow during her son's minority is bound, whether he be a plaintiff or a defendant, to prove that he made reasonable enquiry, and that he in good faith believed that such circumstances existed as would justify the widow in alienating her son's estate. Keeshinath Sitaram Oze v. Dadki et al., 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 271.

The payment of a time-barred debt of her deceased husband is not a valid cause for the absolute alienation by a Hindu widow of her deceased husband's immoveable estate.

Alienation by a Hindu widow of property inherited from her deceased husband is valid for the period of her own life, though the conveyance may purport to convey a greater interest. Meilgirâppâ bin Salbâppâ Teli v. Shivâppa bin Erâppa, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 270.

The srâdh of the widow's husband, the marriage of his daughter, the maintenance of his grandsons, and the payment of the husband's debts are admitted by Hindu law as legitimate grounds of necessity for alienations. Lalla Gunput Lall v. Mussamut Toorun Koonwar; Chunder Lall v. Lalla Gunput Lall, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 52.

A Hindu died in 1808, leaving five sons, and possessed of considerable property. In 1813 the four younger sons obtained a decree for partition against their elder brother, but themselves continued to live together as a joint Hindu family, and so did their widows after their death. After the death of the widow of one of the brothers, J. D., the widow of another brother brought her suit for partition; but subsequently, by the consent of all parties, the matters in dispute were referred to arbitration, and an award was made as follows: Selling their (the widows') respective ryoti land, bati, or house, they will pay the costs of their respective vakeels; in that way the land, bati, or house that shall remain, with the proceeds belonging to their respective shares, the raiment and food of C. D. (the widow of another brother) and J. D. will be supplied during their lives; they will be unable to make a gift, sale, &c.; should the proceeds of the land, bati, or house not be sufficient for their food and raiment, and for the purity of their respective husbands in a suitable manner, the jetta dharma, then showing good reason, regulation, conformably to the dharma shastra what is expedient as necessary, according to usage, informing the other shareholders, they shall be able to sell the ryoti land, bati, or house of their respective shares. This award, which directed a partition, according to the terms of a chinitnamah or written description of the land, which was executed by all the parties, was made a rule of Court on 26th July, 1858. J. D. took possession of her husband's share of the estate, some portion of which she alienated. In a suit brought by the reversionary heirs against J. D. and the purchasers of what she had sold, it was alleged that the alienations were without necessity and contrary to the award, and it was prayed that they might be declared void as against the reversionary heirs, and that J. D. might be restrained from further alienations. Held that the suit could be maintained in the lifetime of J. D.

As there was no waste proved, the prayer for an injunction to restrain further alienation was refused.

Semble,—In purchasing from a Hindu widow the purchaser is not bound to look to the appropriation of the money, nor is he affected by the fact that the alienation was made for a larger sum than the necessity of the case required. Kamikhaprasad Roy v. Srimati Jagadamba Dasi, 5 B. L. R., 508.

A step-son made over property to his step-mother for her support. Out of the produce she bought properties for her nephew in the name of other parties. Held, under the circumstances, that the purchased property, on her death, went to the nephew, and not to the step-son as heir of her husband.

Although the defendant, by his written statement, denied the fact of the purchases being with the widow's money, and it was proved that they were made with her money,—Held that this did not remove from the plaintiff the burden of proving that the purchases were made benami for her. Raja Chundranath Roy v. Rumjai Muzumdar, 6 B. L. R., 303, and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 7.

A Hindu, R. C., died possessed of considerable property, and leaving five sons. One of them died, leaving a widow, B. She brought a suit to recover her husband's share in R. C.'s estate, together with the profits thereon. The suit was conducted by G. R. A large amount became due to him for costs. To secure this B. executed a bond and warrant of attorney to confess judgment. The suit failed. In order to obtain the means of bringing another suit, B., by deed dated 4th April, 1859, assigned her interest in the estate in the right of her husband, and all benefit to be derived from the suit to be instituted, to G., one half absolutely, the other in trust, to retain thereout what he might advance to her for maintenance and for the costs of suit, with interest at 12 per cent., and to pay her the residue. In November, 1859, G., by deed sub-assigned to H. S., in consideration that H. S. should undertake the maintenance of B. and the management of the suit, retaining only five-sixteenths out of the eight-sixteenths assigned to him (G.) absolutely. On 19th August, 1861, B. obtained a decree in the Supreme Court declaring her entitled to the accumulations on her husband's one-fifth share in the estate of his father, R. C., and to all profits made on such accumulations since her husband's death. In September, 1861, G. R. caused judgment to be entered on the bond and execution to be issued, and the sheriff seized and was about to sell B.'s interest in the estate of her husband. Thereupon B., being entirely without means, P. S., brother of H. S., paid off G. R., and in consideration thereof took an assignment by deed, dated 18th December, 1861, in the name of one J. S. from B., of five-eighths of the half-share reserved to her by the deed of 4th April, 1859, but subject to the assignment by that deed to G. On 20th December, 1869, Rs. 84,685 were paid into Court as B.'s husband's share of the accumulations on R. C.'s property at the date of his death, and Rs. 1,55,255 as the profits made thereon since her husband's death. P. S. now sued for a declaration that the deed of 18th December, 1861, was binding upon B. and the reversionary heirs, and for an order that the precise amount due to him be ascertained and paid to him out of the moneys paid into Court. At the trial he abandoned his claim against the Rs. 84,685, on the ground that he could not prove legal necessity on the part of B. when she executed the assignment. Held the deed could be supported only so far as it charged the profits made since R. C.'s death with the repayment of the Rs. 12,500 advanced, with interest at 12 per cent. P. S. was entitled to have that amount paid out of the Rs. 1,55,255 in Court.

A Hindu widow is entitled to the accumulations of income from her husband's estate. Pannalal Seal v. Srimati Bamasundari Dasi, 6 B. L. R., 732.

A Hindu widow cannot alienate moveable or immoveable properties acquired by her out of the funds derived from the income of her husband's estate. Such properties descend to the heirs of the husband and not of the widow. Where, however, a widow held under a deed which conveyed the property to her to enjoy for her lifetime, and to incur all needful expenses, held she was entitled to invest sums out of the income for the benefit of her daughter and granddaughter in the purchase of immoveable property for their maintenance. Chowdry Bholanauth Thakoor v. Mussamut Bhugabati Deyi; Musst. Bhagabati Deyi v. Chowdry Bholanauth Thakoor, 7 B. L. R., 93; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 63.

A., a Hindu widow, obtained a loan of a sum of money by mortgage of a certain parcel of property belonging to her husband. The mortgagee obtained a decree, and in execution thereof caused the property to be sold. In a suit by A.'s daughter's son, the next reversionary heir, for a declaration that the sale was invalid as against him, the lower Appellate Court held that there was no cause of action.

Held, in special appeal, that the existence of a cause of action depended upon whether the widow incurred the debt under legal necessity, and the case was remanded for trial of that question. Bistobehari Sahay v. Lala Brijnath Prusen, 7 B. L. R., 213; and 16 S. W. R., C. R., 49.

A compromise by which a Hindu widow gives up all her rights in her husband's estate, receiving only a life-interest in a part of it, cannot but be regarded as an alienation, and is not binding against the reversioners. Mussamut Indro Kooer v. Shaikh Abdool Burkut, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 146.

Hindu law does not regard "pious purposes" as the only "necessary purposes" which justify alienation of inherited property by Hindu ladies. Self-maintenance, discharge of just debts, protection or preservation of the estate, may be regarded as such "necessary purposes" also. Soorjoo Pershad v. Rajah Krishan Pershad Bahadoor Sahie, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 49.

5.—Alienation of Ancestral Property.

The power of a son under Hindu law to prevent alienation of ancestral property by his father extends to acts of waste, and not to alienation for the payment of joint family debts and for the maintenance of the family. Bisambhur Naik v. Sudasheeb Mohapattur, 1 W. R., 96.

Under the Mitakshara law a son is entitled to recover from a purchaser from his father ancestral property improperly sold by the father, and in the absence of proof of circumstances which would give the purchaser an equitable right to compel a refund from the son, the latter would be entitled to recover without refunding any part of the purchase-money.

But if it is proved that the son got the benefit of his share of the purchase-money the son must refund his share of the purchase-money before he can recover his share of the property sold; and where the purchase-money has been applied to pay off a valid encumbrance on the estate, the right of the son to recover will be subject to that of the purchaser to stand in the place of the encumbrancer.

The onus in such cases to prove the application of the purchase-money lies on the purchaser. Modhoo Dyal Singh v. Golbur Singh and others, 9 W. R., 511.

Where ancestral property is sold by the father, the son is entitled to sue for cancelment of such sale, and the decree should not be that the property is ancestral and will pass to the father's heirs on his death, but a decree cancelling the sale so far as it obstructs him in asserting his right and in effect declaring the sale to be invalid, without interfering with actual possession, that may have been obtained by purchaser. Baboo Ram and others v. Gajadhur Singh and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 86.

In a suit brought by a Hindu son for himself and on behalf of three infant brothers to set aside a sale of certain ancestral lands which had been made by his father without his concurrence,—Held that the onus of proving that the payment of the debts, on account of which the property was sold, was not a common family necessity, was properly laid by the District Judge upon the plaintiff. Babji Sekoji v. Ramshet Pandushet, 2 Bom. Rep., 23.

In a suit by the sons and grandson of one N. to set aside a sale by N. of a part of the ancestral estate to S., whose right and interests in the estate were purchased at auction by the defendant N. L., it was held that the consent of the elder brother would not make the transfer valid, inasmuch as by the Mitackshara law the consent of all the shareholders would be necessary, even to the alienation of his own share. Nuthoo Lall Chowdhry v. Chedee Laha, 12 W. R., 446.

Under the Mitakshara law an alienation by a son without the father's consent is invalid. Sheo Ruttun Koonwar v. Gour Behary Bhukut and others, 7 W. R., 449.

According to Hindu law the shradh of a mother is not a legal necessity, as that of the father is, to justify a sale by a daughter to the prejudice of the daughter's son. Raj Chundra Deb Biswas v. Sheeshoo Ram Deb and others, 7 W. R., 146.

The mere fact that sales of ancestral property took place in execution of decrees against the ancestor, does not of itself show that the sales were for necessary or justifiable purposes. Brojo Kishore Gugendra Mohaputtra and others v. Huree Kishen Doss and others, 10 W. R., 57.

The existence of a decree, which may at any time be executed against ancestral property, is a clear necessity for contracting a loan, and ample justification to any one coming forward to lend money on the mortgage of the property. Purmeshur Ojha v. Mussamut Goolbee and others, 11 W. R., 446.

Held that a nephew is not competent by Hindu law to object to any alienation of ancestral property directly or indirectly made by his uncle. Gunga Deen Rawut v. Modhoo Sudun and others, 3 Agra Rep., A C., 4.

According to the Mithila law, a sale made by an adult member of a joint Hindu family, without the consent of all the heirs, is void if it is made without legal necessity, and not for the benefit of the minors. Sheo Pershad Jha v. Gunga Ram Jha, 5 W. R., 221.

According to the Mitakshara law, a conveyance or transfer of joint property by one member of a family is illegal without the consent of the other members.

By the same law widows have no part in their husband's joint estate, and the mere fact of the husband having treated a property as his own so far as to mortgage it during his lifetime, is no sufficient reason for the conclusion that the property was his separate property, and as such descended to his widows.

By the same law an estate cannot be burdened with the debts of one of its joint owners after that person's decease. Lewis Cosserat v. Sudaburt Pershad Sahoo, 3 W. R., 210.

A son may sue to obtain a declaration that sales by his father, without his consent, are as against him void and inoperative to pass or to affect any rights possessed by him in the property, and also that property still in his father's hands is ancestral, and cannot be alienated, except under circumstances recognized by the Mitakshara law as justifying alienation and with the consent of those whose consent is by that law requisite. Kanth Narain Singh v. Prem Lall Paurey, 3 W. R., 102.

A member of an undivided Hindu family has a right to mortgage his own share of the family estate, and, if he be acting as representative and manager of the undivided family, to mortgage the interests of the other members of the family therein on any common family necessity, or for the common benefit and use of the undivided family. Goondoo Mahadeo v. Rambhut Bin Baboo Bhut, 1 Bom. Rep., 39.

A Hindu father has no power to settle ancestral property by conveyance in his lifetime, or by a will to take effect after his death, without the consent of all his sons living at the time. Where such a settlement is not assented to by the sons living at the time, and another son is afterwards born, no subsequent assent would be binding on the latter. Hurro Doot Naran Singh v. Beer Naran Singh and others, 11 W. R., 480.

A sale by a father is valid by Hindu law to the extent of his own share of the undivided estate. There is no distinction according to the Madras school between a father and other co-parceners. Palanivelappa Kaundan v. Mannaru Naikan and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 416.

In the absence of authority in the eldest brother from his brothers to sell their rights, the sale by the eldest brother is not the act of all the brothers. Cazee Ohaud Buksh v. Bindoo Bashinee Dossee, 7 W. R., 298.

An alienation made by a Hindu with the consent of his son cannot, under the Mitakshara, be questioned by the grandson. Buraik Chutteo Singh and another v. Greedharee Singh and others, 9 W. R., 337.

A mortgagee acquiring by operation of law the possession of an estate mortgaged by a Hindu father, without the son's consent, is bound to enquire whether the debt on account of which the mortgage is given is a legally necessary one or not; otherwise it will not avail him that the Court has on his application declared the mortgage foreclosed, or the conditional sale rendered absolute. Purmanund v. Mussamut Orumbah Koer, W. R., 1864, 143.

Held that, on this side of India, a member of an undivided Hindu family cannot, without the consent of his co-parceners, make a gift of his share in the undivided property, or dispose of it by will. Gangabai and another v. Hamanna bin Bhimanna, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 66.

A deed of gift of ancestral property not being valid under Hindu law, without the consent of all the heirs, a wife is not bound by her husband's consent to a deed of gift to their children. The wife and husband being in possession, not beneficially for themselves, but for their children, the wife's acquiescence is not to be presumed by being in possession. A mere declaration of necessity is not sufficient to justify a purchase from a Hindu widow. Gungagobind Bose v. Sreemutty Dhunnee and Ramee, 1 W. R., 60.

The sale by a father of ancestral immoveable property, without the concurrence of his sons, is not necessarily void, though it may be avoided, unless the purchaser can show that it was made, during a season of distress, for the sake of the family or for pious purposes. In the absence of evidence to the contrary, it must be assumed that the price received by the father became a part of the assets of the joint family; and therefore, if the son seeks the aid of the Court to set aside the purchase, he must do equity and offer to repay the purchase-money, unless he can show that no part of such purchase-money or the produce of it has ever come to his hands. Muddun Gopal Thakoor and others v. Ram Buksh Pandey and others, 6 W. R., 71.

There is a distinction between ancestral and self-acquired property under the Mitakshara law, with regard to the right of a father to dispose of it. The fact of his being an outcast would not prevent him from exercising his rights over the property to the same extent as he might otherwise have done. Ojoodhya Persaud Singh v. Ramsaurun and others, 6 W. R., 77.

Under the Mitakshara law, according to which the father and son are joint owners of the ancestral estate, the son's power to prevent alienations by the father extends to acts of waste, and not to alienations for the payment of joint family debts, and for the maintenance of the family. Bisambhur Naik v. Sudasheeb Mahapater, 1 W. R., 96.

A. and B. sued D. and E. for the estate of a relative, C., the deceased husband of D., on the ground that the family to which A., B., and C. belonged was undivided. D. (who was a Hindu widow without surviving issue) and E. pleaded division, and that D. had sold and assigned the estate to E. This alienation was not shown to have been made for purposes recognized by Hindu law. Held that the District Moonsiff, in disallowing the plaintiff's claim to immediate possession, should not have provided for the re-assignment of the estate from E. to D. for D.'s life, but that he was right in declaring that after D.'s death the property should revert to the plaintiffs as heirs of C. Peria Gaundan v. Tiramala Gaundan, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 206.

Held that a Hindu mother, acting as manager of the estate of a minor, has no more authority to alienate or charge that estate than the managing member of an undivided Hindu family. The High Court, considering that certain material issues should be determined, remanded the case to the District Court in order that they might be decided, and a new decree passed. Dalpat Singh v. Navabhi and others, 2 Bom. Rep., 323.

Under the Mithila law, the father of a Hindu family cannot give a mokurruree lease of land at a nominal rent as a reward for faithful service, when his children, being infants, do not consent to such grant. Pratabnarayan Das v. The Court of Wards, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 21, S. C., 11 W. R., 343.

A deed of sale (where full consideration is paid) executed by a member of a Hindu family, acting de facto as the guardian of his minor brothers, is not invalid by reason of the father being alive at the time.

Where a guardian sells part of an estate, and applies the purchase-money to the expenses incurred in a suit undertaken and found in fact to be for the benefit of the whole property, the sale is valid. Gunga Pershad and others v. Phool Singh and others, 10 W. R., 106.

The manager of an undivided Hindu family can sell his own share of the family property only. Damodhor Vithul Khare v. Damodhor Huri Somana, 1 Bom. Rep., 183.

The rule of factum valet current in Bengal will not give a good title to a person to whom another conveys more than he has a legal right to convey. Mongola Dabia v. Dinonath Bose, 12 W. R., 35.

The incapacity of joint owners confers powers of alienation in certain cases of necessity upon the managing owner. Koer Sheo Pershaud Naran v. The Collector of Monghyr and others, 7 W. R., 5.

According to the Hindu law current in Madras, the member of an undivided family may alien the share of the family property to which, if a partition took place, he would be individually entitled.

There may be a valid sale of such a share upon an execution in an action of damages for a tort. Virásvami Gramini v. Ayyasvami Gramini, 1 Mad. Rep., 471.

The right of an unborn son to sue does not give a perpetual right of action. When neither want of enquiry nor mala fides is shown, the existence of legal necessity must be presumed, and the acts of the guardian considered to be the acts of the minor.

Quære,—Whether the same rule strictly applies to the relation of the head of a family, and his descendants holding vested rights in his estate, in regard to alienations by the head of the family to which the descendants did not expressly consent. Seetul Pershad Singh v. Gour Dyal Singh, 1 W. R., 283.

6.—Alienations, Validity of.

Possession is not essentially necessary by Hindu law to give validity to a transfer by sale of immoveable property. Bhookun Bhaeebowa v. Bhaeejee Prag, 1 Bom. Rep., 19.

A sale of property may be valid according to Hindu law, although not accompanied by actual delivery of possession. Nagobaee v. Moteegee Gooroo, 1 Bom. Rep., 5.

A sale by a father is valid by Hindu law to the extent of his own share of the undivided estate. There is no distinction according to the Madras school between a father and other co-parceners. Palanivellappa Kaundan v. Mannaru Naikan, 2 Mad. Rep., 416.

According to the Mitakshara law, a son acquires by birth a right in ancestral property, and has a right during his father's lifetime to compel a partition of such property. The father cannot, without the consent of the son, alienate such property, except for sufficient cause; and the son may not only prohibit the father from so doing, but may sue to set aside the alienation if made. The cause of action to the son accrues when possession is taken by the purchaser. A new cause of action does not accrue upon the subsequent birth of a younger brother, either to the elder brother alone, or to him and his brother jointly.

Held by the majority of the Court (dissentiente E. Jackson, J.) that when (notwithstanding a separation in food and residence) no formal partition of the family estate has taken place, the family must be considered joint and undivided; and that, in such a case, a widow cannot succeed to, or retain possession of, her husband's share as against his surviving brothers, but is only entitled to maintenance. Badamoo Koer v. Waseer Singh, 5 W. R., 78.

According to the Mitakshara law, a son has an equal right with his father in ancestral property. He can compel the father to divide the property during his lifetime, and any alienation by the father made after the birth of the son, without the consent of the son, unless for a purpose justified by the Hindu law as a legal necessity, will not bind the son. If the father, during the minority of the son, alienated any property in fraud of his creditors, such fraud would not bind the son, who was neither a party nor was privy to such fraud. Beer Kishore Suhye Singh and others v. Hur Bullub Narain Singh and others, 7 W. R., 502.

Assuming that an alienation by a father, who at the time of such alienation was a member of a Hindu family living in commensality, may be questioned by a son, it will have to be seen whether the alienation was made for purposes which justified it. Noor Ahmed v. Lulla Pershad, 2 N. W. R., 189.

A brother acting as manager of the family property and for the benefit of the minors, although he has not obtained a certificate of guardianship under Act XL of 1858, may make a temporary alienation of the family property for necessary purposes and for the benefit of the minors. Lalla Seetul Pershad v. Chand Khan, 2 N. W. R., 428.

Mere production of decree will not establish the propriety and necessity of a sale of ancestral property. There should be evidence of the nature of the debts on which such decrees originated. Reotee Singh v. Ramjeet, 2 N. W. R., 50.

The sale of joint property governed by the Mitakshara law, in execution of a decree made on a debt which was not a necessity, is not valid and cannot be upheld, even though the proceeds are used to satisfy another decree on a bond by which money was borrowed on necessity. The parties suing for annulment of such invalid execution sale are bound to pay the auction-purchasers so much of the debt as would have been a burden on the estate. Bhyro Pershad v. Basist Narain Panday, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 31.

Where property in which two members of a Hindu family are jointly interested is sold in order to raise money for the payment of a debt jointly contracted by both, the son of one of them cannot sue to recover his own, or his own and his father's share, in the absence of the other. In such a suit, if it is alleged that the father is connected with the institution of the suit with a view to defraud creditors, an important issue is raised which should be tried and decided. Sheo Churn Narain Singh v. Chukrurn Pershad Narsing Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 436.

On the death of R. S. his eldest son, R. K., undertook the management of the family property, plaintiff (a grandson of the deceased through his third son) being then an infant. Not long after R. K. purchased some land, which he subsequently sold to R. D. and H. S. D., who are now represented by the defendants, H. S. and L. N. D. In the present suit plaintiff alleges that the property had been purchased by R. R. with money belonging to the joint funds of the family. The first Court found for plaintiff, and adjudged him one-fourth share of the property in suit. From that decree H. S. and L. N. D. did not appeal, but R. R. did appeal. The Judge, assuming the lower Court's finding to be correct, held that as plaintiff, who was of age at the time, did not object to the sale, he could not recover possession of property sold by R. K. as the recognized agent and manager.

Held that R. K. could not found any right upon the presumption of plaintiff's consent, however such presumption might have availed the other defendants, purchasers from R. K., who had not appealed. Gopal Chunder Lahoory v. Roy Kishore Lahoory, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 467.

Quære,—Where it has been found that, as to a certain portion of the consideration money of a deed of sale of joint ancestral property, there was a legal necessity, is it a correct principle to uphold the deed as to that portion of the land which bears the same proportion to the whole quantity conveyed as the money borrowed for the discharge of the legal necessity bore to the whole amount of the consideration money? Rajaram Tewari v. Lachman Prusad, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 118, and 12 S. W. R., C. R., 478.

A., a Hindu, subject to the Mitakshara law, sold his right and interest in the undivided ancestral estate of his family without the consent of his co-sharers, and not for the benefit of the estate, but in order to pay off a personal debt. The sale was by auction to an innocent purchaser for value. Held that, in a suit brought within twelve years from the date on which the purchaser obtained possession, the sons and grandsons of A., deceased, were entitled to recover possession, without making any refund of the purchase money. Nathee Lal Chowdry v. Chadi Sahi, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 15, and 12 S. W. R., C. R., 446.

A member of an undivided Hindu family living under the Mitakshara law, in his father's lifetime brought a suit for a declaration of his future right to a one-sixth share in a portion of the immoveable property of the family, and to set aside an alienation of it by his father, as having been made without legal necessity,—Held that no such suit was maintainable. Raol Gorain v. Teza Gorain, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 90.

According to the Mitakshara law, a son has a right during the lifetime of his father to set aside alienation of ancestral property made without his consent. His cause of action arises from the date when possession is taken by the purchaser. Aghori Rumasarag Sing v. J. Cochrane, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 14.

The daughter of a Hindu, while in possession of the paternal estate, borrowed a large sum of money under a mortgage of a portion of the estate. Part only of the money borrowed was devoted by her to the relief of legal necessity. After her death, the next heir sued the mortgagee to recover the property mortgaged, and to set aside the mortgage deed. The Courts below gave a decree for possession to the plaintiff upon repayment of the amount actually spent in the relief of legal necessity. Such decree upheld on appeal. Lalit Panday v. Sridhar Deo Narayan, 5 B. L. R., 176; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 457.

The plaintiff, a Hindu, sued to set aside a certain alienation, on the ground that the alienor was an illegitimate son of the plaintiff's grandfather, and therefore had no interest in the property. Not being able to substantiate this ground in the first Court, the plaintiff, on appeal, raised a new ground, viz., that the alienation was bad, because, under the Mitakshara law, the owner of a share in a joint ancestral estate is not competent to alienate his share without the consent of the other heirs,—Held that such variance could not be allowed, and that the plaintiff must prove his case as laid in the plaint.

There is nothing in Rajaram Tewari v. Luchman Prasad, and in Sadabert Prasad Saha v. Foolbash Koer, to justify the contention that where there is an alienation made by one shareholder, and another sharer sues to set aside that alienation, it follows as a consequence that a party who sues to set aside the alienation must obtain a decree. Sri Prasad v. Ruj Guru Triambuknath Deo, 6 B. L. R., 555, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 386.

Under the Mitakshara law, a single member of a family is empowered to sell immoveable property for the purpose of paying off family debts only where the sons and grandsons are minors or otherwise incapable of giving their consent.

Where the sale of landed estate by a single member for the payment of family debts is set aside because made without the son's consent, the son can only get possession on repayment of the purchase-money which was applied to the liquidation of the debts. Muthoora Koonwaree v. Bootun Sing, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 31.

Where ancestral property is to be sold or mortgaged, all that the purchaser has to do is to see that there is sufficient pressure upon the estate to render the transfer necessary. The fact of there being a decree, an attachment, and a proclamation for sale, is sufficient pressure. Sheoraj Kooer v. Nuckchedu Lall, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 72.

Where the validity of a sale of ancestral property is objected to on the ground that it was effected without the consent of all the members of the joint Hindu family, the objection can only be made by the member who did not consent.

A member of a Hindu family may mortgage his undivided share of the joint property without the consent of his co-sharers, in order to raise money for the benefit of the family, e.g., to pay debts or liquidate demands under legal necessity. Juggernauth Khootia v. Dooboo Misser, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 80.

According to Sadabert Prasad Saha v. Foolbash Koer, a sale of undivided ancestral property by a father without any legal necessity and without the consent of all the co-sharers is, under the Mitakshara law, invalid. It is not valid even as regards the father's share. A son going to set aside such an alienation is, according to that case, entitled to a declaration that the alienation is void altogether. The son suing in the father's lifetime on behalf of the family may be entitled to a decree for possession. Upon what terms that decree should be made will, according to the decision in Modhoo Dyal Singh v. Golbur Singh, depend on the equity which the purchaser may have to a refund of the purchase money, or to be placed in the position of an encumbrancer as against the joint family in the particular case. Hunuman Duti Roy and another v. Baboo Kishen Kishoa Narayan Singh, 8 B. L. R., 358; 15 S. W. R., F. B., 6.

To justify an alienation of ancestral property, a legal necessity for the sale must be strictly proved to have existed, and such necessity cannot be inferred from the habits and general character of a vendor. Mittrajit Singh and others v. Raghubunsi Singh and others, 8 B. L. R., Ap., 5.

A., a Hindu, sued B., the widow of C., claiming to be entitled with others as heirs of C. under the Mitakshara law to certain property. The suit was compromised on the terms as to the portion of the property, that it was to be retained by B. for life, and after her death to be divided according to specified shares between A. and the other claimants. After B.'s death A. obtained possession of his share under the deed of compromise. A. alienated the property, and during his lifetime his sons sued to set aside the alienation on the ground that it was ancestral property. Held, A. took the property absolutely, and not as ancestral property. Mahabur Kower v. Jubha Singh, 8 B. L. R., 38; and 16 S. W. R., C. R., 221.

It is the firmly settled rule of Hindu law, resting upon the authority of the Mitakshara and repeated judicial decisions, that a managing co-parcener has not the capacity to alienate or charge the share of his minor co-parcener in immoveable ancestral property except for the purpose of providing for some family need or the performance of an indispensable religious duty, or except the alienation or charge be for the benefit of the joint estate; and in every case to which the rule is applicable, the onus of showing either by direct or presumptive proof a primâ-facie case in support of the existence of the condition necessary to give the legal capacity to make the disputed disposition, lies upon the party claiming to have acquired under it a title to the minor's share of the property. Upon the question of what is the amount of proof which the law renders necessary to discharge that burden of proof —Held that where the dispute as to the validity of a sale or mortgage of family property is with the person to whom it was made, and the pecuniary consideration for it has not been advanced for the purpose of discharging an antecedent charge on the property or an old debt incurred by an ancestor; the case of the vendee or mortgagee, as regards the existence of a family need or sufficient beneficial purpose requiring the advance of the consideration money, must be established by positive proof. But that between a bonâ-fide sale or mortgage for an advance made to pay off a pre-existing mortgage claim or an unsecured debt of an ancestor, and one not made for that purpose, there was this distinction to be observed, that the burden of establishing by direct proof that such prior claim or debt was incurred for a proper family purpose is not cast upon the vendee or mortgagee. He is only required to show this presumptively. But to do so it is incumbent on him to give proof not only of the consideration money for the sale or mortgage having been bonâ fide advanced in discharge of an antecedent debt, but also of an enquiry productive of results which warranted his reasonably believing that such debt was a family obligation and the sale or mortgage a prudent arrangement for its discharge. Taravana Tevan v. Muttayi Ammal and Tirnmalai Gaundan, 6 Mad. Rep., 371.

Where the Court has expressly found the existence of debts, and that the sale of ancestral property was a bonâ-fide one, the circumstance that there was no actual pressure at the time in the shape of suits by the creditors for the recovery of their debts, is not of itself sufficient to invalidate the alienation.

A sale of ancestral property merely for the purpose of procuring funds for the re-purchase of other property formerly belonging to the family, cannot of itself be considered as a sale for any of the necessary purposes sanctioned by law.

Although as a general rule it may lie upon those who claim under an alienation of ancestral property for necessary purposes to show that the transaction was within the limited power of the party alienating, yet particular circumstances may shift the burden of proof.

No fixed rule can be laid down as to the degree of proof requisite in such cases. Kaihur Singh and another v. Roop Singh and others, 3 N. W. R., 4.

The right of a co-parcener to alienate his vested interest in the property held in co-parcenary is limited to the extent of the co-parcener's share in the particular property which is the subject of the alienation.

In a suit to recover a moiety of a village which was a portion of the joint family property, and which had been sold by the managing member without the assent of the plaintiff's father, and not for family purposes, the entire village being less in quantity and value than the share of the managing member,—Held that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief prayed. Venkata Chella Pillay v. Chinnayia Mudaliar, 5 Mad. Rep., 166.

7.—Caste.

An Englishman lived with a Brahmin woman living apart from her husband, by whom he had two sons. Held that the sons are Hindus, and their rights are determined by the rights of the class of Hindus to which they belong.

Held also that they are to be regarded as Sudras, or as a class still lower, and that, in the absence of preferable heirs, they inherit the property of their mother and of one another. Mayna Bai v. Uttaram and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 196.

The Hindu law makes no distinction between the legitimate children of mothers of the same caste. Rajah Nugendur Narain v. Rughoonath Narain Dey, W. R., 1864, 20.

It is not incorrect to accept the rates paid by cultivators of low caste, with rights of occupancy for lands of the same description and with similar advantages as a basis for calculating the rates to be paid in future by a cultivator of high caste, but it is necessary to consider and allow for the difference of castes. Kunuk Singh and others v. Gholam Jeelanee, 2 Agra Rep., 329.

According to the family custom the sons of a Rajah of Keonghur, by wives of a lower caste than the Rajah, rank after the sons by wives of the same caste as the Rajah. Ranee Bistooprea Patmohadea v. Basoodeb Dal Bewastee Patnaik, 2 W. R., 232.

The general Hindu law being against a marriage between persons of distinct castes (e.g., Domes and Harees), local custom can alone sanction it. Melaram Nundeal v. Thanooram Bamun, 9 W. R., 552.

A suit will lie for restoration to caste, and for damages and compensation for cost of restoration to caste. When the defendant denies that he made any accusation, and it is proved that he did make one, and that it alone led to the excommunication of the plaintiff, the defendant should be allowed an opportunity of proving that the accusation was not false, before a decree for damages is passed against him. Gopal Gourain v. Gurain, 7 W. R., 299.

Exclusion from caste of a Hindu for an alleged intrigue does not involve deprivation of his civil rights to hold, deal with, and inherit his property (Act XXI of 1850). Namboodri v. Mele Pullakatt Vessa Devan Nambaodri, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 236.

Since the passing of Act XXI of 1850 exclusion from caste, whether by renunciation of religion or from any other cause, is no longer a ground for exclusion from inheritance. Bhujpen Lall v. Gya Pershad, 2 N. W. R., 446.

An estate which a mother has inherited from her son is not divested by reason of her subsequent unchastity.

It is a general rule of Hindu law that when the descent of an estate has taken place before the cause of exclusion from caste has arisen, the estate is not divested by the owner becoming an outcast.

This rule would not under Hindu law apply to a wife who has become unchaste.

But there is no authority to show that it does not apply to a mother. Musumut Deoku v. Sookhdeo, 2 N. W. R., 361.

While the Courts have generally accepted the decisions of properly-constituted punchayets on questions of caste, they have accepted them subject to the qualification that the decision of the punchayet does not estop the Courts from enquiring into the civil rights of any member of the caste, and securing to him the enjoyment of such rights, if he be found not to be precluded from the enjoyment of them by the Shastras or the particular usages of his caste.

It would be extremely inconvenient to hold that by a deprivation of caste, which may be temporary, a member of a caste loses his marital rights, so as to confer on his wife the power of contracting a second marriage.

It is a general principle of Hindu law that the degradation of the husband from caste does not dissolve the marriage tie. Bishesur v. Mutagholam, 2 N. W. R., 300.

The plaintiffs sued to recover from the defendant certain fees alleged to be due to them, as mehtars of the caste, on the marriage of the daughter of the defendant.

The defendant denied that the plaintiffs were his mehtars. Held that the question between the parties was a caste question with which the Courts were precluded from interfering by Reg. 11 of 1827, Sec. 21. Murár Dáya et al. v. Nágria Ganeshiá, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 17.

A Hindu by becoming a byragee does not divest himself of all title in his family estate, which on his death devolves on his heirs, and not on a kept mistress, although she may have performed his funeral rites on account of his being an outcast. Khooderam Chatterjee v. Rookhinee Boistobee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 197.

An instrument was executed by the defendant, a Hindu, to his wife, stipulating that the defendant and his wife should continue to enjoy certain immoveable property jointly, with a right of survivorship, and containing a promise by the defendant to surrender the property to his wife if he married again.

Held that the instrument did not operate by way of gift, there being no change in the possession of the property, nor as a declaration of trust, and that it did not create a binding obligation which the law would enforce.

Quære,—Whether the Hindu law admits of the applicability of the principle on which Courts of Equity in England hold voluntary declarations of trusts to be binding against the declarant. Venkattachettu Maniyakarer v. Thathamal, 4 Mad. Rep., 460.

8.—Contracts.

The word "sontan" occurring in a deed of agreement between co-sharers, members of a Hindu family, was construed to mean issue generally and not male issue merely. Kristo Kishòre Bhuttacharjee and others v. Seetamony Bhuttacharjee and others, 7 W. R., 320.

An agreement entered into by two brothers, who never were constituted by Hindu law members of an undivided family, provided for the mode in which self-acquired property, to a moiety of which they were each entitled, should be managed during their lives, for the right of survivorship, and for its descent upon the death of the survivor. One clause of the agreement, literally translated, was in these words: "To the married wives of both of us, if there is not male offspring, in the event of there being sons not born in wedlock, must divide into equal shares for their own benefit." Upon the construction of this clause, held that the estate was to be equally divided amongst the wives and the sons born in concubinage. Sri Gajapotee Horeekristun v. Sri Gajapotee Neelmony Patta, 2 Mad. Rep., 369.

According to Hindu law, not only is the beneficial interest in the subject-matter of the contract, but the contract itself is assignable. The assignee therefore may sue in his or her own name. This doctrine is applicable to suits brought in the Madras Small Cause Courts. Venbakum Somayagee Janakee Ammal v. Mooneswamy Chetty, 4 Mad. Rep., 176.

A suit may be maintained against a surety, according to Hindu law, although the principal debtor has not been sued. Totakot Shanguni Menon v. Keeru Saigal Kuku Varid, 4 Mad. Rep., 190.

Quære,—Whether Hindu law admits of the principle in which Courts of Equity in England hold a voluntary declaration of trust to be binding against the declarant. Venkuchella Marjniakaru v. Thathummal, 4 Mad. Rep., 460.

According to mercantile usage amongst Hindus, where a hundi, drawn "payable to owner" (shah jogi) is paid at maturity by the drawee to the shah or holder of the hundi, and such hundi afterwards turns out to be forged, the shah, though a bonâ-fide holder for value, is bound to repay to the drawee the amount of such hundi with interest from the date of payment, provided that the drawee has been guilty of no laches in discovering the forgery and communicating the fact of such forgery to the shah.

The shah, however, relieves himself from such liability by producing the actual forger. Davaltram Shiram et al. v. Balakidas Khemchand, 6 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 24.

By the Hindu as well as by the English law, a creditor in whose hands a pledge has accidentally perished is notwithstanding entitled to recover his debt in the absence of an agreement to the contrary. Vithobá Valad Ukba et al. v. Chotá Lál Tukáráin, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 116.

Though, by Hindu law, on a sale of land it is not absolutely necessary that the purchaser should be put in possession, it is requisite that the vendor should at the time of sale be in possession of the property sold. Girdhur Parjárám v. Dáji Dulubhárám and Moti Dulabhárám, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 4.

In all matters of contract and dealing between Hindus, the law applicable in Civil Courts of the country governs Courts of Small Causes. Wooday Chund Halder v. Gooroo Churn Mojoomdar, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 148.

Act XIV of 1840 does not apply to contracts between Hindus. Alva Chetti and others v. Vaidilinga Chetti, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 9.

It is very questionable in any case whether the effect of the execution of a bill of sale by a Hindu vendor is to pass an estate, irrespectively of the actual delivery of possession. Where the vendor sells an estate of which he is not in possession, in consideration of advances to enable him to sue for its recovery, it is not open to the purchaser, after failing to complete his part of the contract, to claim specific performance and delivery of the recovered estate on tendering the balance of the purchase-money.

It is the established practice of the Courts in India, in cases of contract, to require satisfactory proof that consideration has been actually received, according to the terms of the contract, and a contract under seal does not of itself, in India, import that there was a sufficient consideration for the agreement. A plaintiff, however, suing to set aside a security admittedly executed by himself, must make out a good primâ-facie case before the defendants can be called on to prove consideration. A zemindar has, as such, a primâ-facie right to the gross collections from all the mouzahs within his zemindary. It is for parties setting up an intermediate tenure to prove their grant.

Defendant claimed to hold a mokurruree tenure under deeds executed by plaintiff, zemindar. The plaintiff denied the authenticity of the deeds, and sued to set them aside. The lower Courts dismissed his suit as barred by limitation, on the ground that plaintiff had, in a petition before the Collector, admitted that defendant was mokurruree-dar of the tenure, and that this being so limitation ran against him from the date of the deeds. Held that the case should have been tried on the merits, as the petition was not a conclusive admission of the genuineness of the deeds, and it was not right to infer from it that plaintiff knew of their existence at the time of their professed date.

A thakbust award of boundary made in the Lower Provinces may be an award under Regulation IX of 1815, within the meaning of Act XIII of 1848. It would in any case be material evidence of possession.

The pendency of an appeal to England does not put the party who, subject to that appeal, is the owner of an estate, under a legal disability to bring a suit in that character against third parties. Raja Sahib Prahlad Sen v. Maharaj Rahendar Kishore Singh, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 111.

In England the law gives to the purchaser of land a right to have a good title to it shown by the vendor. No such rule appears to exist in the Hindu law, and in contracts between Hindus for the purchase and sale of land in Bombay the intention of the parties must be ascertained from the terms of the agreement, without regard to any implication. Devsi Ghela v. Jivarj Makundas, 2 Bom. Rep., 430.

By Hindu law a purchaser may recover in an action for breach of contract to deliver goods, not only double the earnest-money, but also damages for the non-delivery. Alver Chetti v. Vaidilanga Chetti, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 9.

9.—Convert.

Upon the conversion of a Hindu to Christianity, the Hindu law ceases to have any continuing obligatory force upon the convert. He may renounce the old law by which he was bound, as he has renounced the old religion, or, if he thinks fit, he may abide by the old law, notwithstanding he has renounced the old religion. The profession of Christianity releases the convert from the trammels of Hindu law, but it does not of necessity involve any change of the rights or relations of the convert in matters with which Christianity has no concern, such as his rights and interests in, and his powers over, property.

The convert, though not bound as to such matters, either by the Hindu law or by any positive law, may, by his course of conduct after his conversion, have shown by what law he intended to be governed as to these matters. Charlotte Abraham v. Francis Abraham, 1 W. R., P. C., 1.

Before the passing of Act XXI of 1850 the property possessed or acquired by a Hindu convert to Mahometanism prior to his conversion passed to his nearest heir professing the Hindu religion. Ranee Mewa Koonwer and another v. Lalla Oudh Beharee Lall, 2 Agra Rep., 311.

The English law relating to a married woman's property, and the right of the husband therein, is not necessarily applicable to Hindu converts to Christianity. The rule of decision in such cases is the rule prescribed by equity and good conscience, which is in each case to refer the decision to the usages of the class to which the convert may have attached himself, and of the family to which he may have belonged. Isaac Pandu v. Surbomongola Dossee, 1 W. R., 22.

A Hindu husband who has been repudiated by his wife on his conversion to Christianity cannot sue for the restitution of conjugal society. Muchoo v. Arzoon Sahoo, 5 W. R., 235.

A Hindu father is not deprived of his right to the custody of his children by reason of his conversion to Christianity. Muchoo v. Arzoon Sahoo, 5 W. R., 235.

A will that provides for an heir becoming disinherited on changing his religion, does not apply to the case of a Hindu becoming a Vedantist, nor does that form of Hinduism incapacitate him from being a manager. Anund Coomar Gangooly v. Rakhal Chunder Roy and others, 8 W. R., 278.

A Hindu Christian convert, relapsing into Hinduism and marrying a Hindu woman, cannot be convicted of bigamy on the ground that he has another wife living, whom he married while a professing Christian. 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 7.

10.—Custom.

The existence of a local custom as to the right of pre-emption among the Hindus of Gujarat recognized. Such a custom, where it exists, is regulated by the rules and restrictions of the Mahometan law. Gordhandas Girdharthai v. Prankor, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 263.

Evidence of the acts of a single family, repugnant or antagonistic to the general law, will not establish a valid custom or usage enforceable in a Court of Justice. Tara Chand v. Reeb Ram, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 113.

To establish a family custom at variance with the ordinary law of inheritance, it is necessary to show that the usage is ancient and has been invariable, and it should be established by clear and positive proof. A family custom as to intermarriages, being matter of family history, may be proved by declarations made by members of the family. Rajah Nugendur Narain v. Rughoonath Narain Dey, W. R., 1864, 20.

Where, in a question as to the right of inheritance to a raj, it was admitted that there was a custom that the reigning raja should name a jubraj and a burra thakur, of whom the first succeeds to the throne, and the latter to the office of jubraj; but it was contended, on the one hand, that if the reigning raja had appointed a jubraj his choice should have been guided partly by an alleged promise or intention on the part of the former raja, and partly by the appellant's preferential title as legal heir by seniority amongst the near kindred; and on the other, that the choice of the reigning raja was absolutely free, and could not be controlled by the wishes of the former raja,—

Held that where there was evidence of a power of selection the actual observance of seniority, even in a considerable series of successions, could not of itself defeat a custom which established the right of free choice.

Where family custom required the union of two things to constitute the legal heir, viz., seniority in age and nearness of kin, and the claimant has but one of these qualifications in himself, viz., seniority, he does not entitle himself to succeed. Where a custom is proved to exist, it supersedes the general law, which however still regulates all beyond the custom. Nilkristo Deb Barmono v. Bir Chandra Thakur, 3 B. L. R., P. C., 13; 12 W. R., P. C. 21.

According to the Pachees Sawal, a brother of the Raja of Attgurh, one of the tributary mehals of Cuttack, has a preferential title over the Raja's son by a phoolbebahi wife to succeed to the raj.

The effect of a devise of his estates by a raja would be to alter the course of succession, and therefore contrary to Section 3, Regulation XI of 1816. Nittanund Murdiraj v. Sreekurun Juggernath Bewartah Patnaick, 3 W. R., 116.

Custom, when it is ancient, invariable, and established by clear and positive proof, overrides the usual law of inheritance. Mussamut Kustoora Koomaree v. Monohur Deo; The Government v. Monohur Deo, W. R., 1864, 39.

By the custom of a Hindu family, no distinction was made between the issue of a Sagyi marriage and a Lyahi marriage. Held that the issue of the son of a Sagyi wife first married was entitled to inherit the property of the grandfather, in priority to the issue of a son of a subsequent Lyahi wife. Radaik Ghaserain v. Budaik Pershad Singh, Marsh., 614.

On the accession of the British Government to the Dewanny, Rajah Futtah Sahie, in 1707, having refused to acknowledge allegiance to, and having openly rebelled against, the Government, was expelled from his estate of Hosaipore. The Government retained the estate in its own possession until 1790, when, setting aside the sons of Futtah Sahie, it conferred the estate upon Chutterdharee, at that time the eldest surviving member of the younger branch of the family. Two of the grandsons of Chutterdharee having sued to establish their right to a moiety of his property,—Held that the Hosaipore property was a raj, and that by the rule of the family it was to descend entire to a single heir; that the Government, by setting aside a particular branch of the family, did not, in intent or in fact, confiscate the property, and thereby extinguish the rights of every member of the family; that the family custom and the custom of the raj were not destroyed by the infringement of the custom by virtue of which Chutterdharee acquired the estate; and that he having acquired the estate subject to a particular custom, and having himself done nothing destructive of that custom, his heirs were bound by the same custom, to the exclusion of the ordinary law of Hindu inheritance. Ram Gopaul Singh v. Teluckdharee Sahie and others, W. R., F. B., 97.

The plaintiff claimed to succeed to the Shoosung estate as sole proprietor, alleging a family custom according to which the property was a raj and indivisible, and descended to the eldest son or nearest male heir of the party in possession. Held that there was no proof of such custom; that if there had been it was waived by the sons of Raj Singh (the plaintiff's grandfather) on his death in 1822; that the documents submitted to the Court did not prohibit alienation; that at a period previous to the British rule alienation of two-sixteenths of the property took place, and was acquiesced in by the successors; that the property was during the Mahometan government a military jagheer, resumable at pleasure, and not a raj; and that the succession to it went not by right or family custom, but by the will of the sovereign power. Promoda Debia v. Rajah Prankishen Singh, 2 W. R., 80.

Held that a custom of the Talapada Holi caste that a woman should be permitted to leave the husband to whom she has been first married, and to contract a second marriage (nàtra) with another man in his lifetime and without his consent, was invalid, as being entirely opposed to the spirit of the Hindu law; and such marriage was "void by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband," and therefore punishable as regards the woman under Section 494 of the Penal Code; and that the man with whom the woman so married having had sexual intercourse with her, and it being found that he did not honestly believe that she had become his wife, was guilty of adultery under Section 497. Reg. v. Karson Gojá; Reg. v. Bai Rupa, 2 Bom. Rep., 124.

According to Hindu law, in order that a custom may have the force of law it must be shown to have existed from time immemorial. Luchmun Lall v. Mohun Lall Bhayu Gayal, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 179.

Upon the authority of decided cases as well as the evidence of custom in the family, it was held that the raj or zemindaree of Ramghur being an ancestral impartible estate, and the family an undivided family governed by the Mitakshara, the plaintiff as eldest male heir was entitled to succeed to the dignity and estates of the family in preference to the mother of the late infant rajah and widow of his father, the last actual rajah. Maharanee Heeranauth Kooer v. Baboo Burm Narain Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 316.

According to the principles of Hindu law, when regarded apart from any special custom prevailing in a particular district or family, where there are sons by different wives, priority of birth, and not marriage certainly as regards the sons by any wives after the first, must determine the succession of an impartible inheritance. Accordingly the son of a third wife born before the son of the second wife was held entitled to inherit.

Semble,—No just analogy can be established between the status of the first wife and that of any subsequent wife, the title of the first wife to special rank and privileges resting upon grounds peculiar to her and which can have no application to others.

It is of the essence of special usages modifying the ordinary law of succession that they should be ancient and invariable, and that they should be established to be so by clear and unambiguous evidence. Ramalakhmi Ammal v. Sivannutha Perumal Sethurayer, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 553.

II.—Dwelling House.

A Hindu died, leaving a widow and an adopted son, who continued, after his death, to reside in the same dwelling-house in which they had resided with the deceased during his lifetime, and which formed a portion of his estate. The son being an infant, the widow had the management of the house, and let a portion of it to tenants at a monthly rent. Subsequently the son sold the house, as his property by inheritance, to a stranger, who gave the widow and tenants a week's notice to quit.

Held that the son, even if he had attained his majority, could not evict the widow, or authorize a purchaser to do so, without providing some other suitable dwelling for her; nor in any case could the tenants be turned out without a month's notice.

It seems that the passage in Katyayana, 2 Colebrooke's Digest, p. 133, is a restriction, and not a moral precept only, and that the heir of the deceased has not such a right in the dwelling of the family that he can at once, of his own pleasure, turn out the females of the family, or sell it and give the purchaser a right to turn them out. Mongala Debi v. Dinonath Bose, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 72; S. C., 12 W. R., O. C., 35.

In a suit for possession by the auction-purchaser of a judgment-debtor's share in a family residence, possession was ordered to be given to him so as not to annoy or insult the inmates of the house; and as the plaintiff could not use the family staircase without exposing the ladies of the family to annoyance, and was obliged to build a separate staircase, he was held entitled to compensation to the value of his share in the family staircase. Oodhoy Chunder Mullick and others v. Pitamber Pyne, 6 W. R., Mis., 75.

A person who, at a sale in the execution of a decree, has purchased the share of a member of a joint undivided Hindu family, and subsequently sued for and obtained a decree against other members of the family for possession of such share in property, consisting of the joint family dwelling-house and land, in execution of the decree, is entitled to be put into actual possession of a portion of the dwelling-house (dissentiente, Kemp., J.). Koonwar Bijoy Keshub Roy Bahadoor v. Shama Soonderee Dossee, 2 W. R., Mis., 30.

Suit by purchaser of a decree for the debtor's share in a family dwelling-house, with gardens and tanks. Held that, as the suit was for chambers and ground, however worthless the land might appear without the residence, or however inconvenient might be the intrusion of a stranger into the family dwelling-house, the plaintiff was entitled to an adjudication of his claim to the land. Buddun Chunder Maduck v. Chunder Coomar Shaha, 5 W. R., 218.

Partition of a dwelling-house may be claimed as of right by a Hindu. Hullodhur Mookerjee v. Ramnath Mookerjee, Marsh., 35.

Where there is joint occupation of some portions of a joint family dwelling-house, and the separate occupation of other portions of the same property appears to be merely permissive, such separate occupation does not necessarily imply that the properties occupied are separate properties. Gour Lall Singh v. Mohesh Narain Ghose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 484.

12.—EVIDENCE.

By Hindu law an exchange of lands followed by possession need not be evidenced by writing. Mantinna Raijappa Raj v. Chekkari Venkartaraj, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 100.

The mere fact of the proceeds of any land being used for the support of an idol may not be proof that those lands formed an endowment for the purpose; but where there is apparently good evidence going back for more than half a century that the land was given for the support of an idol, proof that from that time the proceeds had been so expended would be strong corroboration. Muddun Lall v. Sreemutty Komul Bibee, 8 W. R., 43.

Clear proof is necessary to support a gift, made orally by a person at the point of death, of all the donor's property to idols.

A member of a joint Hindu family, alleging separate acquisitions by himself and his father (the managers of the family property), is bound fully to prove his allegation; but the law does not impose upon him so high a degree of proof as to require him to trace the funds with which each purchase of his father and himself has been made from the time of their having been acquired in a given year to the time when they were paid to the seller of the property. Bippro Pershad Mytee v. Mussamut Kena Doyee, 3 W. R., 165.

When joint acquisition is alleged, the facts of the purchase having been made in the name of only one member of the family, of the registration of his name alone in the Collector's books, of his having carried on a law-suit singly with regard to the boundary of their lands, and of the refusal of the Judge to give the other members of the family a share of the costs decreed on that suit, are wholly insufficient proof of separate acquisition. Deela Singh v. Toofanee Singh, 1 W. R., 307.

Thakbust papers are primâ-facie evidence against the proprietors of estates comprehended in them. Kalee Tara Debia v. Nittanund Shaha, 12 W. R., 90.

No transaction of Hindu law absolutely requires a writing.

A Hindu may make a nuncupative will of property, whether immoveable or moveable. Srinivasammal v. Bhioyamal, 2 Mad. Rep., 31.

Where a party who claimed to be heir-at-law to the estate of a deceased Hindu was opposed on the ground that he was disqualified from inheriting by leprosy, but volunteered to state that he had performed the penance required by the Shastras for the expiation of the disease, he was held to have admitted thereby that the leprosy was of that grievous nature which demanded expiation before he could succeed to the inheritance, and to be under the onus of proving the fact that expiation had been performed. Bhoobuneshurre Dabea and others v. Gouree Doss Turkopunshanun and others, 11 W. R., 535.

That a Hindu widow, entitled to her husband's share of the joint property, continues to live in the family and mess with them, is sufficient, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to show that she is receiving payments on account of her share. Gobind Chunder Bagchee v. Kripamoyee Dabee, 11 W. R., 338.

In no case does Hindu law absolutely require writing. Mantena Raijappa Raj v. Chekkara Venkataraj, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 100, and Criniva Sammal and others v. Vijayammal and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 37.

A verbal grant of land followed by possession is valid under the Hindu law. 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 135.

13.—Gift.

Plaintiff sued to enforce a gift to him of immoveable property by a woman living under his guardianship as against her husband.

Held that such taking of the woman's property by her kinsman is wholly repugnant to Hindu law.

Quære,—Can a woman, without the consent of her husband, during coverture, absolutely alienate her own landed property? Duntuloore Rayapparaz v. Malapude Rayadu, 2 Mad. Rep., 360.

By Hindu law a man may make a gift of any of his property binding as against himself. Even when a deed of gift is voidable, on the ground of fraud, accident, or mistake, it is a question for the discretion of the Court whether cancellation or delivery up ought to be ordered.

Where a Hindu made a gift to a person whom he said he has taken as his manasaputra,—Held that he could not set it aside, on the ground that he erred in supposing that the donee could perform his funeral rites. Achachari v. Rama Chandrayya, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 393.

Semble,—The Hindu law recognizes the validity of a gift on condition. Armugam Mudali v. Amini Ammal, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 400.

A voluntary gift by a husband to his wife is not void against the husband's creditors if at the time of the gift the husband was solvent, and the wife was put in possession under the gift, especially if the plaintiff became a creditor of the husband long after the gift. Sheikh Enaet Ali v. Mussamut Rampreah Koonwar, 1 W. R., 21.

In establishing the validity of a deed of gift taken from a woman stricken with a mortal disease, and in expectation of death, proof at least of equal strictness, as is required to prove a testamentary disposition, must be given, and the proof to support such a transaction ought to be sufficient to establish that she knew what she was about, and intended to make such disposition of her property. Mussamut Thakoor Dayhee v. Rai Balack Ram and others, 10 W. R., P. C., 3.

Appeal dismissed, the appellant being unable to prove from Hindu law that a person becoming a leper was incapable of making a gift of property to which he had previously succeeded. Shamachurn Audicaree Byragee v. Roop Dass Byragee and others, 6 W. R., 68.

The absence of seisin is no objection to the validity of a gift by a Hindu.

Where a cadet member of the Doomraon family gave, for the support of his illegitimate sons, certain properties which he purchased out of the savings and profits of his appanage, even admitting that he was in possession of such properties during his lifetime, his possession would be that of a trustee for his illegitimate sons. Maharajah Moheshur Buksh Singh Bahadoor v. Mussamut Gunoon Koonwar, 6 W. R., 245.

Held that a gift of land is not complete, by Hindu law, without possession or receipt of rent by the donee. Harjivan Anandram v. Naran Haribhai, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 31.

By an ikrar executed by A., a Hindu widow, in favour of B., a son of another wife of her deceased husband, after reciting that her husband had given her a talook as stridhun, but that he had not empowered her to adopt a son, it was thus directed: "You are the son of my co-wife; you are still living; the funeral cake will be preserved to us by you; and on my death the talook is your rightful property. After my death, out of the whole profits for my two daughters, separating by demarcation ryots with jummas to the extent of Rs. 200, whatever shall remain you shall gain. Held that the vesting of the gift was contingent upon B. surviving A.; and that upon the death of B. during the lifetime of A., the gift lapsed. Kishto Soondery Deebea v. Ranee Kishtonotee, Marsh., 367.

To make a gift of land complete under the Hindu law, there must be either possession or receipt of rent by the donee. The receipt of rent may be by an agent, and, if the transaction is bonâ-fide, it is immaterial that such agent has before the gift received the rent for the donor. Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan v. Premchaund Raichaund; Amedbhái Hubíbhál v. Premchaund Roychand, 5 Bom. Rep., O. C., 83.

A., a Hindu living under the Mitakshara law, executed a petition to the Collector, stating that he was in possession of all his ancestral property; that his only son was dead; that he had no wife; that his son had left a widow, B., and two daughters, and no other children or heirs; the petitioner went on to state, "I declare her (B.) my heir; and as, with the exception of the said B., I have no other heir or malik, nor can there be any, of which circumstances I have already preferred information in my petition of 16th April, 1830, and life is uncertain, I consequently request that the name of B., the widow of my late son, be registered in the Collectory mutation book as proprietor and maulguzar in the place of my name with regard to the property," &c. "Further, as of B., there are two daughters who, after marriage, by the blessings of Providence, may be blessed with children; they and their children, therefore, are and will be heirs and maliks. But as long as I live I shall keep the management of my own affairs in my own hands, and look after all the transactions of dihat, &c., myself, as heretofore." B. sold and conveyed parcels of the property. In a suit by her daughter's son against the purchasers for a declaration of his reversionary right to the property sold,—Held that, under the terms of the petition, there was an absolute gift to B. That as the gift was not fettered by any restrictions, the alienation by B. was good and valid. Chattar Lal Sing v. Shewukram, 5 B. L. R., 123; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 285.

A., a Hindu, executed a dan patro (deed of gift) of a talook in favour of his youngest wife, B., wherein he stated: "You are my youngest wife, and your two sons are minors, therefore for your charitable expenses (dan o khairath) and for the maintenance of your minor sons, I make a gift of the above talook to you. You from this day becoming possessor thereof, after deduction of the government revenue, with the balance of the profits will perform acts of charity (dan o khairath) and maintain the sons. For this purpose I execute this dan patro."

A died, leaving C., a son by his first wife, two minor sons by B., and B., his widow. The minor sons of B. died unmarried and without issue. B. made a gift of the property to D., her daughter's son. In a suit by C. against B. and D. for a declaration of his reversionary right to the property after the death of B.,—Held that the gift to B. under the dan patro was absolute. An appellant in regular appeal may not at the hearing raise a contention of law expressly abandoned by him in the Court below, and not contained in the memorandum of appeal. Srimati Pabitra Dasi v. Damudar Jana, 7 B. L. R., 697.

The Hindu law makes no distinction in favour of gifts in contemplation of death, as respects the legal requisites to constitute a perfect disposition by gift. Those requisites are, a giving, either orally or by writing, with the intention to pass the property in the thing given, accompanied by its actual delivery and acceptance in the donor's lifetime.

When all these requisites have been fulfilled there is nothing in Hindu law to prevent effect being given to a gift in contemplation of death. N. Visalatchmi Ammal v. N. Subbu Pillaii and others, 6 Mad. Rep., 270.

Plaintiff sued to recover certain land in virtue of an alleged gift from her deceased husband. The parties were subject to the Marumakkattáyam law. The facts were that the land being in the hands of tenants, a deed of gift with the counterpart lease was delivered by the donor to the plaintiff. It did not appear that there were any title-deeds belonging to the property. Held, reversing the decision of the principal Sadr Amin, that the rule of law applicable is that a gift is perfectly valid if such delivery is made as the nature of the object permits, and that this has been done in the present case. Wannathan Kandile Chiruthal v. Keyakadath Pydel Kyrup, 6 Mad. Rep., 194.

A voluntary transfer of property by way of gift, if made bonâ fide, and not with the intention of defrauding creditors, is valid as against creditors.

The Hindu and English law on the subject discussed. Guánubhái v. Srínivása Pillali, 4 Mad. Rep., 84.

14.—Interest.

By Hindu law the amount recoverable at any one time for interest or arrears of interest on money lent cannot exceed the principal; but if the principal remained outstanding, and the interest be paid in smaller sums from time to time, there is no limit to the amount which may be thus received in respect of interest. The previous decision of the Sudder Court to the contrary overruled.

A signed account showing a balance up to date, and containing a promise to pay interest upon the consolidated balance, cannot be made use of in evidence to support a claim to interest on that balance, unless it be stamped; but it may be used as a samaduskut or simple admission of a balance due, although not stamped. Dhondoo Jogoonath v. Narayen Ramchunder, 1 Bom. Rep., 47.

By the Hindu law, interest exceeding in amount the principal sum cannot be recovered at one time.

Act XXVIII of 1855 has not, by repealing Section 12 of Regulation V of 1827, or otherwise, altered this rule of the Hindu law. Khushalchand Lalchand v. Ichharam Fakir; Ram Krishnabhet v. Vithababin Malharia, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C., 23.

In a suit under the Bills of Exchange Act to recover Rs. 1,200 on a promissory note, the Court gave a decree for Rs. 700 only, that being shown to have been the full consideration received for the note.

There is nothing illegal in the true holder of a promissory note endorsing it to another person, with the express object of allowing him to sue upon it.

Held, by Peacock, C. J., that the suit being between two Hindus must be decided by Hindu law.

By Hindu law a promissory note does not import consideration, and therefore where it was proved that the defendant actually received only Rs. 700, that sum was all the plaintiff was allowed to recover.

Act XXVIII of 1855 did not repeal the Hindu laws as to the rate of interest. Such rate is governed by the strict rules of Hindu law, as originally laid down by Menu and other lawgivers. Ramloll Mookerjee v. Haran Chundra Dhur, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 130.

Regulation XXXIV of 1802 having been repealed, a claim in a suit between Hindus for an amount of interest exceeding the principal sum due is maintainable. V. Annaji Ram v. Raghubai, alias Sithubai, 6 Mad. Rep., 400.

Act XXVIII of 1855 does not affect or supersede the rules of the Hindu law as to interest.

A promissory note, payable two months after date, given for money lent and interest in advance at the rate of 12½ per cent. per mensem, contained an agreement to continue to pay that rate of interest after the due date if the money was not then repaid.

Held that the high rate of interest so agreed to be paid did not constitute a penalty against which the Courts would relieve. Hákma Mánji et al. v. Memun Ayab Háje et al., 7 Bom. Rep., O. J., 19.

The rule of Hindu law which declares that interest exceeding in amount the principal sum cannot be recovered at any one time is not applicable to mortgage transactions. Náráyan bin Bábáji et al. v. Gungárám bin Krishnáji, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 157.

The rule of Hindu law that interest beyond the amount of the principal sum cannot be recovered at any one time applies as well to mortgage transactions as to other loans.

But where the mortgagee enters into possession of the mortgaged property, and in taking the accounts between the mortgagor and mortgagee credit is given to the latter for the rents and profits received by him as against the principal and interest due, the above rule cannot equitably be applied. Nathubhai Panachand v. Mulchand Hirachand, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., P. 196.

15.—Joint Family.

A debt incurred by the head of a Hindu family residing together under ordinary circumstances, presumed to be a family debt; but when one of the members is a minor, the creditor seeking to enforce his claim against the family property must show that the debt was contracted bonâ fide and for the benefit of the family. Tandavarya Madali v. Valli Ammal, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 398.

The fact of the members of two branches of a Hindu family being separate in food and worship is quite compatible with their never having been separate in estate.

A document providing separate house accommodation for the members of each of the two branches points rather to a division of enjoyment than to a division of ownership or estate.

The absence of attestation by caste-men to documents by which a Hindu affects to deal with his property as though he were separate in estate, is a circumstance which throws suspicion on the truth of an alleged separation, as the presence of such would be satisfactory evidence of a state of things generally believed to be true at the time.

Bequest of property in dharm to the caste. Chhabila Manchand v. Jadavbae and others, 3 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 87.

If a member of an undivided Hindu family invests the proceeds of the joint ancestral estate in the purchase of other estates, he does so for the benefit of the joint family. Without the consent of all the members, or a legal necessity, or a declaration and acts amounting to a division, he cannot alienate so as to bind even his own share. Mussamut Bona Koeree v. Boolee Singh and others, 8 W. R., 182.

Where, with small aid from paternal property, separate and distinct properties are acquired principally through the exertions of particular members of a joint Hindu family, such members are entitled to a double share upon separation. Sree Narain Berah v. Gooro Persaud Berah, 6 W. R., 219.

Illegitimate sons of a Christian father, by different Hindu women, although by agreement they may constitute themselves parceners in the enjoyment of their property after the manner of a joint Hindu family, are not a joint Hindu family according to Hindu law. On the death of each his lineal heirs representing their parent would, by the effect of the agreement, enter into that partnership.

Quære,—Whether the Hindu law gives a right of inheritance to collaterals also.

In a partition suit instituted by one of the illegitimate children, a deed of compromise was executed by the parties which provided for the mode of enjoyment and against the sale, mortgage, lease, or security of any separate share. Held (1) that these provisions of the deed did not extend to prevent alienation by devise, nor affect the right of inheritance; and (2) that the arrangement between the parties included the right of survivorship, the claim of the state only arising on failure of heirs of the last survivor. Myuna Boyee v. Oottoram, 2 W. R., P. C., 4.

A family joint in mess is not necessarily joint in estate, nor is a partition by metes and bounds necessary before a division can take place. An agreement amongst the members that the ownership is to be in certain defined shares takes away the character of joint enjoyment.

On the death without issue of one of several uterine brothers undivided in estate, the surviving brothers succeed equally to his share. Shib Narain Bose v. Ram Nidhee Bose and others, 9 W. R., 87.

Purchases made when a family is joint by individual members thereof are presumably made out of the common funds, and for the common benefit. And it is incumbent on any member of the family alleging that a purchase made whilst such family was joint was made out of his separate funds to establish his allegation by proof. Hait Singh v. Dabee Singh, 2 N. W. R., 308.

The debtor of an undivided Hindu family is not justified in paying his debt to the eldest member of the family unless such eldest member be also the manager of the undivided family. If there is no manager the debtor should obtain a release from all the members of the undivided family. Sangáppa bin Chanbasáppa v. Sáhebánnábin Kengedáppa, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 141.

Where part of the family property is proved to be joint, and the members live in commensality, there is a very warrantable presumption, according to Hindu law, that the family is joint. Golam Mustafa Khan v. Sheo Soonduree Burmonee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 304.

The word "ijmalee" expresses joint tenancy, even where commensality is not implied. Pearee Monee Bibee v. Madhub Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 93.

A managing member of a joint Hindu family is bound to render an account of his management to his co-sharers, and he is liable to a suit if he refuses to do so. And such suit will lie even if the parties suing were minors during the period for which the account is asked. Abhaychandra Roy Chowdry v. Pyarimohun Goho, 5 B. L. R., 347; 13 S. W. R., F. B., 75.

Every member of a joint family is not bound by an agreement made by the head of that family. The rent of a joint undivided tenure cannot be enhanced on the strength of an ekrar executed by one of the co-parceners. Hemayetoollah Chowdry v. Nil Kanth Mullick, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 139.

Where one brother of a joint undivided family transferred his interest in the joint property to the other brothers after a decree had been passed against him, although before attachment,—Held that when a question arose in such a case the onus was on the brothers to whom the transfer was made to prove the bonâ-fide character of the transaction. Brojo Lall Sandyal v. Bhobo Soonduree Debia Chowdrain, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 499.

Where one of the members of a joint undivided family purchases for the benefit of, and with funds belonging to, the family, he is entitled to such a share of the property covered by that purchase as is equal to his original share in the corpus of the estate, on the principle that the increment must follow the same rule as the corpus. Kalee Sunkur Bhadooree v. Eshan Chunder Bhadooree, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 529.

The fact of one brother (plaintiff's husband) remitting certain sums of money to another brother (defendant) and no receipts being taken for them, and no accountability being stated, leads to the conclusion of the brothers being joint in property and in mess.

Per Markby, J.—So also the fact of the two brothers being sued jointly upon a bond given by both, and of defendant discharging the debt alone, raises the presumption that the defendant discharged the debt out of the joint funds. Hurish Chunder Mookerjee v. Mokhoda Debia, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 565.

Under the Mitakshara law a son is equally entitled with his father, as well as to the profits of ancestral property itself, from the moment of his birth or adoption.

When there is in terms a gift of the interest and dividends or produce of the estate, and that gift is indefinite in point of time, such a bequest will generally carry the corpus absolutely. But when the gift is in its terms simply a gift of so much a year, its effect is to give an annuity for life only. Egnews v. Matthews, 1 Mad. Rep., 17.

Property purchased by a father in possession of ancestral property, as manager for himself and his sons, from the profits of such ancestral property, is itself ancestral property. Shudanund Mahapattur v. Bonomalee Doss Mahapattur and others, 6 W. R., 256.

Ancestral property is not confined to such property as the father derives from his father or any ancestor, but means at least immoveable property derived from the father, however acquired by him. Rajmohun Gossain v. Gourmohun Gossain, 4 W. R., P. C., 47.

Shares in ancestral property may be sued for whether they are held jointly or separately. Koonwar Narain Nundee v. Gocoolchurn Dey, 3 W. R., 108.

Under the Mithila law, as expounded by the Vivada Chintamony, and supplemented where deficient by the Mitakshara, a son has ownership in ancestral property, even during his father's lifetime; and such ownership accrues on the son's death, from which period the father and son are joint owners. Kantoo Lall v. Greedharee Lall, 9 W. R., 469.

On this side of India a member of an undivided Hindu family can, without the consent of his co-parceners, sell his share in the undivided property. Tukárám Ambaidas v. Ramchundra Salad Bhimanna Dhugi, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 247.

In the case of an undivided Hindu family, the burden of showing that property in the hands of one of the members of the family is self acquired and impartible lies upon the person who alleges it to be so.

Gains of science acquired at the family expense, and whilst the acquirer is receiving a family maintenance, are liable to partition, and upon the death of the acquirer form part of the family property, and do not pass to his widow. Bai Mancha v. Narotamdas Kashidas et al., 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 54.

Where a member of a joint Hindu family built (at his own expense, with borrowed money) a house upon ground belonging to the family, it was held that each of the co-parceners was entitled to a share in the house and the site upon which it was built equal in value to his share of the site. Vithobá Bává v. Haribá Bava, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 1.

In a suit for property acquired from the proceeds of an alleged joint trade, the joint character of which is neither admitted nor proved, the onus lies in the first instance, on the plaintiff, who is not entitled under the circumstances to the ordinary presumption of Hindu law arising from the existence of joint family estate. Hurish Chunder Dass v. Gouree Pershad Chatterjee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 163.

The father in an undivided family under the Mitakshara law has no interest in the ancestral property which can form the subject of a sale beyond the proceeds; having merely a life-interest in a common property, which he can neither give away nor sell. Bhyro Pershad v. Basisto Narain Panday, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 31.

The fact of a settlement being made with one member of a joint Hindu family does not negative the rights of other members to a participation in the property so settled; nor is it necessary for such other members, if living in commensality with the former as joint proprietors, to prove that they actually contributed money towards the acquisition of the property. Huro Soonduree Debia v. Doorga Doss Bhuttacharjee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 215.

Suit by a brother's widow against his brothers to recover his share of joint ancestral property. Defendants pleaded separation, self-acquisition, &c. Held that in the absence of some written record of the terms of the separation at the time, the plea of separation was most improbable: and that, considering there was a certain nucleus of ancestral property from which a beginning might have been made, while on the other hand there was no evidence of self-acquisition by the defendants, the only inference was that the property had been acquired from the ancestral funds. Although the widow was unable to satisfy the Judge below as to each item of property for which she sued, and did not obtain a decree for the full amount claimed, yet she was held entitled to recover the whole of the costs incurred by her in a suit into which she had been forced by the defendants for the recovery of her property. Shib Pershad Chuckerbutty v. Gunga Monee Debee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 291.

Concurrent findings of the lower Courts, based upon admissions made in written documents, that property which had been originally self-acquired had come into a common stock and become joint property, upheld. Chellayamal v. Muttialamul, 15 S. W. R., P. C., 1.

Where a member of a family claims an exclusive right to a house which he has built, the presumption of Hindu law against his claim arises only if the family is joint, having possession of joint property. Gungadhur Chatterjee v. Soorjo Nauth Chatterjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 446.

In a suit involving the question whether certain property which was sold in execution was the judgment-debtor's own separate property, or the joint property of plaintiffs and judgment-debtor, no presumption in favour of the property being joint was held to arise from the fact of plaintiffs and the judgment-debtor being members of a Hindu family; and as plaintiffs had once alleged separation, the onus was held to have been rightly placed on them of proving that the property was held jointly. Prem Chund Dan v. Darimba Debia, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 238.

The wives and mothers of the members of a joint undivided Hindu family, so long as they continue to live in the family and are supported out of its income, are just as much members of that family as their husbands and sons; and where property is purchased in the name of one such female member during the life of her minor son, the presumption of joint acquisition arising in such cases cannot be rebutted by the mere fact that her name was used in making the purchase or entered in the Collector's books as the purchaser. Chunder Nath Mootro v. Kristo Romul Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 357.

Where property is proved to be ancestral, the mere registration of one brother as proprietor is of little value as supporting a case of the property not being joint, and the burden of proving that the property is not joint rests on him who alleges that to be the case.

There was no sufficient proof of a family or local custom that the descent of the Zemindari, the subject-matter of dispute, was regulated by the rule of primogeniture. Amrit Nath Chowdhry v. Gauri Nauth Chowdry, 6 B. L. R., 232, and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 10.

The wrongful possession of a portion of a joint estate, in every portion of which the sharers have equal rights, by one of them is no bar to the partition of the whole, and does not warrant the exclusive assumption of another portion by another of them.

Assuming a plaintiff's right in the family estate not to have been lost, a deed of gift of a portion thereof is a violation of his right not justified by the circumstance that he had wrongfully appropriated some of the joint property in which the defendants might have recovered their rights by an action-at-law.

Plaintiff's hereditary right does not however entitle him to claim a partition of a portion only of the ancestral property. Vague and general evidence of plaintiff's gambling and licentious propensities is not sufficient to justify a finding that he has disqualified himself by "addiction to vice" for the performance of obsequies and such like acts of religion, and such evidence must disclose something like habitual maltreatment, or active and malignant hostility, to authorize a Court to pronounce the plaintiff "a professed enemy of his father," for the purpose of declaring him to have forfeited his right of inheritance by misconduct. Kulka Pershad v. Budra Sah and another, 3 N. W. R., 267.

Whilst the members of a Hindu family are found in possession of joint ancestral estate, all property in the possession of any member of the family is to be presumed to be joint, and it is incumbent on the member who claims property in his possession as his separate property to prove his sole title to it.

Separate property may be acquired by a member of an undivided family by gift, and the character of impartibility attaches to gifts made by a father to his unseparated sons.

What is acquired by the father's favour will subsequently be declared exempt from partition.

Separate property may be acquired by the exertions of a member of the family without detriment to the family funds.

It may be acquired with money borrowed on the sole credit of the borrower, and it may be acquired by the mutual agreement of the members of the family.

It is not necessary for the preservation of the joint nature of family property that the members of the family should live in commensality; they may dwell and mess apart, and yet remain joint in property.

Parties who allege that the acquisitions of the several members of a Hindu family are not to be brought into hotchpot, and divided per stirpes, must show that they were acquired in such a manner as to constitute them separate property and impartible.

And it is incumbent on those parties who admit that a partition has been made of certain portions of the family estate, and seek a repartition of the portion so partitioned, to show that a condition attached to the partition which rendered it inoperative, or that the members of the family have consented to a repartition of it.

Arrangements relating to the enjoyment of joint family property and acknowledgments of the right of the several members of the family to acquire separate property made by the adult members of the family, are to be held binding on the minor members of the family if they are not detrimental to their interest, and such arrangements consented to by a father should be held binding on his minor child.

The several members of a family may agree to take loans from the common fund, and treat the profits on such loans as the separate property of the several members by whom the loans have been respectively taken. Rai Nursingh Dass v. Rai Narain Dass, 3 N. W. R., 217.

Under Hindu law the interest in ancestral property taken by sons immediately on their birth is an estate and interest in immoveable property in respect of which a certificate of administration under Act XL of 1858 may be granted during the lifetime of their father. Musumat Dheraj Kooer v. Adjoodhya Run Singh, 3 N. W. R., 91.

A son during the life of his father, has as co-parcener, a present proprietary interest in the ancestral property to the extent of his proper share; but beyond that he has vested in him no legal interest whatever whilst his father is alive.

Except in respect of his co-parcenary rights, a son is not in a different position as to the corpus of the ancestral property from that of any other relation who is an heir-apparent of the owner of property.

Though the Limitation Act may have been decided to be a bar to a suit by the son for partition, his right as co-parcener has not thereby been destroyed, and it may be that he is entitled to relief against the improper disposal by the defendant of more than his proper share of the property. Rayachurlu v. Venkatarumaniah, 4 Mad. Rep., 60.

In a suit for certain property as belonging to plaintiff's judgment-debtor, in which the defendant, the adoptive mother of the judgment-debtor, claimed the property as purchased by her bonâ fide in the name of her son, but with her own funds,—

Held that this case could not be judged by the criterion laid down by the Privy Council in the case of Gossain versus Gossain, viz., whence came the purchase-money; for the question in that case related to property acquired by a member of a joint Hindu family, where the presumption would ordinarily be that all the property is joint. Nadirian Bibee v. Kureemoonissa Chowdhrain, 12 W. R., 122.

Where a Hindu family lives joint in food and estate, the presumption of law is that all the property they are in possession of is joint property, until it is shown by evidence that one member of the family is possessed of separate property.

The purchase of a portion of the property in the name of one member of the family, and the existence of receipts in his name respecting it, may be perfectly consistent with the notion of its being joint. The criterion in such cases in India is to consider from what source the purchase-money comes. Dhurm Dass Pandey and others v. Mussamut Shama Soondery Debia, 6 W. R., 43.

The presumption obtains of a continuance of the joint right to ancestral property of a member of a joint Hindu family, unless it is shown that he has, either by his own act or by the act of some one competent to bind him, parted with that right. Moonye Surmah v. Lomun Surmah, 2 W. R., 289.

Certain Hindus descended from a common ancestor, after having lived in commensality and joint estate, separated, no deed of separation being executed, or reservation expressed of any kind. About eleven years after one of the parties to the separation sued the others, alleging that certain immoveable property, which stood in the name of the defendants or their ancestor, had remained in the possession of the defendants on the allegation of exclusive purchase; but that it could be proved to have been acquired by joint ancestral income during the time the family was joint.

Held that the common presumption of Hindu law in favour of members of a joint family did not apply to such a case, and it lay on the plaintiffs to show why they were silent so long. Badul Singh v. Chutterdharee Singh and others, 9 W. R., 558.

In a suit to establish the right of plaintiff's judgment-debtor in certain lands, in regard to which a claim was set up in the execution department, on the allegation that claimant had obtained it as a gift from her husband, the brother of the judgment-debtor, whose self-acquired property it was,—Held that plaintiff, having proved commensality and joint trade, and the existence of some joint property in the family before it separated, had sufficiently started a primâ-facie case to throw the burden of proof on the defendant. Chundro Tara Dabea v. Buksh Aly, 11 W. R., 305.

The mere circumstance that one of several brothers of a Hindu family occupied a separate dwelling-house does not rebut the presumption of the family being joint, if it appear that they dealt with the family property as joint property. Mussamut Belas Koer v. Bhotaney Buksh and others, Marsh., 641.

In a Hindu undivided family, the mere fact that one brother's name was used in documents relating to property affords no presumption of his being sole proprietor, especially when he is the eldest brother, or is shown to be the managing member of the family. Janokee Dossee v. Kisto Comul Singh, Marsh., 1; S. C., W. R., F. B., 3.

Suit by a member of a joint Hindu family. The plaintiff stated the family to be joint; the defendant admitted that it had once been joint. Held that the onus of proving a separation was on the defendant, failing which the property must, under Hindu law, be regarded as joint at the time of defendant's purchase; and that the status of the family was sufficient notice to the defendant that in purchasing from one member of the family alone he was not making a bonâ-fide purchase. Beer Narain Sirkar v. Teencowrie Nundee, 1 W. R., 316.

D., claiming as a widow of A., brought a suit of ejectment against the sons of A.'s brother, deceased. D. admitted that the property had originally been the joint ancestral property of A. and his brother. Held that the mere appearance on the face of the revenue records that A. was sole owner was not sufficient to rebut the presumption of Hindu law that the property remained joint. Mussamut Jussoondah v. Ajodhia Pershad and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 261.

Where property is not expressly shown to be separate, the presumption of Hindu law is that it is joint, and when one brother has managed the property and made collections and acquired property out of such collection, he is accountable to his other brothers who are entitled to share in the property so acquired. Prankissen Paul Chowdhry v. Mothoora Mohun Paul Chowdhry, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 73.

The normal condition of a Hindu family being joint, it must be presumed to remain joint, unless some proof of a subsequent separation is given, and where property is shown to have been once joint family property it is presumed to remain joint until the contrary is shown; but the mere fact of a family being joint is not enough to raise a presumption in law that property acquired by one member of that family is joint property.

Where A., as purchaser, claimed a share in property as being joint family property,—Held that A. was not only bound to show that the family was joint, but that the property in question became joint property when acquired, or that at some period since its acquisition it had been enjoyed jointly by the family. Shiu Golam Singh v. Baran Singh, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 164; 10 W. R., 198.

The presumption of Hindu law as to joint property cannot apply in a case where the property is claimed through a son-in-law living in the house of his father-in-law. Dossee Monee Dossee v. Ram Chand Mohur, 7 W. R., 249.

So long as no partition of a joint estate is proved, the presumption is that the property is joint. The fact that certain parcels are admittedly held in severalty does not rebut the presumption as regards the rest of the joint estate. Sreeram Ghose and others v Sree Nath Dutt Choudry and others, 7 W. R., 451.

The presumption is that a Hindu's property is ancestral, and not self-acquired. Vatinayagam Pillai v. Pachee and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 326.

A debt incurred by the head of a Hindu family residing together is, under ordinary circumstances, presumed to be a family debt. Tandai araya Mudali v. Valli Annual, 1 Mad. Rep., 398.

When the manager of a joint Hindu family repurchases benamee property sold for arrears of revenue, the presumption is that the property so purchased is held by him for the benefit of the joint family. Kalee Doss Mookerjee v. Mothooranath Banerjea, 5 W. R., 154.

A son cannot control his father's act in respect of a property the succession to which is liable to obstruction. It is only in respect of property not subject to obstruction that the wealth of a father and grandfather becomes the property of his sons or grandsons by virtue of birth. Jawahir Singh v. Guyan Singh and others, 3 Agra Rep., 78.

According to the Mitakshara law, sons have a vested interest in ancestral property, which interest is saleable at any time in satisfaction of claims against them. Goor Suruz Doss v. Ram Surun Bhukut, 5 W. R., 54.

The rule of Hindu law in cases of joint family property (i.e., that it must be presumed to be joint until proved to be the contrary) is applicable to a case where the property has passed by sale into the hands of third parties, and has been redeemed by private purchase by one of the former shareholders. Goroo Persaud Roy and others v. Debee Persaud Tewaree, 6 W. R., 58.

The presumption of Hindu law is that property not shown to be separate is joint. When an elder brother is long in the management of the joint estate, and in the receipt of the collections from it, and is accountable for them to his younger brother, if the money employed in the purchase of certain talooks formed part of those drawn from the joint estate, the younger brother, on a reunion, is entitled upon the general principles of Hindu law, and independently of the express provisions of any deed of agreement executed between the parties, to share in them as acquisitions made by the use of the joint funds. Ramkishen Paul Chowdhry v. Mothooramohun Paul Chowdhry, 5 W. R., P. C., 11.

Suit for share of joint ancestral property. The plaintiff claimed under A., who, when sued in 1812 as trustee for the defendant's father, then a minor, never pleaded that he was a co-parcener. Held that the plaintiff, if not estopped from contending that the property was joint, had still the full burden of proving that it was joint. Surnomoyee Debia v. Gunga Gobind Roy, 2 W. R., 264.

In a suit for a share of ancestral property, the onus is on the defendants to prove their allegation of separation at a certain time, they having admitted that the family was joint up to that time, and claiming the property as separately acquired subsequent to that date. Bissumbhur Sircar v. Soorodhuny Dossee, 3 W. R., 21.

In a Hindu family the presumption of law is that they are joint, and the onus of proving that the family is separate lies on the party making such assertion. The mere fact of property standing in the name of one brother does not prove that it is his separate and self-acquired property. Munmohinee Dabee v. Soodamonee Dabee, 3 W. R., 31.

Suit by widow of defendant's brother for half share of an alleged joint ancestral property. Held, under the circumstances of the case (the plaintiff making a stale claim), that very moderate proof was sufficient from the defendant. The defendant's evidence and the plaintiff's own conduct established that the original estate, which was the nucleus of the subsequent acquisitions, was the mother's estate and the acquisitions of the defendant made after the mother's death upon the estate to which he had succeeded after her. Dukeena Dabee v. Kishen Chunder Sandyal, 3 W. R., 97.

The burden of proof, in cases of alleged separate acquisition by a member of an undivided family possessed of joint estate, is on the person who advances such a claim. Bipro Pershad Mytee v. Kena Dayee, 5 W. R., 82.

In a suit for a share in a joint family property, the onus of proving joint enjoyment of the property within 12 years is on the plaintiff. Proof by the plaintiff of receipt of payment on account of his share within 12 years will save his suit from limitation under Clause 13, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859, and throw on the defendant the onus of proving his plea of separate property. Umbika Churn Shet v. Bhuggobutty Churn Shet, 3 W. R., 173.

In a suit for partition of joint family property, in which the defendant pleads that a partition has already taken place, the onus is on the defendant to prove the alleged partition. Gooroo Pershad Mookerjee v. Kalee Pershad Mookerjee, 5 W. R., 121.

Where a party admits that a family was joint, but sets up a partition, the onus probandi is on him. Treelochun Roy v. Rajkishen Roy, 5 W. R., 214.

In a case of separate messing by Hindus living in the same enclosure, and with no apparent separate incomes, though, as mere presumption of law, the estate may be assumed to be joint until it is proved to be separate, yet, as the law limits such claims to twelve years, any honest party must be in a position to show whether he has had any enjoyment of the estate, either jointly or by division of profits, within that time. Hureehur Mookerjee v. Nobin Kishore Banerjee, 5 W. R., 256.

The presumption of Hindu law being in favour of a family being joint, and of all property being acquired from joint funds until the contrary be shown, the onus probandi is on the party who alleges separate acquisitions obtained by means of a special gift. Lukhun Chunder Dallal v. Modhoo Mockhee Dossee, 5 W. R., 278.

In a suit to enforce the right to a share in immoveable property on the ground that it is family property, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to show that, within 12 years before the institution of the suit, the estate was in the possession of persons claiming under his ancestor, or that, if not actually in their possession, they received a portion of the profits during their lives from the defendant as trustee in possession. Bydonath Ojha v. Gopal Mal and others, 6 W. R., 170.

The mere fact of certain property standing in the name of one member of a joint family is no index to the real owner, nor is the existence of a separate possession any evidence as to separate acquisitions, unless such separate possessor can prove consent of the other sharers to his keeping a separate account. Lalla Beharee Lall and others v. Lalla Modho Persaud and others, 6 W. R., 69.

In a suit for possession of certain properties, on the ground that they were joint, and that plaintiffs had been wrongfully kept out of their share after a separation between them, and in which defendants averred that the family had separated long prior to the time alleged by plaintiffs, and that the properties were acquired solely by their ancestor,—Held that, until the defendants gave proof of the separation alleged by them, the presumption was in favour of the family having been joint, and the onus of proving self-acquisition was on the defendants. Pearee Lall and others v. Bhukhoree Lall and others, 12 W. R., 124.

The original status of all Hindu families must be presumed to be joint and undivided. The onus probandi is on those who put forward claims upon the basis of separation and self-acquisition. Proof of separation of shares is not sufficient to shift the burden of proof. Mussamut Bilash Koonwar v. Bhawanee Buksh Narain, W. R., 1864, 1.

When a father and son live as a joint family, and property is purchased in the name of the son, the presumption is that the property was joint estate, and purchased in the name of the son, with a resulting trust in favour of the father. The burden of proving that it was separate estate is on those who claim it as such. Sreemuttee Poornimah Chowdhrain v. Dropodee Dossee, W. R., 1864, 103.

Where one member of a Hindu family claimed to participate in the property possessed by certain other members, alleging that it had been acquired from the proceeds of their joint estate, and it was found that the family property was not sufficiently large, after supporting the members, to leave surplus funds for the acquisition, and that the defendants were at the time pursuing lucrative employments, the plaintiff being a minor, it was held that there was no ground for the usual presumption as to joint family estate, and the onus lay on the plaintiff to prove his allegation. Held that the fact of defendant having received his education from the joint estate did not entitle plaintiff to participate in every property acquired by defendant by the aid of such education.

It is not incumbent on a Hindu, in every case in which he pleads self-acquisition, to show the source from which the money came. Dhunookdharee Lall v. Gunput Lall and others, 10 W. R., 122.

Where the purchaser of the rights and interests of one member of a Hindu family, in suing for possession, claimed a share of certain property which had been irregularly purchased by another member, on the ground that it had been purchased from joint funds,—Held that, before it could be presumed from the fact of the members having lived in commensality that the property was purchased from joint funds, plaintiff is bound to show that there were joint funds or other ancestral property, from which such funds could be derived. Khelut Chunder Ghose v. Koonjlall Dhur, 10 W. R., 333.

Although, under a recent ruling of the Privy Council, direct evidence of a butwarra in the shape of a deed, or of partition by metes and bounds, is no longer required to prove separation in estate, yet every Hindu family is presumed to be joint until circumstances clearly point to the contrary conclusion. Dharoo Sooklain and another v. The Courts of Wards, 11 W. R., 336.

The father and the son under the Mitakshara law are in the position of a joint Hindu family; and where ancestral estates are admitted to exist, the presumption of law is that all the property they are in possession of is joint property, until it is shown by evidence that one member of the family is possessed of separate property. The burden of proof, therefore, is on the member alleging self-acquisition. Sudanund Mohapattar v. Soorjoomonee Daye and others, 11 W. R., 436.

Every one who is entitled to a share in a joint-family property must account for such portion as may have come into his hands. Gour Pershad Mookerjee v. Kalee Pershad Mookerjee, 5 W. R., 121.

The presumption being that an estate purchased by one of several Hindu brothers living in commensality is the joint estate of all, if a plaintiff seeks to dispossess the other brothers under a title acquired from the brother in whose name the estate was purchased, the onus of proving that it was the sole property of such brother lies upon him. Anund Mohun Roy and others v. Lamb and others, Marsh., 169.

Where a party sues for a moiety of certain property on the ground that it is joint property, the onus is on him to prove that the property is joint, failing which his suit is liable to be dismissed. Mussamut Soobheddur Dossee v. Boloram Rewan, W. R., F. B., 57.

Where plaintiff, a member of a Hindu family, suing for a division of the family estate, admitted on the face of his plaint that he had taken possession of part of the family property, and for sixteen years lived separate, the onus probandi lies on him to show that the circumstances under which he became possessed of the portion of his property were consistent with his statement that the family remained undivided. Somungowda Bin Dagamungowda v. Bhurmungowda, 1 Bom. Rep., 43.

Held that the admission of certain property being joint ancestral, throws the burden of proving exclusive and adverse possession beyond limitation upon the sharer refusing to admit other heirs. Dabee Suhai v. Sheo Doss Rai, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 285.

In a suit against a brother's widow for contribution, in respect of a decree for rents from 1259 to 1264, under a lease acquired in 1255, by the father of the parties in the name of the plaintiff before the family separated in 1258,—Held that the onus of proving that the lease was not joint was on the party who set up the plea that it was the self-acquired property of one member of a joint family. An admission by the widow's husband that the lease was the joint property of himself and the plaintiff, though not an estoppel, was held to be good evidence to be rebutted by the widow. Sreenath Nag Mozoomdar v. Monmohinee Dossee, 6 W. R., 35.

The onus probandi is on the party who pleads separate property. Lalla Beharee Lall and others v. Lalla Modho Persaud and others, 6 W. R. 29.

The onus of proving the partition of a joint Hindu family rests upon the person who alleges that such partition has taken place. Kateama Nauchear v. The Rajah of Shivagungah, 2 W. R., P. C., 31.

The onus of proof is on the party seeking to except any property from the general rule of partition according to Hindu law. Luximon Row Madasew v. Mullar Row Bajee, 5 W. R., P. C., 67.

After a general separation in food and a partition of estate, and after the brothers have commenced to live separately, if any one of them comes into Court alleging that a particular portion of property originally joint continues to remain so, the onus of proof lies on him. Ram Gobind Koond and others v. Syud Hossein Ali and others, 7 W. R., 90.

Where one member of a joint family claims a property as separate the onus is on him to prove

By Hindu law a widow is allowed, during her lifetime, to make the fullest use of the fisufruct of her husband's estate; but whatever part of it she leaves behind at her death becomes the property of the next heir, and is not liable for her personal debts, unless such debts have been contracted under legal necessity and for the benefit of the estate. Chundrabulee Debia v. Brody, 9 W. R., 584.

Held that a party succeeding as heir to an estate, the sale of which, by the widow of the person from whom he inherits, has been set aside, is bound to refund the purchase-money paid to the widow for the purpose of discharging liabilities on the estate. Roostum Singh v. Alum Singh and Indur Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 291.

Property inherited from another and distinct branch of the family cannot be sold for a father's debts. Bissambhur Roy v. Luckhee Kant Neogy, 3 W. R., 137.

According to Hindu law, a son who has not inherited his father's estate is not liable for his debts. Maharajah Dheraj Mahatab Chand Bahadoor v. Hurro Mohun Acharjee, W. R., 1864, Mis., 1.

According to Hindu law, a man's property is liable for his debts, and the debts of an ancestor must be satisfied before the heir has any interest in ancestral property. Gunga Narain Paul v. Umesh Chunder Bose, W. R., 1864, 277.

Heirs are liable for the debts of the person from whom they have inherited to the extent of the property which they have inherited. Raj Roop Singh v. Buldeo Singh, 2 W. R., 258.

According to Hindu law, a creditor cannot follow the property of a deceased debtor, but he may hold the heir personally liable. Unnopoorna Dassea v. Gunga Narain Paul, 2 W. R., 296.

19.—Limitation.

Where a decree is passed against ancestral property on confession of the ancestor, and the suit is brought by the sons to establish their reversionary right, or to obtain possession by setting aside the decree and confession,—Held that the twelve years' limitation is applicable to such suits.

Held, further, that in case of ancestral property the admission of a father may be used as evidence against his sons, but is not conclusive, and does not stop the sons from contending that such admission was collusive or erroneous.

Before partition a Hindu father has no definite share in joint ancestral property which he can aliene. Nowbut Ram v. Durbaree Singh and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 145.

A Hindu of Tirhoot died in 1849, leaving two widows and a brother. A compromise was made by the three, whereby they agreed that the brother should remain in possession of the property left by the deceased; and that some land should be assigned to the widows for maintenance. The elder widow died in 1867, and the younger sued the heirs of the brother for recovery of possession of the property. The defence set up was that the suit was barred by limitation, as her cause of action arose not on the death of her co-widow, but on the death of her husband.

Held that as to recovery of possession of a moiety of the property, the cause of action arose on the death of the co-widow; that the possession of the elder widow was not adverse to the younger widow, as the elder widow was permitted to enjoy the possession of the husband's property during her lifetime, the younger widow receiving an allowance from the profits of the estate. Mussamut Indubansi Kunwar v. Mussamut Gribhirun Kunwar, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 289.

The possession of one member of a joint Hindu family is not an adverse possession, so as to bring a suit between members of the same family within the Law of Limitation. Benud Naik v. Doorga Churn Naik, 1 W. R., 74.

20.—Maintenance.

Suit by a widow for arrears of maintenance. Plaintiff's allegation of her separate maintenance was found to be inconsistent with her allegation of living in commensality in a former petition which she made to obtain the guardianship of the minor; and as her principal witness, the former guardian of the minor, failed to corroborate his statements of the alleged payments in way of maintenance by the production of any entries of account, her claim was held to be not proved. Mussamut Raj Kalee Koowur v. The Collector of Shahabad, 1 W. R., 252.

Where the maintenance of a Hindu widow was not made by her deceased husband dependent upon her living with his family, she is entitled to it, notwithstanding she leave the house of his family and go to that of her father. Surnumoye Dassee v. Gopaul Lall Doss, Marsh., 497.

The heir who takes and becomes possessed of the estate of the deceased must be held to continue to be primarily responsible both in person and property, for the maintenance of the widow, even though he should have fraudulently transferred that estate, or otherwise have improperly wasted it, and the widow is bound to look to the heir for her maintenance, and to claim it from him primarily rather than from the estate transferred or wasted, which may nevertheless be in the last resort answerable to her claim. Ramchurn Tewaree v. Musst. Jussooda Koonwer, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 134.

Where a Hindu wife had left her husband's house and carried on an independent calling, and the husband did not object to the calling or give her notice to return,—Held that as she was desirous of returning, and the husband declined to maintain her, she was entitled to maintenance. Nitye Laha v. Soondery Dassee, 9 W. R., 475.

A Hindu died possessed of no property, but leaving a widow. On his death she left the house of her father-in-law, and went to reside at her father's house. Her father-in-law was not possessed of any ancestral property. Held that she could not sue her father-in-law for a sum of money on account of maintenance. Khetramani Dasi v. Kashinath Das, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 15.

In a suit for maintenance brought by an illegitimate son of a Hindu zemindar deceased,—Held that it was established that the plaintiff was the natural son of such zemindar, and recognized by him as such, it not having been essential to the plaintiff's title to maintenance that he should be shown to have been born in the house of his father, or of a concubine possessing a peculiar status therein. Case remanded for the Courts in India to try whether such maintenance can be a charge upon an impartible zemindary or, if not, out of what property or fund, if any, the son was entitled to be paid. Muttuswamy Jagavera Yettappa Naiken v. Vencutaswara Yettuppa, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 15.

The fact of A. having been long supported by B., or of his having been purchased either as a slave or as a chela, will not entitle him to claim perpetual maintenance for himself and his heirs, especially where A. does not show that he has been deprived of ordinary means of livelihood which he might otherwise have commanded. Narain Dass v. Maharajah Mahatab Chund Bahadoor, 7 W. R., 137.

On what principle maintenance for a Hindu widow should be awarded. Bhugwan Chunder Bose v. Bindoo Bashinee Dossee, 6 W. R., 286.

A Hindu widow who had been supported by her father-in-law after his death sued his eldest son for maintenance, and obtained a decree for Rs. 150, notwithstanding the defendant's objection that, being one of three brothers who inherited their father's estate, he was not solely liable for the maintenance claimed.

Held that as this was a Small Cause Court suit an appeal did not lie. The maintenance of a widow is by Hindu law a charge upon the whole estate, and therefore upon every part thereof. The defendant might have the question raised by him decided by suing his brothers for contribution. Ramchandra Dikshit v. Savitribai, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 73.

A Hindu adulteress living apart from her husband cannot recover maintenance from him so long as the adultery is uncondoned. Illatra Suvatra v. Illata Narayin Nambidir, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 372.

A Hindu wife is not entitled to maintenance if she leaves her husband without a justifying cause.

The husband's marrying a second wife is not such justifying cause.

Where, therefore, a Hindu husband married a second wife, and his first wife thereupon left him, —Held that the first wife had no implied authority to borrow money for her support.

Semble,—The prohibition against a plurality of wives, save under certain circumstances, is merely directory and not imperative. Virasvami Chetti v. Apasvami Chetti, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 375.

The widow of an undivided Hindu who leaves a co-parcener him surviving, has, like the widow of a divided Hindu who leaves male issue, merely a right to maintenance. Where, therefore, a widow sued for a Palaiyappattu as heir to the surviving brother of her husband,—Held that the suit must be dismissed. Peddamuthe Viramani v. Apper Rau and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 117.

Held that the appellant had failed to establish the alleged marriage of his father with his mother, and that consequently his claim as a legitimate son of the late Rajah of Ramnuggur could not be sustained; that he was not entitled to inheritance as the illegitimate son of the Rajah, because his father, who was a Rajpoot, was a Khatri, or one of the three regenerate or twice-born races whose illegitimate sons could not inherit; but that he was entitled to maintenance out of his father's estate. Chusturya Run Murdun Syr v. Sahub Purlunad Syr, 4 W. R., P. C., 132.

On a division of an estate, the Hindu law recognizes the right of a grandmother to maintenance, but not her title to any share of the estate. Pudummookee Dassee v. Raeemonee Dassee, 12 W. R., 409.

According to Hindu law, a son's widow is entitled to maintenance so long as she leads a chaste life, whether she elects to live with her father-in-law or with her own relations. Koodee Monee Dabea v. Tara Chand Chuckerbutty, 2 W. R., 134.

A Hindu widow who, for no improper purpose, leaves her husband's family, does not thereby forfeit her right to maintenance. Aholtya Bhai Dabea v. Luckhee Monee Dabee, 6 W. R., 37.

There is no rule of Hindu law which recognizes any authority in a widow entitled only to maintenance to make contracts for necessary supplies binding upon the heir in possession of the family property and liable to maintain her. Ramasamy Aiyn v. Minakshi Ammal and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 409.

Held that the widow's right to maintenance being a charge on the property forming her deceased husband's estate, remains claimable out of the property, notwithstanding its alienation by the heirs, unless she bargains to forego it. Heera Lall v. Mussamut Kousillah, 1 Agra Rep., 42.

In a suit by a Hindu for arrears of maintenance, she not being able to show that she had lived apart from her family and had a separate maintenance, her claim was held to be not proved. Mussamut Raj Kalee Koowar v. The Collector of Shahabad, 1 W. R., 252.

There is nothing in the law to prevent an increase or a decrease of the amount of maintenance allowed to a Hindu widow, should sufficient cause be shown for either. The increase, if allowed, should be made from date of suit.

A widow's right to maintenance does not cease on her leaving her husband's house. Sreeram Bhuttacharjee v. Puddomookhee Devia, 9 W. R., 152.

A Hindu widow's claim to maintenance upon an estate does not necessarily render the sale of the property subversive of her right; for even if there be no other property out of which that maintenance can be derived, there is nothing to prevent her from suing to establish her right to make her maintenance a charge upon the property sold. Anund Moyee Goopto v. Gopal Chunder Banerjea, W. R., 1864, 310.

The High Court remanded the case for the determination of issues regarding the circumstances of a widow who claimed maintenance from her husband's father.

Semble,—Separation from her husband's family does not deprive a Hindu widow of her right to claim maintenance from them, if she happens to be in needy circumstances. Chandra Bhogabai v. Kashnath Vithal, 2 Bom. Rep., 341.

A Hindu widow has a right to be treated with kindness, and suitably maintained by her father-in-law. Deben Ramnath Roy Chowdhry v. Sreemutty Arnu Kally Debia, W. R., 1864, 177.

It is not necessary that a Hindu widow should be maintained in the same state in which her husband would maintain her. Kalleepersaud Singh v. Kupoor Koowaree, 4 W. R., 65.

A Hindu widow's right to maintenance out of lands which belonged to her husband and have devolved on her son, is a purely personal right, which cannot be sold in execution of a decree or otherwise transferred. Bhyrub Chunder Ghose v. Nubo Chunder Gooho, 5 W. R., 111.

A father is not obliged by Hindu or Jain law to support a grown-up son, even if the son is labouring under a temporary disorder. Prem Chund Pepara v. Hoolas Chand Pepara, 12 W. R., 494.

Where property had descended to the possession of the brothers of a deceased Hindu,—Held that his widow had a right of subsistence from them, on condition of her residing with them as a member of their family. Wooma Churn Chowdhry v. Nitumbenee Dabia, 10 W. R., 359.

Held that a suit for maintenance by a Hindu widow is cognizable by a Court of Small Causes in the mofussil. Judal Mulji v. Hera Mulji, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 75.

Plaintiff was brought from his native place by defendant's adoptive father, D., who had no one to inherit his property, except his daughter's daughter, with a view to give her to plaintiff in marriage, and confer on him all he possessed. After marriage D.'s granddaughter died; but owing to defendant's being adopted plaintiff was deprived of all the cherished hopes of his wife's future inheritance. Accordingly the adoptive mother and defendant executed a moshairah-potro in plaintiff's favour, promising him, in consideration of the above facts, a monthly allowance for maintenance. The present suit was to recover a balance due of this allowance.

Held that, whether the English law is applied, or the principles of justice, equity, and good conscience, the deed disclosed a good and sufficient consideration for the promise to pay, and defendant was bound to pay the stipulated allowance. Shib Nundun Roy v. Sree Naran Roy, 11 W. R., 415.

The illegitimate son of a Sudra by a concubine, not being a female slave, is entitled to maintenance according to Hindu law. Muthusamy Jagavira Yellapa Naikar v. Venkatasubha Yettia, 2 Mad. Rep., 293.

A Hindu widow, if destitute of the means of living, is entitled to maintenance from her husband's relatives, although she may have shared her husband's estate, and supported herself for a long period by trading. Baee Lukmee v. Lukmee Doss Gopal Doss, 1 Bom. Rep., 13.

No rule of Hindu law precludes the recovery of arrears of maintenance. The only bar to the enforcement of a purely legal right is the lapse of the time required by the Law of Limitations to bar the remedy. Venkopadhyaya v. Kávari Hengusu, 2 Mad. Rep., 36.

A woman divorced for adultery who had continued in adultery during her husband's life, and in unchastity after his death, is not entitled to maintenance out of the property of her deceased husband according to Hindu law. Muttammál v. Kámákshy Ammál and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 337.

Under the Hindu law, a wife who, without her husband's sanction, leaves him to live with her own family, has no right to ask maintenance from her husband. Kullyansuree Debee v. Dwarkanath Surma, 6 W. R., 116.

Held by Peacock, C. J., and Macpherson, J. (reversing the decree of the lower Court), that, according to the law as current in Lower Bengal, the widow of a son who has died without leaving any estate cannot compel her deceased husband's father to make her a pecuniary allowance by way of maintenance if she refuses to live with him as a member of his family. Held by Loch and Kemp, JJ., contra. Kasheenath Dass v. Khettur Monee Dasee, 9 W. R., 413.

A right to maintenance bequeathed to a person is not affected by any private arrangement entered into by the members of the testator's family, who are liable to pay the maintenance as a charge on the testator's estate.

A plaintiff, however, who has resided in and been supported by the family for twelve years after the testator's death without claiming the maintenance bequeathed to her, is presumed to have waived her right. Ram Lall Mookerjee v. Mussamut Tara Soondery Debia, W. R., 1864, 3.

A Hindu father and son lived joint in food and worship, but separate in estate. Held that the widow of the son has no legal claim upon the father for maintenance. Rujjomoney v. Sibchunder Mullick, 2 Hyde's Rep., 103.

A son, whether adopted or begotten, can claim maintenance of his father until put into possession of his share of the ancestral property. Ayyavu Muppanar v. Niladatchi Ammal and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 45.

A daughter living apart from her father for no sufficient cause cannot sue him for maintenance. Ilata Shavatre and another v. Ilata Narayanna Nanbudri, 1 Mad. Rep., 372.

In a suit by a Hindu widow for administration under the will of her deceased husband, the Court will not give a decree for her general right to maintenance. Bizjie Bebee and Amrit Bebee v. Monohur Dass, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 118.

Arrears of maintenance due to a Hindu widow at her death do not necessarily revert to the estate from which they were to be derived, on the ground that they were not separated from the corpus of that estate during her life. Court of Wards v. Rajah Mohessur Roy, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 76.

A female, who is a member of a family governed by the Aliyasantana system of law, living apart from the family with her husband is not entitled to a separate allowance for maintenance out of the income of the family property.

Semble,—The husband is bound to maintain his wife out of his self-acquired means so long as she continues to live with him. Subba Hegadi v. Tongu, 4 Mad. Rep., 196.

A Hindu widow does not forfeit her right to maintenance by quitting the family residence of her deceased husband. Undoubtedly it is more consonant with Hindu law that a widow should remain in the house of her deceased husband, but although her conduct in quitting the house and residing elsewhere may expose her to blame, it is not conduct so heinous as to work a forfeiture of her right to maintenance. It has never been ruled with respect to Hindu widows that they are not entitled to recover arrears of maintenance because the amount of maintenance has been settled by neither private agreement nor by judicial decision. The claim for arrears can only be decreed up to the date of the institution of the suit. Rajah Pirthu Singh v. Ranee Raj Kooer, 2 N. W. R., 170.

The question of the adequacy of the maintenance granted to widows and daughters must depend in each case on its own peculiar circumstances. Dinobundhoo Chowdry v. Rajmohinee Chowdry, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 73.

A Hindu widow's maintenance is a charge upon the family estate in whosesoever hands the estate may fall. Mussamut Khukroo Misrain v. Ihoomuck Lall Dass, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 263.

According to the Hindu or Jain law, a father is not bound to maintain a grown-up son. Premchaund Peparah v. Rulaschand Peparah, 4 B. L. B., Ap., 23; and 12 S. W. R., C. R., 494.

A Hindu kept a Mahometan mistress, and by such conduct compelled his wife under her religious feelings to leave the house. She went and resided with her mother, and continued to live in chastity. Held, the husband was bound to give maintenance to his wife. Lala Gobind Prasad v. Doulut Batti, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 85; and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 451.

Quære,—Whether a Sagaye wife is entitled to maintenance. Jubhoo Sahoo v. Mussamut Jupoda Kooer, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 230.

Plaintiff sued his elder brother for maintenance, calculated at Rs. 300 per month. The first Court gave a decree for Rs. 50 per month, which was reversed on appeal by the Judge, on the ground that he could recover no smaller amount than that claimed in his plaint. Held, in special appeal, that plaintiff had a right to a finding by the Judge as to what amount and what kind of maintenance he was entitled to receive from defendant. Neeladree Singh v. Rajah Rughoonauth Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 411.

The Appellate Court agreed with the Court below as to the propriety of the practice, whenever a widow sued to have her right of maintenance declared, for her to ask not that her right should be declared generally, but that it should be enquired what is a fit and proper sum for her maintenance; but acting upon the rule in Courts of Equity that, if the plaintiff should mistake the relief to which he is entitled under his special prayer, the Court may yet afford him the relief to which he has a right under the prayer of general relief, provided it is such relief as is agreeable to the case made by the bill, held that the suit ought not to have been dismissed on the ground that it was only for a declaration of right, and did not ask for any relief, because, although no proposal was made for amending the form of the suit, the Court might, upon the plaint as it then was, have framed issues for the purpose of determining what should be allowed for the maintenance and expenses if the plaintiff should be found to be entitled to them, and remanded the case for re-trial accordingly. Sreemutty Nistarini Dassee v. Mukhun Lall Dutt and Chunder Mohun Soor, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 432.

As against an heir who has taken the property, the widow has a right to have her maintenance treated as a charge against the property, and she may follow the property in the hands of any one who takes it with notice of her claim against the heir. But the widow's maintenance is not in Bengal a charge on her husband's estate in the hands of an alienee without notice of her claim. Sreemutty Bhuggobutty Dassee v. Kinney Lall Mitter, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 433.

A Hindu widow cannot alienate for any purpose property entrusted to her solely that from its profits she may maintain herself. Seith Gobind Dass v. Ranchora, 3 N. W. R., 324.

A Hindu widow is entitled to charge on account of her maintenance a piece of land in the possession of her father-in-law (the defendant), which formed a portion of the ancestral property of the family, and had been allotted on partition to defendant, encumbered with a mortgage-debt of the family to the full value, and which had, subsequently to the partition in the lifetime of the plaintiff's husband, been redeemed by the defendant with self and separately acquired funds. Held, also, that the plaintiff's refusal to live in the defendant's house as one of his family did not disentitle her to maintenance. Visalatchi Ammal v. Anunsamy Sastry, 5 Mad. Rep., 150.

21.—Malabar Law.

According to Malabar law, a sale of family property is valid when made with the assent, expressed or implied, of all the members of the tarawad, and when the deed of sale is signed by the karanavan and the senior anandravan, if sui juris.

Such signature is primâ-facie evidence of the assent of the family, and the burden of proving their dissent rests on those who allege it. Kondi Menon v. Sranginreagatta Ahammuda, 1 Mad. Rep., 284.

By the law of Malabar all acquisitions of any member of a family which he has not disposed of in his lifetime form part of the family property. The acquirer, however, may, during his lifetime, hold, alienate at once, and encumber his self-acquisitions. A karanavan, in possession of the family funds, is presumed to have made all acquisitions with them and for the benefit of the corporate body. But such presumption is not irrebuttable, and his alienation or charge of such acquisitions made during his lifetime may be valid. Kallati Kunju Menon v. Palat Erracha Menon, 2 Mad. Rep., 162.

An individual member of a tarawad governed by the Marumakkatayam rule has no right to an account from the karanavan.

Each member of a tarawad has a right to succeed by seniority to the management of the family property.

Semble,—An anandravan's right to maintenance is merely a right to be maintained in the family house. Kunigaratu and others v. Arrangaden, 2 Mad. Rep., 12.

Property assigned by the males of a Nayar family for the support of their females is still family property, and liable as such to be taken in execution of a judgment against the karanavan. Parakel Kondi Menon v. Vadakentil Kunni Penná, 2 Mad. Rep., 41.

The right of the eldest member of a Nambúdiri family to manage the illom is absolute, and where a junior member has in fact managed it, then this is presumed to have been with the permission of the former, who may at any time take up the actual control. Nambiatan Nambúdiri v. Nambiatan Nambúdiri, 2 Mad. Rep., 110.

A kanamdar's right to hold for twelve years depends on his acting conformably to usage and the janmi's interest and is lost if he repudiates the janmi's title. It makes no difference when this is first done in his answer. Mayavanjari Chumaren v. Nimini Mayuran, 2 Mad. Rep., 109.

An otti-holder, like a kanamdar, forfeits his right to hold for twelve years by denying the janmi's title. Kellu Eradi v. Puapalli and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 161.

It is the unquestionable law of Malabar that tarawad property is inalienable, except in cases of adequate family necessity. In such cases alienations will be upheld; but it lies upon the purchaser to make out with abundant clearness that the purpose was a proper one. The assent of the senior anandravan is some (but rebuttable) evidence that the purpose was proper.

Semble,—That, considering the state of Hindu families, a purchaser would be affected with notice by much slighter evidence than a purchaser in other countries. Koyelothputtonpurazil Manoki Koran Wayur v. Puthenpurazil Manoki Chanda Náyar, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 294.

When the demisor of land under a kanam agreement is unable to give possession, the demisee may repudiate the contract and recover the amount advanced. Vayalil Pudia Madathemmil Moidin Kuttiayipa and others v. Udaya Varmavalia Rajah, 2 Mad. Rep., 315.

Division of family property cannot be enforced by one of the members of a family governed by the law of Aliya Santana.

In Canara females only are recognized as the proprietors of family property.

The Aliya Santana system of inheritance differs only from that of Malabar in more consistently carrying out the doctrine that all rights to property are derived from females. Munda Chetti v. Timajee Hensu, 1 Mad. Rep., 308.

Suits by a branch karnavan of a Malabar tarwad to recover certain lands belonging to his branch tarwad, which had been mortgaged by a former branch karnavan. Plea that the plaintiff had no right to sue without the authority of the senior member of the family, the vélia kaimal. Upon an issue sent (in special appeal) by the High Court, it was found by the Civil Judge that there was no binding and peculiar custom in the family depriving the senior member of all management of the property, and vesting it in the branch karnavans. Upon the final hearing it was contended that the contrary had been so irrevocably fixed by judicial decision as to prevent the matter from being open to question, and that this finding was bad in law, as being opposed to binding decrees of competent Courts.

Held by Holloway, J.—(1) That there was nothing compelling the Court to decide, contrary to the plain rules of law, that this delegation was irrevocable; that perhaps it was not so even by the delegator, and still less was it so by his successors; (2) That the fact of the setting apart of santam property, if it was set apart, can make no difference, and as little can the circumstance of the income reserved; (3) That there was nothing to prevent the Court from deciding that the Civil Judge was right in saying that this was an ordinary Malabar tarwad; and (4) That the renunciation before the Sadr Court was not even irrevocable as against him who made it, and certainly could not have the effect of depriving the senior member, for all future time, of the rights which the law of the country conferred upon him, with the correlative duties upon his becoming senior.

By Scotland, C. J.—That the Court was not constrained to hold that the irrevocability of the arrangement effected in 966 by the former head of the family, as to the apportionment of the family property between two taverafs, and the management of each taveraf's allotment by its senior member, was a matter conclusively adjudicated in the course of the litigation, of which there was proof in the records. That such arrangement operated only as a personal renunciation and delegation of the rights of management possessed by the then head of the tarwad; and that, assuming it to have been irrevocable by him, it was not binding on the third defendant, admittedly the head of the family by right of seniority. Appuni the present Vèllia Kulmal of Ekanatha, styled Ayampalli Ráman Kumàrun v. Ayanepalli Ekanatha Thavni Varikarnavan Shanguni Velluthudutha Shàmu and three others, 6 Mad. Rep., 401.

In Malabar the word "taverai" has several distinct meanings. In the families of the princes all the houses have separate property, and the senior in age of all the houses succeeds to the royalty with the property specially devoted to it. This mode of succession may be regarded as rather due to public than to private law. Private families have sometimes adopted the same customs, but there is the strongest presumption against the truth of this in the case of a private family. Families becoming very numerous have often split into various branches. In the language of the people, there is community of purity and impurity between them, but no community of property. In the only sense of the word with which Courts of Justice are concerned, people so related are not of the same tarwad. Where there are several houses bearing the same original tarwad name, but with an addition, and there is no evidence of the passing of a member of one house to another, there is the strongest ground for concluding that this separation has taken place. Erambapalli Korapur Nayar and two others v. Erambapalli Chenern Nayar and nine others, 6 Mad. Rep., 411.

The mere fact of the name of the managing member of a joint Hindu family standing as the recorded proprietor of an estate is not, per se, sufficient to give title to a purchaser for valuable consideration from him, unless at the time of the purchase the purchaser was ignorant of the real state of the family, and was really led by that circumstance to believe that the recorded proprietor was the sole owner. Gour Chundra Biswas v. Greesh Chundra Biswas and others, 7 W. R., 120.

The manager of a joint Hindu family is not, by reason of his occupying that position, bound to render an account to the other members of the family. There is no analogy in this respect between a joint Hindu family and a partnership. Where it was arranged amongst the members of a joint Hindu family that the accounts of a banking business carried on by them should be kept on the understanding that the profits when realized should be divided amongst the individual members in certain proportions, and that the expenses of each member should be credited and charged in the name of each member,—Held that this was in the nature of a partnership, and an account was decreed. S. M. Ranganmani Dassi v. Kasinath Dutt, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 1.

Members of a Hindu family, with vested interest in their joint property, choosing to continue in a state of commensality and joint fruition, do not possess individually any several proprietary right other than an alienable right to call for partition. The karta in general is the mere mouthpiece of the family, and not an agent with delegated authority in a fiduciary and accountable relation to the rest of the family.

As long as a member of such a family is a minor, the karta is in the position of a trustee for him of the joint property to the extent of his share in it, and is liable to account for it to him when the trusteeship ceases. Chuckun Lall Singh v. Paran Chunder Singh, 9 W. R., 483.

The appointment of a Hindu widow as manager of the estate of a lunatic is always undesirable if any other suitable person can be found. Dinobundhoo Shaha v. Wooma Soondery Dossee, 6 W. R., Mis., 52.

According to Hindu law, one brother is the manager and trustee for another brother's widow, and his possession is not adverse to her. Bheem Ram Chuckerbutty v. Huree Kishore Roy, 1 W. R., 359.

Where a member of a joint family is registered as jotedar in a zemindar's sherista, not as for himself only but as manager for the family, his relinquishment of the jote is not sufficient in law to authorize the zemindar to make arrangements with any others he pleases. Bykunt Nath Doss v. Bissonath Majhee and others, 9 W. R., 268.

A member of a Hindu family, who had the management of the ancestral property, was sued by one of the tenants for illegal distraint. Plaintiff put in a pottah in which the rent was described as a fixed rent, and the tenancy an old and existing tenancy. The result of that suit was a solenamah, or compromise between the parties, in which the manager fixed or confirmed the rent of the tenure, and agreed that the rent should not be enhanced,—Held that the effect of the solehnamah was to confer upon the tenant and his descendants a mourosee mokurruree right in the land at a fixed rent, as far as the manager was capable of conferring such a right. Bhoobunmohinee Dassee v. Dhonaye Karigur, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 434.

23.—MARRIAGE.

According to the law and custom of marriage prevailing at Tipperah, the Rajah can legitimatize his children born of a kachooa by going through a marriage ceremony with the mother. Assuming that no marriage ceremony is necessary to institute a gondhorbo marriage, mere co-habitation, without any intent and mutual agreement to enter into a binding contract of marriage, is not sufficient. Chuckrodhuj Thakoor v. Beer Chunder Joobrâj, 1 W. R., 194.

According to the Hindu law prevalent in Madras, legitimate children of illegitimate parents of the Sudra caste can contract a legal and valid marriage.

According to the Hindu law, illegitimate children of the Sudra caste can inherit, and are entitled to maintenance.

The marriage between persons of different sections of the Sudra caste is valid and legal. Inderan Valungypuly Taver v. Ramaswamy Pandia Talavr, 3 B. L. R., P. C., 1; S. C., 12 W. R., P. C., 41.

In case of husband and wife living together, the presumption is that the wife is the husband's agent for contracting debts for the necessities of the family. But by Hindu law perhaps this presumption is not so strong as it is by English. Verasvami Chetti v. Apposvam Chetti, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 375.

The proposition that everything acquired by a woman during coverture is the property of her husband has foundation in Hindu law. Ramasami Padeiyatchi v. Verasami Pedeiyatchi, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 272.

The mere taking of a first wife's jewels, or the marrying of a second wife by the plaintiff, cannot be set up as a bar to his claim against the former for restitution of conjugal rights. Jeebo Dhon Bangah v. Mussamut Sundhoo, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 522.

The Court will not order the father of a Hindu girl, in a suit to which the girl is not a party, to specifically perform the marriage of his daughter with a person to whom the daughter has been betrothed. It will, however, award damages against the father for breach by him of the contract of betrothal.

Semble,—That according to Hindu law, a betrothal is not to be treated as an actual and complete marriage. Umed Kika v. Nagindas Narotum, 7 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 122.

A custom which authorizes a woman to contract a nâtrâ marriage without a divorce, on payment of a certain sum to the caste to which she belongs, is an immoral custom, and one which should not be judicially recognized. Uji, daughter of Hargovan Ranchhod v. Háthi Lála, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 133.

The question whether the ceremony of Rasee Bibaho was a part of the marriage ceremony during the continuance of which gifts to the bride came under the denomination of yantuka, was held in this case to depend on the custom of the district in the caste to which the parties belonged. Bistoo Pershad Burral v. Radha Soondur Nath, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 304.

"Given before the nuptial fire" is only a term to signify all gifts during the continuance of the marriage ceremonies. Bistoo Pershad Burral v. Radha Soonder Nath, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 115.

Suit by a Hindu mother, as the guardian of her infant daughter, to have an alleged marriage of that daughter with the defendant set aside as null and void.

Held (Mitter, J., dissenting) that the Civil Courts have no power to declare a marriage null except as incidental to some right to property involved in the suit; and that plaintiff's remedy was to bring a suit as guardian to recover possession of her minor daughter, or for damages for loss of her daughter's services. Anjona Dassee v. Proladh Chunder Ghose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 132.

The plaintiff sued the defendants, his wife and her father (first and second defendants) to recover damages for the non-performance of a contract, whereby the defendants agreed to deliver to the plaintiff a specified quantity of grain.

The plaintiff and the first defendant appeared before a punchayat composed of members of their caste, and the first defendant having refused to live any longer with the plaintiff the punchayat awarded the compensation claimed, and the defendants promised to deliver the grain. It was found that the award of the punchayat was in accordance with the custom of the caste in cases in which the wife refused to live with the husband.

Held that the plaintiff was enabled to maintain the suit. Sooba Tevan v. Moothookoody, 6 Mad. Rep., 40.

The plaintiff, the divided brother of the defendant's deceased husband, sued to obtain a declaration of his independent legal right to betroth the infant daughters of his deceased brother by the defendant to persons of his own choosing without the interference of the defendant, and of her obligation to accept any persons whom he may select and provide for the celebration of their marriages.

Held that the exclusive right sought to be enforced by the plaintiff was not warranted by Hindu law, apart from the legal position and rights of the defendant as the guardian of her daughters and possessor of her husband's property, which however presented still stronger grounds of objection to the plaintiff's claim. Namasevayam Pillay v. Annammai Ummal, 4 Mad. Rep., 339.

An agreement entered into between the plaintiff and defendants, members of the same caste, contained a stipulation that in the event of the defendant objecting to the receiving of a girl from, or the giving a girl to the plaintiffs in marriage, the defendant should be bound to return Rs. 500 with interest, which the plaintiffs had paid to the defendant under the agreement. It was found by the Civil Judge that the fifteenth defendant's son was engaged to be married to the second plaintiff's daughter, and that the marriage was broken off on the part of the fifteenth defendant.

Held, on special appeal, that this was primâ facie a breach of the agreement which entitled the plaintiffs to recover, and that it was for the defendants to show that it did not bring them within the terms of the agreement. Keni Chetty v. Veriappa Chetti, 4 Mad. Rep., 325.

24.—MINORITY AND GUARDIANSHIP.—(See LAW OF PERSONAL STATUS.)

The legal age of discretion of Hindus in India is uniformly sixteen years. Up to that age the father has an undoubted right to the custody of his children. Re Hemnauth Bose, 1 Hyde's Rep., 111.

A suit cannot be brought on behalf of a Hindu minor to secure his share in undivided family property, unless there is evidence of such malversation as will endanger the minor's interests if his share be not separately secured. Chokalingam Pillai v. Suamiyar Pillai, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 105.

The marriage of a Hindu minor is a legitimate cause of expense in regard to which his guardian can bind him, unless it is shown that the amount of the loan was extravagant for the purpose, considering the social or pecuniary circumstances of the minor, or that it was not duly applied and expended. Juggessur Sircar v. Nilambur Biswas, 4 W. R., 217.

Held that the paternal grandmother has the right to the guardianship of a Hindu minor, in preference to the step-mother. Held also, in the present case, that the paternal grandmother, with the assent of the nearest male relative, had power to dispose of the minor in marriage.

Semble,—In Act IX of 1861, "the Principal Civil Court of Original Jurisdiction in the district" means the Principal Court of Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction. A minor who is no party to the suit cannot appear by pleader. Maharanee Ram Bunsee Coomaree v. Maharanee Soobh Coomaree and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 193.

Held that Regulation V of 1827, Section 7, Clause 3, did not alter the Hindu law of minority, but only defined the period of limitation in cases of minority generally; and the term "minors" used in Section 12 of Act XIV of 1859 must be construed according to the law of the party in the case. Hair Mahedaji Joshi v. Vasudeo Moreshoor Joshi, 2 Bom. Rep., 344.

All acts of the guardian of a Hindu infant which are such as the infant might, if of age, reasonably and prudently do for himself, must be upheld when done for him by his guardian. Such a guardian may bind his ward by referring to a panchayat of their caste a question of customary partition.

Where a Sudra died leaving two wives, one with an only son and infant, and the other with two sons,—Held that the guardian of the infant might refer the question whether the deceased's estate should be divided according to Patni-bhaga or Putra-bhaga. Temmakal v. Sebbamal, 2 Mad. Rep., 47.

Under Section 3, Act XL of 1858, and under the Hindu law generally, a mother may ordinarily be guardian of her minor son, without either a certificate or a special order of Court. Ramdhon Doss and others v. Ram Ruttun Dutt, 10 W. R., 425.

If a person dealing with a Hindu representing himself to be the representative and manager of an undivided family, comprising infant members, can show that, after reasonable enquiry, he believed in good faith that the person so representing himself was entitled to act, and was acting for the family, and that the transaction entered into with him by such manager was entered into for some common family necessity, or for the benefit of the infants, such act of the manager is valid and binding on the minor members of the family. Trimbuck Anunt v. Gopalshet Bin Munhadshet Mahadoo, 1 Bom. Rep., 27.

In a suit to set aside sales made by a minor's guardians, on the ground that the sales were not justified by any recognized legal necessity, the onus is on the defendant to prove the necessity. Nature of proof sufficient to discharge such onus explained. Looloo Singh and others v. Rajender Laha, 8 W. R., 364.

According to Hindu law, a paternal grandmother has a preferential right over a stepmother to the guardianship of a minor.

The paternal grandmother, with the assent of the nearest male kinsman on the father's side has (in preference to the stepmother) the right to dispose of a minor in marriage. Maharanee Ram Bunsee Koonwaree v. Maharanee Soobh Koonwaree and others, 7 W. R., 321.

The Hindu law does not prohibit a father from appointing, by writing or by word, any other person than the mother to be the guardian of his minor children. A person who disputes the authority of another to act as his guardian, and repudiates the acts done by such guardian in that capacity, cannot take advantage of those acts so far only as they are beneficial to him. Soobah Brithe Lall Jha and others v. Soobah Doorgah Lall Jha and others, 7 W. R., 73.

Though by the Hindu law no one but the father while he is alive can give his daughter in marriage, yet the father can delegate his authority to another. Golamee Gopee Ghose v. Juggessur Ghose, 3 W. R., 193.

A koolin Brahmin is not so much the natural guardian of his daughter as her mother. The want of a guardian's consent will not invalidate a marriage otherwise legally contracted and performed with all the necessary ceremonies. Mudoosoodun Mookerjee v. Jadub Chunder Banerjea, 3 W. R., 194.

A minor brother's share in a joint family estate was held not liable under a sale advertisement which referred solely to the rights and interests of his elder brothers who did not represent him. Ram Lochun Shaha v. Unno Poorna Dossee, 7 W. R., 144.

Proximity of connection does not necessarily entitle a person to the office of guardian. A person out of caste is not a proper person to be the guardian of Hindu minors. Fuggoo Daye v. Ranah Daye, 4 W. R., Mis., 3.

Discussion as to the limit of minority of Hindus (who are not proprietors paying revenue to Government), and as to the proper construction of Section 26 of Act XL of 1858. Monsoor Ali v. Ramdyal, 3 W. R., 50.

Eighteen years is the age at which an heir-at-law attains majority. Abdool Hossein v. Luteefoonissa and others, 11 W. R., 235.

Eighteen years, and not sixteen, is the period fixed by law for a Hindu to attain his majority. Pormeshur Ojhâ v. Mussamut Goolbee and others, 11 W. R., 446.

According to the Bengal school, in all matters unconnected with the possession of estates under Government, fifteen years is the age of majority of male Hindus. Deobo Moyee Dossee v. Juggessur Hati, 1 W. R., 75.

In preference to rulings of the Bombay High Court, the High Court at Fort William held itself bound to follow a ruling of its own Full Bench, to the effect that the provision as to majority in Section 26, Act XL of 1858, applies though proceedings may not have been taken in the Civil Court for the care of the person or protection of the property of one (not being an European British subject) who has attained the age of eighteen years. Sarina Pershad Sein v. Dwarkanauth Rukhut, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 451.

A Hindu, domiciled with his family at Serampore, in the Zilla of Hoogly, died, leaving a will in which was the following direction:—"In order to look after the affairs, to conduct suits, and manage the debts and dues relative to my real and personal estates, my eldest son, H. C. G., who has attained the age of majority, remains executor, for my younger son, G. C. G. is an infant; but as my eldest sister, S. H. D., is prudent and sensible, all the affairs of the estates shall be under her superintendence; and my eldest son shall do all the acts according to her advice and direction. But when my younger son, G. C. G., will then come of age, both the brothers shall be competent personally to manage the affairs; at that time the advice and superintendence of my said sister shall not remain." G. C. G. after attaining the age of sixteen, but before he had reached the age of eighteen, applied for grant of probate of his father's will to himself, jointly with his brother, H. C. G., in respect of property in Calcutta. Held that he had not attained the age contemplated in his father's will at which he was to be joined in the executorship with his brother. Ganga Prasad Gossain, In the goods of, 5 B. L. R., 80.

The period of minority among Hindus, by the operation of Act XL of 1858, extends to eighteen years, as well within the original civil jurisdiction of the High Court, as within the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in the Mofussil, and that whether the father is alive and of full age or not. Jadunath Mitter v. Bolychaund Dutt, 7 B. L. R., 607.

A girl under sixteen years of age has not such a discretion as enables her, by giving her consent, to protect any one from the criminal consequences of inducing her to leave the protection of a lawful guardian; but where the return to the writ of habeas corpus stated that a girl was above the age of sixteen (though her mother stated her to be of the age of thirteen years and nine months), the Court held that she was of years of discretion to choose for herself under whose protection she would remain. Queen v. Vaughan, In the matter of, S. M. Ganesh Sundari Debi, 5 B. L. R., 418.

25.—MORTGAGE.

The same principle exists both in the English and the Hindu law, that the right of the mortgagor to redeem does not, in the absence of any circumstances or language indicating a contrary intention, arise any sooner than the right of the mortgagee to foreclose, and therefore a suit for redemption of a Hindu mortgage cannot be brought before the time fixed by the mortgage for the payment of the mortgage-money. Sakharam Narasimha Sardesai v. Vitto Lakha Gonda, heir of Vitto Gonda, deceased, and Rama, heir of Fatta Vith Gona, deceased, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 250; 2 Bom. Rep., 237.

A dhrislabandhaka, or Hindu instrument by which visible property is mortgaged, which names a time for payment of the money borrowed, and stipulates that on default the mortgagee shall be put into exclusive possession and enjoyment of the property, will not be treated strictly as a conditional sale, even though the instrument expressly provides that on default the transaction shall be deemed an outright sale, and in a suit by the mortgagee for possession the Court, in decreeing the right thereto, will give the mortgagor a day for redeeming. Venkata Reddi v. Parvati Ammal and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 460.

Where a plaintiff fails to show that a mortgage, created by certain persons as executrix and executors of a Hindu will, has been validly created by them in that capacity, the Court will, unless it is manifestly inequitable to do so, allow him to raise an issue that the mortgage was validly created by the parties in another character.

Held (per Markby, J.) that the executors of the will of a Hindu cannot, by virtue only of their character of executors, mortgage the estate of the testator, in the absence of any power, express or implied, contained in the will. Held, on appeal, that a creditor who purchases under an execution against the general assets of a testator's estate takes subject to a mortgage created in pursuance of a power contained in the will, and in a suit to foreclose the purchaser is rightly made a party. Though the payment of debts is a charge on the property of a testator, it is not a charge on any specific portion of that property. Nilkant Chatterjee v. Peari Mohan Dass, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 7; S. C., 11 W. R., O. C., 21.

26.—Partition.

Where there is a partition after the father's death between several brothers, some of whom are by one wife, some by another, and either wife survives at the time of partition, the property should be first divided between all the brothers, and the widow takes an equal share with her own sons of the whole portion allotted to them.

Following the decisions quoted by Sir F. Macnaughten, in his considerations of Hindu law, but doubting their propriety. Cally Churn Mullick v. Jonaya Dassee and others, 1 Ind., Jur., N. S., 284.

Under the Hindu law two things at least are necessary to constitute partition: the shares must be defined, and there must be distinct and independent enjoyment.

Whatever is acquired at the charge of the patrimony is subject to partition; but if the common stock is improved an equal share is ordained. Where a co-parcener, with comparatively small detriment to the joint estate, acquires any separate property by his own labour or capital, the property is nevertheless to be considered joint, although the acquirer gets a double share. Judoonath Tewaree v. Bishonath Tewaree, 9 W. R., 61.

An actual partition by metes and bounds is not necessary to render a division of undivided property complete. But when the members of an undivided family agree among themselves, with regard to particular property, that it shall henceforth be the subject of ownership in certain defined shares, then the character of undivided property and joint enjoyment is taken away from the subject-matter so agreed to be dealt with; and each member thenceforth has in the estate a definite and certain share which he may claim the right to receive and to enjoy in severalty, although the property itself has not been actually severed and divided. Appoovier v. Ramasubba Aiyan and others, 8 W. R., P. C., 1.

Where the members of an undivided Hindu family have divided a portion of the estate, and held their respective shares separately, such shares will be liable to the incidents attaching to separate estates, although the whole of the joint property has not been divided. A partition of joint property is valid as between the members of a Hindu family, although it has not been sanctioned by the Board of Revenue, it being shown that for several years after the partition the members of the family had separately enjoyed the shares which fell to them by the partition. Mussamut Hoolas Koonwer v. Man Singh, 4 Agra Rep., A. C., 37.

The doctrine that when, after a partition of a joint family estate, a portion of the estate remains undivided, the portion which remains undivided cannot afterwards be partitioned, refers to a partition made by a father amongst his sons and their co-heirs.

It does not refer to the case where a partition has been made by the joint owners amongst themselves. Sreemutty Shamasoondery Dassee and Sreemutty Bermomoye Dossee v. Kartick Churn Mittra, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 326.

Although there has been no actual partition by metes and bounds, a co-parcener holding an ascertained share in immoveable property is competent to alienate it without the consent of the other co-parceners. Hurdwar Singh and others v. Luchmun Singh and others, 3 Agra Rep., A. C., 42.

Following a ruling of the Privy Council, it was held that separate appropriation as well as separate holding and enjoyment of distinct shares are all that is necessary under the Hindu law of the Benares school to constitute a legal partition of a joint estate.

Every member of a joint undivided family has an indefeasible right to demand a partition of his own share. Musst. Deo Bunsee Kooer v. Dwarkanath and others, 10 W. R., 273.

Though actual partition by metes and bounds is not necessary to a separation between the members of a joint Hindu family, yet there must be some unequivocal act or declaration on the part of the family of their intention to separate. A suit by one member for a declaration of his right was held not to be a sufficient indication of such intention. Debee Persad v. Phool Rooru, 12 W. R., 510.

An act or declaration showing an intention on the part of any shareholder to hold his share separately, and to renounce all rights to the shares of his co-parceners, constitutes a complete severance or partition. Bulakee Lall v. Mussamut Indurputtee Kowar, 3 W. R., 41.

Separation in dwelling and food would give rise in Hindu law to a presumption of separation in estate. Jagan Kooer and others v. Rughoonundun Lall Sahoo and another, 10 W. R., 148.

Where there has been a general partition, but some of the property remains joint, the widow of a deceased brother will not participate in the undivided residue. Mussamut Badamoo Koowar v. Wuzeer Singh and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 144.

Where there has been an agreement as to division of property, the Court will hold it to apply to property subsequently acquired accruing from the ancestral estate. Maharanee Inderjeet Kooar v. Mussamut Isnudh Kooar and Soonneet Koonwar, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 141.

A suit on behalf of a minor for partition will lie, if the interests of the minor are likely to be prejudiced by the property being left in the hands of the co-parceners from whom it is sought to recover it. Kamakshi Ammal v. Chindambara Reddi, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 94.

According to the Mitakshara, an agreement for a partition, although not carried out by actual partition of the property, is sufficient to constitute a division of the family, so as to entitle the widow of a deceased brother to succeed to his share of the ancestral property in preference to the surviving brothers.

The fact of the family having separate house and field is, according to the Mitakshara, sufficient evidence of partition.

The onus of proving re-union is upon the party pleading that there has been a re-union after partition. Raja Suraneni Venkata Gopala Narasihma Roy Bahadur v. Raja Suraneni Lakshmi Venkama Roy, 3 B. L. R., P. C., 41; S. C., 12 W. R., P. C., 40.

A partition can take place notwithstanding the minority of some of the co-parceners, and it is not necessary for the application of this rule that there should be more than one adult member in the family, or that they should be brothers only. The law of partition applies equally to all joint families, whatever the number of the members or the nature of their relationship. Mussamut Deobunsee Kooer v. Dwarkanath and others, 10 W. R., 273.

In cases of joint ownership each party has a right to demand and enforce partition. A shareholder of a putnee talook can claim and enforce a partition of such putnee talook as against his co-sharers, but such partition would not affect the liabilities of the parties under their contract with the zemindar.

The costs of the suit as well as for affecting a partition must be borne by each party, as such expenses are not caused by any wrongful act of either party, but by the nature of their tenancy. Ranee Samasundari Debi v. Jardine, Skinner, and Co., 3 B. L. R., Ap., 130.

In a suit brought by a son against his father to compel a division of moveable and immoveable property inherited by the latter from his paternal cousin,—Held that as regards the jewels of which plaintiff required an account the plaintiff had no right of complaint, although his father, the defendant, had made an unjust and partial distribution of them. Held also that the suit to enforce a division of the immoveable property could not be maintained, inasmuch as neither the plaintiff nor the defendant acquired any right to such property by birth. Rayadur Nalalambi Chetti v. Rayadar Mukunda Chetti, 3 Mad. Rep., O. J., 455.

A member of an undivided family brought a suit for partition against his father, the managing member, and eight others, of whom second, third, and fourth defendants were plaintiff's infant brothers, and obtained a decree. The Judge proceeded to ascertain the amount of the plaintiff's share in the following manner. He assessed what he considered to be the sum received by the first defendant from the estate, deducted from that sum what he considered should have been the gross expenditure of the defendant, and decreed delivery by the defendant of one-fifth of the remainder. Held that such a decree is erroneous. Tara Chand v. Rub Ram, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 177.

Under the Mitakshara law there may be a partition in estate without any actual division of the lands into parcels, and allotment of those parcels to the different sharers to be held by them in severalty. Mussamut Josoda Koonwar v. Gourie Byjonath Soae Singh, 6 W. R., 139, and Lala Sheerpersaud Mussamut v. Akoonjoo Koonwar, W. R., 488.

According to Hindu law, the declaration of an intention to become divided in estate amounts to a valid separation, though not immediately perfected by an actual partition of the estate by metes and bounds. Mussamut Vato Koer and others v. Rowshun Singh and others, 8 W. R., 82.

An arrangement contained in a deed duly executed by the members of a joint Hindu family, to effect a separation of the property, is sufficient primâ-facie evidence of a valid separation under Hindu law, and in such a case an actual division by metes and bounds is not necessary. Kulhonath Dass v. Mewah Lall and others, 8 W. R., 302.

According to the Mitakshara, the mother, or the grandmother, is entitled to a share when sons or grandsons divide the family estate between themselves; but she cannot be recognized as the owner of such share until the division is actually made; she has no pre-existing right in the estate, except a right of maintenance. Juddoonath Tewaree v. Bissonath Tewaree, 9 W. R., 61.

Suit by a widow to recover her husband's share, whom she alleged to be a divided member of a Hindu family, under an agreement to the following effect: "When we lived together, a disagreement arising amongst females, we have divided. . . Thus we shall from this date divide and enjoy the income of the land. When the moiety of lands belonging to our uncle S. in the said three villages shall be equally divided, we shall also share our moiety equally, and obtain separate pottahs. . . We hold no pecuniary concern."

Held that when the members of an undivided family agree among themselves with regard to the particular property that it shall thenceforth be the subject of ownership in certain defined shares, each member has thenceforth a definite and certain share in the estate, which he may claim the right to receive and to enjoy in severalty, although the property itself has not been actually divided. Narayan Ayyar v. Lakshmi Ammal, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 280.

A., one of four brothers in joint possession of ancestral property, separates himself in food, worship, and estate, leaving his three brothers jointly possessed of their undivided three-fourth shares. A. dies unassociated, leaving a son and heir, B. The three brothers continue and die associated, two without heirs, and a third leaving a son and heir, C. B. has no claim to any part of the undivided three-fourth shares as against C., who takes the whole absolutely. Jadub Chunder Ghose and another v. Benodbehary Ghose, 1 Hyde's Rep., 214.

In a suit for division of a village between members of the same family, the defendant alleged that a former division relied upon by the plaintiff was merely nominal, and never intended to be carried out, and also that the village was in 1839 granted to his father for his sole use, and both these allegations were found against defendant, who appealed on the ground that the village, which is an inam, was granted to defendant for his sole use in 1857 on the death of his father.

Held that the grant to defendant was not a new grant, and was subject to the rights of the other members of the family.

Per Innes, J.—The defendant not having been prejudiced by the circumstance that no issue was framed upon the question whether a fresh grant was made to defendants, the decision of the lower Court ought to be confirmed. Nattam Venkatarulnum v. Nattara Ramaiya, 2 Mad. Rep.

Suit by plaintiff to recover from his brother's widow, the defendant, one and a quarter share at the Mailaveram Mutta, which he alleged to have been wrongfully delivered by the revenue authorities to the defendant, in accordance with a certificate granted by the Civil Court of Masulipatam. Plaintiff alleged that he was undivided, although there was an agreement for a division. Defendant pleaded that there was a complete division under the agreement, and that her husband after division had made a will bequeathing to her what the plaintiff now claimed. The Civil Judge found separate residence, and, on the authority of paras. 282, 283, and 284 of Mr. Justice Strange's Manual, decided that the family was undivided. Held, on appeal, that the agreement partially acted upon and not denied is conclusive evidence of the division previously come to by mutual consent; that, whether the property was actually divided or undivided, the family was divided, and the brothers became capable of contracting, and did contract; and that the right to sue upon the contract clearly survived to the defendant, who must have recovered; that she had, therefore, a perfectly valid defence to the present action. Rajah Surennetty Lackshmi v. Rajah Surennetty Venkata, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 40.

An actual partition by metes and bounds is not necessary to render a division of undivided property complete. According to Hindu law, there is a coparcenership between the different members of a united family, and survivorship follows upon it. Lalla Mohabeer Pershad and others v. Mussamut Kundun Koowar, 8 W. R., 116.

The proprietary right to a share in an undivided estate which includes and carries with it a right to claim and enforce a partition of that share, must be a right of an absolute and unlimited nature, and does not belong to a Hindu widow who has been placed in possession of her deceased husband's share for her maintenance; consequently, where the widow is not an absolute proprietor, but simply an assignee of the profits for a maintenance, she cannot claim partition of the share so assigned. Bhoop Singh v. Mussamut Phool Kower, 3 Agra Rep., 168.

A grandson may, by Hindu law, irrespective of all circumstances, maintain a suit against his grandfather for compulsory division of an ancestral family property. Nagalinga Mudali v. Subbiranya Mudali, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 77.

The ordinary gains of science are divisible when such science has been imparted at the family expense and acquired while receiving a family maintenance, secus, where the science has been imparted at the expense of persons not members of the learner's family. Chalakonda Alason v. Chalakonda Ratnachalan, 2 Mad. Rep., 56.

A division of property took place in 1837 between A., the mother and guardian of the plaintiff, and B., the husband of two childless widows, who became defendants in a suit to recover possession of the property on the ground that the division did not bind the plaintiff. Held that there being no proof of fraud, nor that undue advantage was taken of plaintiff's minority, and in the absence of proof of gross inequality in the distribution of the property, the division was valid and binding upon the plaintiff. Nallapa v. Belammal, 2 Mad. Rep., 182.

Where a division has taken place amongst the members of a Hindu family, one of whom is a minor, the circumstance that the father and minor continue to live together, and that their shares become mixed, does not conclusively constitute a state of re-union between the father and the minor, but is evidentiary matter only to prove the re-union. Kuta Bully Veraya v. Kuta Chandapa Voothamula, 2 Mad. Rep., 235.

Where a widow sued to recover, from the brothers of her deceased husband, a share of property which remained undivided at his death, a division of part of the family property having taken place during the lifetime of the husband,—Held that the plaintiff had no right to recover the property which was actually undivided at the death of her husband. Timmi Reddy v. Achemma, 2 Mad. Rep., 325.

When a suit was brought for a division of family property twelve years after the death of the head of the family,—Held that the suit was not barred by Clause 13, Section 1 of Act XIV of 1859. Subhaiyar v. Sankara Subhaiyar, 2 Mad. Rep., 347.

In a suit for division of a village between members of the same family, the defendant alleged that a formal division relied upon by the plaintiff was merely nominal, and never intended to be carried out; and also that the village was in 1836 granted to his father for his sole use, and both these allegations were found against defendant, who appealed on the ground that the village, which is inam, was granted to defendant for his sole use in 1857, on the death of his father.

Held that the grant to defendant was not a new grant, and was subject to the rights of the other members of the family. Nittan Vencataratnum v. Nattam Ramaiya, 2 Mad. Rep., 470.

A member of a Hindu family is not barred from his right of requiring a partition of the family property, unless his conduct has led the other members of the family into a reasonable and well-grounded supposition that there has been a separation on his part, and an acceptance of a defined portion of the property instead of his family share. Sreenath Dutt v. Nund Kishore Bose, 3 W. R., 61.

The general rule of Hindu law is, that if a man die separate in estate from his kinsmen without leaving male issue or a widow surviving him, his daughters inherit his moveable and immoveable property. An alleged custom to the contrary with respect to any particular kind of property must be proved by ample and satisfactory evidence before the Courts will admit it as established.

Although Hindu law presumes joint tenancy to be the primary state of a Hindu family, and the general rule is that the burden of proof that partition has taken place lies upon him who asserts it, there are exceptions to this general rule, e.g., when it is admitted or proved that property in dispute was not acquired by the use of patrimonial funds, the party alleging such property to be joint must prove his averment. So too when it is admitted or proved that partition has already taken place, the presumption is that it has been a complete partition, and it lies upon a person alleging that family property, in the exclusive possession of one of the members of the family after such partition, is liable to be partitioned, to make good his allegation by proof. Narayan Bubaji et al. v. Nana Mamhar et al., 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 155.

A member of an undivided family cannot sue his co-sharers for his share in a single undivided field, portion of the family property. He must sue for a general partition of all the property liable to partition. Nánábhái Vallabdhas v. Náthábhái Haribhái, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 46.

In a suit to obtain by partition half of an ancestral dwelling-house, in which defendant was living, the latter averred that the house in which plaintiff was living was likewise ancestral, and that, in a partition between them, the houses which they respectively occupied had fallen to their respective shares. Plaintiff had replied that his house was not ancestral, but had been purchased out of his own funds. Held that it was necessary to inquire into plaintiff's title under the whole circumstances of the case, and when it appeared that he was in separate occupation of a portion of the ancestral dwelling-house, whether he had a right to the partition of the one without bringing the other into hotchpot. Ram Lochun Pattuck v. Rughoobur Dyal, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 111.

Two co-heiresses, in joint possession of property by Hindu law, are in the nature of co-parceners, and one of them can enforce partition against the other notwithstanding the limited character of their tenure, and although such partition is not binding on the reversioners. A person suing for partition is not obliged to include in his suit the whole of the property, but may confine his suit to the portion of the property which he is desirous of having partitioned; therefore where, in a suit for partition, it was shown that some portion of the property was out of the jurisdiction of the Court, objections that fresh parties would be necessary if the mofussil property were included, and that thereupon the suit had not been properly brought, and that the leave of the Court had not been obtained previous to bringing the suit, were overruled. Srimati Padmamani Dasi v. Srimati Jugudumba Dassee, 6 B. L. R., 134.

The acts of different members of a family in allowing separate portions of the banks of a tank to be held severally for so long a time that no one can tell when such possession began, constitute a separation of the land which cannot be disturbed at the instance of one member without proof that he has jointly or otherwise held possession of the lands in question within twelve years. Surbessur Methoor v. Gossain Doss Methoor, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 210.

Property acquired by a Hindu while drawing an income from his family is liable to partition, and the quality of the fund cannot be altered by the mode of its investment. Bhagavat Panday v. Ramashee Shaiya Panday, 4 Mad. Rep., 5.

By a deed of sharakatnama the members of a Hindu family, governed by the Mitakshara law, declared that each of the members was entitled to a definite fractional part of the whole estate. Held that this was not sufficient to constitute a valid partition according to the Hindu law. Appoovier v. Rama Subba Aiyan and Raja Suraneni Senkata Gopala; Narashima Roy v. Ruja Suraneni Lakshmi Venkama Roy, distinguished. In the matter of the petition of Mussamut Puljhari Koer, 8 B. L. R., 385.

In ascertaining whether property once joint has become divided and separate, regard must be had to the act and intentions of the co-sharers, but when the character of the property has once been ascertained the law fixes the course of succession.

A partition between surviving co-sharers and the widow of a deceased co-sharer may operate as a complete severance of the joint property. Ram Pershad v Chaineram, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 11.

In a suit to recover a share of family property, the Civil Judge found that the plaintiff in 1856 waived his right to a share of the family property by accepting a small portion, and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff shared with other members of the family the belief that by established family usage the property was impartible and passed at each succession to the eldest of the co-heirs according to the ordinary law, the other co-heirs being entitled only to a portion for maintenance. Under that belief the plaintiff accepted the allotment made to him in 1856 by the then eldest co-heir of a smaller portion of the property than he would be entitled to, and a partition as a sufficient provision for his maintenance. The plaintiff's younger brother instituted a suit in 1861, and succeeded in resisting the alleged custom, and obtained a decree for his full share. Held (reversing the decision of a Civil Judge) that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief asked for, it not appearing from the arrangement of 1856 that the parties intended the allotment to be in satisfaction and discharge of every right of the plaintiff as a co-parcener. Subbiem Pillay v. Arnachala Irungol Pillay and others, 5 Mad. Rep., 444.

A suit for a partition of family property was, upon the death of the plaintiff, revived on behalf of his minor sons with the permission of the Court of first instance and a decree for a partition given. The Appellate Court reversed the decree, upon the ground that as a partition can be enforced on behalf of minors only when it can be proved to be necessary for the protection of the minors' interest, such suit did not survive to minors. Held by the High Court, that the Court of first instance having allowed the suit to be revived, considering that it had been brought on grounds which entitled the minors to the partition, the competency of the plaintiff to proceed with the suit was not open to objection in the lower Appellate Court. Parvathi v. Munjayakarantha, 5 Mad. Rep., 193.

The plaintiff's father, a member of an undivided Hindu family, signed an agreement by which he agreed to accept a provision in satisfaction of his claim for maintenance. The agreement was signed by reason of a mistaken belief entertained by the plaintiff's father and the other members of the family that there existed an established custom in the family which rendered the property indivisible. Held, in a suit by the plaintiff for a partition of the family property liable to partition, that the agreement having been come to under a mutual mistake, it was no bar to the plaintiff maintaining the suit, for it would not have prejudiced the right to the plaintiff's father if he had chosen to insist upon a partition. Soobramania Telaver and others v. Sokha Telaver and others, 5 Mad. Rep., 437.

When a family is joint it cannot be presumed that all the property in the hands of any member is joint. It is inconsistent with the strict principles laid down in the Full Bench decision of the 30th July, 1869, for a member of a Mitakshara family to sue separately for his share of the joint family property. Quære,—Is a mere signification of intention on the part of a member of a joint Hindu family sufficient to constitute a separation without an actual partition by metes and bounds? Suderburt Pershad Sahoo v. Lotf Ali Khan; Mussamut Phoolbas Kooer v. Lall Juggessur Sahi, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 340.

In a suit by the mother and guardian of one of two nephews to set aside a hibbanamah under which defendant, who was the wife of their uncle, claimed to hold separately one-third of the property in dispute, it having been objected that the property being, according to plaintiff's allegation, joint and undivided, the suit should have been on the part of all the co-sharers interested, plaintiff was permitted in appeal to have herself placed on the record as plaintiff in her double capacity of guardian of both the infants. The principle contained in the judgment of the Privy Council in the case of Appoovier v. Rama Subha Aiyan, namely, that there might be among the members of an undivided Hindu family an operative division of title without a corresponding division of the subject-matter to which that title relates, was held not to apply in a case where there was no deed or agreement between the parties contemplating the subject of separation, but only vague expressions and statements contained in petitions not directed to that particular subject. Mooktakeshee Debee v. Oomabutty, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 31.

27.—Presumption of Death.

A., a Hindu infant, disappeared and had not been since heard of. In a suit brought within twelve years from the date of his disappearance, by the next heir, for a declaration of right, and alleging waste by those in possession, and an apprehension that if the infant should not return within twelve years he (the plaintiff) would be barred by the Law of Limitation,—Held that there was no cause of action. Guru Das Nag v. Mat-lul Nag, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 468, and 6 B. L. R., Ap., 16.

The rule of English law, that a period of seven years' absence without tidings is sufficient to raise a presumption of death, cannot be applied in the case of a Hindu. The Hindu law has a rule of its own, requiring the lapse of twelve years before an absent person of whom nothing has been heard can be presumed to be dead. A testator by will left certain property to an idol and appointed a shebait. The person so appointed died without taking charge of the property or filling the office, and the lands remained in the possession of testator's family. Held that this property would follow the course of the other properties left by testator, and be divided with them among the devises under the will. Saroda Soondori Debi v. Gobindmani, alias Braga Soondori Debi, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 137.

Where a Hindu disappears, and is not heard of for a length of time, no person can succeed to his property, as heir, until the expiry of twelve years from the date on which he was last heard of. Janmajoy Muzumdar v. Keshab Lall Ghose and another, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 134; 10 W. R., 484.

28.—Priests.

A Hindu priest cannot sue in respect of the withholding of religious observances due to his sacred rank, but unconnected with any special office held by him, although the non-performance of such observances may have caused him some ascertainable pecuniary loss. Striman Sada Gopa v. Krista Tattachariyar and another, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 307.

The obligation upon jujmans to employ a particular purohit to perform the ceremonies at the burning of Hindu bodies may be a matter of conscience, and not one which a Court of law can enforce; but the question of the right to enjoy the joint profits accruing from the performance of such ceremonies is cognizable by a Civil Court. Becharam Banerjee v. Sreemuttee Thakooree, 10 W. R., 115.

In a suit for "Huk Purohitee,"—Held that each "Jujman" has a right to select his own priest, and no suit to enforce such right would lie in the Civil Court. Beharee Lall v. Baboo and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 80.

A suit will lie against priests for a certain share of their earnings, if brought on the ground of partnership or of contract express or implied. But in the absence of such partnership or contract such a suit will not lie, even against a priest newly appointed by the jujman, simply on the ground of hereditary right to perform the ceremonies of a particular family, such right not being enforceable at law. Muggoo Pandean v. Ram Dyal Tewrua, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 531.

Where a priest wrongfully officiates for another, and receives fees, he is bound to account for them to the rightful priest where such fees are by custom attached to the office. The sale of a hereditary priestly office will be upheld where the purchasers are the next in succession from the vendor to such office. Semble,—That a hereditary priestly office descends in default of males through females.

Sitarambhat et al. v. Sitaram Gunesh et al., 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 250.

In a suit between Hindus, the office of hereditary priest to a temple, though not annexed to, or held by virtue of, the ownership of any land, yet being by that law classed as immoveable property, should be held to be immoveable property within the meaning of Clause 12 of Section 1 of the Limitation Act. Krishnabhat bin Hirajanji v. Kapabhat bin Mahalbhat, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 137.

When a religious office with lands attached thereto is held by several gurus in succession, each holding such office by virtue of an appointment made on his accession, no proprietary right can be acquired by such gurus in the office or lands against the patron or owner, by prescription, as such a case does not come within the meaning of Clause 1 of Section 1 of Regulation V of 1827. Tvatat Svomi v. Andanya Charanti, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 132.

A Birth Moha Brahminy or right to officiate at funeral ceremonies is incapable of transfer. Jhummun Pandey v. Dinnonauth Pandey, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 171.

The owner of an idol is entitled to appoint anybody he likes to perform its poojah; the mere fact of a party and his ancestors having done so for a long period creates no right in his favour. Maharanee Indurjeet Kooer v. Chundeeman Misser, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 99.

Quære,—Whether, according to Hindu law, a woman can succeed to a priestly office? Jay Deb Surmah v. Huroputty Surmah, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 282.

The plaintiffs sued the defendants in the Civil Court for a declaration of their right by contract to share in the ministrations at a certain ghat, and to recover a sum of Rs. 75-9 as their share, under the contract, of moneys received by the defendants at that ghat. Held the suit would lie. Magju Pandean v. Ramdyal Tewari, 8 B. L. R., 50; and see 15 S. W. R., C. R., 531.

A Hindu priest was charged with knowingly and wilfully solemnizing a marriage between two persons, one of whom professed the Christian religion, the said priest not being duly authorized under Section 6 of Act V of 1865, an offence punishable under Section 56 of the same Act.

The Session Judge discharged the accused without trial on the ground that the enactment in question was inapplicable to the celebration of a marriage according to the Hindu form by a Hindu priest, though one of the contracting parties was a Christian convert. Held that this view of the law was erroneous, and that the accused was primâ-facie liable under Section 56 of the Act. 6 Mad. Rep., Rul. XX.

The plaintiffs, members of the Tengalai sect of Brahmins, sued the defendants, the trustees of a temple at Cenjeveram, for the recovery of the money value of certain holy cakes which they alleged they were entitled to receive from the defendants for commencing the recital of a Sanscrit verse and reading a certain Tamil chant, which offices they (plaintiffs) had the hereditary right of performing in the said temple. The Moonsiff decreed in favour of some of the plaintiffs. The defendants appealed. The Civil Judge dismissed the suit on the ground that the question incidentally involved was one of a religious character. Held that the Civil Judge was wrong; that the claim was for a specific pecuniary benefit, to which plaintiffs declared themselves entitled on condition of reciting certain hymns; and that undoubtedly the right to such benefits is a question which the Courts are bound to entertain. Narasimma Chériár and eleven others v. Sri Kristna Tatu Chériár, 6 Mad. Rep., 449.

Plaintiff sued to establish his right to receive certain honors in a temple as appertaining to his office of officiating priest of the temple, and to recover damages for the invasion of his right. In a former suit between the predecessor and the plaintiff and the first defendant, the claim to sit at the right side of the idol at festivals was admitted, but the right to receive a cake on the same occasion was disallowed. Held that the claim of the plaintiff, so far as it sought to establish the plaintiff's right, was res judicata. Held also that the suit of the plaintiff to recover damages for the invasion of the right of the plaintiff appertaining to an office in the temple was one which it was competent to the Civil Courts to entertain. Archukam Srinivasa Dikshatula v. Helayagiry Anantha Churlee, 4 Mad. Rep., 349.

29.—Recovered Property.

The Hindu law on the subject of "recovered" property applies to cases in which the property has passed from the family to strangers, and has been held by them adversely to the family, and not to cases where the property has been held by one claiming (though unfoundedly) to be a member of the family.

Merely obtaining a decree for possession is not "recovering" the property. "Recovery," if not made with the privity of the co-heir, must at least be bonâ fide, and not in fraud or by anticipation of the intentions of the co-heir. Bissessur Chuckerbutty v. Seetul Chunder Chuckerbutty, 9 W. R., 69.

The Court declined to extend to all the remote branches of a Hindu family separate in mess and estate, and having no common interests like those of brothers, the doctrine laid down in a solitary case in which an elder brother, who recovered certain property by his own money and labour, was awarded two-thirds of the property, and the younger brother obtained only one-third. Bisheswar Chakravrati and others v. Shitul Chundra Chakravrati, 8 W. R., 13.

The principle of the Mitakshara, law that if a father recover ancestral property which had been taken away by a stranger and not recovered by the grandfather, he need not share it against his inclination with his sons, was held to apply à fortiori where the property would have been irrevocably lost to the family, but was repurchased by a member who was at the time solely entitled, and who advanced the money out of his self-acquired property. Bolakee Sahoo v. The Court of Wards, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 34.

30.—Religious Endowments.—(See Miscellaneous Doctrines of Law and Equity.)

In a suit by the widow of one of the descendants of the grantee of a varshasan annual allowance paid from the Government treasury for the performance of religious service in a Hindu temple to recover arrears due to her husband's branch of the family from another descendant who had received the whole stipend; and where it was found by the Court below that, by the usage of the family, the duties of the office had been performed in rotation, and the stipend distributed amongst the descendants of the grantee in certain fixed portions,—Held that it was not competent to the defendant (the special appellant) to raise the question of the non-divisibility of the varshasan.

Held also that this was not a suit for money due on a contract or "for personal property or otherwise," within the meaning of Section 6 of Act XI of 1865 cognizable by a Court of Small Causes in the mofussil.

Quære,—Whether the appropriation of an annuity which is in the nature of religious endowment as private property is justified by Hindu law. Quære,—Whether a Hindu female is competent to perform either in person or vicariously the services for the maintenance of which a religious endowment has been granted. Keshavbhat v. Bhagirathibia, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 75.

A woman who has given muntros which have been accepted, and was nominated by her deceased husband to be adhikaree, is not prevented by the Hindu law from being so.

Vyavasthas need not be called for, nor local testimony relied on, to prove the doctrines of Hindu law. Puran Narain Dutt v. Kasheessuree Dossee, 3 W. R., 180.

When a Hindu ancestor makes no endowment or trust for the support of the family idols, no legal obligation rests on his descendants to support the idols, nor can any suit for contribution lie against any of them for the expenses of the idols. Sham Lall Set v. Huro Soonduree Goopta, 5 W. R., 29.

The right of worship of an idol, being the joint property of the members of the family of the endower, cannot be transferred to a third party, a stranger to the family, so as to endure beyond the life of the assignor. Ukoor Dass v. Chunder Sekhur Dass, 3 W. R., 152.

A mohunt by his will appointed L. D., his spiritual brother, to be his successor, and after making such appointment his will thus continued: "Amongst all my disciples I think Greedharee is a little intelligent and clever, but of younger age than befits a mohunt. Should he receive instruction and learn the duties of mohunt under your guidance he might probably be competent. Wherefore I direct that you will keep Greedharee Dass with you, and initiate him well in the duties of a mohunt, and when you feel yourself incapable of conducting the business as above you can appoint Greedharee Dass as mohunt in your place, and not otherwise." Held, first, that a mohunt may appoint a spiritual brother, and L. D. being a spiritual brother, the appointment was valid, and he was entitled to succeed upon the testator's death. Secondly, That the direction for appointing Greedharee did not of itself vest the mohuntship in Greedharee, but that the intention of the testator was that L. D. should not appoint him if he should turn out to be in his opinion incompetent. Thirdly, That the testator had no power to attach any such conditions to the interest his appointee should enjoy in the mohunt. For a person having a fee simple in an estate, with the power of appointing to the succession, has no right to annex to it conditions which the person who gave him the power of appointment never gave the power to annex. In the absence of such power, therefore, a mohunt who once nominates his successor has no right to give directions to his successor, when his turn to nominate comes, as to whom he should nominate. Fourthly, That the testator having no power to give any directions as to the person who should be L. D.'s successor, L. D. was entitled, after he had succeeded to the guddee, to appoint as his successor a person other than Greedharee. Fifthly, That even, if by custom a power to appoint two mohunts in succession had been established, still under the words of the will a discretion would have been left to L. D. in the choice of his successor, and he would not have been bound to appoint Greedharee. It seems that in a suit for the recovery of an elective mohuntship to which the plaintiff claims to be mohunt, but does not show that he was elected, but merely that the defendant was not elected or was irregularly elected, the Court ought to dismiss the suit, and has no jurisdiction to direct a new election.

The period of limitation prescribed by Act XIV of 1859, Section 1, Clause 5, in the case of suits to alter or set aside summary decisions and orders of any of the Civil Courts not established by Royal Charter, when such suit is maintainable, namely, "the period of one year from the date of the final decision award or order in the case," applies to the grant of a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860. It also applies to an order made under Act XIX of 1841, the Official Trustee Act, refusing to put the applicant in the possession of property as mohunt. Greedharee Dass v. Nundkishore Dutt, Mohunt, Marsh., 573; and see W. R. (1864), P. C., 25.

In 1801 A., the shebait and proprietor of the guddee of a debsheba at K., alienated part of the land by deed of gift to B., for the purpose of founding a sheba at C., which was accordingly done. In 1823 the then shebait of the debsheba of K. instituted a suit for the recovery of the alienated lands against the then shebait of the sheba at C., and in that suit it was declared that the sheba was independent of the debsheba, and thus the plaintiff was referred to a regular suit. In 1861 the then shebait of the debsheba brought a suit for recovery of the lands against the then shebait of the sheba. Held, first, that the suit not having been instituted until after the lapse of more than twelve years from the plaintiff's succession to the shebait, was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Secondly, that the decree in the former suit operated as an estoppel against the plaintiff.

Semble,—That the Statute of Limitations barred the suit twelve years after the death of A. Krishnanund Ashem Dundy v. Nurshingh Dass Byragee, Marsh., 485.

In a contest between three trustees or managers of an endowment, each entitled to a third share in the profits of the property, if one of them withdraws from the contest, his share is held to have been relinquished in favour of the remaining partners, and to have merged in the general account to be rendered by the trustees or managers. Buzl Ruhim

v. Moonshee Lutafut Hossein; Mussamut Khodejoonissa Bibee v. Moonshee Lutafut Hossein, W. R., 1864, 171.

The paid managers of the affairs of a pagoda have no power as such to encumber the pagoda property, or to settle large outstanding demands against it.

Persons dealing with such managers are bound to enquire into the extent of their authority. Sambanda Mudaliyar v. Nanasambandapandara and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 298.

The Civil Courts will recognize and enforce the rights of persons holding offices connected with the management and regulation of pagodas; and if the holder of such an office were entitled to remuneration for his services in the way of salary or otherwise, he would have a civil right entitling him to maintain a suit, if that remuneration were improperly withheld. Striman Sadagopa v. Kristna Tattachariyar and another, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 307.

A shebait is in the position of trustee for the founder, and cannot create permanent encumbrances to the injury of the endowed property. No prescription derived from the trustee can in such cases run against the heirs and representatives of the founder. Prosunno Moyee Dossee v. Koonjo Beharee Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, 157.

A judgment-debtor's right as sebait to perform the service of an idol cannot be sold in execution of a decree; nor can his right to the surplus profits of the sheba be sold so long as that right is unascertained and uncertain. Jugger Nath Roy Chowdhry v. Kishen Persaud Surma, alias Raja Baboo, 7 W. R., 266.

Where the whole of the profits are not devoted to religious purposes, but the land is a heritable property burdened with a trust, e.g., the keeping up of a saint's tomb, it may be alienated subject to the trust. Futtoo Bibee v. Bhurrutlall Bhukut, 10 W. R., Cr., 299.

The case of a person alienating property which he holds as shebait of an idol is analogous to that of a Hindu widow alienating ancestral property, and the question as regards the power of a shebait to grant a putnee of a dewuttur land is whether, looking to all the circumstances of the case, the alienation was a prudent and wise act in respect of the purposes for which he was shebait; and in estimating the validity of a purchase of the putnee rights, it ought to be considered whether the purchasers satisfied themselves as far as they could that there was a fair and sufficient ground of necessity for the alienation. Juggeshur Buttobyal v. Rajah Roodro Narain Roy, 12 W. R., 299.

The Hindu law does not declare that the priest who performs the shradh, however temporary his incumbency may be, is entitled to the land endowed in consideration of the continuous performance of the recurring ceremonies of shradh and other rites for the spiritual benefit of the donor. Ram Chunder Chuckerbutty and another v. Gooroo Churn Chuckerbutty, 6 W. R., 305.

Under the Hindu law, places of worship and sacrifice are not divisible. The parties can enjoy their turn of worship, unless they can agree to a joint worship; and any infringement of the right to a turn in the worship can be redressed by a suit. Anand Moyee Chowdhrain and others v. Boykantnath Roy, 8 W. R., 193.

An ascetic, a mere life-tenant, cannot alter the succession to an endowment belonging to ascetics, by an act of his own in connection with the status under which he originally acquired the trust. Mohunt Rumun Doss v. Mohunt Ashbul Doss, 1 W. R., 160.

A Hindu widow, together with the next heir, joined in assigning to the defendant a dewutter estate, in consideration of the defendant conducting, at his own cost, proceedings for the ejection of Brahmins and Banians then in occupation as poojaries to conduct the worship of the idols; and upon the condition that he should thereafter conduct such worship, and out of the proceeds and offerings retain three-fourths for his own purposes and for hospitality, and pay the remaining fourth for the maintenance of the widow and the heir. Held that the assignment was valid, the purpose for which the lands were dedicated being provided for; and that although the transaction amounted to champerty, that was no ground for treating it as invalid. An assignment between Hindus of property the subject-matter of litigation, on conditions which constitute champerty, is not on that ground invalid. Jadubindukarree v. Lukhinath Geru Odhi and others, Marsh., 303.

The profits of a debutter mehal may be assigned so long as the deb seba is duly kept up. Maharanee Shibbessuree Dabea v. J. Meekwith, 3 W. R., Act X R., 152.

Land granted to an idol cannot be held to be debutter, unless it is found to be ancient hereditary debutter, publicly assigned as such prior to the donor's incumbency. Soshikishore Bundopodhya v. Ranee Chooramonee Putto Mohadabee, W. R., 1864, 107.

In a suit by the Bhukuts of the Komolabari Shaster in Assam for confirmation of their rights in that endowment and restoration of possession thereof, it was held that the plaintiffs had failed to make out their title; that by the original grant of Rajah Luckee Singh inscribed on a copper plate, the management of the debutter property was entrusted to the Odhikaree, over whom the Shormoho or general body of bhukuts have no control, either in respect to his duties as the religious head of the Komolabari Shaster or in the management of its revenues.

Held that the Odhikaree cannot turn the Bhukuts out of the Shaster without just cause. Dooteeram Surma Dossee v. Luckee Kant Mossamee, 12 W. R., 425.

The right of one of several co-sharers in an endowment to recover possession of the land from which he has been ousted by the other co-sharers, is a personal one, and does not descend to his heirs. A decree for that purpose obtained by him, if not executed by him in his lifetime, will become infructuous after his death. His widow, however, can recover in a regular suit whatever sums he paid out of his own funds for keeping up the service of the idols. Radha Jeebun Mustofee v. Tara Monee Dossee, 3 W. R., Mis., 25.

When a decree declares that whatever right A. has in a dewuttur property is to be sold in execution, it may be sold though A. holds the property only as a shebait. Prannath Paurey v. Sree Mongula Debea, 5 W. R., 176.

When a plaintiff and defendant are jointly entitled to the profits from an idol in the defendant's temple, and the plaintiff is obstructed by the defendant in the use and worship of the idol, the plaintiff may claim to have the idol removed to his own house during the period he is entitled to the profits of it. Dwarkanath Roy v. Jannobee Chowdhrain, 4 W. When there has been no direct endowment to support the worship of the family idol, Hindu usage and custom, although it would create a moral obligation, such obligation will not be held as having any legal operation. Shamloll Sein v. Hurosoondry Gooptea, 1 Ind. Jur., 36.

Devise upon trust for the use of a Thakoor, with direction that the wife, daughter, and daughter-in-law of testator be allowed to live in the house for their lives, and perform the worship of the idol, with limitation over to others on the decease of the survivors of them, and a sum of Rs. 16 allowed to the survivor of the first legatee for the purposes of the idol, and after her death that the same sum be applied to the expenses of the idol. When the legatee has for a time at her own expense kept up the service she is not entitled to have the money refunded. S. M. Roymoney Dossee v. Ruggonath Sen, Ind. Jur., N. S., 14.

Where the mohunt of a byragee muth died without having any chela,—Held that ordinarily his successor was appointed by the mohunts of other byragee muths, and that enquiry should be made as to the existence of a particular custom by which it was alleged that the property of the deceased passed to the brother of his spiritual preceptor. Ramdoss Byragee v. Gunga Doss and others, 4 Agra Rep., 295.

Suit for the exclusive right in the privilege of administering purohitam to pilgrims resorting to Ramaswaram. The privilege claimed was admitted to be capable of alienation or delegation, and was therefore no longer the subject of religious sentiment, but a mere proprietary right. On the merits the appellants were held to have failed to support their claim. Ramasâwmy Aiyan v. Venkata Achari, 2 W. R., P. C., 21.

An action is not maintainable by a purohit against another purohit for interfering with an alleged exclusive right of performing religious ceremonies at a particular place, there being no legal obligation upon the jujmans to abstain from employing another. Damoodur Misser and others v. Roodurmur Misser, 1 Marsh., 161.

A party holding land assigned for the support of an idol subject to the performance of the ceremonies of worship of the idol, who fails to perform the required service, may be compelled to do so, and on refusal may be removed; but such refusal would not enable a party claiming the land under a fresh assignment from a descendant of the original grantor to receive possession by a suit. Mohesh Chundra Chuckerbutty v. Koylash Chundra Chuckerbutty and another, 11 W. R., 443.

Held that a suit for a share of the collections made from "jujmans in return for spiritual instruction" is not cognizable in the Civil Courts.

Held, further, that such a suit is not of the nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes under Act XI of 1865. Choonee Lall and others v. Gouree Sunkur, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 84.

No suit lies to enforce payment of murjada (respect money) alleged to be a customary payment by persons of the kassary caste who have marriage ceremonies or shrads performed in their house to members of the community. Nobeen Chunder Dutt v. Madhub Chunder Mundul, 5 W. R., 225.

Under the Hindu law a permanent alienation by a shebait of endowed property, such as the creation of a putnee, is not absolutely null and void. A permanent alienation by a shebait of endowed property under special circumstances of necessity is valid. Want of funds for repairing the temple and restoring the image of the idol is a necessity sufficient under the Hindu law to warrant such an alienation. Tayubunissa Bibi v. Kuwar Sham Kishore Roy, 7 B. A mortgage of debutter property by a shebait is ultra vires. Ramonee Debia v. Baluck Dass Mohunt, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 101.

Where a bond as a charge on a muth is given for antecedent claims against a muth, of which a portion would, but for the fresh right of suit given by the bond, have been barred by limitation, and where no proceedings have been taken for sequestration or attachment of the property, there is no necessity for giving the bond, and a suit to recover cannot succeed. Ram Churn Pooree v. Nunhoo Mundle, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 147.

A., a Hindu, by a deed of wukfnama (deed of endowment), after reciting that he had "erected and prepared a thakurbari (temple) and the image of thakur (idol), and also a sadavart (almshouse), and had in way of wukf (endowed property) dedicated certain property for the performance of the pujah (worship) of the said thakur and repairing of the house, flower garden, and thakurbari, and appointed his sister B. the manager and mutwali (trustee) of the same, authorized B. to spend the profits in the performance of the pujah, &c. As for the future, she (B.) should appoint such person to be the manager and mutwali as may be found by her to be fit, &c., and in like manner all successive mutwalis should have the right of appointing successive mutwalis. To these his heirs should not have right to prefer any claim, &c. B. died without having appointed any mutwali (trustee) to succeed her in the management of the trust. On a suit by the heir of B. to obtain possession of the property covered by the deed against the heirs of A.,—Held that the managership on failure of appointment of a trustee reverted to the heirs of the person who endowed the property. Mussamut Jai Bunsi Kunwar v. Chuttur Dhari Sing, 5 B. L. R., 181.

The right of a shebait of a Hindu idol to perform the services and receive the customary remuneration is not transferable, and cannot be told in satisfaction of a decree against the shebait. Dubo Misser v. Srinibas Misser, 5 B. L. R., 617; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 409.

Plaintiff (appellant) sued to establish a religious trust created and confirmed by two deeds of dedication. Held that a family trust of this nature had never, in modern times at least, been ruled to require the assent of the State; and that as the trust in this case appeared to be established as to the lands dedicated, it lay on respondent to show some subsequent legal conversion of the lands to the ordinary uses of property, by better evidence than a second deed of partition operating as a revocation of a former one, which second deed was not only not proved but discredited on every judicial examination of it. A partition being favourably viewed by the Hindu religion and law, and wanting no extrinsic support, their Lordships were of opinion that the alleged presumption against the first deed of partition, that it was a mere device because one member of the family was indebted, might more reasonably be removed than maintained by due attention to that fact; whereas the second deed did afford grounds for suspicion, inasmuch as it made no reference to the first deed, and professing to be the ordinary partition of a joint family appointed an insolvent as the shebait. As to respondent's contention that he was a bonâ fide purchaser for value without notice, the Privy Council considered that the very origin of his title, as well as the contention in the mutation of names in the Collector's registry, proved that the respondent must have had notice of the original trust, and that as he was not shown to have made enquiries as to his grounds for supposing that the trust was legally at an end, he could not exonerate the property from the trust which attached to it. Juggut Mohinee Dassee v. Sookhumoney, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 41.

Where land is dedicated to the religious services of an idol, the rents of the land constitute in legal contemplation the property of the idol, and the shebait has not the legal property, but only the title of manager of a religious endowment, and cannot alienate the property, though he might create proper derivative tenures and estates conformable to usage. The creation of a tenure at a fixed invariable rent would be breach of duty in a shebait. Maharanee Shibessurree Dabee v. Mothoor Nauth Acharjee, 13 S. W. R., O. C., 18.

R. D., a Hindu, died possessed of large property, both real and personal, and leaving surviving him two sons, P. D. and A. D., his sole heirs, who after his death came to an amicable partition of some portion of the joint estate, but continued to hold jointly the family dwelling-house and the land thereto attached. On 26th November, 1849, P. D. and A. D. executed a deed of trust of the joint family dwelling-house, among other properties, by which after reciting that they had kept certain property joint, and that they have been performing the family ceremonies, &c., and that it was their intention that they should be performed in the same manner at the family dwelling-house, and after setting apart certain real property for the expenses thereof, it was agreed that "we will, during our lifetime, jointly perform the said acts after that manner and according to practice; on the death of one of us, the survivor and the executor or representatives of the deceased person will act after that manner and according to practice, for a period of twenty years from the date of the death of him who shall die last; our executors or representatives will jointly perform, out of the proceeds of the aforesaid real property, the puja and so forth at our dwelling-house in Simla, in Calcutta, and entertain strangers at the garden which once appertained to R. S. B. The said real property and our dwelling-house and the baitakhana in Station Sulkea, &c., neither we nor our heirs or any of them will have the power to make a partition thereof during the said prescribed period. On the expiration of the said period, should our representatives wish to make a partition of all the said real property, &c., having made a division they will have the power to perform the acts and ceremonies separately." The said dwelling-house was thereafter held jointly by P. D. and A. D. on the trusts of the deed of 26th November, 1849. P. D., in December, 1849, died, leaving two adopted sons, M. D. and another, on the death of whom the plaintiff was adopted. P. D. also left a will whereby he directed that the purport of the deed of 26th November, 1849, should never be violated. A. D. died 30th January, 1856, leaving a will whereof he appointed the defendants N. D., C. G., and S. G., executors, and thereby he divided all his property subject to certain legacies to C. G. and S. G.; by his will he charged his executors not to fail to carry out the agreement. The ceremonies continued to be performed as directed in the deed by the plaintiff and the defendants M. N. D., C. G., and S. G. By deed dated 14th July, 1863, N. D., C. G., and S. G. mortgaged, for valuable consideration, to the defendant, A. B. M., certain property, including an undivided share of the said dwelling-house. A. B. M. afterwards instituted a suit on the mortgage against N. D., C. G., and S. G., and by the decree in that suit it was, on 14th April, 1870, ordered that the defendants should be absolutely foreclosed of all equity of redemption in the said family dwelling-house and other premises comprised in the mortgage. Subsequent proceedings taken by A. B. M. against the defendants, N. D., C. G., and S. G., resulted in A. B. M. obtaining a writ of possession against them, which he endeavoured, but unsuccessfully, to have executed. The present suit was brought to have the deed of trust of November 26th, 1849, established, and to have the trusts thereof declared. In 1854 two suits had been brought in the Supreme Court, one by M. D. and the present plaintiff, and the other by A. D., in which suits decrees were made declaring the will of P. D. and the agreement of 26th November, 1849, to be fully proved and established and binding on A. D. and his heirs and the representatives of P. D. It was found on the evidence in the present suit that the agreement of 26th November, 1849, was not fraudulent; that when A. D. died the estate belonging to the representatives of P. D., independently of the property set apart, was more than sufficient to meet any claims against the estate of P. D.; that the agreement of 26th November, 1849, had up to the present time been steadily acted on by the representatives of P. D. and by the representatives of A. D. until very recently; that A. B. M. took the mortgage with notice of the agreement, and of the fact that it was being acted on under the decrees of the Supreme Court. Held that the family dwelling-house was not absolutely dedicated by the deed of 26th November, 1849, to the worship of the deities and performance of the ceremonies mentioned therein, and therefore was not inalienable. But the prohibition in the deed of 26th November, 1849, against partition of the family dwelling-house for twenty years after the death of the survivor of P. D. and A. D. implied also that there should be no alienation of it for twenty years. Until the end of the twenty years A. B. M. was not entitled to possession in any shape. Anath Nath Dey v. A. B. Mackintosh, 8 B. L. R., 60.

A person who succeeds his father as shebait or trustee of debutter lands is not bound by any acts of his father done in fraud of the trust. Goluck Chunder Bose v. Rughoonauth Sree Chunder Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 444.

31.—Re-marriage.

The son of a Hindu widow having died after her re-marriage, she sued as guardian of her daughter by her first husband, claiming the estate of her son, and then applied to be made a co-plaintiff in her own right.

Held that the lower Court was not wrong in arraying the plaintiff amongst the parties to the suit, under Section 77, Act VIII of 1859, and that such amendment did not alter the character of the suit or affect the merits of the case.

Held (by Kemp, J., dismissing the appeal under Section 15 of the Letters Patent) that as plaintiff at the time of her re-marriage had no rights or interests in the estate of her deceased husband, or his son, none ceased and determined upon the re-marriage; and after her son died, the estate which he inherited from his father devolved on her, and under Section 5, Act XV of 1856, she did not forfeit her right thereto.

Held (by E. Jackson, J.) that under Section 2, Act XV of 1856, all right which the widow had in her deceased husband's property by inheritance to him and to his lineal successors ceased by reason of her re-marriage, as if she had then died, and thereupon the next heir inherited; and that Section 5 referred more especially to the new husband's property, including property left otherwise than to her late husband and his lineal descendants. Akora Suth v. Boreani and others, 10 W. R., 34.

A Hindu died, leaving a widow and minor son and daughter. The widow re-married after her husband's estate had vested in her son. The son subsequently died, and his step-brother took possession of the property. The widow then brought a suit against the step-brother for possession. Held that the suit was maintainable, and that she could properly succeed as heir to her son, notwithstanding her second marriage. Akora Suth v. Boreani, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 199; 11 W. R., 82.

The Hindu law disentitling a widow to inherit on re-marriage and marriage with a Mahometan does not apply to a widow who became a Mahometan before her marriage with a Mahometan. According to Section 3, Act XXI of 1850, and Section 9, Regulation VII of 1832, conversion does not involve forfeiture of inheritance. Gopal Singh v. Dhungazee, 3 W. R., 206.

32.—Re-union.

Of three brothers forming together a joint Hindu family, one separated himself therefrom and died, leaving a son, the plaintiff. The other two with their families remained joint. One died leaving a son, the defendant. The other died leaving a widow. On the widow's death this suit was brought to establish the plaintiff's right as one of the two next reversionary heirs. Held that a separated brother does not inherit, and that the defendant was alone entitled to succeed.—Query, as to the effect of reunion on inheritance. Kasabram Mahapattar v. Nandkishor Mahapattar, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 7; S. C., 11 W. R., 308.

Held that re-union must be made by the parties, or some of them, who made the separation. If any of their descendants think fit to unite they may do so; but such a union is not re-union in the sense of the Hindu law, and does not affect the inheritance. Bisvanath Gungadhur v. Krishnagee Gunesh and others, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 69.

According to Hindu law, mere living together in one residence or joint trade does not constitute a re-union after partition, but there must be junction of estate. When such reunion is satisfactorily established, Courts are bound to give a preference to the re-united parceners to the exclusion of the members or their issue who have not been so re-united. Gopal Chundra Daghoria v. Kenaram Daghoria, 7 W. R., 35.

In a Hindu family, when, after partition, certain members of the family reunite,—Held that if a re-union actually takes place between the proper parties, their representatives and descendants, however remote, will remain joint until a fresh partition takes place. The members of the re-united family and their descendants succeed to each other, to the exclusion of the members of the unassociated or not re-united branch. Tara Chand Ghose v. Pudum Lochun Ghose, 5 W. R., 249, and 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 207.

Where the partition of a family property is made simply for the purpose of determining what the share of one member is, and after his secession the other members continue to live together and mess together, remaining to all intents and purposes as they were before, these others must be presumed to have re-united. Petambur Dutt v. Hurrish Chunder Dutt, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 200.

A Hindu died, leaving a widow, a brother, and two nephews, the plaintiff and the defendant. The brother was the defendant's father; he and the widow were since dead, the widow having died in the brother's lifetime. The plaintiff claimed to be entitled to a moiety of the estate of the deceased by inheritance. The defendant claimed the whole on the ground that the deceased lived as a re-united or associated brother with his (the defendant's) father, whereas the plaintiff was the son of a separated brother of the deceased. Held that the material issue to be tried in the case was whether the widow lived in a state of re-union with the defendant, as her husband had done with the defendant's father, or whether she at the time of her death lived separate from him, though in the same family house. Ramhari Sarma v. Trihiram Sarma, 7 B. L. R., 336; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 442.

When the immediate reversioner is in possession of a part of the property, and not in a position to institute proceedings to set aside alienations, the next reversioner is entitled to sue to protect his own future rights. Balgobind Ram v. Hirusranee, 2 W. R., 255.

According to Hindu law, a widow in possession can relinquish, and, by relinquishing, anticipate for the reversioners their period of succession. A relinquishment in favour of second reversioners is also valid if made with the consent of the first reversioners. Protab Chunder Roy Chowdhry v. Sreemutty Joy Monee Dabee Chowdhrain, 1 W. R., 98.

Where a widow relinquished her right to her husband's property in favour of his then reversionary heirs, who were accordingly put into possession, and other persons subsequently claimed the property as the husband's heirs, the cause of action of such other persons was held to have accrued from the time when the then reversionary heirs came into possession of the property. Kalee Coomar Nag v. Kashee Chunder Nag and others, 6 W. R., 180.

A reversioner's cause of action against his ancestor's lessee does not accrue until the expiration of the lease, unless the reversioner is evicted or deprived of his rent, or rent is received adversely to him by a stranger from the lessee. Hurronath Roy and others v. Rajah Indoo Bhoosun Deb Roy, 8 W. R., 135.

Where a widow's estate is sold for arrears of rent it is not merely the widow's life interest that is transferred, and the reversionary heir cannot follow the estate after her death. Tiluck Chuckerbutty v. Mudden Joogee, 12 W. R., 504.

Where the transfer sought to be set aside was made by the widow in favour of her daughter, who was lawful heir to the property,—Held that the plaintiff, a reversioner, has no present ground of action as his reversionary right was not prejudiced thereby. Held also that Section 2, Act VIII of 1859, the former suit being of a different nature, does not bar the present suit. Udhur Singh v. Mussamut Ranee Koonwar, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 234.

The consent of the then reversioner to a sale by a Hindu widow, though not binding evidence on the present heir, is strong presumption of the existence of necessity at the time of sale, to be rebutted only by proof of fraud and collusion, or of the absence of necessity. Kalee Mohun Deb Roy v. Dhanajoy Shah and others, 6 W. R., 51.

A suit by a widow to set aside the sale of a judgment-debtor's rights as reversioner is not maintainable. Mussamut Shib Koonwar v. Sodho Singh, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 255.

Where a widow having lost her rights in her husband's estate on account of re-marriage under the provisions of Section 2, Act XV of 1856, was allowed to retain possession by the next reversioner, —Held that such arrangement by the next reversioner was only binding upon him, and not on the heirs of such reversioner, who, on the death of the former, were entitled to sue for possession of the property by dispossessing the widow. Kaisho and others v. Mussamut Jumna, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 140.

A conveyance of ancestral property by a Hindu widow without proof of necessity can only operate as a conveyance of her life-interest. The purchase of a kismut sold for Government revenue does not destroy the pre-existing rights of the holders of the tenure. Reversioners are as much entitled to have a sale of their share in such a kismut set aside as a sale of any other property by the widow without necessity. Tarinee Churn Banerjee v. Nund Coomar Banerjee, 1 W. R., 47.

A reversioner has no right of suit during the lifetime of a widow to set aside a deed of alienation said to have been executed by his ancestor and supported by the widow. Mussamut Ram Bunsee Koonwar v. Mussamut Moheshur Koonwar, 1 W. R., 338.

A suit by a reversioner to set aside an alienation is cognizable if the title of the reversioner has been injured by a distinct act of alienation, and if the widow who ought to have brought the suit has relinquished her life-interest and signified her assent to the suit proceeding. Bheem Ram Chuckerbutty v. Huree Kishore Roy, 1 W. R., 359.

Where after the death of a Hindu who had been separate in estate from his brothers, and during the lifetime of his widow his brother's sons obtained mutation of their names on the Collector's rent-roll, and held possession of the estate, in right of inheritance, for more than 12 years,—Held that, under the Mitakshara law, the possession by the nephews being adverse to the widow, the claim of the reversioner on her death was barred. Gopal Singh v. Kanhya Lall Sahebzada, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 14; S. C., 11 W. R., 9.

Where a Hindu widow, exceeding her rights, alienates property which a reversioner claims, his suit is not barred if brought within 12 years from her death. Gopal Mullick v. Onoop Chunder Roy and others, 11 W. R., 183.

A person having only a contingent estate during the lifetime of a Hindu widow, is permitted to sue simply on the ground of the necessity that the contingent reversioner may be under of protecting his contingent interest. It is therefore essential to see that he has such an estate as entitles him to come in that way, i. e., that he holds the character which he professes. Thakoorain Sahibag and another v. Mohun Lall and others, 7 W. R., P. C., 25.

Where it appeared there were other persons nearer than plaintiffs, and that there had been no disclaimer of their right on their part,—Held that plaintiff, who, according to the ordinary Hindu law of inheritance, was not the next heir, could not maintain the suit. Gooshaeen Teekumjee and others v. Pursotum Lalljee and others, 4 Agra Rep., 238.

A suit lies by a reversioner to declare that an alienation by a Hindu widow will not be binding upon him after her death. A suit is not to be dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff seeks to set aside such alienation, but the Court will grant him such relief as he is entitled to. Shewak Ram Roy v. Syad Mohammed Shamsul Hoda, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 196; S. C., 12 W. R., 26.

Held, following a Full Bench case cited, that a reversioner can maintain a suit during the lifetime of a childless Hindu widow to set aside a deed of conveyance as inoperative on the death of the widow by whom it was granted. Lalla Chuttur Narain v. Mussamut Wooma Koonwaree and others, 8 W. R., 273.

Held that the plaintiff being an immediate reversioner might maintain his suit, and that his contributing his share of profit and his signature in putwaree's diary as lumberdar were not an admission of defendant's title as purchaser. Nund Kishore v. Nuthoo Ram, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 223.

A reversionary heir is subject to all rights which exist against the property in consequence of acts done by, or decrees obtained against, the ancestor.

Rath Monohur Singh and others v. Kooldeep Narain Singh and another, 11 W. R., 515.

A widow (a life-tenant of an ancestral estate), having executed an ikrar transferring a share to N., her granddaughter, afterwards sued to set it aside on the ground that N. had not conformed to its terms. While the suit was in the appeal stage, the widow died, and her reversioner applied to be made, and was admitted as, her kaem mukam, to carry on the appeal on her behalf. He afterwards sued to recover possession of the share as reversioner, alleging that the succession opened out to him on the death of the widow.

Held that the causes of action in the two suits were different, and that it was not necessary for the reversioner, when he took up the widow's case in its appeal stage, to disclose his title and claim as reversioner, as he was not competent then to introduce any pleas arising out of a new state of facts not existing when the suit was instituted. Deomnel Koonwar v. Mussamut Inderjeet Koowar, 12 W. R., 234.

A Hindu widow, in 1824, assumed to adopt a son to her husband, and such son, and after him the defendant, his heir, was put in possession of the properties in suit. The widow died in 1861. The suit was instituted in 1866 to recover the property and to declare the adoption illegal. Held that such possession, during the life of the widow, could not be said to be adverse as against the widow. The cause of action to the reversionary heirs arose at the time of the death of the widow, and was consequently not barred by limitation. Srenath Gungopadhya v. Mohesh Chundera Roy, 4 B. L. R., F. B., 3; 12 W. R., F. B., 14.

The rights of a reversioner entitled to succeed on the death of a childless Hindu widow, if he shall happen to survive her, cannot be sold in execution of a decree of Court. Koraj Koonwar v. Komul Koonwar and others, 6 W. R., 34.

Following a decision of a Division Bench of the High Court, it was held that, on the death of a Hindu widow, her deceased husband's heirs became entitled to all his immoveable property which was in her hands, except only so much as might have been disposed of by her under circumstances which would render her alienations binding against them. Ram Shewuk Roy and others v. Sheo Gobind Sahoo, 8 W. R., 519.

R. C. D., a Hindu, died possessed of property, leaving as his heiress his widow, R. D. He also left four daughters, two of whom died in the lifetime of their mother, each leaving a son. R. D. died, leaving her surviving two daughters, P. D. and J. D., who succeeded to the estate of R. C. D. Held that J. B., one of the sons of J. D., had no such interest in the property as could be attached and sold in execution of a decree against him. Bhoobunmohun Banerjea v. Thakoordoss Biswas, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 277.

A reversionary interest may be sold in execution of a decree. Gourhuree Dutt v. Radhagobind Shaha, 13 W. R., 54.

The consent of all the reversioners is necessary to make a sale by a childless Hindu widow valid in law; but the purchaser is entitled to hold the property during the widow's lifetime. Only immediate reversioners are entitled to impeach a sale by a widow. Mussamut Radha v. Mussamut Koar, W. R., 1864, 148.

Declarations of title may be granted to reversioners and alienations by a Hindu widow set aside during the widow's lifetime, although possession of the estate itself will not ordinarily be given. Mussamut Shibo Koeree and others v. Joogun Singh and others, 8 W. R., 155.

A reversioner cannot, during the lifetime of a Hindu widow, sue to set aside a sale made by her if twelve years have elapsed since the date of the sale, though he may during her lifetime sue to have the sale declared void and to prevent waste. Such limitation does not affect the right of suit of the reversioner after the widow's death when he succeeds as heir. Syud Ameer Ali v. Mohendronath Bose; Behas Koomaree v. Mohendranath Bose; Shuvadara Bibee v. Mohendranath Bose, 2 W. R., 271.

A reversioner cannot sue to dispossess a widow or a purchaser holding under her, though he is entitled to sue for a declaration that a sale by the widow is invalid against him on his proving that the sale was made without legal necessity. Haradhun Nag v. Issur Chunder Bose, 6 W. R., 222.

The fact of a reversioner being an attesting witness to a conveyance by a Hindu widow is an acquiescence on his part which precludes him from impeaching the sale on the ground of waste.

A decree against a Hindu widow for a loan to pay Government revenue is binding on the reversioner. Gopal Chunder Manna v. Gour Monee Dossee and others, 6 W. R., 52.

A judgment-debtor, who had been permitted to retain possession of disputed property pending an appeal to England on furnishing security for mesne profits and costs, having died, his widow offered her life-interest in his estate as such security. Held that as her interest was only temporary it could not be accepted as competent security, and that as she was under no legal necessity to carry on the appeal to the Privy Council and did not do so for the benefit of the estate, she could not bind the estate as against the reversioner for the purpose of raising the necessary funds. Mussamut Phool Koer, alias Kunhya Koer v. Dabeepersaud, 12 W. R., 187.

A reversionary contingent interest subject to the life-estate of a Hindu widow may be assigned. The assignee of such an interest is entitled to restrain the widow from committing waste. Rychurn Paul v. Mussamut Peary Monee Dassee, Marsh., 622.

The immoveable property of a Hindu widow was sold under a decree against her, and A. was the purchaser at the sale. Afterwards and during the lifetime of the widow the lands in question were sold for arrears of revenue due by A. to Government in respect of other lands, and B. was the purchaser at the sale. C., the owner of the reversion expectant on the life-interest of the widow instituted a suit in her lifetime to set aside the sale of the estate; but this suit was dismissed under Act I of 1845, Section 24, on the ground that more than a year had elapsed since the sale for the arrears due to Government. After the death of the widow the reversioner sued B. for recovery of possession of the lands.

Held, first, that the life-estate of the widow was alone acquired by the purchaser at the sale under the decree, and sold at the sale for arrears of Government revenue, and that interest having expired the reversioner was entitled to recover the possession of the lands. Secondly, that the plaintiff is not barred by the dismissal of the suit instituted in the lifetime of the widow; the object of that suit being to set aside the assignments of the widow's interest, and not for the assertion of the plaintiff's right to the reversion. Doorga Churn v. Kashee Chunder Moitra, Marsh., 539.

In a suit by a reversioner to set aside a sale of property made by a Hindu widow, the Court cannot direct possession to be given to the reversioner, but can only declare the sale to be invalid, and leave the widow or her vendees as her tenants in possession. Goluck Chunder Dass v. Gopal Kishen Sein, W. R., 1864, 250.

The consent of all the heirs living at the time of the execution of a bill of conveyance by a Hindu widow, either directly or by attestation, is requisite to make the sale binding against the reversioners. Kartick Kurmokur v. Dhunno Monee Goopto, W. R., 1864, 268.

A reversioner may sue during the widow's lifetime to obtain a declaration that a conveyance made by the widow is invalid, as made without legal necessity, and therefore not binding beyond the widow's life. Oodoy Chand Jhah v. Dhun Monee Debia, 3 W. R., 183.

A Hindu widow held her husband's property till within twelve years of the date of suit. At that time one of the defendants claimed the property as belonging to his own separate talook; and she thereupon gave it up, and ever since refused to enter on it. In a suit by the reversioner's heir of the husband to have his title declared, and to obtain possession of the property,—Held that possession of the defendant was adverse to the widow and reversioners; that the reversionary heirs therefore had a right to sue for a declaration of their title at any time within twelve years from the date of the adverse possession; that as the widow refused to have anything to do with the property, and the reversioners had no right to possession till after the death of the widow, the proper course for the Court to adopt was to appoint a manager to collect the assets of the estate, who should account for them to the Court; and the Court should hold them for the benefit of the reversionary heir. Radha Mohan Dhar v. Ram Das Dey, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 326.

During the existence of a Hindu widow's interest in an estate, the assignee of a reversionary heir to her husband has no interest therein as such assignee, which will enable him to bring a suit to have a mortgage and a decree affecting the estate set aside. This is so even though the assignee is the next heir to the property after the assignor. Raicharan Pal v. Pyari Mani Dasi, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 70.

A reversionary heir has no right to set aside a deed of sale executed by a Hindu widow during her lifetime. Ram Monohor Singh and others v. Kooldeep Narian Singh and another, 11 W. R., 514.

When a childless Hindu widow is the heiress and legal representative of her husband, the reversionary heirs are bound by decrees relating to her husband's estate which are obtained against her without fraud or collusion; and they are also bound by limitation by which she, without fraud or collusion, is bound.

The words "cause of action" in Act XIV of 1859, refer, not to a new cause of action accruing to the reversionary heir personally, but to the cause of action which accrued to the heir or representative for the time being of the deceased.

When alienations of her husband's estate are improperly made by the widow they are good as against her for her life; and the reversionary heir's cause of action does not accrue until her death. But when property belonging to the husband's estate is held adversely to the widow, and never reaches her hands, the cause of action accrues to her, and a suit, whether by her or by the reversionary heir, must be brought within the usual period, counting from the commencement of the adverse possession. Nobin Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Issur Chunder Chuckerbutty, 9 W. R., 505.

Held that a daughter was competent to sue during the lifetime of her mother, the encumbrancer; the daughter being the immediate reversioner to the property, and her reversionary right being seriously threatened. Mussamut Gohab Koomer v. Sib Sahai and others, 1 Agra Rep., 55.

Though a reversioner cannot obtain possession during the lifetime of a Hindu widow, yet he may be entitled to a declaration whether the alienations made by the widow are or are not valid and binding on the absolute heir. If the reversioner can prove that wilful default is about to take place, he will be entitled to such relief from the Court as will prevent the apprehended occurrence of a sale for arrears. Surut Chundra Sein v. Muthoora Nath Pudatic, 7 W. R., 303.

The cession of her right by a Hindu widow, during enjoyment, to the heir of her husband is valid, the recipient becoming absolutely entitled to the property, which passes on his death to his heirs. Shama Soonduree and others v. Shurut Chunder Dutt and others, 8 W. R., 500.

A reversioner in the position of son or stepgrandson may sue in the lifetime of a Hindu widow in possession to prevent waste. Chunnoo Mohunt and others v. Rajendra Shahoo, 7 W. R., 119.

Where a transfer is made by a widow in fraud of the rights of the presumptive reversioner,—Held that he is entitled to a declaratory decree that the widow's act is null and void, as it may affect the interests of the reversioner, and for provision, if necessary, to prevent any waste of the estate by the appointment of a receiver, but not to a more extensive remedy. His reversionary interest is not accelerated by the transfer. Where a daughter was colluding with the widow in making transfer of divided property,—Held that plaintiffs, the next reversioners after the daughter, were competent to maintain the suit to have the transfer declared null and void. Jwala Nath and others v. Kulloo and others, 3 Agra Rep., 55.

A reversioner may sue to have a conveyance by a Hindu widow declared void as against him, but he cannot sue simply for ejectment and possession during the lifetime of the widow. Hurrish Chunder Sein Lushker v. Bromo Moye Dossia, 5 W. R., 131.

Waste on the part of a Hindu widow in possession being proved, it is not competent to the Court to put the reversioner in possession, assigning maintenance to the widow. A manager should be appointed to the estate accountable to the Court. The reversioner may be appointed such manager. Mussamut Maharani v. Nundolall Misser, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 27, 10 W. R., 73.

A. and B. were two brothers. A.'s widow sued B.'s son, but being unable to carry on the litigation, sold a portion of her rights and interest in the suit to G. and J., and a joint decree was passed in the names of G. and J., as well as of the widow. The widow soon afterwards died, and B.'s son became A.'s heir. Held that as A.'s widow had only a life-interest in her husband's property, on her death her rights and interests ceased as well as those of G. and J. as decree-holders; and that B.'s son, the judgment-debtor, became in effect, as A.'s heir, the sole judgment-creditor, and entitled to the whole property. Gobind Narain Dey v. Gour Monee Debia, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 20.

Although an alienation of property by a widow for other than allowable purposes may be declared void, yet the reversioners are not entitled to immediate possession, unless the widow has committed some act involving forfeiture of the property. Mussamut Kishoree v. Kheala Ram, 2 N. W. R., 424.

Although a suit to set aside an alienation, alleged to have been illegally made by a Hindu widow, of property belonging to the estate of her deceased husband, should usually be brought by the next and not by a remote reversioner, yet such a suit may be brought by other than the next reversioner where it can be considered as one brought by a person who, by the express declaration of those having prior rights, was entitled to maintain it by reason of their consent, and of their relinquishment in his favour of the right of suit.

When this relinquishment is once shown, the suit is open to no objection on the score of its having been instituted without the plaintiff, at the time of the institution, having shown that the prior rights of others had been waived or abandoned in his favour. Ammur Sing v. Mardun Singh, 2 N. W. R., 31.

A party who, subject to the life-interest of his mother, has a real and vested interest in remainder such as a Hindu has the power of creating, has a right to sue to obtain a declaration of the invalidity of a will set up to his prejudice, which purports to take away altogether his future right and interest in the property. Annund Mohun Mullick v. Indro Monee Chowdrain, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 214.

The mere execution and registration of a deed as between strangers, without any ulterior act directed against a Hindu widow in possession, or against the reversionary heir or his possession, cannot give the latter any cause of action, or entitle him to ask for a declaratory decree. Sooruj Bunsee Koonwar v. Mohuput Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 18.

In a suit to recover possession of property held by a widow, the reversioner was held to have been erroneously made a co-defendant. Kristo Sunkur Dutt Roy v. Koylash Nauth Dutt Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 6.

A reversionary heir to his uncle's property may sue, during the life-time of the widow, for a declaratory decree to the effect that an alienation will not bind him in the event of his surviving the widow. Lykunt Nath Roy v. Grish Chunder Mookerjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 96.

The possession in right of inheritance of a widowed daughter having sons alive is not adverse to a reversioner. Poorun Chunder Nundee v. Sreeshteedhur Chuckerbutty, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 147.

A reversioner obtained a decree declaring that he was then the nearest heir to certain ancestral property, and would be entitled to succeed on the death of two widows of his cousin who were in possession. After the death of the widows, it was found that the reversioner had become insane, and was therefore incapacitated by Hindu law from inheriting. Upon this his son, who had been appointed manager on behalf of his father under Act XXXV of 1858, applied for execution of the above-mentioned decree as his representative,—Held that it was necessary to look to the status of the heir at the time the succession opened out to him, and that the applicant, in the capacity of representative of the reversioner (who was not the heir of the widows' husband), was not entitled to execute the decree. Brijo Bhookun Lall v. Bechun Dobey, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 329.

A Hindu widow being in possession of certain lakheraj lands in which she had a life-interest, the zemindar brought a suit against a minor reversioner and others to resume the land, obtained an ex-parte decree, and, whether under colour thereof or not, afterwards obtained possession. The widow who was then dispossessed brought a separate suit to recover the property, in which the reversioner, who had meantime come of age, was joined as a co-plaintiff. Owing to a petition presented by the widow, this suit was treated as having come to an end,—Held that, in the circumstances, and the consequent jeopardy to the title of the reversioners, the reversioner above referred to was competent, without showing fraud on the part of the widow, to bring a suit to have the land reduced to his possession, and to prevent the zemindar from acquiring title by adverse possession. Chunder Koomer Gangooly v. Raj Kishen Banerjee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 322.

K., a Hindu widow, assigned one moiety of her share in her husband's estate to H. S., in consideration that H. S. should conduct and pay all costs of a suit which was then to be instituted against her husband's brothers, of whom B. C., the present plaintiff, was one, to recover the share to which she was entitled, and also to pay her maintenance in the meantime. The assignment was dated 24th December, 1864. The suit was brought, and a certain sum, in Government paper and notes, was decreed to K. on August 5th, 1868. This sum was paid into Court by B. C., on 10th March, 1869, and upon K.'s application was, on 10th March, 1871, paid out to her. B. C. then sued as reversionary heir to have the deed of assignment set aside, and that H. S. should be restrained from receiving the moiety. The plaint was filed on 14th March, 1871. In it he alleged his apprehension of waste by K.

Held that the suit, so far as it was based on the allegation of apprehended waste, was not barred by the Law of Limitation. Biswanath Chunder v. Khantamani Dasi, 7 B. L. R., 131.

A. brought a suit against C. and D., alleging that he was an heir-expectant upon the death of B., a Hindu widow in possession of an estate, and as such sought for a declaration of title, and to have a certain conveyance of this estate, said to have been executed by C. in favour of D., set aside as affecting A.'s future interest, without charging any act of waste or injury to the property which might affect his rights as reversioner. Held that A. had disclosed no cause of action against C. and D. Mussamut Suraj Bunsi Kunwar v. Mahiput Singh, 7 B. L. R., 669.

Limitation reckons against the reversioners or next heirs of a deceased person only from the death of the widow or the immediate heirs of the deceased. Greedharee Singh v. Mussamut Indro Kooer, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 237.

Suit by a Hindu daughter, for herself and as guardian of her minor son, to recover possession of her deceased father's separate estate. The legal representatives of the estate were, first, the deceased's widow, and after her the plaintiff and her son. The widow not only failed to occupy and manage the estate, but, in collusion with the other defendants claiming under a hostile title, abandoned her rights, alleging that her husband was not separate, but a member of a joint family, and left the hostile holders undisturbed. To preserve the separate estate from becoming extinguished by the operation of the Law of Limitation, it was necessary to remove the adverse occupants and to place the estate in the possession of some person to be appointed to represent it; and as the widow (the legal representative) never was in possession and did not ask for it, but repudiated all claim to it, it was held that no one had a better right to the possession than the plaintiff, and possession was accordingly decreed to her as manager during the widow's lifetime. Gunesh Dutt v. Mussamut Lall Muttu Kooer, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 11.

34.—School of Law.

The question being whether the succession in this case was regulated by the Bengal or Mithila law,—Held, in accordance with the Court below, after an examination of the whole evidence, that the Mithila law was applicable. Rany Padmavati v. Doolar Singh and others, 7 W. R., P. C., 41.

The question being whether the descent in the family in this case was to be regulated by the Dyabhaga or the Mitakshara,—Held, upon the evidence, that the Dyabhaga applied to the decision of the cause. Rani Sreemutty Dibeah v. Rany Koond Luta, Ram Lung Luta and others, 7 W. R., P. C., 44.

Hindu families are ordinarily governed by the law of their origin, not by that of their domicile. The presumption is in favour of the law of origin until the law of a new domicile is proved. Lukkea Debea v. Gungagobind Dobey, W. R., 1864, 56; and Pirthee Singh v. Musst. Sheo Soondery, 8 W. R., 261; and Sonatun Misser v. Ruttem Maltab, W. R., 1869, 95.

The presumption that a Hindu family, immigrating into Bengal from the North-Western Provinces, imports its own customs and law as regulating the succession and the ceremonies of Hindu law in that family, may be rebutted by showing that, except as regards marriage, all other ceremonies are performed according to the law of the Bengal school and by Bengal priests. Ram Bromo Pundah v. Kaminee Soondery Dossee and others, 6 W. R., 295.

In a case where a Hindu family migrates from one territory to another, if they preserve their ancient religious ceremonies they also preserve the law of succession. The presumption is, until the contrary be proved, that the family so migrating have brought with them, and retain, all their religious ceremonies and customs; especially when the family is shown to have brought with it its own priests, who, and their descendants after them, continued their ministrations down to the period of contest. Junaruddeen Missir v. Nobin Chunder Perdhani, Marsh., 232, and Ootum Chunder Bhuttacharjee v. Obhoy Churn Tuissee, W. R., F. B., 67.

The ex-Rajah of Coorg died in England in 1859, leaving considerable moveable property which he had himself acquired and accumulated, chiefly by means of his pension and some ancestral jewels and ornaments. By his last will and testament he left all his property to trustees in trust to pay thereout certain legacies, and to divide the residue in certain proportions among various members of his family. Some difficulty having arisen after his death regarding the distribution of his estate, the Court of Chancery stated a case and propounded certain questions under 22 and 23 Vict., Cap. 63, for the opinion of Her Majesty's late Supreme Court at Fort William in Bengal, with reference to the Hindu law as administered by that Court, and so far as the same was applicable to the facts set forth in the case stated. The first and chief question propounded was "What school of Hindu law would govern the succession to the estate of the deceased Rajah, and the rights and interests of the members of his immediate family, with reference to the will and facts stated, and also supposing he had died without having made any testamentary disposition of his property?" In answer to this question the Court held that the doctrines of the Benares school of Hindu law, as laid down in the Mitakshara, should govern the decision of the case regarding the succession to the estate of the deceased Rajah, on the ground that the Mitakshara is the leading authority of Hindu law throughout Southern India, as well as Benares, and that the Court had no reason to suppose that the doctrines of the Mitakshara had been in any way varied or altered by any text-book recognized as an authority in Coorg, although some variations prevail in various parts of Southern India. The Court were further of opinion that the doctrines of the same school of Hindu law would govern the case, supposing the Rajah died without having made any testamentary disposition of his property. The succession to the property of a Hindu is governed by the laws which regulate his religious rites and ceremonies, and not by the domicile of himself or his family. J. L. Login and another v. Princess Victoria Gouramma of Coorg, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 109.

The Hindu Law for Bengal Proper, that is, the Dyabhaga, is applicable to Assam. Deepo Debia v. Gobindo Debi, 26 S. W. R., C. R., 42.

Where a Hindu family came from the Punjab accompanied by their priests at a time when they were not governed by the Bengal law, and it was afterwards alleged that they were now governed by that law, the onus of proving the allegation was held to be with those who made it.

The mere adoption of local customs, and the observances of occasional local festivals and ceremonies, would not prove that the law which originally governed a family had been set aside and another law substituted. Huro Pershad Roy Chowdry v. Shibo Shunkuree Chowdrain, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 47.

35.—Self-acquired Property.

By the law current in the Madras Presidency, an undivided Hindu is entitled during his lifetime to the separate enjoyment of his self-acquired immoveable property; but on his death without male issue such property, unless it has been previously disposed of, devolves on his surviving co-parceners, and his widow is only entitled to maintenance. Varadiperemál Udaiyan v. Ardanari Udaiyan and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 412.

While the members of a Hindu family enjoy in common undivided property, money expended in its improvement or repair is considered as spent on behalf of all the members alike, and all have the benefit of the outlay when a division takes place.

There is no rule of law precluding one member of an undivided Hindu family, though living together, from entering into an agreement with his co-parceners in respect of the expenditure on family property, and repayment of self-acquired funds; and such an agreement is rendered more reasonable and probable where portions of the family property are occupied and enjoyed by each of the members living separately. Multasvami Gaundan v. Subbiramanyya Gaundan and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 309.

According to the Mitakshara law, a father is not incompetent to sell immoveable property acquired by himself.

Landed property acquired by a grandfather, and distributed by him amongst his sons, does not by such gift become the self-acquired property of the sons, so as to enable them to dispose of it by gift or sale without the consent and to the prejudice of the grandson. Muddun Gopal Thakoor v. Ram Buksh Pandey, 6 W. R., 71.

In a suit for confirmation of possession of a share of ancestral property as the self-acquisition of two grandsons of the common ancestor,—Held that the plaintiff was bound in the first place to prove his allegation of self-acquisition, and also fully to show his possession. Gobind Nath Sen and others v. Gobind Chunder Sen, 10 W. R., 393.

Where the heirs of a deceased Hindu, by an arrangement with a third party who claimed to be an heir, distributed the property between them, such property after its distribution retained its character as ancestral property, and shares taken under the arrangement are not to be regarded as the self-acquired property of the heirs who took them. Ranee Mewa Koonwer v. Lalla Oudh Beharee Lall, 2 Agra Rep., 311.

The burden of proof in cases of alleged separate acquisitions by a member of an undivided family possessed of joint estate is on the person who advances such a claim, though not to the extent of tracing the very fund with which each purchase was made, from the time of its acquisition in a given year to the moment when it was paid to the seller of the property. Though an important criterion in such cases is to consider from what sources the money comes with which a purchase was made, yet there is no rule as to any particular mode of proof. Bipro Persad Mytee v. Kena Dayee, 5 W. R., 82.

Where other property was proved to have been separately acquired by the members of the family, it was held that there was no more presumption of joint than of separate acquisition. Badul Singh v. Chutterdharee Singh and others, 9 W. R., 558.

The doctrine of Hindu law that a father takes a share in his son's self-acquired property applies only to cases of families in joint estate, but not where separation in estate has taken place. Anund Mohun Paul Chowdry v. Sreemutty Shamasoonderee, W. R., 1864, 352.

Under the Mitakshara law, a father can dispose of his self-acquired property, moveable and immoveable, at his own will, and he can, by will, make an unequal distribution of the same amongst his heirs. Bawa Messer v. Rajah Beshen Prokash Naran Singh, 10 W. R., 287.

There is no difference between the position of a rajah holding an impartible raj and that of an ordinary zemindar in respect of his power to relinquish the property in favour of his next legal heir. Such a relinquishment is not forbidden by the Hindu law.

Where the effect of such a relinquishment is to give the property entirely into the hands of the son, he can during his father's lifetime question and challenge any acts done, and any acts that are alleged to have been done, by his father, and which are denied by the father. Luchma Narain Singh v. Gillon, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 197.

36.—Stridhun.

The burden of proving property (the subject of a gift of a Hindu widow) to be stridhun rests with those claiming under her. Sreemutty Chunder Monee Dossee v. Joykissen Sircar, 1 W. R., 107.

A Hindu directed his wife to settle certain property after his decease upon their daughter. She did so by deed of gift (hibbanama), giving it to their daughter, "to be enjoyed by her, her sons, and grandsons, &c., one after another; the other heirs not to have any concern with it." Held that the plaintiff as the daughter's daughter had no right to share therein with her brothers, the daughter's sons.

A betrothed daughter is not entitled at her mother's death to share in her stridhun, but the unbetrothed daughter alone inherits with the sons.

When stridhun has once devolved as such upon an heir it does not continue to devolve as stridhun, but afterwards devolves according to the ordinary rules of Hindu law. Sreenath Gungopadhya v. Surbomungola Dabi, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 144.

By the law of the Western schools, as well as by the law of Bengal, a Hindu widow is restricted from alienating any immoveable property which she has inherited from her husband.

Quære,—Is there any distinction in respect of moveable property?

Semble,—The stridhun of a childless Hindu widow, according to the law of the Western schools, goes to the collateral heirs of her husband, in preference to her own next of kin. Mussamut Thakoor Deybee v. Rai Baluk Ram and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 106, and 10 S. W. R., P. C., 3.

A decree in a suit brought for a zemindary by a Hindu widow binds those claiming the zemindary in succession to her.

According to the Mitakshara and the Vivada Chintamonee, all property that a woman inherits does not thereby become stridhun, so as after her death to descend to her heirs. Immoveable property which in default of other intervening heirs has been inherited by a mother from her son descends, on the mother's death, not to her heirs, but to the heirs of the son from whom she inherited it. Punchanund Ojhab v. Lalshan Misser, 3 W. R., 140.

A widow has no power to dispose by will of immoveable property inherited by her from her husband. The word "inherited" used in the Mitakshara, in regard to a woman's stridhun, does not include immoveable property so as to make it her peculium, but refers only to personal property over which alone she has absolute dominion. Goburdhun Nath v. Onoop Roy, 3 W. R., 105.

Sowdaick stridhun created by the husband descends, not to his heirs, but to the heirs of the wife. Kassee Chunder Roy Chowdhry v. Gour Kishore Gooho and others, 10 W. R., 139.

A son adopted by one wife may succeed to a co-wife's stridhun. Teencowree Chatterjee v. Dinonath Banerjee, 3 W. R., 49.

According to Hindu law, property acquired by a woman by inheritance is not to be classed as stridhun. Vengamalathammal v. Valaynda Mudali, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 312.

A Hindu wife or widow may alienate her stridhun, whether it be moveable or immoveable, with the exception, perhaps, of lands given to her by her husband. Doe v. Kuppu Pillai, 1 Mad. Rep., 85.

A gift of money by a son to his mother for her maintenance comes within the definition of stridhun in the Hindu law. Mussamut Doorga Koonwar v. Mussamut Tejoo Koonwar, 5 W. R., Mis., 53.

A Hindu banker dying intestate left two widows (D. and M.) as his co-heiresses. A document put forward by a third party (H.) as a will of the deceased having been set aside by the Courts, an order was passed in a summary suit, under Act XIX of 1841, by which the property was equally divided between the widows. One of them (D.) subsequently died, leaving a will disposing of her share to her relatives. Steps were taken during D.'s life by the other widow (M.) and by H. to resist the registration of the will; and after D.'s death M. applied for the attachment of D.'s share, and the appointment of a curator. Her application being dismissed, she commenced a regular suit.

Held that M.'s original acquiescence in the title set up by H. did not deprive her of any rights which accrued to her as one of the co-heirs of her husband when that claim was decided to be untenable, nor could her alleged alienation of her share bar her present suit.

Held that according to the law of the Benares school, no part of her husband's estate, whether moveable or immoveable, to which a Hindu widow succeeds by inheritance, forms part of her stridhun or peculiar property; and the text of Katyayana must be taken to determine, first, that her power of disposition over both is limited to certain purposes, and secondly, that on her death both pass to the next heir of her husband. Bhugwandeen Doobey v. Myna Baee, 9 W. R., P. C., 23.

The proposition that everything acquired by a woman during coverture is the property of her husband has no foundation in Hindu law. Rámasâmi Padeiyatchi v. Virasâmi Padeiyatchi, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 272.

Held that under the Hindu law, as understood in the Benares school, a widow has an absolute right to dispose of the personalty inherited by her from her husband; that under the Hindu law Government promissory notes ought to be treated as personal property; that jewels, shawls, &c., are of the nature of stridhun; and that in Hindu law books the word "corrody" is used solely with reference to land, and that Government promissory notes cannot be included in the said term "corrody." Mussamut Doorga Doyee v. Mussamut Poorun Doyee, 1 Ind. Jur., N S., 128.

Land received by a woman from her husband as stridanum cannot be alienated even after the husband's death to the prejudice of the daughters as next heirs without their consent. Gangadaraiya v Parameswaramma, 5 Mad. Rep., 111.

37.—SUCCESSION.

Under the Mitakshara law, a grandson (his father being dead) shares equally with a son the self-acquired property of the grandfather. Luchomun Pershad v. Debee Pershad, 1 W. R., 317.

A son's next heir is entitled to succeed after the mother, in preference to a sister's son born more than a year after the death of the mother. Bama Soonduree Dossee v. Anund Moyee Dossee, 1 W. R., 353.

A deceased ryot's father-in-law and brother-in-law are his legal heirs; and the plaintiffs, the owners of the lands, on which trees stand, are, in default of heirs, entitled to proprietary possession of trees as "lawarisee" which had been planted by the deceased ryot. Bhairow Deen and Ganesh Deen v. Mookta Ram and Chunde Deen, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 13.

As regards the rights of sons by different wives to inherit, whether in co-parcenary or as sole heir (except, perhaps, the son of the first wife) the priority in point of time of their mothers' marriages has never been regarded when the wives were equal in caste and rank, and the rule of primogeniture was and is the same in the case of sons of several wives of equal caste and rank as in the case of sons by one. Sivanaranja Perumal v. Muttu Ramlinga, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 75.

A member of a Hindu family living under the Mitakshara law, and having joint family property, died entitled to an undivided share in such property, leaving two widows him surviving. The widows were sued in their representative capacity in respect of debts incurred by him during his lifetime on his own account, and decrees were obtained against them. In execution, an interest in certain portions of the joint family property, to the extent of the share to which the deceased was entitled in his lifetime, was sold, and the auction-purchasers obtained possession of it.

Held that the share of the deceased did not at his death pass to his widows, but that (there being no male issue) it passed to the remaining members of the family by survivorship, and could not be rendered liable to the debts of the deceased in a suit against his widows.

Quære,—Whether those who take the share by survivorship are liable for the debts of the deceased to the extent of his share. Sadabert Prasad Saha v. Foolbash Koer, 3 B. L. R., F. B., 31.

Plaintiff, claiming title by succession both as heir by the general Hindu law and according to family custom, sued to recover the Totapalli estate in the Zillah of Rajahmundry. Defendant, the widow of the person last in the enjoyment of the estate, pleaded that the plaintiff was not of the royal stock, but merely a dependent of the family; that he had an elder brother alive, and therefore could not sue, and that, in accordance with her husband's instructions, as contained in his will, she was about to adopt a son. She also alleged that plaintiff should have become a party to an appeal pending before the Privy Council from the decree in suit No. 3 of 1860, under which the defendant's husband had recovered possession of the estate from the widow of the prior possessor, Jaggopu Dora. The lower Court found that the plaintiff was an undivided member of the family in which the right to the estate was vested, and a dayadi of the defendant's late husband in the 12th degree through their common ancestor, Bapam Dora, and decreed in plaintiff's favour. Pending this appeal, the Privy Council delivered judgment in the appeal from the decree in suit No. 3 of 1860, to which plaintiff and defendant had become parties. Held, in accordance with the judgment of the Privy Council, that the estate was acquired not by Jaggopu Dora, but by his father, Bapum Dora, the common ancestor, through whom plaintiff traced his kinship, and has ever since enjoyed as ancestral property derived from the said Bapum Dora. That accordingly the question of succession raised in this suit, similarly to that in the appeal before the Privy Council, was determinable by the law regulating the devolution of indivisible ancestral property, which had vested in the last possessor.

That the objection to the plaintiff's title as heir by the general law was thus reduced to the questions: Whether his alleged kinship to the last possessor was proved, and if so, whether, according to the ordinary course of legal succession to such property, he, or the defendant, as the widow of the last possessor, was heir to the estate. That upon the first question plaintiff had proved his kinship to the last possessor, and upon the second that plaintiff was heir to the estate, in preference to the defendant, the widow of the last possessor.

On the question of the extent to which property of the nature of an impartible raj is excepted from the general law by a special rule of succession entitling the eldest of the next of kin to take solely,—Held that such a usage does not interfere with the general rules of succession further than to vest the possession and enjoyment of the corpus of the whole estate in a single member of the family, subject to the legal incidents attached to it as the heritage of an undivided family. The unity of the family right to the heritage is not dissevered any more than by the succession of co-parceners to partible property; but the mode of its beneficial enjoyment is different. Instead of several members of the family holding the property in common, one takes it in its entirety, and the common law rights of the others, who would be co-parceners of partible property, are reduced to rights of survivorship to the whole, dependent upon the same contingency as the rights of survivorship of co-parceners inter se to the undivided share of each, and to a provision for maintenance in lieu of co-parcenary shares.

The sound rule to lay down with respect to undivided or impartible ancestral property is that all the members of the family who, in the way pointed out, are entitled to unity of possession and community of interest, according to the law of partition, are co-heirs, irrespective of their degrees of agnate relationship to each other, and that on the death of one of them leaving a widow and no near sapindas in the male line, the family heritage, both partible and impartible, passes to the survivors or survivor, to the exclusion of the widow. But when her husband was the last survivor, the widow's position as heir, relatively to his other undivided kinsmen, is similar to her position with respect to his divided or self and separately acquired property. Sri Rajah Agenumula Gavuridivamma Garu v. Sri Rajah Agenumula Rumandora Garu, 6 Mad. Rep., 93.

A father-in-law, although of Reddi caste, cannot disinherit his heir in favour of his son-in-law. Tainmani Reddi v. Perammal Reddi and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 51.

A grandson born after the death of his maternal uncle, but during the lifetime of his maternal grandmother, may inherit from her the property which she inherited from the uncle (her son). Radha Gobind Doss v. Sheikh Meajan, 1 W. R. 124.

Where property is acquired while a Hindu family is joint, according to the Bengal law, the inheritance goes per capita, and not per stirpes. Ramgutty Doss and Poorno Chunder Doss v. Nundo Coomar Doss, 2 W. R., 11.

By Hindu law the eldest male heir of a deceased trustee succeeds as trustee to him from whom he inherits. Purappavanalingam Chetti v. Nulnulla Sevanchetti and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 415.

Where there is a plurality of wives equal in caste, the sons of each wife (not being the first wife) take precedence according to the dates of their respective births, and without reference to the dates of the marriages of their respective mothers.

Succession in consequence of primogeniture amongst Hindus in India seems to be the rule only in the case of large zemindars and estates which partake of the nature of principalities.

In estates in which the ordinary Hindu law of inheritance administered in Western India applies, it is not competent to a father to dispose of his ancestral property to one son to the prejudice of the others. Bhujangerav bin Dovalatrav Ghorpade v. Malojiravbin Davalatráv Ghorpade, 5 B. R., A. C., 161.

The right of an after-born son to share as a co-parcener divided, properly depends upon his mother being pregnant with him at the time of partition. Yekayamian v. Aginswarian, 4 Mad. Rep., 307.

The illegitimate son of a sudra being the offspring of an incestuous intercourse (intercourse between a father-in-law and his daughter-in law), is not entitled to inherit or share in the family property according to Hindu law.

Semble,—To entitle the illegitimate sons of a sudra by a sudra woman to inherit a share in the family property, the intercourse between the parents must have been a continuous one, and the woman must have been an unmarried woman. Therefore the illegitimate son of a sudra by a sudra woman living with him in adultery is not entitled to a share in or to inherit the family property. Datti Parisi Nayuda v. Dutti Bangaree Nayuda, 4 Mad. Rep., 204.

(c) Of Brothers and Brothers' Sons.

It is an ordinary rule of Hindu law with respect to succession that a step-brother cannot inherit in preference to a uterine brother. Ishen Chunder Chowdhry v. Bhyrub Chunder Chowdhry, 5 W. R., 21.

In cases of property undivided and immoveable uterine and half-brothers succeed equally. When no brothers are living the nephews of the whole blood have a preferential right to succeed over those of the half-blood. Kylash Chunder Sircar v. Gooroo Churn Sircar, 3 W. R., 43.

Uterine and half-brothers succeed equally to the estate of a deceased brother. Tiluck Chunder Roy v. Ram Luckhee Dossee, 2 W. R., 41.

According to the Mitakshara law, a step-brother inherits after the widows if he survives them, otherwise a uterine brother's son succeeds. Burham Dev Roy v. Punchoo Roy, 2 W. R., 123.

According to Hindu law, a brother's daughter's son is no heir. But considering the unsettled state of the law on this point till recently the plaintiff was declared entitled to a decree against a party holding under no title whatever, on proof of the plaintiff's father (a brother's daughter's son) and the plaintiff having de facto succeeded and held for a long period. Choorah Monee Bose v. Prosono Coomar Mitter, 1 W. R., 43.

In default of brothers, brothers' sons succeed, taking according to numbers, and not by representation as grandsons; but brothers' sons are totally excluded by the existence of brothers. Brojokishoree Dossee v. Sree Nath Bose, 9 W. R., 463.

A whole or uterine brother has, under Hindu law, a better claim to succession than a half-brother. Beerchunder Joobraj v. Neelkissen Thakoor, 1 W. R., 177.

On the death of a ryot having right of occupancy, a nephew may succeed to his holding by right of inheritance if he were residing with him in the village, and not elsewhere. A zemindar cannot lay claim to the crops on the ground at the ryot's death, even supposing that the occupancy right lapsed in his favour, as it formed a part of the property belonging to the deceased, and passes to his legal representatives. Doorga Pershad v. Doochur Pershad and others, 3 Agra Rep., 188.

On the death of a son adopted by a Hindu as the son of one of his two wives, the property descends (the adoptive mother having died before the son) not to the other wife, but to the next legal heir. Kasheeshuree Debia v. Greesh Chunder Lahoree, W. R., 1864, 71.

Where two brothers, members of the same family, succeeded to equal shares in the paternal estates, the mere fact of one brother being absent, and the home-staying brother being in possession, does not deprive the former of his rights of inheritance, unless it is clearly shown that the possession by the latter was adverse to the absent brother. Mussamut Woozeeram v. Noorul Jan, 9 W. R., 98.

Whether a nephew takes his uncle's share by mere survivorship or by inheritance, if he takes on the ground of their having been joint in estate he "succeeds to," and "becomes entitled to the effects of," the deceased within the meaning of Act XXVII of 1860. Mussamut Jusoda Koonwar v. Gouree Byonath Sohae Singh, 6 W. R., 139.

This case upholds a former decision relating to the succession, according to the Hindu law, of nephews of the whole and half-blood. Gooroo Churn Sircar v. Koylash Chunder Sircar, 6 W. R., 93.

Under the Mitakshara a nephew succeeds, not as the heir of his father, but as the direct heir of his uncle. Brojo Mohun Thakoor v. Gouree Pershad Chowdry, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 70.

S. died leaving three sons and ancestral property, of which K., one of S.'s sons, took a third share. On the death of another of S.'s sons, without issue, K.'s original share was increased by his deceased brother's share,—Held that according to the Mitakshara law, one of K.'s sons was entitled, during K.'s lifetime, to bring a suit to assert his right in the share of K., inherited from his deceased brother, such share being ancestral property. Gungoo Mull v. Bunseedhur, 1, 6 N. W. R., 79.

(d) Of Mother.

By Hindu law the mother is a possible heir under certain circumstances. Sreemutty Tara Soondurée v. Sreemutty Rash Moonjuree, 12 W. R., 78.

According to Hindu law, a mother inheriting from her son has not an absolute property in the estate, but merely a life-interest, without power of alienation. P. Pachi Raza v. Venkata Nadu, 2 Mad. Rep., 402.

Held that in a separated family a Hindu mother succeeding to her son's immoveable property takes in it the same estate as a Hindu widow takes in the immoveable property of her husband dying without male issue.

A Hindu died leaving by his first wife, who predeceased him, three sons, from whom he had separated, his second wife and a minor son by the latter. The minor son died in infancy. Held that the mother succeeded to the immoveable property of her minor son, but took only a life-interest in it. Narsáppá Linguppa et al., v. Sakharum Krishna, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 215.

Where a partition of joint family property is made after the death of the sons the grandmother is not entitled to one-fifth share. Rajee Monee Dassee v. Puddum Mookhee Dassee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 66.

(e) Of Daughters and Daughters' Sons.

Married daughters are not excluded from succession by either the Dyabhaga or Mitakshara. Binode Koomaree Debee v. Purdan Gopal Sahee, 2 W. R., 176.

According to the Mitakshara law, a maiden daughter does not succeed to her father in preference to her paternal uncle. Mussamut Toolsee v. Mohadeb Raot and others, 6 W. R., 197.

The sons of a daughter cannot succeed to the estate of their grandfather till after the death of their mother. They are entitled to sue for their rights within twelve years of the death of their mother, and to require the period of their minority to be taken into consideration according to Section 11, Act XIV of 1859. Kummul Sha Bennick v. Ramjee Sha Bennick, 2 W. R., 277.

According to the Hindu law current in Bengal, in default of son, grandson, great-grandson, or widow, the unmarried daughter succeeds in preference to married daughters; and if the unmarried daughters should subsequently marry and die leaving male issue, her son will succeed to the exclusion of the married sisters and their male issue. Radha Kishen Manjee v. Rajah Ram Mundul and others, 6 W. R., 147.

According to Hindu law, a person cannot succeed as the adopted son of a daughter who has brothers alive, and who cannot be an appointed daughter if she had brothers when she married. Nor can he succeed as claiming under a bought son. Zachereddy Chimna Bassavapa v. Zachereddy Gowdapa, 5 W. R., P. C., 114.

Held that, according to Hindu law current at Benares, the daughters' sons inherit in default of qualified daughters; and that if there be sons of more than one daughter they take per capita, and not per stirpes. The widow was incompetent to modify the terms of the original transaction injuriously to the reversioners.

The plaintiff is equitably entitled to recover the profits of the share adjudged to him from which he has been unjustly excluded in consequence of his grandmother's illegal proceedings. Ram Surwath Pandey and others v. Basdeo Singh, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 168.

Under the Hindu law, where property is proved to be a separate and divided property, the daughters and daughter's son are the legal heirs entitled to it, and not more remote relations to the deceased. Burriyar Singh and others v. Mussamut Hunsee and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 166.

A distant relation (such as those who are called distant sapindas and samanodakas) of a deceased ryot is not entitled to succeed by inheritance to the cultivation of a hereditary ryot.

Held, with reference to the above principle, that the son of the daughter is too remote to succeed to the tenure of cultivating occupancy held by his maternal grandfather. Ram Surun Sokool and others v. Sheorutun Kovrinee and others, 2 Agra Rep., 166.

According to the Hindu law of descent, the son of a son's son is preferred, in the order of succession, before a daughter's son. Goorpogobind Chowdhry v. Hurrumadhub Roy, Marsh., 398.

A Hindu, an inhabitant of Bombay, entitled to separate moveable and immoveable property, dies without male issue, leaving a widow, four daughters, and brother, and the male issue of other deceased brothers. The widow is entitled to the moveable property absolutely, and to the immoveable property for life. Subject to the widow's interest the immoveable property descends to the daughters absolutely, in preference to the brother and the issue of the deceased brothers. Pranjeevandas Toolsedas v. Dewcooverbaee, 1 Bom. Rep., 130.

As between two married daughters, the circumstance of having a son is no qualification, on this side of India, giving the married daughter having a son a prior claim to the inheritance of her parent's property over the married daughter not having a son; such priority of claim depending on the several daughters being respectively endowed (sadhar) or unendowed (nidhar), the unendowed daughter having the preference.

Semble, — A daughter who becomes incurably blind in her infancy has no right to inheritance, but only to maintenance. Bakubai v. Mauchhabai, 2 Bom. Rep., 5.

A Hindu widow, whether childless or not, stands next in the order of succession on failure of male issue. Daughters can only succeed on failure of widows.

Where A. had two wives, B. and C., and B. predeceased A., leaving three daughters, and C. survived A., and was childless,—Held that C. succeeded to A.'s property in preference to the three daughters. Peraumcal v. Venkattaeyaen, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 223.

According to the law which prevails in Madras, the sons of a granddaughter are excluded from the inheritance. The plaintiff brought a suit for a moiety of the estate of his deceased second cousin, who left no issue or nearer kindred, claiming through his maternal great-grandfather. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to inherit the estate of the deceased. K. Kissen Lala v. Javallah Pershad Lala, 3 Mad. Rep., O. A. J., 346.

Held that a daughter can claim a declaration of her rights in paternal estates during the lifetime of her mother. Jeewan Ram v. Mussamut Roonta, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 240.

According to the Hindu law, an uncle's son succeeds in preference to a childless widowed daughter. Taramonee Gooptea v. Mussamut Lukheemonee Dassea, Marsh., 29.

Under the Mitakshara law a daughter can inherit a separated share; but where the property is held jointly the widow or daughter cannot succeed, but are only entitled to maintenance. Koolodah Debia v. Rajmotee Debia, 12 W. R., 456.

On this side of India having male issue does not determine the right to inherit. Comparative poverty is the only criterion for settling the claims of daughters to their father's estate. A nirdhun (unendowed) daughter has preference over a sadhun (endowed) daughter. Bakubai v. Mancharam (2 Bom., H. C., Rep., 5) followed. Poli v. Narotam Bapu et al., 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 183.

Under the Hindu law, the daughter of a deceased member of a family, to whom a separate property was awarded for maintenance, is a superior heir to a brother's grandson.

There seems no authority for the proposition that, on the death of junior members of a family to whom certain properties were awarded for maintenance, not only the property so awarded, but the profits made upon it by the donee, revert to the donor. Chowdry Hureehur Pershad Doss Puhraj v. Gocoolanund Dass Mohuputter, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 129.

According to Hindu law, when the sons of daughters succeed to the property of their grandfather they take by direct right of succession, as being his nearest heirs, like the sapindas of a man succeeding to his property on the death of his widow, but per capita. The rule of succession exists as laid down in the Dáya Bhága, à fortiori in the case of the daughter and grandson, whose pretensions are inferior to the wife's; and it rests upon the great principle of the entire Hindu law of succession to property, that nearness in regard to the attributed capacity and sacred duty to confer spiritual benefits by the offering of funeral oblations, either immediately or mediately, confers the right to inherit temporal wealth.

Unmarried or married daughters, on whom as a class paternal property devolves, take a joint life-interest with rights of survivorship. The estate of inheritance passes from their father to the sons of all the daughters as his nearest heirs; and on the death of the last surviving daughters the sons take the property equally. Srimutu Muttu Vizia Rugunada Rani Kolandapuri Nachiar alias Kuttama Nachiar v. Dorasinga Tewar alias Gauri Valaba Tewar, 6 Mad. Rep., 310.

According to Hindu law, a deceased daughter's son has no right of inheritance to the estate of his maternal grandfather during the life of any of his mother's sisters. Musst. Ramdan v. Beharee Lall, 1 N. W. R., Par. 7, p. 114.

By Hindu law, on the death of one of two sisters to whom the joint hereditary office of dancing girls attached to a pagoda had passed on the death of their mother, the share of the deceased sister in the office devolves on her daughter, and not on the surviving sister by survivorship. Kamakshi v. Nagarathuam, 5 Mad. Rep., 161.

(f) Of Sisters and Sisters' Sons.

If a sister's son is alive at the death of his uncle's last preceding female heir who succeeded to the property he takes the succession. Sata Ram Gossain v. Fakeer Chaund Chuckerbutty, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 433.

Held by the majority (Shumbhoo Nath Pundit, J., differing) that "grandsons in the female line" do not include sisters' sons. Mussamut Brojo Kissore Dossee v. Sreenath Bose and others, 8 W. R., 241.

According to Hindu law, neither a sister nor a sister's daughter can inherit. Kalee Pershad Surma v. Bhoirabee Dabee, 2 W. R., 180; and Anund Chunder Mookerjee v. Teetooram Chatterjea, 5 W. R., 215; and Ramdyal Deb v. Mussamut Magnee, 1 W. R., 227.

According to the Hindu law in force in the Madras Presidency, a sister's son does not inherit. Doe v. Kuppu Pillai, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 85.

The right of succession accrues to nephews (sisters' sons) whether born before or after the death of their maternal uncle, not on the death of the maternal uncle, but on the death of his widow; and the nephews can sue to question the validity of alienations made by the widow without legal necessity. Gobind Monee Dossee v. Sham Lall Bysack; Kali Coomar Chowdhry v. Ramdass Shaha, W. R., 1864, 153.

A Hindu, an inhabitant of Bombay, entitled to separately acquired moveable and immoveable property, died, leaving a widow, an infant son, three daughters, and a brother. The son died in infancy, and without having married.

Held, on demurrer, that the widow as mother of the son inherits his property, as to the moveables absolutely, as to the immoveables for life, with remainder to the sisters of the son as his heirs absolutely; and that as against the defendants (the widow and daughters) the plaintiffs (as sons of a separated brother) have by Hindu law no claim as heirs to any part of the property.

The word "parents" in the order of succession, as laid down in the Mitakshara, includes father and mother, and in like manner "brethren" includes sisters as well as brothers.

Held on appeal that, in a separated family, sisters take as heirs to an unmarried and intestate brother in preference to relations of the father. Marriage does not exclude them from the inheritance. Vinayek Anundra and others v. Luxmeebaee, 1 Bom. Rep., 117, and 3 W. R., P. C., 41.

According to Hindu law, one brother is the manager and trustee for another brother's widow, and his possession is not adverse to her.

A sister's son is not an heir according to law. Bheem Ram Chuckerbutty v. Huree Kishore Roy, 1 W. R., 359.

A sister's son, except in Bengal, is no heir according to the Mitakshara or the Mithila school. Jowahir Rahoot v. Mussamut Kailassoo, 1 W. R., 74.

A sister's son, in order to have a preferential title over his paternal uncle, must have been born or conceived when the succession opened out.

It is contrary to Hindu law that a mother should be a trustee for a son who may hereafter be conceived. Rash Beharee Roy v. Nimaye Churn, W. R., 1864, 223.

A sister cannot succeed her brother as heir by Hindu law. Srimati Rukkini Dasi v. Kadarnath Ghose, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 87.

According to the Hindu law of succession in force in the Madras Presidency, a sister's son is in the line of heirs.

Semble,—He is a Bandhu. Chelikani Tirupati Rujaninguru v. Raja Suraneni Venkata Gopala Zemindar, 6 Mad. Rep., 278.

A half-sister by the mother is entitled to succeed only when the deceased has left no children. Mothooranauth Mosoomdar v. Ensuff Ali Khan, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 356.

(g) Of Unborn Child.

An inheritance cannot remain in abeyance for an unbegotten heir (such not being a posthumous son). The succession must vest in the heirs existing at the time of the death of the person whose inheritance descends. Koylasnath Doss v. Gyamonee Dossee, W. R., 1864, 314.

Proprietary right is created by birth, and not by conception. A child in the womb takes no estate. In cases where, when the succession opens out, a female member of the family has conceived, the inheritance remains in abeyance until the result of the conception is ascertained. If the child be still-born the estate goes, not to his heir, but to the heir of the last owner.

A son or grandson's right of prohibition to his unseparated father making a gift, donation, or sale of effects inherited from his grandfather, cannot be exercised in favour of an unborn son. Mussamut Goura Chowdhrain v. Chummun Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, 340.

Amongst sapindas the nearest sapinda excludes those more remote. Khetter Gopaul Chatterjee v. Poornoo Chunder Chatterjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 483.

Under the Mitakshara system of Hindu law, in default of all heirs a brother's grandson can succeed. Kureem Chand Gurain v. Oodung Gurain, 6 W. R., 158.

According to Hindu law, the grandson of a brother of the grandfather of the deceased is heir to his property in default of nearer heirs. Braja Kishore Mitter Mozumdar v. Radha Gobind Dutt, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 435.

In the absence of nearer relatives a man may be heir to his mother's brother as regards property subject to the Mitakshara. Amarita Kumari Debi v. Lakhinarayan Chuckerbutty, 2 B. L. R., F. B., 28.

A plaintiff who sues by right of inheritance for the recovery of lands in the possession, not illegal or forcible, of defendants, to the rents whereof it was held in a previous suit, in which he intervened, that he had not been in the actual enjoyment, is bound to prove as well his title to the estate, as his lineal descent from, or relation in such degree of contiguity as would entitle him to part succession to, the original acquirer thereof. A descendant of a brother of the original acquirer, and a descendant not less than six generations, are not entitled under Hindu law to a share of the property. Chytun Mytee and others v. Lukeechurn Patnaik, 8 W. R., 258.

According to Hindu law, a sister's daughter cannot become an "appointed daughter" nor her son a "putrika putra," nor is the adoption of a "putrika putra" valid in the present day.

"Samanodakas" (or persons allied by a common oblation of water) belonging to the "gotra" (or race, or general family) of a deceased person are, according to Hindu law, sufficiently cognate to succeed to property in default of parties nearer of kin. Nursing Narain v. Bhuttun Lall, W. R., 1864, 194.

The great-grandson of a deceased proprietor's great-grandfather is a sapinda of such proprietor, and equally with him entitled to offer undivided oblations to their common ancestor (the great-grandfather), and as such inherits the estate. Brojo Kishore Mitter v. Radhagobind Dutt, 12 W. R., 339.

In certain cases a priest may, according to Hindu law, be the heir of a deceased disciple. Jugdanund Gossamee v. Kessub Nund Gossamee, W. R., 1864, 146.

According to Hindu law a chela is the heir of a deceased mohunt, and as such entitled to a certificate to enable him to collect his debts. Mohunt Sheoprokash Doss v. Mohunt Joyram Doss, 5 W. R., Mis., 57.

Under the Mitakshara law, if there be no kindred to the same general family, and connected by funeral oblations, the successions devolve on kindred connected by libations of water. Gentiles must be exhausted before the cognates can succeed. Mussamut Dig Dye and others v. Bhutum Lall and others, 11 W. R., 500.

The enumeration of bundhoos or cognates who succeed, given in Section 6, Chapter 2 of the Mitakshara, is an exhaustive one, and therefore those bundhoos only succeed who are enumerated therein. A maternal uncle or a father's maternal uncle cannot inherit, as they are not among the persons enumerated. Government v. Greedharee Lall Roy, 4 W. R., 13.

The enumeration of bandhus, or cognate kindred, given in Mitakshara II., Section 6, Art. I., is not exhaustive. The maternal uncle and the father's maternal uncle will take as heirs in preference to the Crown.

In a suit by the Crown claiming lands as an escheat, which are admittedly in the possession of the party claiming as heirs, the onus is on the Crown to show that the last proprietor died without heirs. It is open to the defendant in such a suit to set up any jus tertii to bar the claim of the Crown. Giridhari Lall Roy v. The Government of Bengal, 1 B. L. R., P. C., 44; S. C., 10 W. R., P. C., 31.

According to the Hindu law obtaining in Western India, the wives of all gotraja sapindas and samonadakas have rights of inheritance co-extensive with those of their husbands immediately after whom they succeed. Lakshmibai v. Jayrum Hari et al., 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 152.

A father's brother's daughter's son is entitled to be recognised as an heir according to the Hindu law current in the Bengal school. Guru Gobind Shaha Mandal v. Anand Lal Ghose Majamdar, 5 B. L. R., 15; 13 S. W. R., F. B., 49.

The great-grandson of the great-great-great-grandfather of the deceased is, according to the Mitakshara, a nearer heir to the deceased than his father's sister's son. Thakur Tibnath Singh v. Court of Wards, 5 B. L. R., 442; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 117.

According to the Mitakshara the great-great-great-grandson of the great-great-great-grandfather of the deceased is entitled to succession as one of the Gentiles. Byha Ram Singh v. Agar Singh, 5 B. L. R., 293; 14 S. W. R., P. C., 1.

Under the Mitakshara law a brother's grandson may be an heir. Mussamut Oorhya Kooer v. Rujoo Nye Sookool, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 208.

The words, "the heirs of the preceding kurnum," in Section 7 of Regulation XXIX of 1802, means his next of kin according to the order of succession of several grades of legal heirs, and not heirs in the order of succession to undivided divisible ancestral property.

A daughter's son is one of the nearer sapindas, and in the line of heirs before a brother's son according to Hindu law.

Semble,—An illegitimate son of a sudra by his concubine is his heir in preference to a brother's son. Krishnamma v. Papa, 4 Mad. Rep., 234.

The succession to a zemindary which is admitted to be in the nature of a principality, impartible and capable of enjoyment by only one member of the family at a time, is governed (in the absence of a special custom of descent) by the general Hindu law prevalent in the part of India in which the zemindary is situated, with such qualifications only as flow from the impartible character of the subject.

The succession to such a zemindary may be governed by a particular or customary canon of descent. Kattamar Nauchear v. The Rajah of Shivagungah, 2 W. R., P. C., 31.

On the death of a Brahmin (whether sacerdotal or not) without heirs, the sovereign power in British India is entitled to take his estate by escheat, subject however to the trusts and charges previously affecting the estate. The Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata Narainapah, 2 W. R., P. C., 59.

A person died childless, leaving two widows, and gave authority (verbal) to each of the widows to adopt a son. Held that he could not confer an authority on the widows which he himself could not have legally exercised, had he in his lifetime intended to adopt. Found on evidence that the proof adduced by plaintiff to prove the authority was insufficient, and that the plaintiff who claimed to have derived his title from his father, the adopted son of the deceased, could not under the circumstances maintain the suit to succeed to the property left by the other adopted son of the deceased describing him as his paternal uncle. Held, further, that the property being of the nature of an endowment, a claim to succeed under ordinary Hindu law of inheritance was not maintainable. Plaintiff might have sued to get the management of the property in preference to the defendant, a widow, by the custom or practice of the sect. Goosaeen Sree Choundawalee Bahoojee v. Girdhareejee, 3 Agra Rep., 226.

Partibility is the general rule of Hindu inheritance; the succession of one heir, as in the case of a raj, the exception. The East India Company v. Kamachee Boye Sahiba, 4 W. R., P. C., 42.

No words of inheritance are requisite to continue to his heirs a Hindu's interest in a freehold estate. Anundmohey Dossee v. John Doe, 4 W. R., P. C., 51.

According to the Hindu law, a rajah has full right to nominate a joobraj or heir-apparent, and a whole or uterine brother has a better title than a half-brother. Beerchunder Joobraj v. Neelkissen Thakoor, 1 W. R., 177.

A Hindu subject to the Mitakshara dying possessed of a share in joint family property, and also of separately acquired property, the two will not necessarily devolve on the same heir; but they may either descend to different persons, or, if descending to the same persons, may descend in a different way and with different consequences. Mussamut Pitum Koonwar, alias Munar Bibee v. Joy Kishen Dass, 6 W. R., 101.

Byragees are not excluded from inheritance. Treluck Chunder v. Shama Churn Prokash, 1 W. R., 209.

A daughter-in-law is not the heiress of her mother-in-law according to Hindu law. Bandam Settah v. Bandam Mlaho Lukshy, 4 Mad. Rep., 180.

There is no one rule of Hindu law regulating the descent of all Hindu rajahs and their estates; but in every case in which a departure from the ordinary law of succession and inheritance is relied on, a particular custom or koolacha must be proved. The Court of Wards on behalf of Raj Coomar Sheoraj Nundum Singh v. Raj Coomar Deo Nundun Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 143.

If a Hindu wife dies childless all property given to her by her father at the marriage ("before the nuptial fire") goes to the husband. Bistoo Pershad Burrant v. Radha Soonder Nath, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 115.

According to the Hindu law as current in Bengal, the husband is entitled to succeed to the property, which a woman receives from her father either before or after her marriage, in preference to her brother or mother. Juddoonunth Sircar v. Busunt Coomer Roy Chowdry, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 105.

Where there are rival claimants, the right of succession to a raj must be determined by the custom as known to the public functionaries of the district, as recognized by the family of the late rajah, and established by precedents.

Where an impartibility of a raj has its origin in the raj itself, the nature of the raj would not exclude from inheritance any persons of either sex, if without physical or intellectual infirmity. Maharanee Heerananth Kooera v. Burm Narain Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 375.

The mere impartibility of an estate is not sufficient to make the succession to it follow the course of succession of separate estate. The Shivagunga case explained. Stree Rajah Yanumalu Venkujamah v. Stree Rajah Yanumalu Boochi Venkudbra, 13 S. W. R., P. C., 21.

(k) Of Widows—(See 39, WIDOW).

A widow under the Hindu law is entitled to succeed to her husband's property, and to have her name registered as proprietor. Dehoo Debia v. Gobind Deb, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 42.

A Hindu widow who has inherited immoveable property from her husband, though possessed of a limited power of alienating portions of such property for necessary purposes or spiritual uses, cannot dispose by a gift in dharam or krishnaipau of the whole of such immoveable property without the consent of the heirs of her husband.

A sister on this side of India, taking as heir to her brother, takes his property as stridhun with an absolute power of disposition over it; and such property upon her death passes in the first instance to her daughters. The sons of such sister have not a vested interest in it as co-parceners with their mother. Property acquired by a married woman by inheritance, with the exception of property inherited by a widow from her husband, classes as stridhun, and descends accordingly. Bhaskar Trimbak Acharyee v. Mahadeb Ranaji et al., 6 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 1.

A widow is entitled by law to a life-estate in her husband's property. Ghirdharee Singh v. Koolbahul Singh and others, 6 W. R., P. C., 1.

A Hindu widow, whether childless or not, stands next in the order of succession on failure of male issue.

Where A. had two wives, B. and C., and B. pre-deceased A., leaving three daughters, and C. survived A. and was childless,—Held that C. succeeded to A.'s property in preference to the three daughters. Perammal v. Venkatommal, 1 Mad. Rep., 223.

A Hindu widow's right to succeed to her husband's ancestral undivided property is only as his immediate heir.

A widow can only inherit family property where there has been a partition among the co-parceners of whom her husband was one, or where the whole property has vested in her husband by the death of all the other co-parceners. Peddamatee Virashami v. Appa Ram and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 117.

A Hindu widow has an absolute right to the fullest beneficial interest in her husband's property inherited by her for her life. She takes as heir a proprietary estate in the land absolute for some purposes, although in some respects subject to special qualifications, and her disposition of the property is good for her life.

The proposition that a widow has no estate in her husband's immoveable property, but only the personal enjoyment of the usufruct, is untenable. Kamavadhani Venkata Subhaya v. Joysa Nara-singappa, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 116.

One Venkava Gandu died, leaving no son but two widows, Krishnamma and Rindamma. A dispute having arisen Krishnamma brought a suit against Rindamma and obtained a decree dividing equally between them the lands of the deceased husband. Krishnamma took possession of her moiety and held the same till her death, when Rindamma took possession.

In a suit by the sons of the deceased daughter of Krishnamma against Rindamma for the property held by Krishnamma,—Held that they were not entitled in preference to the surviving widow. Rindamma v. Venkataramappa, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 268.

According to Hindu law current in Southern India, two or more lawfully married wives (patnis) take a joint estate for life in their husband's property with rights of survivorship and equal beneficial enjoyment.

A claim by one of several widows to an absolute partition of the joint estate, giving to each a share in severalty, is not maintainable.

The position of senior widow gives her, as in the case of other co-parceners, a preferable claim to the care and management of the joint property.

A case may be made out of entitling one of several widows to the relief of separate possession of a portion of the inheritance. Such relief ought to be granted when from the nature or situation of the property and the conduct of co-widows or co-widow, it appears to be the only proper and effectual mode of securing the enjoyment of her distinct right to an equal share of the benefits of the estate.

Upon the death of the late Rajah of Tanjore, the Government of Madras in the exercise of their sovereign power took possession of the estate and private property of the Rajah. Subsequently the Government made over to the widows and daughter of the Rajah the landed and personal property, having previously obtained the opinion of the Hindu law officers of the Sudder Court on a question put with the view of ascertaining the Hindu law as applicable to the case. The order of Government contained the following direction: "The estate will therefore be made over to the senior widow, who will have the management and control of the property, and it will be her duty to provide in a suitable manner for the participative enjoyment of the estate in question by the other widows, her co-heirs. On the death of the last surviving widow, the daughter of the late Rajah, or failing her the next heirs of the late Rajah, if any, will inherit the property. In a suit by two of the widows against the senior widow, and the 14th defendant, the alleged adopted son of the late Rajah, for a division of the moveable property which had been made over to the senior widow by the Government of Madras, and for the cancellation of the adoption of the fourteenth defendant,—Held that the claim of the fourteenth defendant by right of adoption being as lineal heir to the Rajah in preference to the widows, would not be maintainable, assuming the adoption to have been valid. To that claim the absolute ownership of the Government in the interval from the death of the Rajah until the act of estate by which the transfer was made to the widows and daughters is fatal. H. H. M. Jijailamba Baye Shaiba v. H. H. M. Kámakshi Bayi Shaiba, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 424.

A. by his will appointed a guardian to his son and widow, and directed that the son should not take the management of the property before his twentieth year, and that in the event of his death the guardian should see that the widow adopted a son without delay. The guardian having died or declined to act,—Held that on the death of her son the widow was entitled to succeed as his heir, the provision to adopt not being imperative. Dino Moyee Chowdhrain v. A. D. C. Rehling, 2 W. R., Mis., 25.

Where property is acquired by the members of a joint Hindu family from funds derived from the ancestral property and held by them in joint possession, on the death of one of them his share does not devolve on his widow. Mussamut Tacknoo v. Mussamut Moonia and others, 7 W. R., 440.

In the case of property, of which part is the common property of a joint Hindu family, and part the separate acquisition of a deceased brother, his widow, in default of male issue, succeeds to his separate estate. Kateama Nauchear v. The Rajah of Shivagungah, 2 W. R., P. C., 31.

Under the Hindu law a widow, though she takes as heir, takes a special and qualified estate. If there be collateral heirs of her husband she cannot of her own will alienate the property, except for special purposes. For religious or charitable purposes, or those which are supposed to conduce to the spiritual welfare of her husband, she has a larger power of disposition than that which she possesses for purely worldly purposes. To support an alienation for the last she must show necessity. The restrictions on her power of alienation are inseparable from her estate, and independent of the existence of heirs capable of taking on her death. If for want of heirs the property, so far as it has not been lawfully disposed of by her, passes to the Crown, the Crown has the same power of protecting its interest as an heir by impeaching any injurious alienation by the widow. The onus is on those who claim under an alienation from a Hindu widow to show that the transaction was within her limited powers. The Collector of Masulipatam v. Cavaly Vencata Narainapah, 2 W. R., P. C., 61.

A childless widow, under the Mitakshara law, takes only a limited interest in her husband's estate, similar to that taken by a childless widow according to the law of the Bengal school. Panch Chowdhry Maktoon and others v. Kalee Churn and others, 9 W. R., 490.

Where a Hindu dies intestate, leaving no issue and several widows, the widows succeed equally, and are entitled to equal shares in his estate, and the ordinary course would be to grant them a joint administration. Infidelity in a wife, or incontinence in a widow, in order to constitute a disqualification to inherit, must be positively proved, or at any rate there must be a reasonably well-grounded suspicion of it having taken place. But, quære, as to anything less than positive proof being sufficient. Rumea v. Bhagee, 1 Bom. Rep., 66.

According to the Mitakshara law, where property is joint and undivided, a widow cannot succeed, but is entitled to maintenance only. The withdrawal by her husband's brothers of their claim to his share cannot give her a title to succeed to it. Mouhuron Koonwur, pauper, v. Thakoor Pershad, 5 W. R., 176.

The widow of one of the brothers of a divided Hindu family, governed by the Mitakshara law, does not acquire an absolute interest in her husband's separate estate, but only such an interest as would render her acts conveying her interest to a third party binding as against herself, but not as against the reversionary heirs, unless the alienations were made under legal necessity. Chut Banoo v. Ram Kishen Singh, W. R., 1864. 102.

Suit by a widow for possession of her husband's share of joint property inherited from his grandfather. Held that if her husband died before his grandfather she had no title, but that if he had outlived his grandfather his widow would be entitled to his share on proof of her having lived in commensality with the defendant within twelve years from the date of her dispossession. Bindoo Bashinee Dassee v. Anund Chunder Paul, 2 W. R., 179.

Where a widow sued to recover from the brothers of her deceased husband a share of property which remained undivided at his death, a division of part of the family property having taken place during the lifetime of the husband,—Held that the plaintiff had no right to recover the property which was actually undivided at the death of her husband. Timmi Reddy v. Achanama, 2 Mad. Rep., 325.

D., a Pardesi Hindu residing at Nasik, died leaving two widows, B. and P. B., who was the first wife, though not incontinent, had been turned out of his house by her husband some time after he married P.

In a suit by B. to recover a moiety of D.'s estate, P., while admitting that she herself had been leading a life of prostitution since D.'s death, resisted a partition of his estate, on the grounds that B. had, since D.'s death, cohabited with M., and subsequently married R., both of which allegations B. denied.

Held that, though by Hindu law, incontinence excluded a widow from succession to her husband's estate, yet if the inheritance were once vested it was not liable to be divested, unless her subsequent incontinence were accompanied by degradation; but that, by Act XXI of 1850, deprivation of caste can no longer be recognized as working a forfeiture of any right or property, or affecting any right of inheritance.

Held however also that if B. had duly remarried she would have ceased to have any right to recover or hold any part of her late husband's property; and as the District Judge, on appeal, had left the fact of B.'s re-marriage unascertained, that his decree must be reversed, and the case remanded for finding on that question. Párvati v. Bhikú, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 25.

Unchastity in a Hindu widow does not divest her of property which has become vested in her after the death of her husband. Abhiram Doss v. Sreeram Doss, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 421; 12 W. R., 336.

In the absence of evidence to the contrary, the rules of inheritance of the Jains must be taken to be the same as those of the orthodox Hindus in that part of the country in which the property is situate. Therefore where the widow of a Jain claimed as heiress of her husband, who was separate in estate, property situate in a district in which the Mitakshara prevails,—Held that she was entitled to succeed.

Held also upon the facts, per Peacock, C. J., (L. Jackson, J., dubitante), that the family was separate in respect of the property in dispute. Lalla Mahabeer Pershad and others v. Mussamut Kundur Koonwar, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 312; 8 W. R., 116.

A Hindu died possessed of self-acquired property in land, leaving no sons or sons' sons, but one widow, a daughter by the widow, and another daughter by an elder wife, deceased. The last died in the widow's lifetime, leaving two sons. Held that the daughters, as co-heiresses, took an estate in remainder vested in interest on their father's death, and that such vested right, on the death of one of them during the widow's lifetime, passed by inheritance to her sons, who upon the widow's death became entitled to enter into possession of their mother's half as her representatives.

The widow in Western India has only a particular estate for life in the immoveable separate property of her deceased husband Jameyatram and Uttamram v. Bai Jamua, 2 Bom. Rep., 10.

Held that a widow cannot under Hindu law claim to inherit the estate left by her husband's uncle, and could not consequently question the title of the defendant (widow of another brother's son), who was admittedly in possession of the estate claimed. Mussamut Gouree and others v. Mussamut Oomrao Koonwar, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 149.

According to the Dayabhaga, a Hindu widow is the heiress of her husband in preference to his brother. Chunder Kant Surmah and others v. Bungshee Deb Surmah, 6 W. R., 61.

According to Hindu law, the right of inheritance is not suspended by pregnancy or until adoption. Dukhina Dossee v. Rash Beharee Mozoomdar, 6 W. R., 221.

Where the Mitakshara law prevails, the widow of a member of a joint Hindu family cannot succeed to her husband in preference to the husband's brother, and is no heir to her brother-in-law, or to his widow after their death. Baney Pershaud v. Mussamut Mahaboodhy and others, 7 W. R., 292.

The deceased, a Hindu, died intestate and childless, leaving two widows, to the elder of whom he had been married thirty years, and to the younger eight years. Four or five years before deceased died the elder widow left his house in consequence of some family dissensions, and lived with her father until her husband's death. Held, first, on the authority of the Mayukhu, that the two widows were primâ-facie entitled to equal shares of the property; and, second, that to exclude a Hindu widow from the inheritance upon the ground of incontinence or infidelity, the proof of her incontinence or infidelity must be positive, or at any rate there must be reasonably well-founded suspicions. In the goods of Dadoo Munia, deceased, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 59.

Held that under Hindu law a widow was not entitled to inherit the estate of her husband's brother, and she having no locus standi in Court could not question the title of the party in possession of the disputed estate. Choora and others v. Musamut Busuntee, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 174.

The rule of Hindu law is that, in the case of inheritance the person to succeed must be the heir of the last full owner. On the death of the last full owner his wife succeeds as his heir to a widow's estate; and on her death the person to succeed is the heir at that time of the last full owner. Bhoobun Moyee Debia v. Ram Kishore Acharjee, 3 W. R., P. C., 15.

Held that a cousin in the third degree has no right of inheritance in the presence of cousins in the second degree. Mahabeer Persad and others v. Ram Sarun, 3 Agra Rep., A. C., 6.

Where an estate was held jointly by four sons, the widow of the eldest is not entitled to inherit, but only to maintenance. Dharoo Sooklain and another v. The Court of Wards, 11 W. R., 336.

A paternal uncle's daughter's son cannot inherit according to Hindu law as laid down in the Dyabhaga. Raj Gobind Dey v. Rajessuree Dossee, 4 W. R., 10.

According to the Mitakshara law, a maternal uncle or a father's maternal uncle cannot inherit. The Government v. Greedharee Lall Roy, 4 W. R., 13.

A member of a Hindu family cannot as such inherit the property of one taken out of that family by adoption.

The severance of an adopted son from his natural family is so complete that no mutual rights as to succession to property can arise between them. Ramkista Charyar v. Kuppanaaugar, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 180.

According to the Mitakshara law, a daughter or son's daughter does not inherit. Koomud Chunder Roy v. Seetakunt Roy, W. R., F. B., 75.

A father's brother's daughter's son cannot inherit according to Hindu law. Gobindo Hureekar v. Woomesh Chunder Roy, W. R., F. B., 176.

A brother's son's daughters are not heirs according to Hindu law. Radha Pearee Dossee v. Doorga Monee Dossia, 5 W. R., 131.

A step-mother cannot take by inheritance from her step-son. Lalle Jotee Lall v. Mussamut Dooranee Kooer and others, W. R., F. B., 173.

According to the Mitakshara, a sister's son cannot inherit. Thakoorain Sahibag and another v. Mohun Lall and others, 7 W. R., P. C., 25; but see other decisions.

The widow of a paternal uncle is, according to Hindu law, no heir to her nephew. Upendra Mohan Tagore v. Thanda Dasi, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 349.

According to the law which prevails in Madras, the sons of a granddaughter are excluded from inheritance.

The plaintiff brought a suit for a moiety of the estate, if his deceased second cousin left no issue or nearer kindred claiming through his maternal great-grandfather. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to inherit the estate of the deceased. K. Kishur Lala v. Janallah Pershad Lalla, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 346.

The Hindu law, independently of especial usage or custom, does not make illegitimacy an absolute disqualification for caste so as to affect in the relations of life, not only the bastard, but also his legitimate children.

A Hindu of a caste governed by the Shastras may contract a valid marriage with the daughter of a bastard.

The Hindu, unlike the English, law recognizes a bastard's relation to his father and family.

By birth, and without any form of legitimation, bastards of the three twice-born classes are now recognized as members of their father's family, and have a right to maintenance.

The illegitimate son of a khatriya cannot inherit.

In the case of sudras, the law has been and still is that bastards succeed their fathers by right of inheritance.

The illegitimate son of a sudra is not an outcast. Pandayá Télaver and another v. Puli Télaver and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 478.

The illegitimate son of a sudra by a concubine, not being a female slave, is entitled to maintenance according to Hindu law. Muttusamy Tagavira Yettapa Naikar v. Vencata Suva Yettia, 2 Mad. Rep., 293.

The illegitimate son of one of the mixed classes between the second and third of the regenerate classes has no title to inherit by the ordinary rules of Hindu law, and the circumstance that the father was illegitimate does not alter the law. Sri Gajapute Nilamani Patta Mohadeve Garu v. Sree

Gajaputee Radheca Patta Mohadeve, 2 Mad. Rep., 369.

The son of a sudra by a slave-girl is not entitled to share with legitimate sons in the inheritance of an uncle by the father's side. Nissar Murtojah v. Kowar Dhunwur Roy, Marsh., 609.

(c) Loss of Caste, Disease, &c.

The doctrine of Hindu law that outcasts are incapable of inheritance has no bearing upon the case of the members of new families which have sprung from persons so degraded. Tara Chund v. Rub Ram, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 5.

Held that the mere fact that the plaintiffs (whose near relationship to maintain the suit was established) are out of caste, and that the men of pure blood of their tribe do not eat with them is, of itself, no ground of exclusion from inheritance, Section 1, Act XXI of 1850, having annulled any such disqualification. Taij Singh v. Mussamut Kousilla and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 90.

Dumbness, if from birth, is a cause of disinherison in females as well as in males. A Hindu widow born dumb is, according to the law prevailing on this side of India, incapable of inheriting from her husband. Such widow is, however, entitled to her stridhun and to maintenance out of the property of her deceased husband. Case remanded to have the widow made a party to the suit, that it might be determined whether she was born dumb, and if so that the amount of her stridhun and of her maintenance might be ascertained. Vallabhrâm Shibnarayan v. Bai Hariganga, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 135.

According to Hindu law, the son of a deaf and dumb man, born after the death of his grandfather, cannot succeed to the estate descended from his grandfather. A. died leaving four sons. One, B., was born deaf and dumb. B. lived in commensality with his brothers. Some time after A.'s death a son was born to B. Held that B.'s son was not entitled to succeed as heir to a share of the property descended from A. Pareshmani Dasi v. Dinonath Das, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 117.

A Hindu died in 1832, leaving an only son who had been blind from his birth, and two widows, the survivor of whom died in 1849. On the death of the surviving widow the nephew succeeded as heir, the blind son being by Hindu law excluded from inheritance. The blind man having married, a son was born to him in 1858. The blind man died in 1861. Held by Norman, J., that on the birth of the blind man's son he became entitled to the inheritance from which his father had been excluded. Held on appeal (by a Full Bench) that by Hindu law an estate once vested cannot be divested in favour of the son of an excluded person born after the death of the ancestor. Such ruling does not apply to the case of the son of an excluded person if, having been begotten and being in the womb at the time of the ancestor's death, he is afterwards born capable of inheriting. Kalidas Dass and others v. Krishan Chunder Dass, 2 B. L. R., F. B., 103.

The mental incapacity which disqualifies a Hindu from inheriting on the ground of idiocy, is not necessarily utter mental darkness.

A person of unsound mind, who has been so from his birth, is in point of law an idiot.

The reason for disqualifying a Hindu idiot is his unfitness for the ordinary intercourse of life. Tiramagal Ammal v. Ramasvami Ayyangaly and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 214.

When it is contended that a Hindu is incapable of inheriting by reason of an incurable disease, the strictest proof of the disease will be required. Issur Chunder Sein and Luckee Monee Dossee v. Ranee Dossee, 2 W. R., 125.

Although, according to Hindu law, a lunatic has no rights of inheritance, he is not debarred from taking an estate duly conveyed to him. Gourenath and others v. The Collector of Monghyr and others, 7 W. R., 5.

To a suit brought by a Hindu husband against his wife for the restitution of conjugal rights, the fact that he is at the time of such suit suffering from a loathsome disease, such as leprosy, is a good defence. Bai Premkavar v. Bhika Kalanji, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C. P., 209.

It is only when leprosy assumes a virulent and aggravated type that it is by Hindu law made a ground for disqualification for inheritance. Janárdhan Pandarung v. Gopal and Vasadea Pandarung, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 145.

39.—WIDOW.

Although the shastras impose on a Hindu widow the duty of living with her deceased husband's relatives, the duty has been regarded by the British Courts as a moral duty which they will not lend their aid to enforce, and of which the non-performance does not deprive the widow of her right to inherit.

By consent of the parties, and for the protection of the estate, which consisted of cash, the Court ordered the amount to be invested in Government promissory notes in the joint names of the widow and brothers of the deceased, and directed that the interest should be paid to the sole receipt of the widow, with liberty for her to apply to the Court to order a sale if any necessity arose which would justify a sale under the Hindu law. Umrit Koweree v. Kidernath Ghose and others, 3 Agra Rep., 182.

A Hindu widow, as representative of the entire estate in litigation, has the same control with respect to compromise as she has with respect to the assertion of rights, and with respect to appeal against an adverse decision. Where a cause of action with regard to her husband's estate has once accrued to a Hindu widow, who nevertheless fails to assert her rights, no new cause of action arises to the heirs after her death. Tarinee Churn Gangooly v. John Watson, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 437; 12 W. R., 413.

After the death of a member of a Hindu family his widows were sued in their representative capacity, and decrees were obtained in respect of debts incurred by him in his lifetime on his own account. Held that the decrees could only be executed against that property which passed from the deceased to his widows in their own right, and not against other portions of the joint family property. Mussamut Phoolbas Kooer v. Lall Juggessur Sahi; Sudaburt Persaud Sahoo v. Lotf Ali Khan; Ram- dhyan Kooer v. Mussamut Phoolbas Kooer, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 340.

A Hindu died leaving a widow and an adopted son, who continued, after his death, to reside in the same dwelling-house in which they had resided with the deceased during his lifetime, and which formed a portion of his estate. The son being an infant, the widow had the management of the house, and let a portion of it to tenants at a monthly rent. Subsequently the son sold the house, as his property by inheritance, to a stranger, who gave the widow and tenants a week's notice to quit,—Held that the son, even if he had attained his majority, could not evict the widow, or authorize a purchaser to do so, without providing some other suitable dwelling for her; nor in any case could the tenants be turned out without a month's notice.

It seems that the passage in Katyayana (2 Colebrook's Digest, p. 133) is a restriction, and not a moral precept only, and that the heir of the deceased has not such a right in the dwelling of the family that he can at once, of his pleasure, turn out the females of the family, or sell it and give the purchaser a right to turn them out. Mangalu Debi v. Dinanath Bose, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 72, and 12 S. W. R., A. O., 35.

A Hindu widow in possession and the apparent next taker, by joining in one conveyance, can make a complete title. Mohunt Kishen Geer v. Busgat Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 379.

A Hindu widow, in whom the property of her husband has once vested, does not forfeit by her unchastity her right to such property.

Semble,—Unchastity, followed by degradation or expulsion from caste, would not be sufficient to deprive a widow of an estate which she has taken by inheritance. Srimati Matangini Debi v. Srimati Jaykuli Debi, 5 B. L. R., 466; 14 S. W. R., A. O., 23.

A decree was made in favour of K., a Hindu widow, in a suit brought by her against B. C., which declared that she was entitled to one-fifth share of the accumulations of the estate of the father of her husband from his death to the death of her husband, to be held by her as a Hindu widow, and to one-fifth of the subsequent accumulations absolutely. Execution of the decree was taken out, and the sum to which K. was declared entitled was paid into Court by B. C. in March, 1869. Macpherson, J., in delivering judgment, expressed a doubt whether the suit was brought for the benefit of the plaintiff, and stated that he would consider any application to protect any rights the reversionary heirs might have in the amount received by the plaintiff. No steps however were taken by B. C., by suit or otherwise, to protect the interests of the reversionary heirs in the sum paid into Court, but on K.'s applying, in March, 1871, to have the money paid to her out of Court, B. C., on behalf of himself as reversionary heir, filed an affidavit in opposition to K.'s application, charging her on information and belief with leading an immoral life, and of having assigned half the amount in Court to H. S., and expressing his apprehension of waste, and that if the money were allowed to be taken out of Court it would be lost to the reversioners. Held that K. was entitled to have the money paid out of Court to her. Biswanath Chandra v. Khantomani Dasi, 6 B. L. R., 747.

A decree in a suit against a widow in temporary possession for a debt arising out of her own neglect to do her duty, is not binding on all persons who take the estate in succession to her. A sale made in execution of such decree passes no more than the widow's personal interest. Bri Bhookun Lall Awastu v. Mohadeo Dobey, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 422.

A widowed Hindu mother, who refuses to dwell with her minor son in her father-in-law's house, and sells her infant daughter in marriage to a low caste person, thereby injuring the social position of her father-in-law's family, is not entitled to recover maintenance on account of her son from her father-in-law. Manmahini Dasi v. Balak Chandra Pandit, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 498; and 8 B. L. R., 22.

As against one who takes as heir, a Hindu widow has a right to maintenance out of the property in his hands. She also has a right to maintenance out of such property in the hands of any one who takes it with notice of her having set up a claim for maintenance against the heir.

By the law of Bengal she has no lien on the property for her maintenance against all the world irrespective of such notice. Srimati Bhugabuti Dasi v. Kanailall Mitter, 8 B. L. R., 225.

The canon of the Hindu law of Northern India, in regard to the succession of widows, is "that a wedded wife, being chaste, takes the whole estate of a man, who being separated from his co-heirs and not subsequently re-united with them, dies leaving no male issue." The limit of the "co-heirs" must be held to include undivided collateral relations, who are descendants in the male line of one who was a co-parcener with an ancestor of the last possessor. Collateral kinsmen answering the above description have interests which pass inter se by right of survivorship, and a widow's right as heir is excluded by the text when any of such collateral kinsmen survive her husband. The governing principle of the rule is co-parcenary survivorship, which precludes alike the right of the widow and every other member of the family, who has no right to the enjoyment of the estate before the death of the possessor. Sri Rajah Yenumula Gavuredèvamma Garu v. Sri Rajah Yenumula Ramandora Garu, 6 Mad. Rep., 93.

It is not the universal rule that a Hindu woman cannot inherit so long as there is a male representative of the family. Her right to inherit depends on the nature of the property. If the property be the joint property of an undivided Hindu family, females are only entitled to maintenance; but if the property be held as a separate or divided property it devolves upon the female heirs in their proper order of succession. Musumut Soorjoon v. Ishru Bramma, 3 N. W. R., 74.

Where the widow has been allowed to exercise acts of ownership in respect of landed property belonging to her deceased husband incompatible with a mere right to maintenance from his estate, the onus of proof that the widow is entitled to nothing beyond a bare maintenance lies upon the party asserting this. Newindh Singh and another v. Musumut Sohun Kooer, 3 N. W. R., 12.

40.—Wills.

V. and M., Hindus residing in Bombay, made a deed of partition in 1823 of the whole of the family property, moveable and immoveable, which had come into their joint enjoyment on the death of their father. V. died in 1850, having made a will prepared by an English solicitor, in the English language and form, by which after various bequests to members of the family he disposed of the residue of his estate, one-third share to his son V. absolutely; another third to his son L. absolutely; "and the remaining clear third share to my grandsons K., V., G., and N., the sons of my late son Moroba, deceased, their and each of their respective heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, share and share alike."

These residuary bequests, it was provided, were not to take effect until after the death of the testator's widow, who was appointed executrix and manager of the whole estate during her life; but the estate was divided by the award of arbitrators in 1855, after making a provision for the widow, in substantial accordance with the directions of the will. V. and L. immediately thereafter took possession of their respective third shares of the moveable and immoveable estate, but the third share allotted to the four sons of M., who were all still infants, remained unapportioned until 1856, when, on a suit being filed, the greater part of the moveable property was apportioned. The immoveable property allotted to them remained unapportioned, and was managed first by the widow of M. till her death in 1855; then by his eldest son K., till his death, without male issue, in 1859; then by the next eldest son V. till his death, without issue, in 1864; and afterwards by the elder of the two surviving sons; and the proceeds were treated throughout as though the property was held in co-parcenary by the four sons as a joint and undivided Hindu family.

In a suit brought by L., the widow of K., against K.'s surviving brothers, and S., the widow of his brother V., in which L. claimed to be absolutely entitled as heir of her husband [and also as heir of her daughter, who died after her husband's death, childless and unmarried,] to a fourth part of the third share of the estate allotted by the award of 1855,—Held (1) that the words "share and share alike," occurring in the will of V., ought not to be construed as necessarily constituting a tenancy-in-common, with all the incidents attached thereto in English law; but that each of the four sons of M. took a separate share in the third of the testator's residuary estate; the share of each son going on his decease to those who would, according to Hindu (and not according to English) law, be his heirs as a separated Hindu; (2) that with regard to the immoveable property devised by the will and allotted by the award to the sons of M. there never was a union of estate, a co-parcenary from the commencement; and consequently there was no reunion in the sense of the Hindu law, notwithstanding joint enjoyment and common residence; but only postponement for a time, and for purposes of convenience, of an apportionment of the estate, which was accordingly (among other things) decreed. Lakshmibai v. Gunpat Moraba et al., 4 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 150.

V., a Hindu, being possessed of property, both moveable and immoveable, which he acquired by making partition with his brother of their joint ancestral estate, died in 1850, after making a will in the English language, by which, after various bequests, he disposed of the residue of his said property: one-third to his son V. absolutely, one-third to his son L. absolutely, "and the remaining clear third share to his grandsons, K., V., G., and N., the sons of my late son Moraba, deceased, their and each of their respective heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, share and share alike." These residuary bequests were not to take effect until after the death of the testator's widow, who was appointed executrix and manager of the whole estate during her life.

The estate was divided by arbitrators in 1855, after making provision for the testator's widow, in substantial accordance with the will, and V. and L. immediately entered into possession of their third shares; the third share allotted to the four sons of M., who were then infants, represented by their mother and guardian, remained unapportioned until 1856, when, on a suit being filed, the greater part of the moveable property was apportioned. The immoveable property continued unapportioned, the bill stating that it was not for the interest of the minors then to apportion it; and the sons of M. continued to enjoy the rents and profits, living together as an undivided Hindu family, the property being successively managed by the eldest surviving brother. In 1866 the then surviving sons of M., having attained their majority, joined with V., the son of the testator, in conveying to a purchaser a bangla, which had been allotted to him as portion of his share under the will.

In a suit brought by L., the widow of K., against K.'s surviving brothers, and S. the widow of his brother V., in which L. claimed to be absolutely entitled, as heir of her husband (and also as heir of her daughter, who died after the husband's death childless and unmarried), to a fourth part of the third share of the estate allotted by the award of 1855,—

Held that the surviving brothers of K. had, by their conduct since attaining their majority, adopted the acts of their mother and guardian, and had agreed to treat the will of the testator as a valid will, and were accordingly estopped from disputing provisions.

Held, further, that the language of the testator showed an intention that his grandsons should take the one-third between them in severalty, and as members of a divided family, and that the will must be so construed.

A Hindu widow succeeding to the immoveable property of her deceased husband, and also claiming as heir to her only daughter, who died after her father childless and unmarried, is only entitled during her life to a widow's estate. The doctrine laid down in the Division Court that ancestral property after partition can be disposed of by will, in the same way as self-acquired property, disapproved of, as opposed to the authorities and general spirit of Hindu law. Gunpat Moraba and Narayana Moraba v. Moraba, 5 Bom. Rep., O. C. P., 128.

Nobin Chunder Ghose, a Hindu, died without issue, leaving a widow (the plaintiff). He left a will by which he gave a conditional power of adoption in the following words:—

"My wife is supposed to be pregnant with child; if her conception be true, and she be delivered of a male child, then there shall be no necessity for the adoption of children as mentioned below, but if a daughter be born, she will, in that case, adopt the twain mentioned below, and whatever property there shall exist, consisting of moveables and immoveables, &c., my executors shall divide into three equal shares, and give the same to the daughter and adopted sons on their attaining the age of majority, and if a son be born and happen to die before attaining majority, in that case she shall adopt the sons of my sisters mentioned below, and for that purpose I give her, that is to say, my said wife shall, in conformity with our shaster, adopt the illustrious Sodanund Ghose, the third son of Srijoot Ramrutton Ghose, and Obhoy Churn Ghose, the youngest son of Srijoot Sreenath Ghose, an inhabitant of Autpoore, that is to say, the two sons of my two uterine sisters, in doing which there shall be no deviation. Should my wife not adopt the children after my decease, then the executors named hereinafter shall, according to this will and in pursuance of the permission given by me, cause the said two children to be received in adoption. If any of the said adopted sons depart this life before attaining the age of majority, then one of the uterine brothers of the deceased adopted son shall be received in adoption according to law in the room of deceased adopted son," &c.

The plaintiff did not give birth to either son or daughter, nor did she adopt either of the persons indicated by the will. Sodanund Ghose died in 1865, and Obhoy Churn was living at the date of the suit and was of age. Held that whether the two persons indicated could or could not be legally adopted as pointed out by the will, according to Hindu law, there was a gift to them as devisees by implication. S. M. Doss Money Dossee v. S. M. Prosonomoye Dossee, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 18.

Any Hindu within these provinces, whether governed by the Bengal mode of succession or otherwise, possesses a power to bequeath an estate by will co-extensive with his power over the estate in his lifetime.

When it is sought to exclude female heirs from succession to a husband or father under the Mitakshara, on the grouud that the estate is joint, it must be shown to have been so at the time of the husband's or father's death, and not merely at the death of a predeceasing brother, the father of the claimant. Mussamut Pitum Koonwar v. Munar Bebee and Joy Kishen Doss, 6 W. R., 101.

A Hindu on his death-bed, a few days before he died, caused certain Government paper to be given to his son in his presence in these words: "Bring out the papers, and give them to my son;" but he did not make or direct endorsement thereof. Subsequently, being asked to endorse them, he said, "I am very weak; how can I sign so many papers? When I get a little strength I will sign them. What cause have you for being anxious?"

Held by Phear, J., that it was a good donatio mortis causâ. A donatio mortis causâ has not the same signification here as in England.

Held on appeal by Peacock, C. J.—The gift was not governed by the strict principles of English law, but by the Hindu law. By English law there was a valid donatio mortis causâ; assuming it to be a gift inter vivos, it was a valid gift by Hindu law, and the principal and interest secured by the Government papers, and not the mere paper, passed to the donee.

By Macpherson, J.—The circumstances amounted to a gift by a nuncupative will made in contemplation of death. Kumara Upendra Krishna Deb Bahadur v. Nabin Krishna Bose, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 113; S. C., 12 W. R., O. C., 4.

A testamentary paper drawn up in the lifetime of the testator, when, though very ill, he was in full possession of his senses, and duly attested by the subscribing witnesses, who depose that it was drawn according to the instructions of the testator, and that he in their presence signified his assent thereto, was held to be sufficient under Hindu law. Tara Chand Bose v. Nobeen Chunder Mitter, 3 W. R., 138.

A Hindu testator, after the death of his widow, gave a moiety of his property to his brother A., and on his death to A.'s two sons, B. and C. A. died in the lifetime of the testator's widow, and a complete division of all A.'s property which was held in co-parcenary was agreed upon by B. and C. B. also died in the lifetime of the testator's widow, and on the death of the testator's widow B.'s widow claimed his share.

Held that B. and C. took A.'s moiety under the will as tenants in common, and that each of them had a vested interest in a one-fourth share, though the actual enjoyment was postponed until the death of the widow; and that the claim of B.'s widow was not barred by the doctrine of Hindu law that a widow succeeding as heir to her husband cannot recover property not in the possession of her husband, which doctrine was held to be inapplicable to the case of property in which the husband had a vested interest under a will or deed, though the actual enjoyment thereof was postponed during the lifetime of another.

According to the Hindu law, a widow cannot claim an undivided property. Rewan Persaud v. Mussamut Radha Beeby, 7 W. R., P. C., 35.

R. R. D. died possessed of certain property in Calcutta, and left him surviving S. D., widow of his son J. C., deceased, and three granddaughters, upon whose marriages he directed H. P., his executor, to expend Rs. 1,600, and to pay his debts, &c.; and further directed that if there should not be money forthcoming for the purpose specified in the will, that the property should be sold to make up the deficit. H. P. expended on the marriages much more than was limited by the will, and for this purpose mortgaged the property to T. C. and others, who were proceeding to foreclose when S. D. sued to have the mortgage deed set aside as against the heir of R. R. D., which she claimed to be, through U. S., deceased, whom she had adopted under a direction in the will of her husband that she should adopt three sons in succession, a direction which H. P. was enjoined by R. R. D.'s will to see carried out. The mortgagee resisted her claim on the grounds that she had not adopted a second son, that the powers of sale to H. P. included a power of mortgage, and that the property was necessarily mortgaged for family purposes. Judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Held that R. R. D. had no power to mortgage the property; that an attorney or executor under a Hindu will has not the same power over a testator's estate as an executor would have over leasehold estate according to English law; that, according to Hindu law, a manager or an executor under a will has only a limited and qualified power over the immoveable estate of the testator; that the general power of a manager under a will may be restricted by the will; that a manager under a will is bound to act according to the directions in the will; and that where an attorney or manager under a will has power to mortgage for specific purposes, it is the duty of the mortgagee to enquire into the circumstances under which, and the authority upon which the mortgage was effected.

That when a will directs a certain sum to be expended for marriage purposes, the manager or executor has no power to expend a larger sum thereon; that a mortgagee having notice of such a bequest is not justified in lending a larger sum for that purpose; that a direction in a will to sell houses, and invest the surplus proceeds in Government securities, does not authorize the executor to borrow money at a high interest, and amounts to a direction not to mortgage the houses; that when a plaintiff seeks to set aside a mortgage, on the ground that the mortgagor had no power to mortgage, and that the mortgagees had acted fraudulently, the Court can grant relief even if the fraud be not made out, the issue as to the mortgagor's power to mortgage being found in favour of the plaintiff; and that when a widow neglects to adopt a second son on the death of the first adopted son, as directed by her deceased husband, she commits a wrong, but may nevertheless be the heiress of the first adopted son. Sreemutty Dossee, heiress of Rajmohun Roy, deceased v. Tarrachund Coondoo Chowdhry and others, Bourke's Rep., A. O. C., 48.

A., a Hindu, died leaving two grandsons, B. and C., to whom his estate descended. They were joint in food, worship, and estate. The property was wholly situate in Bengal, and the family, who originally came from the Western Provinces, had long been resident there. C. died, leaving his widow D. and his brother B. surviving him. B., who was manager, died 2½ years after C. After B.'s death D. brought her suit to establish her right as widow of C. to a moiety of the family property. The representatives of B. set up an instrument, which they alleged to be the will of C., whereby he bequeathed his share to B., reserving the maintenance to D.

The Judge of the Zillah Court of Nuddea held that the alleged will of C. was genuine, and dismissed D.'s suit. The High Court, on appeal, held (1) that D. ought firstly to have shown her title to sue, i.e., she having admitted that the family came from Mithila, she ought to have shown that they were no longer governed by the Mitakshara; (2) that for several generations the rule of inheritance had been according to the Dayabhaga; (3) that the alleged will was not proved (there was evidence before the Court of the factum of the will adequate to the proof of an ordinary will, but the Court held that this evidence was outweighed by the internal improbabilities); (4) that if the rule of inheritance was not according to the Dayabhaga the will was inofficious.

On appeal to the Privy Council,—Held, first, it would be a rash conclusion, on the state of the evidence in the case, to suppose a preference of the law of Bengal likely to be operative on the mind of the testator; and therefore there was no foundation for treating the will as inofficious. Second, it was not necessary to decide whether the rule of inheritance was according to the Dayabhaga or the Mitakshara. Third, the evidence was adequate to the proof of an ordinary will, and there was no internal improbability of the will sufficient to discredit it.

Hindu law is in the nature of a personal usage or custom, and probably migratory families or tribes would retain their own usages. The presumption is in favour of the continuance of the ancient family custom. The decision of the High Court reversed, and the decision of the Court of Nuddea restored and affirmed. Surendra Nath Roy v. Hiramoni Burmoni, 1 B. L. R., P. C., 26; 10 W. R., P. C., 35.

A Hindu inhabitant of Calcutta died in 1837, leaving three sons, G., T., and M., and several daughters; he left property, moveable and immoveable, and a will dated 29th October, 1836, as well as a deed of gift of even date, but executed in point of time prior to the will. By the deed of gift he gave his property as follows:—

To his three sons, G., T., and M., his self-acquired estate and his patrimony (i.e.), his own share, agreeably to the will of his father, giving to them power of making a gift or sale, and to hold and enjoy, themselves, sons, grandsons, and so on in succession. His family dwelling-houses to remain in equal shares, his sons to dwell therein, but not to be able to let or sell them to any one else; then followed certain provisions with regard to a family idol, for religious observances, &c., after which the deed went on to say: "You will divide in three equal shares and receive the ready money and company's papers and bank's shares, &c., which I have; you will not be able to give in gift, or sell these properties under twenty years of age; the children legitimately begotten by you will receive the same. If no son or daughter be born, or if there be no probability of its being born to any one of you (then), he will have the right and power of making a gift or sale of these. If any leave only a childless widow, then that childless widow shall have no claim or demand for any share in my real and personal property, &c., and the debsheva, and so forth. She shall not be able to make any claim on the plea of my having made a gift to her husband. Being for life under the control of my sons who may be in existence, she shall, for her food, raiment, and other expenses, get interest on Rs. 4,500. No gift and sale, &c., shall be made without providing for this. Finis."

After which followed certain provisions for his daughters, &c. The will, after appointing one of his sons and three other persons executors, contained in its earlier clause similar provisions to those contained in the earlier part of the deed of gift; it also referred in express terms to a deed of gift. It afterwards went on to make several dispositions, among them the following:—

"10th Section. If no issue be born to any of my sons and his wife survives him, she will enjoy and possess the share of her husband during her lifetime, she will not become vested with the right and power of making gift or sale (thereof). As long as she lives she will live under the control and in the family of such of my sons as shall be alive; those sons will preserve the said property and maintain her. If she remain not under (their) control, then in that case she will have no concern with the said property, (but) during her life she will receive her food and raiment in consideration of her status (in life). All of the surviving sons will get that property in equal shares. Finis."

"20th Section. Besides the property of mine specified in this deed of gift, whatever property will (i.e., may) be acquired after the date of this my will the same shall be taken by my sons in equal shares."

"23rd Section. The property of which I have made a gift to my sons they shall not be competent to make a sale or gift thereof within twenty years; when there will be any grandsons in the male line they shall get all that property; if any one of them do not have a son, (or) if there be no probability of (his) having a son at a subsequent period, he shall have power to make a sale or gift. Finis."

It appeared that the testator had, at the time he executed these instruments, an intention to go on a pilgrimage to Brindabun. G. and one of the other executors proved the will; the other executor died in 1844, since which time G. remained in possession of the property. T. died about 1858 without issue, and his widow B. sued the surviving brothers G. and M. for her husband's share in the estate. This suit they compromised by a payment to B., G., and M. afterwards, and within twenty years had issue sons and daughters. In a suit to have the will and deed construed it was held that although the deed was not produced when probate of the will was taken out, it was sufficiently proved before the Court in the present suit to allow its being acted on, that the provisions in the will controlled the inconsistent provisions in the deed of gift; that consequently the son's childless widow took her husband's share for life; that the sons having male issue took only a life-interest; that the grandsons during the lifetime of their fathers took nothing, but after the death of their father respectively took among them equally their father's share; the share of each son going to his own son or sons only, and not to grandsons of the testator generally. The restriction on alienation extended to both the moveable and immoveable property.

Held also that the widow of T., having received a sum of money from M. and G. in lieu of T.'s share, that share went to M. and G. in equal shares for life, and on the death of either of them his share would go to his own sons absolutely. Satcowrie Sein and others v. Gobind Chunder Sein and Muddoosooddun Sein and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 56.

Notwithstanding that a Division Bench of the High Court, on appeal in 1863, give its opinion on certain points in a previous suit between the same parties, the High Court, on the present appeal, held that the parties were entitled to the Court's opinion on the same points, as they pointed out that these points did not arise in the previous suit (which was brought for an object different to that for which the present suit was instituted), and the opinion of the Court in 1863 was therefore ultra vires, and did not conclude the parties.

In this country there are no formalities to be gone through in order to the constitution of a valid will, and all that is required is that the intention of the testator should be ascertained in whatever way it may be ascertained, whether by word of mouth or in writing, clearly and unmistakably.

A son under the Mitakshara law is entitled jointly with his father from the moment of his birth, or, in the case of his adoption, to ancestral estate, and also to the profits accruing after his birth. Sudanund Mohapattur v. Soorjomonee Debee, 8 W. R., 455.

Under a bequest by a Hindu of Rs. 10 per month, followed by a direction to the following effect: "In this manner continue to pay in the legatee's name so long as he shall be alive; after his death continue to pay the same to his descendants from generation to generation,"—Held, 1st, that the legatee took only a life-interest under the bequest; 2nd, that the words "from generation to generation" did not import more than "absolutely" and "for ever" import in an English instrument; 3rd, that the descendants in existence at the time of the tenant for life's death took absolutely as a class; and 4th, that such descendants were entitled in equal shares to an amount sufficient to produce the monthly sum of Rs. 10.

Remarks on the construction of Hindu wills.

Descendants of the testator in a Hindu will would include children and grandchildren living at his decease, but does not include the testator's brother or widow.

There is no rule of Hindu law imposing any restriction in point of time on the operation of a bequest creating a series of successive life-interest in each generation of a legatee's descendants; but, semble, the grounds of the rules against perpetuities are applicable to the property of Hindus, and the Court will be very reluctant to construe a Hindu will so as to tie up property for an indefinite period. Arumagam Madali v. Ammi Ammal, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 400.

Held that a will made by a Hindu dividing unequally ancestral property between his sons, and assigning a share to his wife, with the power of disposing of it, was illegal under Hindu law.

The widow was entitled to receive for maintenance a share of the property or profits equal to the share of one son. Rajah Buldeo Singh v. Koonwar Mahabeen Singh and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 155.

Held, on the construction of the will, that the testator did not give his widow a full proprietary right which she could transmit to her daughter, so as to entitle the latter's husband to succeed to the estate on her dying childless. Rao Pertab Singh v. Koonwer Khoosial Singh and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 90.

S., a Hindu, having a wife and one daughter, executed in his last illness a document attested by two witnesses as follows: "S., the proprietor of, &c. Up to this date I have no son of the body. Under these circumstances the malicks of the whole of my estate, real and personal, are my wife B. C., and my daughter W. C. Therefore I, considering this, for the purpose of registering the names of my wife and daughter in substitution of my own name, appoint B. as my attorney. It is proper that the aforesaid attorney, after presenting himself before the hazoor, should petition to the above effect asking for a mutation. Whatever is done in the management of the case, I confirm it as my own act. Dated, &c." Three days before the death of S., B., the person named as mookhtear, presented a petition of S. to the Collector, reciting the want of heirs male, and which then continued thus: "Under these circumstances my wife B. C. and my daughter W. C. are my heirs. Be that as it may, after my death all my property, paying revenue to Government or rent-free, will devolve upon my aforesaid wife and daughter; consequently, keeping this in view, I file this petition to you, praying that, on striking off my name, the names of B. C. my wife and of W. C. my daughter be substituted for my name as proprietors in regard of the estate, revenue paying and rent-free, in the books of mutation and the Collectorate papers, and may remain current from this date." Held that these two documents constituted a disposition of his property by S., by a testamentary instrument, valid according to Hindu law; and that upon the death of S. his wife and daughter acquired a joint interest in the property.

There is no prohibition in the Hindu law against a gift to an idiot. Although an idiot child cannot take by right of inheritance, a gift by a parent to an idiot child to operate after the parent's death is valid. Kooldebnarain Shaheo and others v. Mussamut Woma Coomaree, Marsh., 357.

A Hindu will need not be attested. A Hindu may make a nuncupative will. Vallivyagam Pillai v. Pacha and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 326.

S. being desirous of securing and settling his property, executed a deed of trust whereby he conveyed and assigned all his real and personal property unto trustees, upon (among others) the following trusts: that immediately after his death the trustees should convey, assign, transfer, and make over all the premises mentioned in the deed unto such person or persons as S. should, by his last will, attested by two witnesses, direct and appoint, and in default of such direction and appointment unto the next heirs of S., their heirs and assigns, for ever, and in the meantime to pay the Government revenue out of the rents and profits of the real property, and employ the residue and accumulations as well as the produce and accumulations of the personal property "in such a manner as may procure the daily worship of the household idols" mentioned in the deed, and pay what they considered a fair and proper sum to the wives and family of S. living at his death and residing in the family dwelling-house. By his will, dated the same day as the deed, S. declared that he ratified and confirmed the deed, subject to such provisions as were contained in his will, which were that the trustees should not charge the fund for the maintenance of those who should not live in the family dwelling-house and for the appointment of new trustees.

Held, first, upon the authority of Wilson v. Pigott, that the powers of the trustees (under the deed) did not cease on the death of S., and that the directions in the will, although not strictly within the word, amounted to a good appointment in equity, so that instead of the trustees of the deed conveying the property on the death of S. to his son, they should contrive to hold subject to the trusts of the deed as modified by the will.

Secondly, that the words "in such a manner as may procure the daily worship," &c., meant in such manner as shall be sufficient to procure the daily worship, &c., and that the trustees were not authorized to apply such portion of the trust funds as they in their discretion might think fit, but only such portion as was reasonably sufficient for those purposes. General debts and liabilities are not charges against property forfeited upon conviction of felony. Horeedoss Banerjee v. C. S. Hogg (Administrator-General of Bengal) and others, 1 Ind. Jur., O. When property is bequeathed to any person, he is entitled to the whole interest of the testator therein, unless it appears from the will that only a restricted interest was intended for him, the onus of proving which is on the person alleging it. Sreemutty Sursutty Dossee v. Poornochunder Roy, 4 W. R., 55.

A woman cannot execute a will regarding any property she inherits from her husband or father. She may dispose of her stridhun by gift, will, or sale, unless it is immoveable property given her by her husband. Teencowree Chatterjee v. Dinonath Banerjee, 3 W. R., 49.

A Hindu by will attempted to create a trust for the accumulation, for 99 years, of the surplus income (after certain yearly payments) of his estate in the purchase of zemindaries, &c., from time to time, and empowered his trustees to continue such trust after the expiration of the 99 years' term. The will contained no disposition of the beneficial interest in the zemindary so to be purchased. Held that such trust was void.

Semble,—Perpetuity (save in the case of religious and charitable endowments) is not sanctioned by Hindu law. Kumara Asima Krishna Deb v. Kumara Krishna Deb, 2 B. L. R., O. C., 11.

A Hindu may make an alienation of his property to take effect after his death.

The Hindu law in Madras admits of the testamentary disposition of property, whether ancestral or self-acquired.

Semble,—That a Hindu's will would not be invalidated merely by its omitting to provide for his widow. Vallivyagam Pillai v. Pacha and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 326.

A Hindu may make a nuncupative will of property, whether immoveable or moveable. Crinivasammal and others v. Vijayammal and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 37.

The meaning of the testator is to be ascertained by the words which he has made use of, having regard to the laws which prevail in India relative to these subjects.

A testator directed his sons, using the words "living jointly in respect of food," to take care of and look after his property, moveable and immoveable, and carry on his trading business.

Held that this interest is not accurately represented by the words joint estate in England, nor is it analogous to the case of a testator in England who gives property to executors for the purpose of carrying on his trade, but is more analogous to the tenancy in common which prevails in England.

The will also directed that on the death of a son, if that son died leaving a son, the share of that son was to go to that son's son, and if the son dying left no son that the share should go to the survivors. Held that the share of profits made during the joint lives of the sons, which belonged to the deceased son, goes over to the other sons of the testator as they would go according to law, as from a consideration of the various terms of the will itself there was an absence of all directions on the part of the testator to accumulate the profits, or to dispose of the profits which were the property of the son. Prankisto Chunder v. Sreemutty Bamasoondery Dossee, 9 W. R., 1.

By the first clause of the will of a Hindu the testator devised all his real and personal estate to his five sons. By a subsequent clause the testator provided as follows: "But should peradventure any among my said five sons die, not leaving any son from his loins, nor any son's son, in that event neither his widow, nor his daughter, nor his daughter's son, nor any of them, will get any share out of the share that he has obtained of the immoveables and moveables of my said estate. In that event of the said property, such of my sons and my sons' sons as shall then be alive they will receive that wealth according to their respective shares. If any one acts repugnant to this it is inadmissible. However, if my sonless son shall leave a widow, in that event she will only receive Company's rupees ten thousand for her food and raiment." Held, firstly, that by the words "not leaving any son from his loins, nor any son's son," the testator meant not an indefinite failure of male issue, but a failure of male issue of any of his sons at the time of the death of that son.

Secondly, that there is nothing in such a devise by a Hindu against public convenience, or generally mischievous or against the general principles of Hindu law. Sreemutty Soorjeemoney Dasee v. Denobundo Mullick, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 37; 4 W. R., P. C., 114.

A widow, by virtue of the authority given to her by her husband's will, under which she adopted a son, discarded him for misbehaviour. Held that the validity of the will could not be summarily contested by the adopted son, who, on attaining majority, applied to the Court for the withdrawal of the certificate granted to the widow on the strength of the will, and for the grant of certificate to himself, and that the question between the parties could only be decided by a regular suit. Issur Chunder Baboo v. Poorana Bebee, 4 W. R., Mis., 16.

A testamentary paper drawn up in the lifetime of the testator, when, though very ill, he was in the full possession of his senses, and duly attested by the subscribing witnesses, who depose that it was drawn according to the instructions of the testator, and that he in their presence signified his assent thereto, was held to be sufficient under Hindu law. Tara Chand Bose v. Nobeen Chunder Mitter, 3 W. R., 138.

The land sued for was originally an impartible raj, and by family custom descended on the death of each successive raja to his eldest male heir. It was confiscated by Government; and in 1790, when the Decennial Settlement was made, was permanently conferred on A., a Hindu. A. in his lifetime, by his acts and otherwise, showed that he wanted the estate to descend to a single heir, and shortly before his death he made B., the son of his eldest grandson, such heir, and left a testamentary paper in furtherance of that object.

The present suit was brought by some of the grandsons of A., who claimed to be co-heirs with B. under the ordinary Hindu Law of Inheritance, and contended that the will was a forgery; that A. had no power to make it; and that the special law of inheritance ceased when the first proprietor was expelled.

It was observed that a person who rests his title on so uncertain a foundation as the spoken words of a man since deceased is bound to allege, as well as to prove, with the utmost precision, the words on which he relies, with every circumstance of time and place. The finding below as to the factum of will in this case was however upheld.

It was also found from the acts of the Government, and its dealings with the property, that A. derived his title by grant from the Government, who had full dominion over the estate. The estate consequently must be taken to have been the separate and self-acquired property of A., and the nature of the estate granted was held to be a fresh grant of the family raj, as it had existed before the confiscation, with its customary rule of descent, the omission of the title of raj in the grant (there being no sunnud in this case) not affecting the case, the title of raja not being absolutely essential to the tenure of the estate as a raj.

Regulation XI of 1793 does not apply to this case, in which the grant was made before the passing of that Regulation, which moreover does not affect the descent of large zemindaries held as raj, or subject to family custom.

The grant being of the nature found, it was further held that the question as to whether A. had by law power to make a will did not really arise in this case, the only person who could impeach the will being the eldest grandson of A., who had waived his right in favour of his son B., there being no inchoate rights of inheritance in the junior members of the family. Beerpertab Shahee v. Maharajah Rajendro Pertab Shahee, 9 W. R., P. C., 15.

The testamentary power of disposition by Hindus has been established in Bengal by the decision of Courts of Justice. The nature and extent of such power cannot be governed by any analogy to the law of England. Bhoobun Moye Debia v. Ram Kishore Acharjee, 3 W. R., P. C., 15.

The title of a remote kinsman, though heir of a Hindu testator, who died without leaving issue, or any near relative surviving him, and with whom that remote kinsman had not been united in food, worship, or estate, cannot prevail against the title of a devisee of that testator, whether such property was by the testator self-acquired or held in severalty, either by virtue of a partition, or of the non-existence, or, if any did ever exist, the extinction of co-parceners. Nurothun Jagrivan v. Karsandas Huriksandas, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 6.

The will of a Hindu in the Mofussil need not be signed by the testator, or made with any particular formality; all that is requisite is that it be a complete instrument, and express the deliberate intentions of the testator. Where a separated Hindu made a will and subsequently adopted a son, the boy adopted and his father being aware of the provisions of the will, in which an adequate provision was made for the adopted son, it was held that the subsequent adoption did not invalidate the will. Vinayak Narayan Joy v. Govindrav Chintaman Joy, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 224.

By will, dated in 1837, a testator directed his property to be held in a particular way, and gave his widow power to adopt. In 1848 she adopted a son under the will, with the knowledge of the members of the family, and the will was for a period of twenty-seven years generally recognized and acted on by the testator's family. The Judicial Committee held (reversing the decree of the High Court), in accordance with the finding of the Principal Sudder Ameen, that the will was proved. Where a will was executed by the testator signing with the Bengali letter "M," and it was argued that the testator being in very weak health the firm way in which the "M" was written threw discredit upon it, the Judicial Committee preferred the decision of the native Judge on this point to that of the English Judges of the High Court, and expressed doubt as to the value of the style of such writing as evidence in favour of the will being forged. Rajendra Nath Halder v. Jagendra Nath Halder, 7 B. L. R., 216; and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 41.

A Hindu by his will left all his property "in full and absolute right, property, and ownership" (nevertheless upon the conditions and trusts, and with the intent and for the purposes thereinafter described), to certain persons named, and "to their successors in the trust of the settlement thereinafter provided," declaring the "trusts and objects" of his said will and settlement, and the "methods, plans, and acts" he desired "to be performed and observed" by such persons and their successors in the trusts. He then desired that all his property should be preserved and held for ever under the trusts, and for the purposes of the said will and settlement. In the second, third, and fourth clauses of the will the testator went on to direct the "executors and trustees" to pay to his sons therein named a certain monthly sum, "such payment to be continued after his decease to his children and descendants per stirpes." After directing the executors and trustees to make other payments, &c., in the eighteenth clause he directed, "With respect to accumulations of money in the hands of the executors and trustees, I direct that the same be converted into such Government or other security as to the executors and trustees may seem best, and that the interest and produce of such security be accumulated and in like manner invested, and that when and so soon as the aggregate thereof shall amount to Rs. 300,000, it is to be transferred to and divided among my sons or the survivors, or survivor, together with the descendants of such of them as may be deceased, per stirpes; and as soon as new accumulations arise in the hands of the executors and trustees, that the same be again in like manner divided among my sons then living, or the survivor of their descendants, as before, and so on from time to time." In the twenty-first clause the testator made provision for the appointment of new "executors and trustees," "as it is my intent and desire that the disposition, the conditions, and control I am now devising in regard to the future arrangement and enjoyment of my property be perpetuated."

In the Court below, held per Markby, J., that trusts cannot be created by Hindus, but a testator may burthen his heir or devisee with a payment of a simple sum of money to a specified person (including an idol) in existence at the death of the testator. Such bequest cannot be held good as a trust created for the benefit of the legatee, but may be treated as creating an ordinary obligation for the payment of money.

On appeal, held, per Peacock, C. J., that trusts have been and can be enforced against Hindus; the trustees in this case take upon such trusts as are valid; so far as they are invalid, the heirs are entitled to the beneficial interest. A Hindu cannot by his will do indirectly by intervention of trusts what he cannot do directly.

Per Macpherson, J.—Both by Hindu law and the practice which has always prevailed in the Courts in India and in the Privy Council, a Hindu may legally deal with his property so as to create a trust, or relation in many respects similar to, although not necessarily identical with, that known in English law as the relation of trustee and cestui que trust. Even if trusts are not expressly recognized by the old Hindu law, there is nothing in it forbidding them, or repugnant to them, or inconsistent with their existence.

Held, both in the Court below and on appeal, that the general scheme of the will failed, because the trusts were intended for an illegal purpose, namely, for the purpose of creating a perpetuity.

Per Peacock, C. J.—The 18th Clause is repugnant and void, also bad, because the persons to take were unborn at the time of the testator's death, and on the ground of uncertainty, it being impossible to ascertain at the testator's death who would be entitled to participate in the several divisions of accumulation directed to be made.

As to the bequests in the second, third, and fourth clauses of the will, held in the Court below, per Markby, J., that they could only operate in favour of specified persons in existence at the death of the testator.

On appeal, held, per Peacock, C. J., That they operated as "gifts to the sons for life, with remainders to such children of the sons as were in existence at the time of the death of the testator per stirpes."

Per Macpherson, J.—There was a good gift in remainder to the children of such sons as were alive at the time of the testator's death. It is not a violation of the principles of Hindu law to support estates which are to vest on the expiry of a life in being, in a case like the present, where the testator has given his property to trustees who have accepted it, and are prepared to carry out his wishes. Their acceptance would be sufficient if any is necessary. S. M. Krishnaramani Dasi v. Aunund Krishna Bose; Aunund Krishna Bose v. Kumara Rajendra Narayan Deb, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 231.

P. K. T. died leaving an only son, G. M. By his will, after reciting, "I have already made such provision for my son, G. M., as I consider sufficient, and he will take nothing whatever under this my will," he devised and bequeathed all his property, both real and personal, unto and to the use of R. N., W. M., J. M., and D. P. M. (thereinafter called the trustees), their heirs, executors, &c., according to the nature and tenure of the property, to have and to hold upon the trusts thereinafter declared, that is to say, as regards personalty, upon trust to collect and get in the same, and thereout to pay his funeral expenses and debts, and such legacies as might be payable in the ordinary course of administration, within one year from the time of the testator's death; after paying the funeral expenses, debts, and legacies, upon trust, to sell and convert into money such portion of the personal estate as should remain unexpended, and not consist of money or security for money, and to invest the proceeds on good securities; and out of the annual income of the whole, upon trust, to pay the annuities given by the will, and also any of the legacies so far as it would suffice; and after payment of the annuities and legacies to pay the surplus unexpended unto the person or persons for the time being entitled to the beneficial enjoyment of the real property, or of the rents and profits or surplus rents and profits thereof; and so soon as all the annuities and legacies should have fallen in and been fully paid and satisfied, in trust absolutely for the person or persons entitled to the beneficial or absolute enjoyment of the real property.

As regards realty upon trust, until all the debts and legacies have been paid, and all the annuities have fallen in and been fully satisfied, to receive and collect the rents, issues, and profits thereof, and thereout, in the first instance, to pay such (if any) of the legacies and of the annuities as the personal estate or income derived from the trust-moneys and securities should be inadequate to defray, and to pay the residue to the person or persons for the time being to whom the real estate is devised, for the absolute use of such person or persons respectively. The testator then desired the trustees to hold the real estate generally for the use and benefit of such last-mentioned person or persons for the time being, so far as was consistent with the trusts and provisions of the will; and further he directed that out of the net annual income the person entitled to the beneficial enjoyment of the real property, or of the income or surplus income thereof, should receive for his own use every year Rs. 2,500 a month, or Rs. 30,000 a year, and that the various legacies and annuities should only be paid gradually, and as found possible by the trustees, out of the balance remaining after the last-mentioned payment; and so soon as all the legacies and annuities have fallen in, or been paid or fully satisfied, then in trust forthwith to convey the real estate unto and to the use of the persons entitled to the beneficial interest therein, with and subject to such and the like limitations, provisions, and directions, thereafter contained and expressed of and concerning the real estate, so far as the then condition of circumstances will permit, and so far as such limitations or directions can be introduced into any deed of conveyance or settlement without infringing upon or violating any law against perpetuities which may then be in force and apply to the real estate or the conveyance or settlement of it as last aforesaid (if any such law there be). The testator then desired that all the gifts, devises, and limitations in his will thereinafter contained, should be read and taken as subject to the devise and bequests thereinbefore made to the trustees, and the various provisions and declarations made by him with reference thereto. The testator devised all his real property (subject to before-mentioned devise to the trustees) unto and to the use of J. M., for the term of his natural life, and from and after the determination of that estate to the use of the eldest son of J. M., born during the testator's life, for the life of such eldest son; and after the determination of that estate to the use of the first and other sons successively of the eldest son of J. M., according to their respective seniorities, and the heirs male of their respective bodies issuing successively; and upon the failure or determination of that estate to the use of the second and other sons of J. M., born during the testator's life, successively according to their respective seniorities; and upon the failure or determination of that estate to the use of the first and other sons successively of such second or other sons of J. M., and the heirs male of their respective bodies issuing; so that the elder sons of J. M., born in the testator's lifetime, and his first and other sons successively, and the heirs male of their respective bodies issuing, may be preferred to and taken before the younger of the sons of J. M., born in the testator's lifetime, and his and their respective first and other sons successively and the heirs male of their respective bodies issuing. And after the failure or determination of the use and estates thereinbefore limited to the use of each of the sons of J. M., who should be born after the testator's death successively, according to their respective seniorities, and the heirs male of their respective bodies issuing, so that the elder of such sons and the heirs male of his body may be preferred to and taken before the younger of such sons and the heirs male of their and his respective bodies issuing. On failure of these estates there were similar limitations to other members of the testator's family and their sons, sons' sons, &c. Further, the testator declared his will and intention to be "to settle and dispose of the estate in manner aforesaid as fully and completely as a Hindu born and resident in Bengal may give or control the inheritance of his estate, or a Hindu purchaser may regulate the conveyance or descent of property purchased or acquired by him, and not subject to any law or custom of England, whereby an entail may be barred, affected, or destroyed; provided always, and I thereby declare, that if any devisee or tenant-for-life, or in tail or otherwise, or any person entitled to take as heir by descent or adoption or otherwise in any manner, under the limitations hereinbefore contained shall permit or suffer the property so devised, &c., to be sold for arrears of Government revenue, &c., then and immediately thereupon the devise and limitations in this very will declared and contained shall wholly cease and determine as to him." Finally he appointed the trustees executors of his will.

J. M. had no son born during the life of the testator.

G. M., the son of the testator, sued to have the will set aside except as regards the payment of debts, legacies, and annuities. He also charged the executors with waste, and asked for an account.

Held, both in the Court below and on appeal, that the devises were not void merely upon the ground that the estates were devised upon trust, and that the testator had power to create, by means of a devise to trustees, such estates and beneficial interests as he could have created without the intervention of trustees. But the entails intended to be created by the will were void, estates-tail being wholly opposed to the general principles of Hindu law.

The plaintiff could not claim maintenance, sufficient provision having been previously made for him by his father.

Held, in the Court below, that although the testator could not create an estate-tail, yet as it is clear that he intended to dispose of the whole inheritance, the devise must be construed as amounting to the creation of several successive life-interests, each commencing on the termination or failure of the preceding, the whole completed by the gift of the entire estate of inheritance to take effect on the expiration of the last life-interest. The first series of such devises is not bad for remoteness, for there is nothing in Hindu law to prevent a testator from making a gift of property to an unborn person, provided the gift is limited to take effect, if at all, immediately on the close of a life in being; therefore as concerns only the succession of gifts for life only to J. M. and his sons, terminated by the absolute gift of the inheritance to an unborn person, the will is unimpeachable because each of these gifts must take effect, if at all, at or before the close of a life in being; and the like conclusion would hold with regard to each of the other series of devises taken alone; but taken in the aggregate they may violate the rule against perpetuities; but the first series could not be affected by this, and therefore as long as it stands the plaintiff has no claim to a decision of the Court upon the validity of a devise which is subsequent in order of time.

The plaintiff's suit must be dismissed. He is not entitled to immediate relief of any kind.

Held, on appeal, that the devise to J. M. was valid, though it created only a life estate. The intention of the testator was that J. M. should take an immediate vested beneficial interest in the real estate, subject to the charges for payment of legacies, annuities, &c., and in the Rs. 2,500 a month. The devise to J. M. was not bad for uncertainty. But the devises of estates-tail must be rejected as void, and cannot be converted by the Court into devises creating larger estates than the testator intended. The words of the devise cannot be construed to pass a general and absolute estate. As J. M. had no sons born in the lifetime of the testator, the devise to the use of the first and other sons successively of the eldest son of J. M. lapsed. By Hindu law a gift cannot operate to pass property unless the donee is in existence, so that as soon as the property is relinquished, and passes out of the donor, it may vest in the donee. That in the case of a will would be at the time of the death of the testator, from which moment the will operates as a relinquishment (except in the case of a posthumous child of the testator or a son adopted by the widow of a testator). Therefore the devises to the sons of J. M. to be born or adopted after the death of the testator are not valid according to Hindu law. The gift to trustees does not cure the invalidity, for the law will not permit that to be done indirectly which cannot be lawfully done directly.

The gift of the personalty fails because of the want of certainty at the time of the death of the testator, who would be the donee, and whether the donee was a person in existence or not. The gift over of the corpus of the personalty after the payment of the legacies and annuities was bad, and consequently the property in it is vested in the son and heir of the testator subsequently to the trusts for the payment of debts, legacies, and annuities, &c. But the right to receive the surplus rents and profits of the real estate and of the interest and dividends of the personalty, if there be any, is vested in J. M. for life, or until the time arrives for the conveying of the real estates, and the vesting of the corpus of the personalty. The heir-at-law cannot be disinherited by words expressing that he is not to take any benefit under the will. He will take by descent, by his right of inheritance, whatever is not validly disposed of by the will.

Subject to the trusts for payment of the funeral and testamentary expenses and of the debts, legacies, and annuities, the plaintiff, as the heir-at-law of the testator, is entitled (notwithstanding the will) to a general estate of inheritance in reversion to the immoveable property of the testator, and by the terms of the will no estate, larger than an estate for life, has been validly created, and there is a resulting trust in the plaintiff's favour. The plaintiff is not entitled to a declaratory decree against the unborn sons of J. M. or the subsequent unborn devisees. The plaintiff is entitled to have the question of waste tried. He is also entitled to have an account of the moneys and securities which have come into the hands of the trustees, and to see how they have been applied.

Per Norman, J.—The power of a Hindu to make a will is not of modern introduction, nor is it of local origin. Wills were known to and in use amongst Hindus not in the presidency towns only, but from one end of the peninsular to the other. The right to make a will is part of the Hindu law itself. The extent and nature of the disposition which a Hindu testator is capable of making is not a question of public expediency or of custom or usage, but must be regulated by rules to be found in or directly deduced from Hindu law. Ganendra Mohan Tagore v. Upendra Mohan Tagore, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 103.

The testator, a Hindu, made a will in the English form and language, in which he bequeathed (inter alia) as follows: "To each of my domestic servants in Calcutta who shall have been in my service ten years and upwards at the time of my death Rs. 100 for every rupee of monthly salary drawn by them from me respectively." The plaintiff had been in the service of the testator for about 40 years as sirang on board a steamer which the testator kept on the river, and in which he used to visit his zemindaries and perform other journeys by water. The plaintiff was in the habit of daily attending at the testator's residence, and there obeying any orders that might be given him. If the steamer was not needed the plaintiff used to attend at the testator's residence from early in the morning to about one in the afternoon, returning to take his meals and stop on board the steamer. Held that he was entitled to take under the legacy as a domestic servant of the testator. Dhanno Sirang v. Upendra Mohan Tagore, 8 B. L. R., 244.

A Hindu testator died possessed of considerable property, and leaving a will dated 12th September, 1870, by which he appointed his wife executrix in the following words: "I appoint my wife A. D. executrix on my behalf, and vest her with entire authority and responsibility. After my decease my said wife shall perform all duties according to my instructions embodied in the following paragraphs." After reciting that his wife was a purdah woman, and that his three sons were disobedient and extravagant, he appointed certain persons managers to perform certain duties under the will which could not be performed by a purdah woman; and after various minor bequests and directions he directed that if it should appear to the executrix or executors for the time being that they would not be able to protect the property, then they should form a family fund in the Government trust fund of all the property, and that the interest thereof should be employed in the performance of certain religious ceremonies and the family expenses, and then bequeathed as follow: "Whatever Company's paper, moveable and immoveable property, &c., shall be formed into a family fund in the Government trust fund, my great-grandsons shall, when they attain majority, receive the whole to their satisfaction, and they will divide and take the same in accordance with the Hindu law. God forbid it! but should I have no great-grandsons in the male line, then my daughters' sons when they are of age shall take the said property from the trust fund, and divide it according to the Hindu shastras in vogue." The testator left living at the time of his death one son's son, three sons, and a daughter and her son, but no great-grandson. Held that the bequest to the great-grandsons was void and inoperative for remoteness; that the bequest to the daughters' sons was dependent on and not alternative to the gift to the grandsons, and therefore a bequest void under Section 103 of the Succession Act. Held also that A. D. was invested under the will with only a representative character, and was therefore not entitled beneficially to any residue of the estate as against parties who might have any interest therein. The effect of the Hindu Wills Act, which makes (among others) Section 180 and 242 of the Succession Act applicable to Hindus, is to make the probate of the will evidence of the will against all persons interested under the will. Brajanath Dey Sirkar v. S. M. Anand Mayi Dasi, 8 B. L. R., 208.

Where a testator directed in his will that (1st) "On the death of either of my four sons leaving lawful male issue, such issue shall succeed to the capital or principal of the respective shares of his or their deceased father or fathers, to be paid or transferred to them respectively on attaining the full age of twenty-one years;" (2nd) "If either of my four sons shall die leaving male issue, and the whole of such issue shall afterwards die under the age of twenty-one years and without male issue, the share or shares of the sons so dying shall go and belong to the survivors of my said sons and to my two grandsons (named in the will) for life and their respective male issue absolutely after their death;" and (3rd) "On the death of either of my sons without leaving any male issue, his share is to go and belong to the survivors of my said sons and my two grandsons (named in the will) for life, and their respective male issue absolutely after their death, in the same manner and proportions as hereinbefore described respecting their original shares." It was held,—

1st. That a vested interest was conferred upon the issue immediately upon the death of the father. The expression "to be paid or transferred to them respectively on attaining the age of twenty-one years" was a mere attempt to defer the period of payment to or enjoyment by such issue.

2nd. That the gift over was void, because the event on which it was to take effect might be indefinitely remote, even if the words "male issue" be construed as meaning sons. The meaning of "male issue" is not confined to sons alone.

3rd. That in accordance with the ruling in Ganendra Mohun Tagore v. Upendro Mohun Tagore, a gift by a Hindu to a person not ascertained or capable of being ascertained at the time of the death of the testator cannot take effect; therefore the gift to the unborn male issue of the sons and grandsons of the testator must fail. Where there is a gift to a class, and sane persons constituting such class cannot take in consequence of the remoteness of the gift or otherwise, the whole bequest must fail.

Held also, in accordance with Ganendra Mohun Tagore v. Upendra Mohun Tagore, that a Hindu cannot under any circumstances make a gift by will to an unborn person or persons. Srimati Bramamaji Dasi v. Jages Chundra Dutt, 8 B. L. R., 400.

(b) Probate and Executors thereof—(See I., ADMINISTRATION).

Grant of probate of the will of a Hindu confers no title upon the executor, but he derives his title from the will itself. Probate is evidence of his title only so far as a decree of the Court granting it would be, namely, between the parties and those privy to the suit in which the decree is made. Sharo Bibee v. Buldeo Doss, 1 B. L. R., O. C., 24.

Government promissory notes belonging to the estate of a deceased Hindu were endorsed over, without consideration, by A. (who had taken out probate of a forged will, and was acting under the same as executor) to B., who received the same bonâ fide, but without due enquiry, and on obtaining a renewal of the same endorsed the renewed paper back to A. for the purpose of enabling him to raise money thereon, believing that A. had a right so to do. Held that B. was liable to account to the representatives of the deceased for the value of the said promissory notes as assets of the deceased come into his hands. The property in the moveable estate of a deceased Hindu does not pass to his executor as such. Srimati Joy Kalli Debi v. Shibnath Chatterjee, 2 B. L. R., O. C., 1.

The Court will, on the application of one who is next of kin of a deceased Hindu, order a person in possession of an alleged will of the deceased to bring in and deposit the same with the officer of the Court for the purpose of being inspected, and a copy thereof taken by such applicant. In the goods of Balkristana Gunputjee, 1 Bom. Rep., 114.

Probate granted of the will of a Hindu to his widow and heiress, who was universal legatee under the will, as executor by necessary implication, there being no executor mentioned in the will. Radhika Mohan Sett, in the goods of, 7 B. L. R., 563.

1.—MISCELLANEOUS.

The custom of taking interest as between Mahometans is recognized by the Courts.

The Small Cause Court Acts (IX of 1850 and XXVI of 1864) form one procedure, and the High Court can therefore exercise, in cases referred under Section 55 of Act IX of 1850, the extended powers given to it by Section 8 of Act XXVI of 1864.

Semble,—Per Phear, J. (dissenting from Ramlal Mookerjee v. Haran Chunder Dhur), Act XXVIII of 1855 repealed the Mahometan laws relating to usury. By "laws relating to usury" the Legislature meant laws affecting the rate of interest. Mia Khan and Mame Khan v. Bibi Bibijan and Bibi Amnujan, 5 B. L. R., 500, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 508.

Although a purchase by a Mahometan with his own money of an estate in the name of his son raises a presumption of the son's name being used benami for his father, proof that the father's object was to affect the ordinary rule of succession as from him to that property is sufficient to give, as respects strangers, a title to the son independent of and adverse to the father.

Where bonâ-fide creditors of the ostensible owners of property are claimants on that property, the Court will require strict proof on the part of any one seeking to have it declared that he held it only benami. Ruknadawala Nawab Ahmed Ali Khan v. Hurdwari Mull, 5 B. L. R., 578.

In a suit to recover possession of a share of landed property where plaintiff claimed on the ground of purchase from the heirs of the proprietor, who had been missing for many years, and in which the defendant set up a mukurruree and pleaded that as ninety years had not elapsed since the disappearance of the proprietor the property could not, under Mahometan law, be inherited by his heirs, and the alienation by them was therefore invalid,—

Held that as plaintiff had been found in possession under the conveyance from the heirs, who did not dispute his title, the defendant, a stranger, who had failed to prove either title or possession under the mukurruree which he set up, was not in a position to advance the plea in question.

Held that ninety years is the least period within which, according to Mahometan law, the estate of a missing person can be alienated by his heirs. Hosseinee Khanum v. Tijun Lall, 14 S.W. R., C. R., 293.

To the due performance of the ceremony of talab-i-ishtehad, it is not necessary that any particular form of words should be employed. The right of pre-emption exists among Hindus in Behar. Ramdular Misser v. Jhumack Lal, 8 B. L. R., 455; and 17 S. W. R., C. R., 264.

By Mahometan law, an agreement to pay an annuity, though signed and registered, has not the effect of a deed in English law, but requires a consideration to support it.

The relationship existing between cousins is not a sufficient consideration to support such an agreement.

Parol evidence is inadmissible to show that in an agreement to pay an annuity there was a consideration for the granting of the annuity different from that expressed in the agreement. Jáfur Ali Nizám Ali v. Ahmed Ali Imám Háidurbuksh, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 37.

In a suit by a member of a Mahometan family to recover possession of a share in landed property alleged to be ancestral, where defendant claimed the same as his separately acquired property,—Held that it was not necessary for defendant to show that he had funds sufficient to enable him to obtain the property, and that the burden of proving that the property was acquired for and enjoyed by the whole family jointly was upon the plaintiff. Mahomed Afak v. Ekram Ali, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 374.

The application to Mahometans of their own laws in cases other than those coming under the denomination of inheritance, marriage, and caste (e.g., in case of gifts), is the administering of justice according to equity and good conscience. Johooroodeen Sirdar v. Baharoollah Sircar, W. R., 1864, 185.

A sale of Mogulan dues by a Mahometan widow annulled, as made without proof of power to sell. Bowanjee Muncherjee v. Syud Hossain Abdoollah, 5 W. R., P. C., 61.

In a dispute between two grandsons as to proprietary right in a village which had been registered in the name of a member of the elder branch of the family, the Privy Council held that the ratio decidendi, according to which the legal presumption was in favour of one grandson claiming against another, and the onus probandi placed on the one claiming to be sole possessor was more consistent with equity and common sense than a hard and fast rule requiring the party who claims a joint interest to prove that the registered proprietor has duly accounted to him for his proportionate share of the profits. Hyder Hossein v. Mahomed Hossein, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 185.

2.—Divorce.

A husband entered into a private agreement with his wife, authorizing her to divorce him upon his marrying a second wife during her life, and without her consent. Held that the Mahometan law sanctioned such an agreement, and that the wife, on proof of her husband having married a second time without her consent, was entitled to a divorce. Badranissa Bibe v. Mafiattalu, 7 B. L. R., 442, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 555.

According to Mahometan law, the divorce of one acting under compulsion from threats is effective. Ibrahim Mulla v. Enayetur Ruhman, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 13, and 12 S. W. R., C. R., 460.

Suit by a Mahometan female against her husband for maintenance. Defendant pleaded that he had divorced the plaintiff on the 8th January, 1862. Both the lower Courts found that no divorce had taken place upon the following facts. Defendant went to Trichinopoly, leaving his wife at Tinnevelly. While at Trichinopoly he received letters from Tinnevelly informing him that his wife was leading an immoral life. He therefore went before the Town Kázi of Trichinopoly, made a written declaration in the shape of a letter to plaintiff to the effect that he had divorced her, and repeated the divorce three times successively before the Town Kázi of Trichinopoly. Defendant directed also that the letter of divorce should be sent to the plaintiff, but there was no evidence of her having received it. Held, upon special appeal, that it was clear upon the authorities that there had been a valid divorce. The compressing the expression of the intention into one sentence seems, on the authorities, not to affect the legality of the repudiation, although some doctors consider the process immoral. Sherif Saib v. Usanubibi Ammul, 6 Mad. Rep., 452.

By the old Mahometan law, divorce by khola, although granted at the instance of the wife, who gives or agrees to give a consideration to her husband for her release from the marriage tie, is the sole act of the husband; and such divorce is not invalidated by the non-fulfilment by the wife of the terms upon which it was procured.

By the mere allegation of khola on the part of the husband, the divorce of the wife is fully established. Moonshee Buzl-ul-Ruheem v. Luteefoortee Nissa, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 1.

Where a Mahometan was shown to have been duly married, her subsequent divorce should not be presumed only from the fact of her husband having taken another woman to live with him, in consequence of which his wife left his house and went to live with a relative, nor from the fact of his having stated in his will that he had no wife, lawful or nicca. Noor Bibee v. Naivas Khan, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 221.

An instrument of divorce signed by the husband in the presence of, and given to, the wife's father, was held to be valid, notwithstanding that it was not signed in the presence of the wife. Mussamut Waj Bibee and others v. Azmut Ali, 8 W. R., 23.

The dissolution of a marriage contract by death or otherwise leaves the parties or their heirs, according to Mahometan law, no more related than the heirs of quondam partners in a mercantile firm. Mussamut Ekin Bebee v. Meer Ashruf Ali, 1 W. R., 152.

3.—Dower.

A Mahometan widow, even though she have a valid claim for dower against her husband's estate, cannot take possession of the estate as against the heirs, but must sue them regularly for the amount due to her. Bibee Selamut v. Sheikh Mowla Buksh, 5 W. R., 194.

According to Mahometan law, the deed of dower itself is not necessary to prove a grant of dower. Tajoo Beebee v. Nooram Beebee, 1 W. R., 31.

In a suit by a Mahometan wife against her husband for her dower,—Held that the cause of action arose when the suit was instituted, and at no earlier period, and that therefore the claim was not barred under any of the sections of Act XIV of 1859.

Held also, as no specific amount of dower has been declared exigible, and as there was no clear evidence of what was customary, that the Assistant Judge in appeal committed no error in law in holding that one-third of the whole may be considered exigible during the life of the husband, the remaining two-thirds being claimable on his death. Fatma Bibi v. Sadruddin Valad Nizamuddin, 2 Bom. Rep., 307.

Held that the period prescribed by the Limitation Act does begin to run in the lifetime of her husband against a Mahometan woman's claim for dower, until she has demanded such dower. Held also that separation does not make it incumbent upon her to make any such demand. Natthie v. Daud, 2 Bom. Rep., 309.

The very best description of oral evidence is absolutely necessary to support a claim for dower where no kabinamah is produced. Mussamut Husseena v. Mussamut Husmutoonissa, 7 W. R., 495.

A deed of dower is not in all cases indispensable to the truth, and soliciting of a claim for dower.

Semble,—There appears to be no reason why a mukzernamah or statement made (not on oath before the Court) by parties in a position to know the facts, should not have a certain weight. Mussamut Bebee Jumulla v. Mussamut Bebee Mulka, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 26.

According to Mahometan law, mojul or exigible dower is payable on demand at any time from the consummation of the marriage up to the death of the wife, and a suit preferred by heirs for their mother's mojul dower will be in time if brought within twelve years of the mother's death.

Mowujul or non-exigible or deferred dower is claimable on the dissolution of the marriage either by death or divorce. Shares of dower when received by the legal inheritors thereof cease to be dower, and become part of the recipient's estate. Hossimooddeen Chowdhry v. Tajumnissa Khatoon, W. R., 1864, 199.

When nothing is expressed at the time of marriage, whether the dower is to be exigible or deferred, it must, under Mahometan law, be considered exigible, and as such demandable and recoverable from the husband at any period during coverture. Limitation is not applicable to a suit for exigible dower, except in a case of dissolution of marriage by death or divorce. Mussamut Bebee Jumula v. Mussamut Mulluka, W. R., 1864, 252.

Held that a widow in possession of the share of her deceased husband's heirs in lieu of dower, is not competent to alienate it, and the heirs can sue for the avoidance of such transfer made by the widow. Mahomed Ussud-ool-lah Khan v. Mussamut Ghashea Beebee, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 150.

Where a Mahometan widow was improperly deprived of a portion of such estate under a decree in a suit by an heir of her husband, the question as to her right of dower having been before the Court, but not disposed of by the Judge in that suit,—Held that the heir must be treated as having taken the property subject to a right of lien which was not divested by the decree in the former suit. Mussamut Janee Khanum v. Mussamut Amatool Fatima Khanum, 8 W. R., 51.

Among Mahometans deferred dower becomes payable on the dissolution of the marriage, whether by divorce or by the death of either of the parties. According to Mahometan law, when the heirs of a woman claim dower from her husband, which was mowujul or deferred, and not due or payable till her death, their claim is a simple money claim founded solely on the contract made by the husband; and a suit for such dower must be brought within three years of the wife's death (Act XIV of 1859, Section 1, Clause 10).

The husband is not a trustee for the wife in respect of her dower, nor has the wife a lien on her husband's property. Quære as to the nature of the wife's claim for dower against the heirs of her husband.

Mental derangement is no impediment to succession under the Mahometan law. Mir Mahar Ali v. Amani and others, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 306; S. C., 11 W. R., 212.

Where in a suit for dower the original kabinnamah, which is the basis of the suit, cannot be produced, its non-production must be proved by secondary evidence of a reliable nature. Abdool Jubbar Chowdhry and others v. The Collector of Mymensing and Dacca, 11 W. R., 65.

The widow of a Mahometan, in possession of her husband's estate under a claim of dower, has a lien upon it as against those entitled as heirs, and is entitled to possession as against them, till her claim of dower is satisfied.

According to the Punjab Code (held to be in force in Oudh in the years 1859 and 1860), the dower mentioned in a marriage contract (instead of being enforced as an absolute deed, as claimed by the appellant) is subject to a modification at the discretion of the Court, both in the case of a divorce and of the death of the husband. Mulkah Do Alum Nawab Tajdar Bohoo v. Mirza Jehan Kude, 2 W. R., P. C., 55.

The period prescribed by the Limitation Act in claims for dower does not begin to run in the lifetime of her husband, until the wife has made a demand. Daud v. Nathi, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 112.

A widow who is in possession of the property in lieu of dower cannot alienate what did not absolutely belong to her, and an heir to a certain portion of the property has a locus standi to seek to set aside the alienation, though he cannot claim possession before the dower is paid. Bebee Ajeemone v. Asgur Ally and another, 3 Agra Rep., 167.

The heir of a deceased Mahometan having dispossessed the widow of deceased, who was in possession in lieu of dower, takes the estate subject to her lien for the amount of her dower. Syud Umed Ali v. Mussamut Saffiham, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 175.

An heir to a share of the estate of a deceased Mahometan is not entitled to recover possession from the widows so long as any portion of the dower remains unsatisfied, nor can he be entitled to mesne profits. His proper course is to bring a suit for an account of what is due as dower, and to pray that on satisfaction of that amount he may be put into possession of his share of the estate. Ahmed

Hossein v. Mussamut Khodea and others, 10 W. R., 369.

A Mussulman on his marriage entered into a written agreement (unregistered) with his wife to pay her a lakh of rupees, one-fourth as prompt (mooujjul) dower, the remainder as deferred (moowujjul) dower. A separation occurred between the husband and wife, but there was no divorce. During the separation, on 3rd May, 1861, the wife petitioned for leave to sue as a pauper to recover the balance of her prompt dower. The husband, on the 1st July, 1861, filed a petition denying her claim against him. The wife's application to sue as a pauper was rejected on 27th January, 1862. The husband died on 30th August, 1867. On the 13th May, 1869, the widow brought her suit to recover the balance of prompt dower and the whole of the deferred dower. Held that she could only recover the latter. The cause of action in respect of deferred dower could not arise until the husband's death. But the cause of action in respect of prompt dower arises upon demand by the wife and refusal by the husband. In this case there was a demand by the wife and a refusal by the husband, viz., in their petition of 3rd May and 1st July, 1861, respectively, more than three years before suit, therefore the claim to prompt dower was barred by Clause 9, Section 1 of Act XIV of 1859. Ameeroonissa v. Mooradoonissa, distinguished. Mussamut Rani Khijarannissa v. Rani Risannissa Begum, 5 B. L. R., 84; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 371.

Where a husband granted a dower of five lakhs of Lucknow rupees, and subsequently directed Sicca rs. 4,50,000 Company's paper to be set aside for her,—Held, under the circumstances, that this was to be presumed to be a payment on account of dower, and not a gift. Iftikarunissa Begum v. Nawab Amjad Ali Khan, 7 B. L. R., 643.

The widow's claim for dower, under the Mahometan law, is only a debt against the husband's estate. It may be recovered from the heirs to the extent of assets come to their hands. It does not give the widow a lien on any specific property of the deceased husband so as to enable her to follow that property, as in the case of a mortgage, into the hands of a bonâ-fide purchaser for value.

Semble,—Under the Mahometan law, there is not hypothecation without seisin; but a creditor, whether widow or any other creditor, if in possession of the husband's property with the consent of the debtor or his heirs, might hold over until the debt is paid; and that the cases cited to show that the widow had a right to hold until her dower was paid off proceeded on this principle.

Per Hobhouse, J.—It is very questionable whether the Court is bound to apply the Mahometan law to this case under the provisions of Regulation VII of 1832, the case not being one of succession, inheritance, marriage, caste or religious usage; but simply one of contract. Mussamut Wahidunnissa v. Mussamut Shubrattun, 6 B. L. R., 54; and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 239.

According to Mahometan law a simple contract for a money-payment in lieu of dower does not necessarily give the wife a lien over her husband's property, unless the terms of the contract are such as to give her the security of specified property. If on the death of the husband the heirs allow her to get possession of any of his property, and to hold it in lieu of payment, she will have a lien on that as against the heirs. Bibee Mehrun v. Mussamut Kubarum, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 49.

Where a Court holds that a defendant is in possession of certain landed property in lieu of dower and that the plaintiff is not entitled to sue for possession of the property until such claim for dower has been satisfied, it is unnecessary to determine the question of the amount of such dower, plaintiff having pleaded that the dower had been surrendered.

A Mahometan widow is entitled to a lien for whatever dower remains due to her, although there may be a dispute as to what is the amount actually due, having reference to the amount originally filed as dower, or to the amount satisfied by payments. An heir to a share of the estate is not entitled to recover possession from the widow so long as any portion of the dower remains unsatisfied, nor can he be entitled to mesne profits, but his proper course is to bring a suit for an account of what is due as dower, and to pray that in satisfaction of that amount he may be put into possession of his share of the estate.

Payment of the widows, like every other debt, must be made before the estate can be distributed amongst the heirs. Baland Khan v. Musumat Janee, 2 N. W. R., 319.

In a suit against a Mahometan widow for property in which she sets up a claim to have a lien on account of her unsatisfied dower, she is bound to prove the existence and amount of her dower in a clear and satisfactory manner. Bibee Wuhudun v. Syud Wasee Hossein, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 403.

In a suit against a Mahometan widow by her husband's heir to recover possession of property held by her in virtue of a claim for dower, should proof of forcible dispossession fail and no other origin of defendant's possession be alleged, a Court would be justified in finding, as a matter of inference, that the defendant had got into possession on the ground alleged by herself with the consent of the other heirs. Kurreem Buksh Khan v. Mussamut Doolhin Khoori, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 82.

Where a Mahometan lady had been in possession upwards of twenty years of property alleged to have been given her by her husband under a kabinnamah, it was held that neither he nor his creditors could assert a title against her on the ground that when he gave the kabinnamah he had not the property in his possession, and therefore could not pass it under Mahometan law. Samboonath Misser v. Furpootoonissa Bibee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 279.

The hypothecation of an estate for dower is a right that does not arise under the Mahometan law as the consequence of the gift of dower.

The right of a widow in possession is founded on her power, as a creditor for her dower, to hold the property of her husband, of which she has lawfully and without force or fraud obtained possession, until her debt is satisfied, with the liability to account to those entitled to the property, subject to the claims for the profits received. As to the amount of dower in this case, the question was whether it was fixed at Rs. 40,000 and one gold mohur, as alleged by the widow, or at 500 dirruns under the Mahometan law, as contended for by the respondents. The respondents, however, after the husband's death, became aware of the widow's claim for dower; and although they opposed the widow's claim to possession, yet, after she had obtained possession, they took no steps for ten years to interfere with her possession, thereby rendering the proof of the agreed dower more difficult, and perhaps relying upon that very difficulty. The Privy Council, therefore, treating this conduct of the respondents as indicating not only a consciousness on their part that the dower had been fixed at a considerable amount, as inferred by the High Court, but also a consciousness on their part that what the appellant asserted to be the amount was a true and proper amount, were of opinion that there was reasonable evidence to support the appellant's case to the dower she claimed. Mussamut Bebu Bachun v. Shaikh Hamid Hossein, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 113.

The Privy Council reversed so much of the decision of the High Court as ruled that the effect of an arrangement between the plaintiff and her son, by which the son relinquished his share in his late father's property, was not that the mother took an absolute interest in the property in satisfaction of her claim for unpaid dower, but that she should have only a life-interest, the son retaining the legal reversion in himself; the Privy Council being of opinion that the creation of such a life-estate did not seem to be consistent with Mahometan usage, and that there ought to be very clear proof (which had not been shown in this case) of a transaction so unusual and so improbable amongst Mahometans. A widow's claim for unpaid dower, when it does not, by virtue of a bye-mokusa executed by her husband, become a preferential charge on the estate, constitutes a debt payable pari passu with the demands of other creditors. Mussumat Hameeda v. Mussumat Budhen, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 525.

A suit for the maujjil or exigible portion of dower due to plaintiff under a kabinnamah is cognizable by a Small Cause Court, under Section 6, Act XI of 1865, notwithstanding that questions of very considerable difficulty may be raised in it collaterally with regard to the validity of the marriage. The decision of the Small Cause Court on such collateral matters has not the same effect as the decision of the Court which had jurisdiction to determine them in a suit regularly brought for that purpose. Hula Khoory Bibee v. Shaikh Batoo Koshye, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 512.

According to Mahometan law dower is presumed to be prompt in the absence of express contract, and may be enforced at any time. Tadiyu v. Hasanebiyari, 6 Mad. Rep., 9.

In the case of an advance of money on a contract that it should be held on loan by the husband (a Mopla following the Mahometan law) without liability to interest, the repayment to be made by the husband in the event of a divorce taking place, or out of his effects at his death,—

Held that the Mahometan law of dower was not applicable to the suit, and that the period of limitation was three years from the date of the divorce or the death of the husband. Referred Case, No. 15 of 1870, 5 Mad. Rep., 280.

4.—Endowment.

According to Mahometan law, wukf or endowed property is alienable. Wukf property is not the less wukf property because of the use of the words "inam" and "altamgha" in the grant, provided the grant clearly appears to have been intended for charitable purposes. A mutwallee or superintendent of an endowment is not barred by limitation if he sues to recover possession of endowed property within twelve years from the date of his appointment. Jewan Doss Sahoo v. Shah Kubeerooddeen, 6 W. R., P. C., 3.

By local custom in the Broach district, wukf land left as a religious endowment may be mortgaged, although such practice is contrary to Mahometan law. Abbas Ali Zenool Aradin v. Goolum Mahomed Wallud Baba Mirza, 1 Bom. Rep., 36.

In a Mahometan religious endowment, when it is essential that the superior or manager should have certain qualifications which succession by descent would not always ensure, the theory of hereditary succession is most unlikely and out of place. Bibee Syedun v. Syud Allah Ahmed, W. R., 1864, 327.

According to Mahometan law, the trustees of an endowment cannot create a valid mouroree tenure at a fixed rent by granting a lease of any portion of the wukf property. Soojat Ali v. Zumeerooddeen, 5 W. R., 158.

In dealing with the mutwallee of an endowment, it is not necessary for the purchaser to look further than to the power of the mutwallee under his deed of trust. If the deed gives the mutwallee the power and discretion to make a sale, it is not a matter of concern to the purchaser whether that power or discretion is judiciously exercised or not. Moonshee Golam Ali v. Mussamut Sowlutoosnissa Bibee, W. R., 1864, 242.

An appointment as manager, by the trustee for the time being of a Mahometan religious endowment, was held not effectual beyond the incumbency of the nominator. Shah Moheeooddeen Ahmed v. Elahee Buksh and others, 6 W. R., 277.

Held (by Kemp, J., whose opinion prevailed) that the mere fact of a mortgage subsisting at the time when an endowment of property is made, does not render such endowment invalid under the Mahometan law; and that the appropriation of money is not the appropriation of a thing "consumed in using" in these days when Mahometans openly disregard the prohibition to take interest, inasmuch as money can be invested in Government securities, and the interest appropriated to the purpose of the endowment.

Held (by Markby, J.,) that there can be no complete endowment of mortgaged property until the property is released, and that the appropriation creates a valid obligation on the appropriator and his heirs to release the property. If the release is effected by sale the surplus proceeds will have to be invested in the purchase of immoveable property for the purpose of the appropriation. Khaja Hossein Ali v. Shahazadee Hazara, 12 W. R., 344.

In the case of wukf land, the mere stoppage of religious service does not start limitation. Doyal Channel Mullick v. Syud Keramut Ali, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 116.

According to Mahometan law a woman may manage the temporal affairs of a mosque, but not the spiritual affairs connected with it, the management of the latter requiring peculiar personal qualifications. Hussain Bibee v. Hussain Sherep, 4 Mad. Rep., 23.

The fact that a mortgage is in existence over property, at the time when it is set apart as an endowment, does not invalidate the endowment under Mahometan law. It is an endowment subject to a mortgage. If after a mortgage the mortgagor endows the land and dies leaving sufficient assets, his heirs are bound to apply those assets to the redemption of the mortgage, so that the endowment may take effect freed from the mortgage by the application of other assets of the endower. But if necessary the mortgagee may enforce the mortgage by sale of the land, and the endowment will be rendered void as against the purchaser under the mortgage, but not as against the heirs of the endower; as against the latter, the surplus sale proceeds will be subject to the endowment.

On appeal under Section 15 of the Letters Patent, no other points may be argued than those which were argued before the Division Bench. Shahazadi Hajra Begum v. Khaja Hossein Ali Khan, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 86; and 12 S. W. R., C. R., 498.

The primary objects for which lands are endowed under the Mahometan law are to support a mosque and to defray the expenses of worship therein. The mere charge upon the profits of an endowed estate of certain items which must in time cease, and the lapse of which will leave the whole profits available for the purposes of the endowment, does not render an endowment invalid under the Mahometan law. Muzhurool Huq v. Puhraj Ditarey Mohaputter, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 235.

The khaleefa of an endowment having, by a will or testamentary paper, appointed a successor, and given various directions respecting the endowed property, sent a copy of the paper to the Committee appointed under Act XX of 1863 for their information. The Committee having thereupon expressed their opinion that the document was of no effect, the khaleefa sued "to prevent the Committee from illegal interference, and to reverse their order respecting the will." Held that such a suit was not maintainable, and that no legal cause of suit appeared. Hakeem Hisam-ood-deen Khan v. Khaleefa Unwar-vol-lah, 2 N. W. R., 400.

The chief elements of wukf are special words declaratory of the appropriation and a proper motive cause; and where the declaration is made in a solemnly published document the wukf is completed.

A valid wukf cannot be affected by revocation or by the bad conduct of those responsible for the carrying out of the appropriator's behests, nor can it be alienated.

The fact of a person being a shiah does not disqualify him for the supervision of a wukf made by a soonee. Doyal Chund Mullick v. Syud Keramut Ali, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 116.

5.—Evidence.

Additions made to the joint estate by the managing member of a Mahometan family will be presumed, in the absence of proof, to have been made from the joint estate, and will be for the benefit of all the members of the family entitled to share. Vellai Mira Ravuttan v. Varisai Mira Ravuttan and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 414.

Where a Mahometan lady with her daughters was found to be living with her brother, and to be supported by him from the proceeds of the patrimonial estate, it was held to be a proper and correct inference that the lady and her daughters were in possession along with the brother, who was the manager of the property. Achina Bibee and another v. Aeegoonissa Bibee and others, 11 W. R., 45.

Semble,—Among Mahometans where a purchase is made during a father's lifetime in the name of his son while living in the father's house, there is no such presumption as arises in the case of a similar purchase made in the lifetime of the father of a joint Hindu family; and the onus is not on the son to prove that the purchase was not made really for and by the father, but by the son for himself and with his own funds. Golam Mackdoom v. Mussamut Hafeezoonnissa, 7 W. R., 489.

According to Mahometan law, where an acknowledgment is binding it does not amount merely to primâ-facie evidence, but establishes the fact acknowledged. Mussamut Jaibun v. Bibee Nujeebunissa, 12 W. R., 497.

Where a Mahometan husband was found to have paid the purchase-money for a putnee talook standing in the name of his wife, it was held that his having been in possession of the money was primâ-facie evidence that the putnee talook belonged to himself and not to his wife, and that presumption was not rebutted by the fact that he purchased the putnee in the name of his wife. Ranee Surnomoyee v. Luchmeeput Doogur, 9 W. R., 338.

Where a Mahometan lady came into a Court to ask for a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, on behalf of the minor son of her late husband, relying upon the factum of the marriage between her husband and the minor's mother, and failed, in opinion of the Judge to prove such marriage,—Held that applicant was not thereby deprived of the benefit of any and every presumption which the Mahometan law admits of in favour of marriage and the minor's legitimacy. Bibee Najeeboonissa v. Bibee Zumeerun and others, 11 W. R., 426.

According to the Mahometan law, one of two sharers can give over his share to the other even before partition. Mussamut Ameena Bibee v. Mussamut Zeifa Bibee, 3 W. R., 37.

In a suit for arrears of rent due on defendant's putnee talook, though the rate was admitted, it was pleaded that, in consequence of a dacoity having taken place in the defendant's house, she had been allowed by the plaintiff (her brother-in-law) a remission of rent annually for a certain number of years, and defendant professed her readiness to pay if the remission were allowed. Plaintiff's agreement set forth that, in consequence of defendant's house having been plundered, she was entitled to assistance to enable her to replace what she had lost, and that the rajah (zemindar) not being able to make good the amount at once took this method of assisting his connexion.

Held that the gift (or remission of rent for the years in suit) was complete at the termination of each year; in other words, delivery had been made to the donee, and it could not be recalled under the Mahometan law, which is precise as to the impossibility of revoking a gift after delivery without the decree of a Judge or the consent of the donee. Khajah Enaet Hossein v. Bibee Khoobunnissa, 11 W. R., 320.

A Mahometan lady can sell or give away her property as she pleases. When a mother makes a gift to her children, and one of them seeks to set it aside as fraudulent, so far as it affects the plaintiff's right of inheritance, so long as the mother is alive and admits the execution of the deed of gift the plaintiff is not in a position to disturb it; and it is quite immaterial in such a case whether the plaintiff's consent was or was not given. Mahomed Zaheerul Huq v. Mussamut Butoolun, 1 W. R., 79.

A Mahometan husband executes a "hibbah," or deed of gift, without consideration in favour of his wife, comprising a house in which they are residing at the time, with its furniture and two other houses. He at the same time delivers the hibbah and the keys of the houses to his wife, quits the house of residence, leaving her in possession of the same. Held that the requirements of the Mahometan law, with regard to gifts without consideration, viz., acceptance and seisin on the part of the donee, and relinquishment on the part of the donor, have been complied with, though the husband shortly afterwards returns to the house, resides there with his wife till his death, and receives the rents of other parts of the property comprised in the hibbah. The continued occupation or residence and receipt of rents are in such circumstances to be referred to the character which the donor bears of husband and to the rights and duties connected with that character. Amina Bebee v. Khatija Bebee, 1 Bom. Rep., 157.

A deed of gift such as a tuluknamah executed at a time when the grantor was labouring under a sickness from which she never recovered, cannot operate save as a will. If such a deathbed gift or will is made in favour of one who is an heir, the will or gift, so far as it relates to that heir, will be inoperative without the consent of the other heirs. Ashruffunissa v. Mussamut Azeemun, 1 W. R., 17.

Where a Mahometan transferred certain property (Company's paper) to his son, reserving the interest to himself for life, the object of the disposition being to give the son a larger share of the father's property than would come to him by succession ab intestato,— Held that the transaction could not be impeached on moral grounds as a design to alter the disposition of property so as to defeat a succession by an alienation, which the law allows is simply a design to conform to the law while working out an unforbidden object.

Held that the intention of the parties did not violate any provision of the Hedaya, and the transfer was complete, and the gift valid. Nawab Umjad Aly Khan v. Mohumdee Begum and another, 10 W. R., P. C., 25.

According to the Mahometan law, in order to make a gift operate as a donatio mortis causâ, the delivery must be upon the condition that it should become effectual as a gift on the death of the donor. Where therefore it was found that a deed of gift was executed in the last illness of the donor, and was in the possession of the donee after her death, —Held that this was not enough to make it operate as a donatio mortis causâ, but that it was necessary to find the further fact, whether the deed was delivered by the donor before her death, and whether such delivery was in contemplation of death, and with the intention that it should become effectual on the death of the donor. Mussamut Nussebun Bibee v. Meer Ashruff Ally, Marsh., 315.

According to the Mahometan law, a gift made in contemplation of death, though not operative as a gift, operates as a legacy. Ordinarily it conveys to the legatee property not exceeding one-third of the deceased's whole property, the remaining two-thirds going to the heirs. In the absence of heirs, a will carries the whole property. Mussamut Ekin Beebee v. Meer Ashruf Ali, 1 W. R., 152.

According to Mahometan law, no formal delivery and seisin are necessary to the validity of a gift of property by a father to a minor son.

The rule that an undefined gift of joint undivided property, mixed with property capable of division, is invalid by Mahometan law, does not apply to a gift by a father to a minor son.

By Mahometan law there can be no revocation of a gift by a father to a son when the donee has alienated the thing given. Wajeed Ali v. Abdool Ali, W. R., 1864, 121.

According to Mahometan law, a gift is invalid when the donor is to remain in possession during his lifetime. Zohurooddeen Sirdar v. Baharoollah Sircar, W. R., 1864, 185.

According to Mahometan law, if a person executes a gift while labouring under a sickness from which he never recovers, and which ultimately proves fatal to him, effect can be given to the instrument only to the extent of one-third. Mussamut Kureemun v. Mullick Enaet Hossein, W. R., 1864, 221.

Held that it is not necessary by the Mahometan law that possession should follow to complete gift by father to his infant child. Syad Gyasooddeen Hyder v. Mussamut Fatima Begum and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 238.

A deed by a Mahometan, in which he declared "I have adopted A. B. to succeed to my property," was held to be neither a deed of gift nor a testamentary gift to take effect after the death of the donor, there being a complete absence of any relinquishment by the donor or of seisin by the donee. Jeswant Singhjee v. Jet Singhee, 6 W. R., P. C., 46.

A Mahometan widow or any other woman, holding property in her own right, may give it away to whomsoever she pleases, unless she delays the gift till upon her death-bed, when such a gift would be looked upon as a will, and be inoperative beyond a certain limit. Mussamut Luteefoonissa Bibee v. Syud Rajaoor Ruhman and others, 8 W. R., 84.

A gift is not necessarily hibbabil-iwuz by an allusion in the deed to the good behaviour of the donee, and his supplying a certain amount to the donor to enable the latter to do some act in respect of the property. Ussud Ali Khan v. Mussamut Alfut Bebee, 4 Agra Rep., 237.

Held that a donee holding from a Mahometan widow does not acquire a better title to the property than the donor herself had. Mahomed Noor Khan v. Hur Dyal, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 67.

To make a deed of gift valid under the provisions of the Mahometan law, seisin is necessary; if the donor is not in possession at the time the gift is void. Abedonissa Khatoom v. Amerunissa Khatoom, 9 W. R., 257.

Ejectment title proved. A hebabil-ewaz, or deed of gift, made in contemplation of marriage, is not a revocable instrument. Bibee Kulsom v. Bibee Ameerunnissa, 1 Hyde's Rep., 150.

According to the Mahometan law, possession under a deed of bye-mokasa, executed in lieu of dower, is not necessary to its validity. Nuseeboonissa v. Syed Danush Ali, 3 W. R., 133.

Under the law of the Sherra, gifts are not valid until possession is given by the donor and taken by the donee. Abedur Reza v. Mahomed Muneer, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 88.

Where a conveyance between Mahometans, though in form a deed of sale, is in reality a gift, its validity should be tested by the rules of law applicable to gifts, and not by those applicable to deeds of sale. In determining whether a transaction is one of sale or gift, the intention of the parties, rather than the form of the instrument used, should be considered. A deed of gift, in English form, of a house to three persons as joint tenants (without discrimination of shares) is good according to Mahometan law, as it shows an intention on the part of the donor to give the property in the whole house to each of the donees. A gift by a Mahometan in Bombay which contravenes the principles of English Courts of Equity with regard to gifts to persons standing in a fiduciary relation to the donors will not be upheld.

Where a Mahometan lady conveyed to her confidential adviser and two other persons the house in which she dwelt by deed of gift, which (though read over and explained to her by a clerk who acted both for the donees and her) was executed by the lady without independent professional advice, and without the advice of the heads of her caste, it was decreed, at the instance of her heirs after her death, that the deed should be set aside. Rujábái et al. v. Ismáil Ahmed, 7 Bom. Rep., O. J., 27.

Judgment of the High Court dismissing a plaintiff's suit confirmed on the evidence, in a case in which plaintiff sought in the lower Court to set up a deed of alleged sale from a Mahometan purdanasheen lady in favour of her niece, which position he abandoned before the High Court, where he suggested that although it was not good as a deed of sale it would be good as a deed of bounty, the sale being colourable for the purpose of giving effect to a gift which otherwise it might be difficult to make under the Mahometan law. Mussamut Kumeeroonissa Begum v. Mirza Syuffoollah, 16 S. W. R., P. C., 32.

A gift of land made by a Mahometan is invalid if the interest of each of the donees is not defined by the gift.

Semble,—That the continued receipt by the donees of the rents of land, which had been let by them as the managers of the donor, is not a sufficient taking possession to satisfy the requirements of the Mahometan law. Sayad Valimia Alimia et al. v. Galam Kadar Mohedin, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 25.

Maibibi and her son, Sidi, departing on a journey, made a conditional gift of their property to Abubekur. On their return, Abubekur, under the award of a punchayat, restored their property, but by the instrument reconveying it their estate was limited to a life interest, and they were restrained from alienating it. The lower Courts held this instrument to be a deed of gift, and that the conditions attached to the gift were void by Mahometan law. Held, on special appeal, that the lower Courts were wrong in so treating it, as it was in fact a compromise, the terms of which should be carried out, and Maibibi and her son should be restrained from wasting or alienating the property. Abubekur bin Hagada Hujisaba v. Maibibi et al., 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 77.

A heba-bel-ewaz differs from an out-and-out sale as well as from a gift, while it partakes of the character of both, and if supported by sufficient consideration is binding under the Mahometan law upon the heirs of the party executing such deed. Solah Bibee v. Keerun Bibee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 175.

Plaintiff, the Nicka wife of the late Nawab of the Carnatic, sued for a declaration of her absolute title to certain premises (Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 4), for possession of certain other premises (Nos. 5 and 6), for delivery to her by defendant of the title-deeds of all the premises except No. 1, and for cancellation and delivery up of a sheriff's bill of sale of No. 1 in favour of T. A., of a mortgage of Nos. 2, 5, and 6 to R. and Co., of a mortgage of No. 4 to A. A., and of all assignments by T. A. R. and Co., or A. A., to defendant. She claimed this relief under an alleged gift to her by the late Nawab on or about the 6th January, 1851. Defendant said (and it was so found) as to 2, 5, and 6, that he had never had anything to do with the said premises or with the title-deeds thereof. As to the other premises, that the several assignments in his possession were made to him as Receiver of the Carnatic property, under Act XXX of 1858, but that he had not obtained possession of the said premises nor of any of the title-deeds thereof, except the sheriff's bill of sale of the 29th November, 1855. Issues were settled raising the following questions: Whether the gift was made as alleged? Whether, if so, it was valid against creditors of, or subsequent purchasers for valuable consideration from, the donor? Whether the gift was revocable, and revoked? Whether defendant has, or ever had, possession of all or any of the title-deeds of Nos. 2, 5, and 6? And lastly, whether plaintiff's claim was either wholly or in part barred by Act XIV of 1859? Held that a complete gift had been made and not revoked. That it was valid against the creditors of the donor, and also (as the donor and donee were both Mahometans) against subsequent purchasers for valuable consideration from the donor. But that defendant had never had possession of the title-deeds of Nos. 2, 5, and 6, so that the suit could not be maintained as regards them; and that it was barred as to Nos. 1, 3, and 4, by Section 1, Clause 16, of Act XIV of 1859. Under Mahometan law, "in the instance of a wife who may give a house to her husband the gift will be good, although she continue to occupy it along with her husband and keep all her property therein, because the wife and her property are both in the legal possession of the husband. So also it has been held by some that if a father transfer his house to his minor son, himself continuing to occupy it and to keep his property therein, the gift is valid, on the principle that the father in retaining possession is acting as agent for his son, according to which doctrine his possession is equivalent to that of his son." Reason requires that the same principle should be applied to the case of a gift by husband to wife. The wife may, according to Mahometan law, hold property independent of her husband, and as a husband may make a valid gift to his wife, it can only be necessary that the gift should be accompanied with such a change of possession as the subject is capable of, and as is consistent with the continuance of the relation of husband and wife. H. H. Azim Unissa Begum v. Clement Dale, Receiver of the Carnatic Property, 6 Mad. Rep., 455.

Plaintiff, during his son's minority, gave certain property to him, and on the delivery of possession got from him a document stipulating (1) That he would not alienate; (2) That at his death the property should return to the father. This document was deposited with the father, and not heard of until the property was taken in execution for the son's debts, many years after the gift. Held that, by Mahometan law, as well as by the general principles of law, such a restriction on alienation, especially after the gift had become complete long before, is absolutely invalid. Nabad Amiruddaula Muhammad Kakya Hussain Khan Bahadur Amir jung Varu v. Nateri Srinivâsa Charlu, 6 Mad. Rep., 356.

The plaintiff's deceased sister in her lifetime was the owner of three and a half undivided shares in a village, which she mortgaged in 1846, upon the terms that the mortgagee should be put into possession, and that he should credit the produce of two shares on account of the mortgage-debt, and should pay the mortgagor one share and a half for her maintenance. Subsequently, in 1853, she made an absolute gift in writing of three of the shares to the fourth defendant and his mother. The produce of the shares was applied during the lifetime of the donor after the gift just as it had been before the gift. Held that there was no such surrender and delivery of the property to the donee as is requisite to make a valid gift according to Mahometan law. Khader Hussain v. Hussain Begum, 5 Mad. Rep., 114.

Certain lands, choultries, and moveable property had been, by instrument in writing, given to the brother of the donor and his heirs for the purpose, in perpetuity, of keeping in repair the choultries and affording strangers the charities of shelter, and, if circumstances permitted, food also, as well as for supplying the wants of the donees, with clauses restraining alienation by them. Held that the instrument effected a transfer of the property to the donees subject to the trust of applying the profits of the lands, &c., in perpetuity to certain charitable purposes, and was not revocable, whether the transaction be viewed as a pure trust or as a gift. The power of revoking gifts is given under the Mahometan law only in the case of private gifts for the donee's own use, no relationship existing between the donor and the donee. The rule of Mahometan law that a muttawala, or superintendent of an endowment, is removeable for mismanagement does not apply to the case of a trustee who has a hereditary proprietary right vested in him. It is essential for the exercise by the donor of the power of removing a superintendent that such power be specially reserved at the time of the endowment. Aji Ajom Tadallah Saib Kuraishi v. Gulam Hussain Saib Saiyad, 4 Mad. Rep., 44.

In a suit upon a hibbanama alleged to have been executed by the husband of the plaintiff, giving her twenty-two shares in a village as a gift in lieu of her dower, the Civil Judge dismissed the suit upon the ground that the omission of the amount of the dower rendered the instrument of no validity according to Mahometan law. Held (reversing the decree of the Civil Judge) that the suit was maintainable, the instrument expressing plainly the specific shares of the property, and that the gift was made in lieu of the whole dower, and there being no room for doubt as to the meaning and intention of the contracting parties in regard to the particular subjects either of the gift or of the consideration. Sahiba Begum v. Atchamma, 4 Mad. Rep., 115.

The mere residence of a woman in the house of a Mahometan as a menial servant, and the circumstance that she had a son, do not raise the presumption of marriage or legitimacy of the son. Cohabitation means something more than mere residence in the same house. It should be shown that cohabitation continued, that children were born, and that the woman was treated as a wife, and lived as such, and not as a servant. Mussamut Kureemoonissa v. Attaoollah and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 211.

The Mahometan law allows legitimacy to be inferred from circumstances without direct proof. Khajah Mahomed Gowher Ali Khan v. Haratoonissa, 2 W. R., 52.

According to the Mahometan law, a public acknowledgment of paternity will of itself raise a presumption of marriage between the person who makes it and the mother of the child, without the father specifically connecting his paternity with any particular woman. To rebut this presumption the onus of proving the impossibility of the marriage is on the other side. Rook Begum v. Shahzadah Walagowhur Shah, 3 W. R., 187.

The Mahometan law is very scrupulous in bastardising the issue of any connexion in which it can be shown by presumption that there has been cohabitation and acknowledgment of paternity. Under the Mahometan law a gift cannot depend upon a contingency or be postponed, but possession must be immediate. Ranee Roshun Jahan v. Rajah Syud Enaet Hossein, 5 W. R., 4.

According to Mahometan law, the acknowledgment of a father renders a son or daughter a legitimate child and heir, unless it is impossible for the son or daughter to be so. Oomda Bibee v. Syud Shah Jonab Ali, 5 W. R., 132, and 1 Jur. N. S., 143.

Legitimacy under the Mahometan law is held not to be established in a case in which there was no acknowledgment of the son by the alleged father, and the other evidence was doubtful. Syud Furnund Ali v. Mussamut Ushrufunissa Begum, 1 W. R., 303.

Though there is no evidence of the celebration of any marriage ceremony, still the fact of a woman having constantly lived as a married woman with her husband, and the fact of her children having lived as legitimate children with their parents, make the case fall within the rule as to the presumption of marriage and legitimacy laid down by the Privy Council in 8 Moore's Indian Appeals, 136, and by this Court in 1 Marshall's Reports, 428. Ashruffunissa v. Mussamut Azeemun; Ashruffunissa v. Mussamut Boroda Kooery, 1 W. R., 17.

According to Mahometan law, the acknowledgment of the father renders the son a legitimate son and heir, whether the mother was or was not lawfully married to the father. Nugeroodeen Ahmed v. Bibee Zuhoorun and others, 10 W. R., 45.

According to the Mahometan law, the legitimacy or legitimation of a child of Mahometan parents may be presumed or inferred from circumstances, without proof, or at least without any direct proof of a marriage between the parents, or of any formal act of legitimation. Mahomed Bauker Hossein Khan Bahadoor v. Shurfoonissa Begum, 3 W. R., P. C., 37.

According to the Mahometan law, a child born out of wedlock, if acknowledged, acquires the status of legitimacy. Bibee Nujeeboonissa v. Bibee Zumeerun and another, 11 W. R., 426.

If a child has been born to a father of a mother where there has been not a mere casual concubinage, but a more permanent connection, and where there is no insurmountable obstacle to a marriage, according to the Mahometan law, the presumption is in favour of such marriage having taken place, and the mother and child are entitled to inherit. Shums-oon-nissa Khanum v. Raj Jan Khanum, 6 W. R., P. C., 52.

According to Mahometan law, mere continued cohabitation, without proof of marriage or of acknowledgment, is not sufficient to raise such a legal presumption of marriage as to legitimatize the offspring. Marriage and acknowledgment may be presumed, but the presumption must be one of fact, and as such subject to the application of the ordinary rules of evidence. A subsequent marriage, so far from furnishing a ground for presuming a prior marriage, primâ-facie at least excludes that presumption. Ashruffoodowlah Ahmed Hossein and another v. Hyder Hossein Khan, 9 W. R., P. C., 1.

The celebration of the seventh month of pregnancy, and the celebration of the birth of the son, are sufficient to prove the marriage and legitimacy of the son. J. P. Wise and others v. Sunduloonissa Chowdhranee and others, 7 W. R., P. C., 13.

According to Mahometan law, continued open cohabitation, accompanied by declaration that the woman is the man's wife, and that the children, the issue of the cohabitation, are his children, or by conduct showing that he considers them to be so, is sufficient evidence from which to infer marriage. Even where the cohabitation has been casual only, and there has been no acknowledgment of the woman as his wife, or the issue as his children, the fact of such cohabitation raises a presumption of marriage, and that the children are legitimate; but in such a case presumption may be rebutted. Mussamut Nawabunnissa and others v. Mussamut Fuzooloonissa, Marsh., 428.

The acknowledgment of a child, as being the son of the acknowledger, is valid when the ages of the parties admit of the alleged relationship, and where the descent from another of the person acknowledged has not been already established. Mussamut Jaibun v. Bibee Nujeeboonissa, 12 W. R., 497.

When a man acknowledges a person to be his daughter he must be taken to mean his legitimate daughter, unless the contrary appears. Fuzeebun Bibee v. Omdah Bibee and Shah Janab Aly, 10 W. R., 469.

A Mahometan plaintiff who had not undergone circumcision was allowed to conduct his case on the ground of his having been the illegitimate son of a Mahometan woman, on a construction of the Immeea Code found at p. 265 of "Baillie's Digest of Mahometan Law." Sahebzadee Begum v. Mirza Hummut, 12 W. R., 513.

The children of fornication or adultery (wahid-uz-zina) have no nasab or consanguinity, hence the right of inheritance being founded on nasab, one illegitimate brother cannot succeed to the estate of another.

A man cannot acknowledge a brother so as to establish the nasab. Mussamut Shahebzadi Begum v. Mirza Himmut Bahadur, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 103, and 12 S. W. R., 512.

An acknowledgment by a Mahometan that a certain person is his son is not primâ-facie evidence of the fact which may be rebutted, but establishes the fact acknowledged. Such acknowledgment is valid when the ages of the parties admit of the relationship between them, and where the descent of the party acknowledged has not been already established from another. In the matter of the Petition of Mussamut Bibee Najibunissa, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 55.

According to Mahometan law, illegitimate sons can claim no relation with their father's family. Mussamut Bibee Boodhun v. Jan Khan, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 265.

Under Mahometan law, where the husband gives the wife an option as to declaring herself repudiated and she avails herself of it, the repudiation or divorce is binding on him; and a discretion to repudiate when attached to a condition need not be limited to any particular period, but may be absolute as regards time. Such option is not lost by non-user where there is nothing in the contract between the parties obliging the wife to exercise the option directly a breach of the condition occurs.

Notwithstanding Mahometan law, a Court of Justice cannot pronounce a child to be the legitimate offspring of a particular individual when such a conclusion would be contrary to the course of nature and impossible. Meer Ashruf Ali v. Meer Ashud Ali, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 260.

According to Mahometan law, the acknowledgment of a father renders a son or daughter a legitimate child and an heir, unless it is impossible for the son or daughter to be so; and the acknowledgment need not be of such a character as to be evidence of marriage. Bibee Wuhudun v. Syud Wasee Hossein, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 403.

Under the Shiah, as well as the Soonee law, any connection between the sexes which is not sanctioned by some relation founded upon contract or upon slavery is denounced as "zina," or fornication.

Both schools prohibit sexual intercourse between a Mooslnah, i.e., a Mahometan woman, and a man who is not of her religion.

According to the Shiah law, marriage must in all cases be lawful, except when there is error on the part of both or either of the parents.

"Nasab" or consanguinity is established by a valid marriage or the semblance of it, and is not established by "zina" or illicit intercourse. A walud-oz-zina or child of fornication has no nasab. The admission of nasab on the part of an illegitimate brother does not operate under Mahometan law if made at a time when he has a known heir. Mirza Himmut Bahadoor v. Mussamut Saheb Zadee Begum, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 125.

8.—Marriage.

The Mahometan law does not provide for the nature of the evidence required to prove a divorce. Quære,—Whether the husband's statement that he has divorced his wife is sufficient proof of the fact. Buksh Ali v. Ameerun Bebee, 2 W. R., 208.

A charge of adultery by a Mahometan against his wife does not operate as a divorce, though if false it might be an item of ill-usage towards making up a sufficient answer to his claim for restitution of conjugal rights. The husband cannot enforce his right to his wife till he pays the dower, —in the absence, that is, of any sufficient answer to his claim. Ill-treatment by him and his second wife would justify the first wife in leaving him. Jaun Beebee v. Sheikh Moonshee Beparee, 3 W. R., 93.

Under the Mahometan law, a wife may (except with fraudulent intent) purchase property as her own during her husband's lifetime with money given to her by him on account of dower. Shaikh Nasoo v. Mahatal Beebee, 4 W. R., 7.

A verbal contract of dower for a large sum is admissible only if proved by most clear and satisfactory evidence.

A customary dower must be proved by showing a custom of the women of the wife's family to receive, rather than of the men of the husband's family to pay, a certain dower; the Mahometan dower being the consideration paid by the bridegroom for the marriage, and therefore regulated by the position and conduct of the bride, especially as Mahometan men often contract most unequal marriages, though the means and position of the bridegroom must not altogether be excluded from consideration. Shah Nujeemooddeen Ahmed v. Bibee Hosseinee, 4 W. R., 110.

The production of a deed of dower is not indispensable to the truth and validity of a claim for dower; nor is such a claim to be set aside by reason of the largeness of the amount of dower. Molleeka v. Bibee Jumeela, 5 W. R., 23.

According to Mahometan law a divorce is irreversible if the husband does not take back the wife before the expiration of her edit, or term of probation. Syud Mozuffur Ali v. Mussamut Kumeerunissa Bibee, W. R., 1864, 32.

A Mahometan in the kubinnamah or deed of dower on his marriage with S. stipulated that he should not take a second wife without the permission of S. Held that S. was not entitled to leave him upon his taking a second wife without her permission. Sheikh Mohabut Ally v. Sreemutty Mymonissa, Marsh., 361.

According to the Mahometan law, a gift made in contemplation of death, though not operative as a gift, operates as a legacy. Ordinarily it conveys to the legatee property not exceeding one-third of the deceased's whole property, the remaining two-thirds going to the heirs. In the absence of heirs a will carries the whole property. Whatever may be the position and rights of a husband, being the only surviving heir of his wife, according to the Mahometan law, there is no representation in matters of succession, and therefore those rights do not descend to the heirs of a husband who has predeceased the wife, and who are themselves no relation of the wife. In fact, under the Mahometan system, after the dissolution of a marriage contract by death or otherwise, the parties or their heirs bear no more relation to one another than the heirs of quondam partners in the same mercantile house. Mussamut Ekin Bibee v. Meer Ashruf Ali, 1 W. R., 152.

Where rights of ownership had been exercised for a series of years by the husband, and never by the wife, over property which had descended from his wife's father (his own uncle), the husband having mortgaged the property and dealt with it in all respects as if he were the owner, and the wife possessing none of the documents which she would have been able to produce if she had acted as the owner, it was held that she had no such interest in the property as entitled her to maintain a suit to recover possession of it after it was sold in satisfaction of the husband's debts. Oozeeroonissa Bibee v. Ramdhone Roy and another, 11 W. R., 17.

According to Mahometan law, the divorce of one acting upon compulsion from threats is effective. Ibrahim Mollah v. Enayuntoor Ruhuman, 12 W. R., 460.

According to the Mahometan law, the non-payment by the wife of the consideration for a divorce does not invalidate the divorce. The divorce is the sole act of the husband, though granted at the instance of the wife, and purchased by her. The kholanamah, or the deed securing to the husband the stipulated consideration, does not constitute the divorce, but assumes and is founded upon it. The divorce is created by the husband's repudiation of the wife and the consequent separation.

The husband having distinctly alleged a divorce by khola, and relied on two instruments, one, an ibranamah (or deed of voluntary release by the wife of her denmohr or dowry) to which there was no satisfactory proof that she ever gave her assent with a knowledge of its contents, and a kholanamah (surrendering the wife's settlement) obtained from her mother by means of cruelty and ill-usage practised on her daughter, to confirm the ibranamah,—Held that instruments so obtained could have no legal effect when used as a defence against the wife's claim to her dowry. Buzl-ul-Ruheem v. Luteefutoonnissa, 1 W. R., P. C., 57.

There is nothing in the Mahometan law to show that a Soonee is incapacitated from marrying a Shea. Syud Gholam Hossein Chowdhry v. Mussamut Setabah Begum, 6 W. R., 88.

In a suit by a Mahometan lady against her husband after divorce for recovery of property belonging to her which her husband held before divorce, the cause of action to the wife arose at the time of the separation. The possession of the husband being the possession of the wife, the onus lay on the husband to prove his right to the property; till that was done the presumption was that the property so held by the husband was held by him on behalf of the wife. Abdool Ali, alias Shoageea v. Kurreemoonissa, 9 W. R., 153.

The District Judge's decision that a Mahometan married woman cannot execute a valid lease which may endure beyond her lifetime, of property of which she is one of several tenants in common, held bad in law. Nichhabai Pragji v. Issekhan, 2 Bom. Rep., 313.

A Mahometan husband may institute a suit in the Civil Courts of India to enforce his marital rights by compelling his wife against her will to return to cohabitation with him, and such suit must, under the imperative words of Section 15, Regulation IV of 1793, and the nature of the thing be determined according to the principles of Mahometan law. If the wife raise a defence of cruelty she must prove violence of such a character as to endanger, or cause a reasonable apprehension of danger, to her personal health or safety. The ratio decidendi in such a case considered and laid down. Judoonath Bose v. Shumsoonnissa Begum, 8 W. R., P. C., 3.

Regulation XXVI of 1793 applies to proprietors out of possession as well as to those in possession, and is not overridden by the Mahometan law with reference to the validity of the marriage contract. Rajah Syud Enayet Hossein v. Ranee Rosun Jahan, 5 W. R., 5.

A Mahometan married woman may be convicted of theft, or abetment of theft, in respect of the property of her husband. Reg. v. Khátálai, 6 Bom. Rep., Cr. Ca., 9.

In a suit for restitution of conjugal rights brought against a wife and certain persons said to be detaining her from her husband, the proper form of decree is one enjoining the wife to return to her husband, and the other co-defendants to abstain from preventing her return. Jaffer Khanum v. Imdad Hossein, 2 N. W. R., 314.

According to Mahometan law cohabitation as husband and wife will raise a presumption of a marriage if the parties are Mahometans, or persons between whom a valid marriage can be celebrated. Monowar Khan v. Abdoollah Khan, 3 N. W. R., 177.

According to Mahometan law, until there has been an ascertainment of the rate at which maintenance is payable, no right to maintenance accrues to a wife on which she can found a suit. Mahomed Masah-ood-deen Khan v. Clara Jane Mushooddeen, 2 N. W. R., 173.

Where a Mahometan wife, in reconveying to her husband the property received from him in lieu of dower, took from him a written agreement in which he covenanted to pay her a certain sum of money annually without objection or demur,—Held that the husband could not avoid payment on any of the pleas on which a Mahometan husband could avoid the payment of maintenance to a wife. Yusooj Ali Chowdry v. Mussamut Fyzoonissu Khatoon Chowdrain, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 296.

9.—Minority and Guardianship—(See Law of Personal Status).

Held (according to a futwa of the cazee-ool-cozaat) that amongst Sheas the custody of a female child rests with the mother only up to the seventh year. Mussamut Raj Begum v. Nawab Reza Hossein, 2 W. R., 76.

According to the Mahometan law, a mother has the right of custody of the person of her minor son up to seven years of age.

Quære,—Where she does not maintain him, has she, as against a relation on the father's side, the right of custody and control after that age? Ameeroonissa and others, appellants, 11 W. R., 297.

A marriage contracted by the mother and grandmother of a Mahometan minor was held to be lawful where a nearer guardian was precluded by absence from acting. Kaloo Sheikh v. Gureeboolah Sheikh, 10 W. R., 12.

Under the Mahometan law, a sale by a guardian of property belonging to a minor is not permitted otherwise than in case of urgent necessity or clear advantage to the infant.

A purchaser from such guardian cannot defend his title on the ground of the bona fides of the transaction.

An elder brother is not in the position of a guardian having any power as such over the property of his minor sisters. Mussamut Bukshan v. Mussamut Maldai Kooeri, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 423; S. C., 12 W. R., 337.

Under the Mahometan law, remote guardians, among whom are brothers, can under no circumstances aliene the property of a minor; their guardianship only extends to matters connected with the education of their wards, and the near guardians alone have limited power over the immoveable property. Ruttun v. Doomee Khan and others, 4 Agra Rep., A. C., 21.

According to Mahometan law, a mother has a preferential right over the paternal uncle to the guardianship of minors and to the custody of their persons. Shaikh Alimodeed Moallem v. Mussamut Syfoora Bibee, 6 W. R., Mis., 125.

According to Mahometan law, the mother is entitled, in preference to the father, to the custody of an infant under seven years of age. Shahzada Futteh Ali Shah v. Shahzada Mahomed Mukeem Oodeen; Shahzada Futteh Ali Shah v. Mussamut Fuzeeluttunissa Bebee, W. R., 1864, 131.

Held that under Mahometan law the bride's father can set aside the marriage on the ground of inequality between the parties to the marriage if it had taken place without his consent, the consent of the bride's mother and brother notwithstanding, and that the bride herself is legally competent to refuse herself to her husband so long as her dowry remains unpaid. Mohundee Begum v. Bairam Khan, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 130.

According to Mahometan law, a mother is entitled to the custody of her child, if such child be a male, till it shall have attained the age of seven years; if such child be a female, till it shall have reached the age of puberty. In the matter of Tayhet Ally, an infant, 2 Hyde's Rep., 63.

In the case of Mahometans not subject to the Court of Wards, the limit of minority is at least sixteen years. Abdool Oahab Chowdhry and others v. Mussamut Elias Banoo and others, 8 W. R., 301.

The question of legal necessity does not necessarily arise in cases of sale under the Mahometan law, though it may properly be an element for consideration when the conduct of a guardian is called in question. The Mahometan law looks to the benefit of the minor, and permits the guardian to dispose of moveable property if it be for the benefit of the minor. In this case a sale made to carry on important litigation was held bonâ fide and for the benefit of the minor, the decision in Grose's case (12 W. R., Original Jurisdiction, p. 13) not being applicable. Mussamut Syedun v. Syud Velayet Ali Khan, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 239.

10.—PRE-EMPTION.

Where a vendor in selling his property got the vendee to execute another deed in his favour for certain beegahs of land for his maintenance, and subsequently, on the completion of the bargain, a co-sharer took that property by right of pre-emption,—Held that the agreement, being in fact a part of the consideration for sale and bonâ fide, was binding on the pre-emptor, who cannot claim to have the bargain made with him on more favourable terms than those offered by the stranger and accepted by the vendor, the fact that he was no party personally to the agreement notwithstanding. Khait Singh v. Heera Dass, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 75.

According to the Mahometan law, it is essential to the performance of the Tuhib-ishhad that third persons should be formally called upon, either in the presence of the purchaser or on the land; or, if the vendor is in possession, in the presence of the vendor, to bear witness to the demand. Golakram Deb v. Brindaban Deb, 6 B. L. R., 165; and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 265.

A claim for pre-emption under Section 2 of Act I of 1841 is sustainable in respect of an imperfect puttudaru tenure. Sheik Kadir Bun v. Ram Tahul Bhugut, 3 N. W. R., 125.

A sharer in the appendages has not an equal right to pre-emption with a sharer in the body of the estate. Golam Ali Khan v. Agurjut Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 343.

The Mahometan doctrine of pre-emption is not law in the Madras Presidency. Ibrahim Saib v. Mani Mir Udin Saib, 6 Mad. Rep., 26.

In order to establish a right of pre-emption on the part of a sharer it is not necessary that the property sold should be actually separated or defined. Gobind Chunder Goopto v. Raj Kishore Sein, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 365.

Where one of two neighbours has sold his land to a stranger, and the other neighbour has thereupon claimed a right of pre-emption, no subsequent dissolution of the contract affects the right of the pre-emptor which has once accrued and been duly asserted. Bhadu Mahomed v. Rhada Churn Bolia, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 219; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 332.

Per Peacock, C. J., and Kemp and Mitter, JJ.—A Hindu purchaser is not bound by the Mahometan law of pre-emption in favour of a Mahometan co-partner, although he purchased from one of several Mahometan co-parceners, nor is he bound by the Mahometan law of pre-emption on the ground of vicinage. A right of pre-emption in a Mahometan does not depend on any defect of title on the part of his Mahometan co-partner to sell except subject to the right of pre-emption, but upon a rule of Mahometan law, which is not binding on the Court, nor on any purchaser other than a Mahometan. Per Norman and Macpherson, JJ. (dissentientes).—Wherever a Mahometan co-sharer or neighbour has a right of pre-emption, whose property is sold by his neighbour or co-sharer, also a Mussulman, his right is not defeated by the mere fact that the purchaser is a Hindu. Sheikh Kudratulla v. Mahini Mohun Shaha; Syama Kumar Roy v. Jan Mahomed; Farman Khan v. Bhurat Chundra Shaha Chowdry, 4 B. L. R., F. B. R., 134; 13 S. W. R., F. B. R., 21.

The plaintiff claimed a right of pre-emption as sufee-shurikh, or partner in the thing sold. The Court of first instance gave him a decree, on the ground of long possession as proprietor. The lower Appellate Court reversed the decision on the ground that the plaintiff's title depended on a deed of purchase, which it was admitted had been set aside in a former suit in 1855, and that the plaintiff had failed to show that the decision in that suit had been reversed. The plaintiff proved that he had preferred an appeal from that decision, and alleged that it had been overruled; but there was no proof of the result of the appeal, as the records of that suit had been burnt in the mutiny. Held on appeal to the High Court, that, under the circumstances, proof of long possession as proprietor was sufficient. Tufani Sing v. Mussamut Durgaban, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 21.

On the foreclosure of a mortgage, after the expiry of the year of grace, but before a decree for possession had been obtained by the mortgagee, a suit to enforce the right of pre-emption, in respect of the property mortgaged, is maintainable. Mussamut Tara Kunwar v. Mangri Meeah, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 114.

Where an offer of sale was made to a pre-emptor, and he refused to avail himself of it, and consented to a sale to a stranger,—Held that after a sale to a stranger he could not set up his right of pre-emption. Brajah Kishore Surma v. Kirti Chundra Surma, 7 B. L. R., 19, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 246.

Under a deed of sale the vendor conveyed to the purchaser five plots of land. In a suit by a third party to enforce a right of pre-emption in respect of one out of the five plots,—Held that he could not divide the bargain and sue on the ground of pre-emption for a portion only of the property covered by the deed of sale. Sheikh Izzatulla v. Sheikh Bhikun Molla, 6 B. L. R., 386; and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 469.

The word khalit is not improperly used in a plaint in a pre-emption suit to designate a sharik or partner in the substance of a thing; and if it is not clear whether the plaintiff claimed pre-emption as khalit or sharik it may be shown by express words, or it may be inferred from the written statement whether the plaintiff claimed on the one or on the other ground.

Where the intention of the co-proprietors of an estate is to make a complete batwara of the whole, but an inconsiderable part is by oversight or accident left out of the division, that will not have the effect of giving one co-proprietor a claim of pre-emption on the sale to a stranger by another co-proprietor of his share or division of the estate.

Semble,—Where an integral portion of property, as a wall, is left purposely joint and undivided, the community of interest continues. Lala Prag Dutt v. Sheikh Bundi Hossein, 7 B. L. R., 42; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 225.

A shureek or partner in the substance of the thing sold is preferred to a shuffee-khuleet, or partner in the rights of water or way; and where a plaintiff sues as a shureek the lower Court ought not to raise the issue as to whether he claims as a shuffee-khuleet. Sheoguttun Roy v. Anwar Ali, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 189.

The term shureek cannot be restricted to cases in which the parties enjoy the properties jointly. In the contemplation of Mahometan law those who occupy other houses in the same mansion are regarded as partners together with the person the sale of whose share in a house gives rise to the question of pre-emption. Gureeboollah Khan v. Kebul Lall Mitter, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 124.

Unless delay on the part of a pre-emptor indicates his intention of relinquishing his right, the mere fact that he takes a short time to ascertain whether the news of the sale is correct or not is not sufficient to invalidate his demand of mowasibut, if made immediately after he has ascertained that the sale has taken place. Amjud Hossein v. Khurug Sein Sahoo, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 299.

In a suit to establish a right of pre-emption to property which had been sold, in which plaintiff alleged that the actual value was different from that which was recited in the deed of sale between the defendants, the vendor, and the vendee,—Held that it was for plaintiff to give some evidence in support of the allegation that the amount stated as the price by the defendant was wrong. Held that plaintiff was entitled to have the property at the price agreed upon between the vendor and the vendee, but not to the benefit of an arrangement by which a portion of the price had been allowed to remain in the hands of the vendee that he might pay off a mortgage debt. Sheikh Golam Ayhya v. Joy Mungle Sing, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 435.

Mere possession gives no "huk shuffa" according to Mahometan law: there must be ownership (mileck) in the contiguous land. Beharee Ram v. Mussamut Shookubdra, 9 W. R., 455.

The privilege of shuffa refers to cases in which the sale has been actually completed by the extinction of the rights of the vendor. Mussumut Ladun v. Bhyro Ram, 8 W. R., 255.

Where what a plaintiff substantially asked for was to have his right of pre-emption declared on the ground that he was a partner in the thing sold, a mistake in the wording of his claim—viz., the use of the words "shuffa khullutt" (which means a partner in the commensality and appendages of the land), instead of "shuffa sharik"—was held not to prejudice his status in the suit. Wahed Ali Khan v. Hunoman Pershad, 12 W. R., 484.

The mere fact of two parties having jointly sued and obtained a decree by right of pre-emption against a third party does not preclude either from contending that by agreement they were not to take equal shares in the purchase. Mussamut Berunga Koeree v. Hurpershad Lall, 3 Agra Rep., 235.

The pre-emptor obtained a decree from the first Court, which decree provided a certain time within which the sum ascertained to be the purchase-money was to be deposited. The pre-emptor appealed against the amount fixed by the first Court, but failed: he did not deposit the money within the fixed time, and the Judge declined to fix any further time. Held that the plaintiff in appealing from the original decree could not escape from the obligation which it imposed, and the lower Appellate Court was not bound by law to insert in its decree any special direction concerning such deposit, unless occasion called for it, although it was competent to have done so. Sheo Pershad Lall and others v. Thakoor Rai and others, 4 Agra Rep., 254.

In a suit for the right of pre-emption, on the ground that plaintiff was a shuffee khulut, defendant, who alleged that plaintiff was only a benamee shareholder, offered to establish his case on the deposition of the plaintiff alone. The latter not appearing on summons, the suit was decreed against him under Section 170, Code of Civil Procedure. On this he appealed, and the Judge ordered the Moonsiff to give him further time to appear. This was granted, and then extended again and again, by a Moonsiff who, on the plaintiff failing to appear again, gave a decree against him under the same law as before. The case was then appealed to the Judge, who ordered the case to be tried on its merits, remarking that the presence of the plaintiff was not necessary. Jhoomuck Singh v. Jeetun Lall, 12 W. R., 359.

Held that a purchaser is entitled to the profits of the property purchased by him accruing between the time of purchase and subsequent transfer to a pre-emptor. In such cases the pre-emptor ought to be made a party to the suit. Buldeo Pershad v. Mohun, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 30.

Where the wajib-ool-urz provided that alienation shall be first made to brethren of common ancestor, and then to the other sharers of the puttee,—Held that the brethren in whose favour the first right of pre-emption was secured must be construed to be brethren who were sharers in the puttee. Hur Sahai and others v. Jawala and others, 2 Agra Rep., 31.

Held by a Full Bench, in concurrence with the lower Court, that the proper construction of the words shikmee showkayan used in a clause of the administration paper was that they gave a preference to sharers in the thoke over those who are merely sharers in the village. Jey Mull v. Tooree and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 171.

Held that where a pre-emptive claim is based on the wajib-ool-urz, it is not to be assumed that the claimant of pre-emption complied with the peculiar conditions which, under the Mahometan law, are essential to give validity to such a claim, unless expressly provided by the wajib-ool-urz, and the Court construing such contracts ought to consider the intention of the parties as expressed in those contracts, and to give effect to them without alteration or addition. Chowdhry Brij Lall v. Rajah Goor Sahai and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 128.

When a mortgagee in possession purchased the property mortgaged,—Held that his possession as proprietor commenced from the date of purchase, and limitation would run from the date of the purchase against a claimant by right of pre-emption. Mahomed Banazeer and others v. Gunga Ram and others, 4 Agra Rep., 260.

Held that the plaintiff, having refused to purchase at the sum actually given, could not come into Court and ask for a conditional decree, which is given in cases where a higher price than was actually paid has been alleged to have been paid to the prejudice of the pre-emptor. Kudhara and others v. Khuman Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 265.

In a suit by A. to enforce a right of pre-emption, in which the purchase to B. was admitted, but it was alleged that B.'s deed of purchase had been ante-dated, the onus lay on A. to prove that B.'s deed had been ante-dated; and on the failure of A. to substantiate that fact, and to prove that B. had taken possession within one year previous to institution of the suit, A. was held barred by Clause 1, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859. Kumar Ali and others v. Azmut Ali and others, 8 W. R., 383.

A contract having been entered into for sale and purchase of certain property, the plaintiff, pre-emptor, was not bound to defer the enforcement of his right of purchase till the bill of sale had been delivered or registered, or payment made. Luchmee Narain and others v. Bheemul Doss, 8 W. R., 500.

In a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption, where there is no other evidence, and the Court can come to a distinct finding upon it, it is not incumbent on the Court to put the purchaser upon his oath. Where evidence is gone into the Court must decide according to the view it takes of the evidence, any preference which may be given to the evidence for the person claiming the right of pre-emption being given only in the event of the evidence being very evenly balanced. Hunsraj Singh v. Rash Behary Singh and others, 7 W. R., 211.

In a suit to enforce a right of pre-emption where there is evidence in support of the pre-emptor's statement of price, the Court is justified in proceeding on that evidence alone, without calling on the purchaser to take oath to the amount of purchase-money. Hunsraj Singh v. Choka Singh and others, 7 W. R., 486.

Held that, in a previous ruling of the High Court (1 W. R., 234), the Court only meant to say that it could not be held upon decisions that were in conflict with other decisions of the same district that the custom of pre-emption prevailed there; it did not say that when there were decisions tending the same way, that that would not be satisfactory proof of the fact. Kodrutoollah v. Mohuree Shaha and others, 9 W. R., 537.

In decreeing a right of pre-emption a Civil Court has no power to make the decree-holder's right depend on payment of the purchase-money within a specified time. Syud Asan Aly v. Sahokhee Bibee, 10 W. R., 53.

Conflicting decisions of the Subordinate Courts held not to prove that the custom of the right of pre-emption under the Mahometan law prevails among the Hindoos of Chittagong. Inder Narain Chowdhry v. Mahomed Nazirooddeen, 1 W. R., 234.

Quære,—Whether the Hindus of Chittagong have adopted the Mahometan law of pre-emption. Nasirooddeen Khan v. Indernarain Chowdhry, 5 W. R., 237.

Where a party sues under a title by pre-emption to an estate which has been sold, he cannot claim to recover money paid as revenue on account of the estate until the suit has been decided. Mussamut Wozeer Begum v. Mussamut Fuzloonissa, W. R., 1864, 373.

The custom of pre-emption has been recognized among Hindus in the Province of Behar. Mussamut Joy Koer v. Suroop Narain Thakoor, W. R., 1864, 259.

When a Mahometan claims pre-emption against a Hindu under Mahometan law there must be a distinct plea of custom as a plea of fact. Hubeebul Hossein v. Lalla Dewkee Nundun, W. R., 1864, 75.

The right of pre-emption by a Mahometan as against a Hindu purchaser can only be enforced in Tipperah after proof of the right or custom of pre-emption existing generally in that part of the country, in cases in which Mahometans are not, or are only partially, concerned. Dewan Bunwar Ali v. Syud Azhurooddeen Mahomed, 5 W. R., 270.

Quære,—Whether the law of pre-emption extends to transactions as between Hindus in Jessore. Madhub Chunder Nath Biswas v. Tamee Bewah, 5 W. R., 279.

Where shares in a mouzah were by arrangement between the parties made over to manage upon trust to pay part of the profits to the debtors of the transferers, and the residue of the profits to the transferers, who bound themselves not to alienate until the debts were paid,—Held that it was not such alienation as would confer on the plaintiff a right of pre-emption under wajib-ool-urz. Outar Singh v. Mussamut Ablakhee Koonwur, 3 Agra Rep., 328.

A claim to mesne profits due before the date on which a right to pre-emption arose cannot form the subject of pre-emption. Emamoodeen Sowdagur v. Abdool Soobham and others, 7 W. R., 117.

A share in a mouzah, together with the dwelling-house of the proprietor, was exchanged for a share and dwelling-house in another mouzah. Held that the transaction being an exchange of property for property was a sale, and that the right to purchase the land, but not the house, was claimable by a co-sharer by right of pre-emption.

The consideration payable by pre-emptor is the estimated value of the property given in exchange, and not that of the property claimed. Sewa Ram v. Rissal Chowdhry, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 144.

(b) Nature of Pre-emption.

Under Mahometan law, the right of pre-emption does not accrue until a sale has been actually made, and it is not incumbent on the pre-emptor to produce the price at the time of making his claim; nay, he may contest the matter during the sitting of the Judge, but he should produce the price after the decree has been pronounced.

A shareholder in the property sold has the first and strongest right of pre-emption; there is nothing in the Mahometan law which restricts the right of a co-parcener in the property of the land sold to a small or large portion of land, and it devolves on his relinquishing it even to a partner on the road. Jahangir Buksh v. Bhikaree Lall, 11 W. R., 71.

Pre-emption applies only to sales. A lease in perpetuity, with a rent (however small) reserved is not a sale, and cannot therefore be the subject of pre-emption. Mooroly Ram v. Huree Ram and others, 8 W. R., 106.

An unsigned wajib-ool-urz is not binding on the co-sharers, and cannot originate a right of pre-emption if no prior usage existed. To prove usage it is not necessary that documentary evidence should be adduced. Joykishore Singh v. Thakoor Dass and others, 4 Agra Rep., 75.

Held that the wajib-ool-urz does not confer any right of pre-emption on the co-sharers where it only provides that the shareholders should sell with the consent of brethren and co-sharers. Bubboo Doobey v. Ishree, 4 Agra Rep., 74.

Held that the right of pre-emption, when once allowed and exercised by the pre-emptor, cannot be disputed at subsequent occasions of sale, and that neither manhood, puberty, justice, or respectability of character, are conditions of pre-emption under the Mahometan law. Mussamut Punna v. Juggur Nath, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 236.

Held that the parties to pre-emption being Mahometans must be bound by the strict conditions of law of pre-emption, and that the offer to purchase before the Registrar at the time of registration of the sale deed is not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of that law. Kareemooddeen v. Moizooddeen Khan, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 184.

The right of pre-emption is not matter of title to property, but is rather a right to the benefit of a contract; and when a claim is advanced on such a right it must be shown that defendant is bound to concede the claim either by law or by some custom to which the class of which he is a member is subject on grounds of justice, equity, and good conscience. Mohesh Lall v. John Christian and Co., 8 W. R., 446.

The right of pre-emption accruing during minority is not to be kept suspended until majority. Meer Murtaza v. Lala Nursing Suhae and others, 7 W. R., 86.

A re-sale cannot destroy the right of pre-emption in a property the sale of which is admitted by the vendor. Puttooaram v. Sham Lall Shahoo and another, 7 W. R., 206.

The Mahometan law of pre-emption was never intended to apply to a case in which the purchaser is not a stranger, but one who is already either a shareholder or a neighbour. Teeka Dharee Singh v. Mohor Singh and others, 7 W. R., 260.

A co-parcener has a higher right of pre-emption than a neighbour, and there is nothing in the Mahometan law to prevent his enforcing his right when the purchaser happens to be a neighbour. Hur Dyal Singh v. Huru Lall, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 107.

During the minority of two out of four brothers an ikrarnamah was entered into between them to the effect that no separation was to take place without the consent of all, and that if one of them separated without such consent he was to forfeit his share of the family property, and that if any one wished to dispose of his share he was to give his brothers the preference. One F. purchased at a private sale the share of M., one of the brothers. On this two of the brothers, A. and I., brought a suit against F. to set aside the sale as contrary to the terms of the ikrarnamah, and urged their claim to pre-emption. The suit was decreed with a stipulation that the purchase-money should be paid back. This not having been done, F. sued M., got a decree, and in execution put up for sale M.'s rights and interests in the family estate, bought them himself, and took possession. The present suit is by A. and I. to recover possession on the ground that M. had no rights and interests left which could be sold in execution.

Held that as M. had never separated, his share had not been forfeited, and that the only other privilege left to the plaintiffs under the ikrar, viz., pre-emption, could not be exercised, inasmuch as M. had not sold his share, the sale having been the act of the Court. Shaikh Ferasut Ali v. Aushootosh Roy Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 455.

A right of pre-emption attaches to the sale of the share of the zemindaree in the case of a co-sharer, though it may not attach on the ground of vicinage. The right of pre-emption is not one which attaches to property, and the obligation it implies may be limited to the residents of a district or to a family, or to any particular class of persons, it being for the claimant in each case to show that it attaches to the defendant. Akhoy Ram Shahaja v. Ram Kunt Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 223.

Properties bearing separate numbers in the Collector's rent-roll are separate estates in the legal sense of the word "estate," implying such a separation as bars a claim to pre-emption on the ground of co-parcenary. Joobraj Singh v. Fookun Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 477.

Where a party claiming certain land by right of pre-emption failed to set up her rights in which the purchaser of that land sued her for possession, and obtained a decree, it was held that she was not entitled to bring a fresh suit to enforce the same rights. Asgur Mahomed v. Nuzeema Bibee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 272.

A right of pre-emption in a separate and distinct estate cannot be allowed merely on the ground of vicinage, except in regard to small plots of land and houses. Shaikh Mahomed Hossein v. Shah Moshun Ali, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 266.

It is not a binding rule of law that the tulub-ishad by a pre-emptor, if made within a day after the receipt of intelligence of the purchase, is necessarily in time for the preservation of the right of pre-emption. The due and sufficient observance of the formality of tulub-ishad, as to time, is a question to be decided in each case by the Court which has to deal with the facts. Mussamut Jamilan v. Latif Hossein. 16 S. W. R., F. B., 13; 8 B. L. R., 160.

In a suit to enforce the right of pre-emption on a sale of a share of a zemindaree estate, the period of limitation should be computed from the date of the sale, not from the date of the mutation of names, the purchaser having acquired by his purchase such possession as the nature of the property sold admits of. Mutation of names, although it may be regarded as evidence that a transfer has been made, is not essential to give validity to the transfer. Omrao Khan v. Imdad Aly Khan, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 9.

A pre-emption suit is not barred by the fact that the property in suit had been the subject of confiscation. Sheo Dutt Ram Tewary v. Ramadhree, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, p. 35.

According to Mahometan law, a shareholder in the property sold has the first or strongest right of pre-emption.

A private partition, though not sanctioned by official authority, if full and final as among the parties to it, will have the same effect as the most formal partition on the right of pre-emption. Gopal Sahi v. Ojoodhea Pershad, 2 W. R., 47.

There is no right of pre-emption where there has not been a real bonâ-fide sale according to the Mahometan law. Mussamut Mohno Bibee v. Juggernath Chowdhry, 2 W. R., 78.

A claim to rights of pre-emption on the ground of vicinage alone will not lie in the case of large estates, but only when either houses or small holdings of land make parties such near neighbours as to give a claim on the ground of convenience and mutual service. Ejnash Kooer v. Sheikh Amjud Ally, 2 W. R., 261.

In the absence of sufficient ground for refusing to take the whole of the lands to be sold, the right of pre-emption cannot be asserted as to a portion only. Cazee Ali v. Sheikh Musseeutoollah, 2 W. R., 285.

As, according to Mahometan law, when either the seller or buyer repudiates the sale, there can be no sale, so neither can there be any right of pre-emption in such a case. Mussamut Ojheoonissa Begum v. Sheikh Mustum Ali, W. R., 1864, 219.

Where there is a plurality of persons entitled to the privilege of pre-emption, the right of all is equal without reference to the extent of their shares in the property. Moharaj Singh v. Lalla Bheechuk Lall, 3 W. R., 71.

The right of the first purchaser is simply a vendor's lien, i.e., to retain the property until he has the money from the party claiming pre-emption. It is no part of the Mahometan law that the claimant of a right of pre-emption must carry the money in his hands and tender it to the first purchaser. A right of pre-emption may be decreed in respect of land within the puttee of the party claiming such right. Dulbood Singh v. Mahaedo Dutt, 2 W. R., 10.

The Mahometan law nowhere recognizes the right of pre-emption in favour of a mere tenant upon the land. Gooman Singh v. Tripool Singh and others, 8 W. R., 437.

The right to pre-emption is very special in its character, and is founded on the supposed necessities of a Mahometan family arising out of their minute subdivision of ancestral property; and as the result of its exercise is generally adverse to public interest, it will not be recognized by the High Court beyond the limits to which those necessities have been judicially decided to extend. Nusrut Roza v. Umbul Khyr Bibee and others, 8 W. R., 302.

A person entitled to pre-emption under the Mahometan law has a right to take over a bargain in its entirety, but not to have it divided, and the consideration apportioned between the several lots of the property Rughoo Nundun Singh v. Muzbooth Singh, 10 W. R., 379.

No right of pre-emption arises on a mere conditional sale or mortgage while any right of redemption remains in the mortgagor.

A mere declaration of an intention to exercise a right not yet accrued is not a claim of a right of pre-emption. It is immaterial whether a formal demand of pre-emption is made at any other time than after the sale become absolute (dissentiente Bayley, J.). Goordyal Sundur v. Rajah Teknarain Singh, 2 W. R., 215.

According to the Mahometan law, a partner has a right of pre-emption in villages or large estates. But a neighbour cannot claim such a right on the ground of vicinage. In the matter of the Petition of Chatternath Jha, alias Jhinga Jha; Sheikh Mahomed Hossein v. Shah Moshin Ali, 6 B. L. R., 41, and 14 S. W. R., F. B., 1.

The owner of land is not entitled by Mahometan law to pre-emption of a house standing thereon. The plaintiff's property in the land is wholly separate and distinct from the defendant's property in the house, and they have nothing in common between them. Pershadi Lal v. Syud Irhad Ali, 2 N. W. R., 100.

Where two persons have by vicinage an equal right of pre-emption the property is to be decreed to them in halves, on payment of their respective moieties of the purchase-money. Misr Khan Kurun v. Misr Sata Ram, 2 N. W. R., 257.

It is the practice of the Courts to allow claims to pre-emption to be asserted on the grounds both of contract and custom in one and the same plaint. Nechul v. Jhan Singh, 2 N. W. R., 222.

Where the rights of a judgment-debtor in a putterdaree estate were sold at auction in execution of decree, and bid for by the son of the judgment-debtor, who gave the name of his father-in-law, to whom the property was knocked down (and who was not a co-parcener in the estate) as the actual purchaser, such father-in-law subsequently waiving his claim as auction-purchaser in favour of the judgment-debtor,—Held, under Section 14 of Act XXIII of 1861, that the property had been knocked down to a stranger, and that the right of pre-emption attached in favour of the person entitled thereto on such sale, he having done all that was necessary to assert his claim. Gunga Ram v. Moola, 2 N. W. R., 210.

Where a Hindu father made a partition of his property among his sons, reserving to himself an interest in one village, which upon his death was to be divided among his sons,—Held that during the father's lifetime no son could claim a right of pre-emption in respect of the village so reserved by the father. Ram Adheen Pandey v. Goordial Pandey, 2 N. W. R., 434.

Where two co-sharers entitled to pre-emption in certain villages associated strangers with them in the purchase of such villages, and other landed property,—Held that they must be regarded in the light of total strangers in respect of the whole of the property included in the sale deed, and that a note at the foot of the sale deed mentioning the interest severally purchased by each of the vendees will not entitle them to retain the shares respectively purchased by them. Guneshee Lal v. Taraut Ali, 2 N. W. R., 343.

Under the Mahometan law, the owner of the land, through which the land in respect of which a right of pre-emption is claimed, receives irrigation, has a preferential right to purchase rather than a mere neighbour. Chand Khan v. Naimat Khan, 3 B. L. R., A. Cr., 296; S. C., 12 W. R., 162.

(c) Preliminaries to be observed.

To establish the right of pre-emption, the tullubuishtishad, or affirmation before witnesses, must be performed in the presence of the person in possession of the lands, whether it be the vendor or the purchaser. Chamroo Pasbun v. Phulwun Roy 16 S. W. R., C. R., 3.

In the case of pre-emption strict proof is necessary of the performance of the preliminaries. According to the Mahometan law, strict adherence to the rules for the performance of the tulub-ishad is especially necessary. In performing the tulub-ishad the pre-emptor must clearly declare his right and invoke witnesses. He must declare that "he has a right of pre-emption to which he has laid claim, and that he still claims it," and invokes witnesses "to bear witness therefore to the fact." Jadu Sing v. Rajkumar, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 171; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 177.

According to the Mahometan law, the mere fact of the pre-emptor taking a short time before performance of the tulub-mawasabat for ascertaining whether the information conveyed to him was correct or not, does not invalidate his right. The Mahometan law allows a short time for reflection before performance of the first demand. Syad Amjad Hossein v. Kharagsen Sahu, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 203.

On hearing of a sale the pre-emptor must immediately make his demand called tulub-mawasabat. Where a pre-emptor, on hearing of the sale of a property to which he had a right of pre-emption, went to the property in dispute, and there declared his right as pre-emptor,—Held that such delay was fatal to his claim. Ram Charun v. Narbir Mahtan, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 216; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 259.

The personal performance of the tulub-ishhad, or demand for pre-emption by the pre-emptor, depends on his ability to perform it. He may do it by means of a letter or messenger, or may depute an agent, if he is at a distance and cannot afford personal attendance.

Where a defendant, after the case had been gone into on the merits, set up that the suit had been undervalued, and the Court of first instance found in favour of the plaintiff on that issue, but the lower Appellate Court was of a contrary opinion and dismissed the suit,—Held that the lower Appellate Court should, before dismissing the suit on that ground, have allowed the plaintiff the option of supplying the necessary stamps, as the first Court would have done, under Section 31, Act VIII of 1859. In any case the order of the first Court was not one affecting the merits of the case or jurisdiction of the Court, and therefore, under Section 350, Act VIII of 1859, the suit could not be dismissed on appeal upon that ground. Syed Wajid Ali Khan v. Lala Homimem Persaud, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 139, and 12 W. R., 484.

The right of pre-emption is lost where there is a dispute as to the purchase-money, if the plaintiff (instead of offering by his plaint to pay the real amount, whatever it may be) claims to purchase a specific quantity of land at a specific price, and that right is shown to have no existence. Achurbur Panday v. Bukshee Ram, 2 W. R., 38.

To entitle a person, otherwise favourably situated, to the right of pre-emption, two conditions must be fulfilled: first (Tulub-i-mawathubut), on receiving information of the sale he must immediately declare his intention to assert his right; and, secondly (Tulub-i-istishuhad), he must, as soon after as possible, make the demand of the vendor or purchaser, or upon the premises, and in the presence of witnesses. Jhotee Singh v. Komul Roy and others, 10 W. R., 119.

A party alleging a right of pre-emption in respect of property which is the subject of a conditional sale, is bound to make his claim immediately on the expiry of the year of grace mentioned in the notice of foreclosure. Syud Meer Ali v. Soondery Debia and others, 6 W. R., 116.

A delay of one day is not such a delay as to interfere with the right of pre-emption under the Mahometan law. The demand by affirmation should be made with the least practicable delay. The ceremony of affirmation should be carried out before either the vendor or the purchaser, or be performed on the premises. Mahomed Waris v. Hazee Imamodeen, 6 W. R., 173.

Where a right of pre-emption under Mahometan law is claimed it is not incumbent on the pre-emptor to tender or produce the price at the time of making his claim. Heera Lall and others v. Moorut Lall, 11 W. R., 275.

To establish a claim to pre-emption under the Mahometan law it is not enough to prove that the ceremony of tulub-mowasibat was performed; it is also necessary to prove the tulub-istihad. Narbhase Singh and others v. Luchee Narain Poree and others, 11 W. R., 307.

Although, according to Mahometan law books, it is not necessary, in respect to the tulub-mowasibat, or first preliminary required to establish a right of pre-emption, that witnesses should hear the exclamation it involves, yet it does not follow that, as matter of evidence, Courts of law are bound to decree a suit to establish such a right simply on the deposition of the plaintiff. Abdool Hossein Khan v. Gobind Chundra Shaha and others, 11 W. R., 404.

It is necessary to the enforcement of the right of pre-emption that all the prescribed formalities should be strictly complied with.

To the ceremony of istihad or tulub-istihad, it is essential that there should be an express invocation of witnesses. Prokas Singh v. Jogeshur Singh, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 12.

The "tulubi istihad" is a preliminary act as essential as the "tulubi mowasibat" to secure to the claimant the right of enforcing pre-emption. There should always therefore be a distinct finding as to whether it was properly made or not. Rajeeooddeen v. Zeenut Bibee, 8 W. R., 463.

A claim to pre-emption should be made as soon as the claimant becomes aware of the completion of the sale. Mohunt Ajoohhya Poorea and others v. Mohun Lall and others, 7 W. R., 428.

It is not incumbent on a pre-emptor to tender the price at the time of making his claim. Khoffeh Jan Bibee v. Mohomed Mehdee, 10 W. R., 211.

According to the Mahometan law of pre-emption, the first thing to be done by the claimant of pre-emption is to make the preliminary declarations. First going to his house to get the money is not a compliance with the law. Mona Singh v. Mosrad Singh, 5 W. R., 203.

To establish a claim to pre-emption it is indispensable that all the necessary ceremonies should be performed. Isaur Chunder Shaha v. Mirza Nisar Hossein, W. R., 1864, 351.

The act of a claimant rising from his seat to claim his right of pre-emption, instead of claiming it as he sat, is not a delay sufficient to entail a forfeiture of his right. Maharaj Singh v. Lallah Bheechook Lall, W. R., 1864, 294.

Under the Mahometan law it is essential to the right of pre-emption to prove the performance of the tullubi istahad. Bhowanee Dutt v. Lokhoo Singh, W. R., 1864, 61.

In a suit for pre-emption proof of performance of the preliminaries prescribed by the Mahometan law is essential. Mussamut Hosseinee Khanum v. Mussamut Lallun, W. R., 1864, 117.

According to Mahometan law, the affirmation by witness need not be made by the claimant of the right of pre-emption in person, but may be made by a duly constituted agent. Mussamut Ojheoonissa Begum v. Sheikh Rustum Ali, W. R., 1864, 219.

Under Mahometan law, the right of pre-emption does not arise until the seller's right of property has been completely extinguished. Mussamut Soonder Kooer v. Lalla Rughoobor Dyal and others, 10 W. R., 246.

(d) Where Pre-emption is Allowed.

A person having a right of pre-emption under the Mahometan law is not precluded from claiming that right at a period subsequent to the sale of the property, if he neither declined the purchase nor gave permission for the sale to others. Huro Doot Naran Singh v. Beer Naran Singh and others, 11 W. R., 480.

Held (by Kemp, J.) that a partner's right of shuffee or pre-emption is not extinguished until a formal division has taken place defining each co-proprietor's share. Wahed Ali Khan v. Hunooman Persaud, 12 W. R., 484.

Where there is imperfect partition, viz., where the land is divided, but the joint liability to the Government remains, and the property is not made into separate mehals, the right of pre-emption is not lost. Ram Persaud v. Buljeet Singh, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 252.

Held that the person in whose favour a preferential right of purchase is stipulated for, by the terms of the wajib-ool-urz, is entitled to a decree if he comes forward and claims his right, without unreasonable delay, after he hears that a sale has been made without any tender to him, although he may not have proved specially that he has fulfilled all the conditions required in the case of a claim of pre-emption under the Mahometan law of Shuffa. Koula Put v. Moharaj Doobey, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 378.

Held that the plaintiff who had a preferential right to purchase, and had no opportunity offered him, had a right to enforce those conditions, a compliance with which was essential before alienation to others. Abdoollah Khan v. Ameerun and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 274.

Held that a preferential right to purchase is not lost merely by the inclusion of the names of the sons of the purchaser in the sale deed, if it be proved that the actual purchaser was the father, and the names of the sons were included in accordance with the prevailing usage, without any intention to defraud the other co-sharers. Dowlut Singh and others v. Kedar Singh and others, 4 Agra Rep., A. C., 25.

Held that the indebtedness of the pre-emptor does not invalidate his right of pre-emption. Ram Khelawan Rai and others v. Shiva Dass and others, 1 Agra Rep., 76.

Exercise of right of pre-emption allowed in respect of a kotee and golah, as it was proved that according to local usage and custom such properties were subject to pre-emption. Kesho Rai and others v. Binayak Rai and others, 4 Agra Rep., 179.

One of two joint sharers has no preferential title to the right of pre-emption in his capacity of neighbour, but is equally entitled with his co-sharer to the privilege of pre-emption, without regard to the extent of their shares. Roshun Mahomed and others v. Mahomed Kulum and others, 7 W. R., 150.

In a putteedaree village the sharers in each puttee have a preferential claim to the right of pre-emption in that puttee. Maharaj Singh v. Beechook Lall, 1 W. R., 233.

When part of an estate is sold in execution of a decree, a co-sharer in the estate is a partner in the thing actually sold, and according to Mahometan law is entitled to the right of pre-emption. Imamooddeen Sowdagur v. Abdool Sobhan, 5 W. R., 170.

A pre-emptor may sue any time before the expiry of a year from the date of transfer of possession. A mortgagee's absolute right and his claim to pre-emption arise from the time the sale becomes absolute. Mussamut Jankee Kooer v. Mussamut Teranee Kooer, W. R., 1864, 285.

The right of pre-emption, according to the Mahometan law, may be exercised upon a re-sale of the property, after a previous sale which has fallen through, and with respect to which no claim of pre-emption was made. Busunt Koomaree v. Kali Persad Singh, Marsh., 11.

In a suit based on a right of pre-emption, where plaintiff had proved the due observance of the necessary preliminaries, and claimed as a partner in certain julkur and nemuksaher which was still held joint, though the land had been divided between plaintiff and the defendant's vendor,—Held that notwithstanding the division of the land the immunities and appendages thereof were still held in co-parcenary. Plaintiff, as owner of one puttee, was entitled to a right of pre-emption over a stranger in respect of the other puttee which was sold. Mahtab Singh v. Ram Tehal Misser, 10 W. R., 314.

A right or custom of pre-emption is recognized as prevailing among Hindus in Behar and some other provinces of Western India. In districts where its existence has not been judicially noticed the custom will be matter to be proved. Such custom, where it exists, must be presumed to be founded on and co-extensive with the Mahometan law upon that subject, unless the contrary be shown. The Court may, as between Hindus, administer a modification of that law as to the circumstances under which the right may be claimed, where it is shown that the custom in that respect does not go the whole length of the Mahometan law of pre-emption. But the assertion of right by suit must always be preceded by an observance of the preliminary forms prescribed in the Mahometan law. Fukeer Rawot and others v. Sheikh Emam Buksh and others, W. R., F. B., 143.

Where Government confiscates the share of a convict, and sells it for valuable consideration, the co-sharers have a right to claim such share by right of pre-emption on such sale, and the condition of wajib-ool-urz is binding on Government as much as it was on the original owner, Government acquiring the share subject to the same condition as the former held it. The Collector of Futtehpore v. Syud Yad Ali, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 88.

Where the wajib-ool-urz provided that, in cases of transfer by "sale, &c.," the co-sharers will have preferential right to the same,—Held that the co-sharers were entitled to claim by right of pre-emption to take over an usufructuary lease which was made for the term of eight years. Ahmed Ali Khan and others v. Ahmed and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 101.

Held that a pre-emptor is not precluded from claiming the property by right of pre-emption because he opposed the mutation of names only on the ground that the vendor was not in possession.

Held also that the mere admission of the vendor that an old debt of Rs. 500 formed part of the consideration was not conclusive evidence of the allegation. Peera and others v. Shimbhoo and others, 3 Agra Rep., 348.

Possession of a separate share of an estate divided by butwarra gives the owner no right of pre-emption as a "suffeh-khullut" over the remaining portion.

Where possession of such separate share and vicinage have been alone urged in the lower Courts as the grounds of a claim to pre-emption, plaintiff cannot be allowed for the first time in special appeal to rest the claim on the fact of joint ownership with the defendant in the appendages of the land, even though evidence of such fact is found in the butwarra papers on which plaintiff based his suit. Mokadeo Singh v. Mussamut Zeenutoonissa and others, 11 W. R., 169.

In a suit to recover by right of pre-emption, on the ground that plaintiff was in the position of a co-partner in the property to be sold, notwithstanding a private separation having taken place between the shareholders, inasmuch as he was still liable for arrears of Government, and might still apply for a public butwarrah,—Held that, as plaintiff had divided off his own share by regular metes and bounds, and made himself in every respect independent of his co-partners so far as lay in his power to do so, he had by his own act deprived himself of any advantage which the law might have given him under different circumstances. Byj Nath Singh v. Dooly Matoon and others, 11 W. R., 215.

In a suit for a declaration of plaintiff's right of pre-emption in a property which had been originally mortgaged, but which, owing to a subsequent arrangement, had not passed from the mortgagor to the mortgagee,—Held that as the ownership was still with the mortgagor, who could redeem his property within a stipulated period, no right of pre-emption had arisen from the Mahometan law. Bhowanee Pershad v. Purshonno Singh and others, 11 W. R., 282.

There is no judicial finding to the effect that the custom of pre-emption is recognized among the Hindus of the Province of Behar.

It is doubtful whether, even under Mahometan law, the owners of two adjacent lakheraj estates, wholly unconnected with one another, could either of them claim a right of pre-emption on the ground of vicinage. No such right of pre-emption on the ground of the mere vicinage has been known to exist among Hindus. Kantiram and others v. Woli Sahu, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 330; 11 W. R., 251.

The right of pre-emption on ground of vicinage is limited to parcels of land and houses, and does not extend to the purchase of an entire estate, even though it be entirely surrounded by the lands of the would-be pre-emptor. Abdul Asim v. Khondkar Hamed Ali, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 63; 10 W. R., 356.

When a plaintiff seeks to establish his right of pre-emption upon the ground of partnership he cannot obtain a decree upon the ground of vicinage. Shiu Suhai Mullick v. Lalla Hari Sahia Singh, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 142.

Quære,—Whether, as between owners of adjacent plots of land, pre-emption can exist by right of vicinage. Nirput Muhtoon and others v. Mussamut Deep Koonwar, 8 W. R., 2.

Unless a prescriptive usage and local custom be clearly established a Hindu defendant is not bound by the Mahometan law in a case in which a Mahometan seeks to enforce his right of pre-emption. Sheraj Ali Chowdhry v. Ramjan Bibee and others, 8 W. R., 204; 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 249.

Where a resumed maáfee "chuck" was aliened by the holder thereof, and a preferential right to take it was claimed by a sharer in the zemindaree under the terms of wajib-ool-urz agreed to by the co-sharers at the time of settlement, and to which the holder of the "chuck" was no party,—Held that such alienation was not an alienation of a share within the meaning of the wajib-ool-urz; that the holder of the "chuck" could neither confer on its possessor a right of pre-emption, nor subject his estate to such right in the event of alienation. Sheo Lall Sahoo v. Sheikh Rumzanee, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 35.

Held, on the construction of "wajib-ool-urz," that the condition stipulating that alienations should be made with the consent of all the sharers does not stipulate for the existence of pre-emption, and that the claim based on that was untenable. Ram Pershad Shahoo and others v. Sheikh Rumzanee, 1 Agra Rep., 37.

Held that occasional instances, in which a claim to pre-emption on the ground of vicinage may have been admitted, or for special reason the vendors submitted to the claim, are not sufficient to prove the custom of pre-emption in a mahullah, but repeated instances of the assertion of pre-emption as a right and of its recognition or enforcement, ranging over a long period of time and in various places, should be shown. Sheo Churn Kandoo v. Goodur Burnawar, 4 Agra Rep., 138.

Held that a claim for pre-emption would not lie against the purchaser of a confiscated property sold by the revenue authorities. Mohamed Villayet-ool-lah Khan v. Ahmed Hossein Khan and others, 4 Agra Rep., 70.

Held that in a case of private sale the right of pre-emption must be based on usage or contract, and that an instance of pre-emption in an auction sale is not sufficient. Mussamut Bhui Koonwar v. Zahoor Ali and Jiman Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 258.

Held that a solitary case or two is not sufficient to prove the custom or pre-emption in a locality where the privilege is not binding upon the parties by positive law. Benersee Doss v. Phool Chund, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 243.

Where a plot of land formerly held rent-free situate in a pure zemindaree estate is sold at auction,—Held that the claim of preferential purchase under Section 14, Act XXIII of 1861, would not lie, as the estate was not a putteedaree estate within the meaning of Section 2, Act I of 1841. Ghooro Singh v. Dabee Dyal, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 280.

In a suit claiming a right to pre-emption, where it was found as a fact that the sale had not been completed, and that there had not been cessation of the vendor's right, it was held that, whether under the ordinary principles which relate to contracts of sale, or under the principles of Mahometan law, no right could arise in favour of the pre-emptor. Mussamut Ladun v. Bhyro Ram, 8 W. R., 255.

The Mahometan law of pre-emption on the score of vicinage applies only to houses or small plots of land, and not to large estates, or to a claim based on partnership when it is in proof that a separation of the estate has been effected. Chowdhry Joogul Kishore Singh and others v. Poocha Singh and others, 8 W. R., 413.

Petitioner was a co-sharer in an estate in Zillah Sylhet. The right and interest of another co-sharer in the same estate being put up for sale in execution of a decree, the petitioner claimed it under Section 14, Act XXIII of 1861. The Principal Sudder Ameen thereupon substituted him for the actual purchaser. The Judge in appeal reversed this order, on the ground that putteedaree estates were unknown in Sylhet. Petitioner asked for the interference of the Court under Section 35 of the same Act. Held that, in such circumstances, the Court executing a decree had no authority to substitute the claimant for the actual purchaser without the consent of the latter, and that a party claiming a share under the section cited is simply in the position of a party who, having a right of pre-emption, has observed the requisite formalities to enable him to assert the right, and must resort to a civil suit to obtain the benefit thereof. The orders of the lower Courts were set aside accordingly. Syud Abdool Jaleel v. Kalee Coomar Dutt, 6 W. R., Mis., 3.

No right of pre-emption can exist as against a co-parcener.

The custom of pre-emption, as applicable to Christians in Bhaugulpore, must be proved on the same principle as has been applied to Hindus in Behar. G. Christian and others v. Moheshee Lall, 6 W. R., 250.

A plaintiff suing to establish a right of pre-emption, on the ground of co-partnership with the vendor, cannot be allowed to travel beyond his plaint, and obtain a decree by right of vicinage. Koonj Behary Lall v. Gridharee Lall, 10 W. R., 189.

The plaintiff relies upon the custom of pre-emption prevailing between Mahometans and Hindus in Sylhet. Held that unless he can show that the custom is undoubted and invariable he is not entitled to a decree. Jameelah Khatoon v. Pagul Ram, 1 W. R., 251.

Section 14 of Act XXIII of 1861 is not applicable to permanently-settled estates in Sylhet, nor to estates in any district of Bengal, unless extended thereto.

When property is sold by public auction at a sale in execution of a decree, and the neighbour or partner has the same opportunity to bid for the property as other parties present in Court, the law of pre-emption does not apply. Abdul Jubel v. Khelatchunder Ghose, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 105; 10 W. R., 165.

The property of several co-sharers, some of whom were minors, was sold to a single purchaser, under a deed of sale, which contained a covenant by the vendors, who professed to act on behalf of themselves and the minors, that they would compensate the vendee for any loss he might incur should the minors when they came of age, not ratify the sale. A. sued to enforce her right of pre-emption in respect of the lands sold. The lower Appellate Court was of opinion that A. could not enforce her claim of pre-emption in respect of the share of the minors; and on the Court's suggestion the plaint was amended, so as to ask only for enforcement of her claim in respect only of the shares of the vendors of full age.

Held that A. was bound to claim her right against all the shares, and could not enforce it in respect of some only.

Semble,—A plaint cannot be amended in an Appellate Court. Abdul Gafoor v. Mussamut Nurbanu, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 78; 10 W. R., 111.

A person who has been offered his right of pre-emption and has refused it cannot afterwards reassert that right as against a sale made with his direct permission to a third party. Sheo Tahul Singh v. Mussamut Ram Kooer, W. R., 1864, 311.

Pre-emption is not a right to be found in any Hindu law book, but is allowed and practised by custom in some parts of the country. Before the right can be claimed, the plaintiff must prove the existence of the custom in the district where the property is situated. Ramgutty Surma v. Kasi Chunder Surma, W. R., 1864, 317.

A transfer without money or other consideration, and which is in fact a gift, is held not to be a sale to which the right of pre-emption attaches. Syud Ameer Ali v. Mussamut Bebee Pearun, W. R., 1864, 239.

The right of pre-emption cannot be exercised by a judgment-creditor in respect of the sale of property in execution of his decree. Sheikh Nuzmoodeen v. Kunye Jha, Marsh., 555.

Where a stipulation in the wajib-ool-urz prohibits alienation by any member of the co-parcenary body, without the consent of the other co-sharers,—Held that such a condition does not confer any right of pre-emption on a co-sharer, and no decree for pre-emption can be given on the basis thereof, but a co-sharer has the right to have the sale cancelled if made without his consent. Gayadeen v. Ramshal and others, 3 Agra Rep., 181.

11.—SUCCESSION.

Suit in the nature of ejectment, by principal respondent as residuary heir according to the Mahometan law of a deceased person, to recover from his widow, the appellant, three-fourths of her deceased husband's estate, of the whole of which she had for upwards of eleven years been in possession. His title as residuary heir was put in issue, as well as other issues touching the widow's dower, &c. The Privy Council, thinking it of the utmost importance that those who had thus sanctioned a long possession should not be allowed lightly to disturb it, or to escape from those legitimate inferences and presumptions which on a conflict of evidence arise from their own acts and conduct, decided in favour of the widow, holding that the respondent had failed to establish his title upon which he sued.

According to the Mahometan law there may be a renunciation of the right to inherit, and such a renunciation need not be expressed, but may be implied, from the ceasing or desisting from prosecuting a claim maintainable against another. As a general rule a widow takes no share in "the return," i.e., in failure of residuaries; but some authorities seem to hold that if there are no heirs by blood alive the widow would take the whole estate to the exclusion of the fisc. Mussumat Hurmut-ool-Nissa Begum v. Allabdia Khan and Haja Hidayat, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 108.

Held that the question as to succession of property between parties who, though originally Hindus, subsequently embraced the Mahometan religion, and professed that religion for successive generations, must be disposed of under the Mahometan law; and the plea of usage opposed to Mahometan law must not be recognized. Surmue Khan and others v. Kadir Dad Khan and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 39.

An assignment of his property made by a Mahometan in favour of his widow and his two sons, reserving to himself full power over it during his life, and restricting the sons' right to alienate during their mother's life, as she was to enjoy it in lieu of her dower, held to be a disposition of a testamentary nature, and void of the requisites of a sale under the Mahometan law. Mussamut Bogal Begum v. Fukeorun Bebee, 4 Agra Rep., 288.

Under the Mahometan law, a sister is entitled to obtain a share of the estate left by her deceased brother. Boolinisharu Bibee v. Bukavollah, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 140.

Under the Mahometan law, offices like that of suffada-nusheen should descend to persons in the male line, and those who are descended from females are regarded as not belonging to the family of the founder, but strangers.

Where such an office has been once diverted for sufficient cause (e.g., default of male issue) from a particular line of descent, it is liable to be brought back into the line of a previous holder when the person claiming under that holder is a descendant in the female line. Shah Ahmud Hossein v. Shah Mohiooden Ahmud, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 193.

A step-sister of a deceased proprietor is, according to Mahometan law, one of his heirs, and in the category of his residuaries.

A widow who is not entitled to more than her legal share in her husband's estate has no right to the exclusive possession of the entire estate, unless it be found that she was put in possession of the entire estate either by her husband or by the consent of the other heir or heirs in lieu of dower. Mussamut Ameerun v. Mussamut Ruheemun, 3 Agra Rep., 162.

According to the law of the Shea sect, a childless widow is not entitled to share in the immoveable property left by her husband, but only in the value of the materials of the houses and buildings upon the land. Mussamut Toonanjan v. Mussamut Mehudee Begum, 4 Agra Rep., A. C., 13.

Held that, as under the Mahometan law a missing person is considered "defunct" as regards other's property, and cannot inherit from others during the period allowed for his re-appearance, the plaintiff, his son, and nearest relative of the widow, was entitled to get the money claimed, it being compensation for land which had been found to belong to her exclusively, and not as having descended from her husband. Imam Aly Khan and others v. Abdool Ali Khan, 1 Agra Rep., 28.

A mokurrurce lease extended where the grantor was dangerously ill and in contemplation of death, was held to be a death-bed gift, and his natural heirs declared incapable of taking anything under it except their shares of the defendant's property according to Mahometan law. Mulk Enaet Hossein v. Mussamut Kureemoonissa, 3 W. R., 40.

A widow being entitled, according to the Mahometan law of inheritance, to only one-fourth of the husband's property, is bound if she claims the whole to show how she acquired it. Sheikh Musseeoollah v. Mussamut Bibee Sherifun, 1 W. R., 123.

The State (and not the mother of an illegitimate Christian child) is entitled to succeed to the property of that child dying intestate after he had attained to man's estate, and having neither wife nor legitimate child. The Mahometan law is not applicable to the illegitimate child of a Mahometan woman brought up and dying a Christian. Mussamut Nancey v. M. A. Burgess, 1 W. R., 272.

A., a Mahometan, died, being indebted to B. in a sum of money. B. sued the heirs of A. for the amount, and obtained a decree. Before B. obtained his decree the heirs of A. had mortgaged the estate of A. to C. The property was put up to sale in execution of B.'s decree, and B. became the purchaser, and now sued to obtain possession from C.

Held that the mere fact of the property having once belonged to the estate of A. did not entitle B. to follow it in the hands of C., so as to enable him to recover possession without redeeming. The heir of a Mahometan may, as executor, sell a portion of the estate of the deceased if necessary for the payment of debts; and such sale will not be set aside if the purchaser acted bonâ fide. Syed Shah Enayet Hossein v. Syed Ram Tan Ali, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 172; S. C., 10 W. R., 216.

Under the Mahometan law, a widow's title to succeed to her husband's estate is not barred by the fact of her being childless. Reasunissa Begum v. Ranee Kheejoorunissa, 10 W. R., 462.

Three different kinds of heirs are recognized by Mahometan law,—(1) sharers, (2) residuaries, and (3) distant kindred. Where there are no residuaries the principle of return provides that the surplus of the shares of the sharers shall revert to them in proportion to their shares, except in the cases of husband and wife. Next are the "distant kindred." Gujadhur Proshad v. Sheikh Abdoola and others, 11 W. R., 220.

Under Mahometan law, the daughters of a deceased brother of a person who demises cannot take any share of such person's property so long as a brother and sister, or only a brother, survives. Mussamut Azeemunissa and Mussamut Jan Khatoon v. Ruhmanoolah, 10 W. R., 306.

Where surviving kindred are related in like degree to a deceased party, the males are entitled under Mahometan law to a double share of the inheritance. Ram Baharee Singh v. Sitara Khatoon, 10 W. R., 315.

Held that, assuming the Mahometan law to provide that the share of a missing person, which has devolved on him during his absence, is to be reserved or held in suspense until the expiration of the term, after which he is to be regarded as dead, the appellant who has no title whatsoever to possession cannot benefit by such provision of Mahometan law in face of the person who would be the legal heir failing the missing person, and the possession of such unlawful holder can be disturbed by such legal heir. Mussamut Dowlut Khatoon v. Khaja Aly Jan, 1 Agra Rep., 59.

Held that a Hindu family having embraced the Mahometan religion is bound by the laws of that religion as regards succession, and that the appellant, the daughter, was entitled under that law to inherit from her father. Held, further, that the Judge's remark as to the appellant's title and possession, without making this point an issue and formally trying it, was not a judicial finding. Mussamut Sojan v. Roop Ram, 1 Agra Rep., 61.

An adopted son cannot inherit among the Mahometans. Khaja Oheed Khan v. The Collector of Shahabad, 9 W. R., 502.

According to the Mahometan law, descendants of a paternal grandfather's brother are entitled to rank among residuaries, and as such are preferable heirs to granddaughters. Syud Showkut Ali v. Ahmud Ali and others, 8 W. R., 39.

Held by the Divisional Bench that the widow of a Mussulman, in possession of her husband's estate under a claim of dower, has a lien upon it, and is entitled to possession as against those entitled as heirs, till her claim is satisfied. Should the widow in such a case be deprived of possession by a decree in favour of heirs who take with notice of her claim to dower, and more particularly where her right to sue has been expressly reserved, the heirs take subject to a lien of which the property is not divested by the decree. If the widow, under such circumstances, sued to establish the lien, her suit would come under Clause 16, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859; if she sued to declare that landed property was subject to the lien her suit would come under Clause 12.

Held by the Appellate Bench that in a case in which a Mahometan widow had, after many years of possession as above, been compelled to make over one-sixth of her estate to her mother-in-law, and then sued her mother-in-law for one-sixth of her dower without interest, she was entitled to recover her claim without reduction on account of wasilat. Woomatool Fatima Begum v. Meerunmunnissa Khanum, 9 W. R., 318.

If a Mahometan widow, without the consent of the heirs, takes possession of her husband's estate in satisfaction of her dower, and continues to hold it for 40 years, the heirs of her husband cannot intervene; and their claim must be brought within 12 years, unless they prove that the possession of the widow as to their shares was permissive or fiduciary possession. Mussamut Oomrao Begum and others v. Syud Hamid Jan and others, 4 Agra Rep., 279.

By Mahometan law, semble, the dominion of the sovereign is equally absolute and uncontrolled over all his possessions of every kind; but quære, whether all his possessions are necessarily subject to the ordinary rules of inheritance and partition among descendants.

A reigning Mahometan prince may possess property held jure coronæ, as well as property acquired by some other title. Gholam Mahomed Naimut Khan v. Dale and another, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 281.

A posthumous son has a legal share in his father's property. Abedoonissa v. Ameeroonissa, 9 W. R., 257.

An acknowledgment made by one party in favour of another, where the nusut of the two parties has not been established, is not to be credited under the Mahometan law when the acknowledger has a known heir. Sahabzadu Begum v. Mirza Himmut Bahadoor, 12 W. R., 513.

According to Mahometan law, a widow and two daughters are entitled between them to 19-24ths of the property of their deceased husband and father in the proportion of one-eighth and two-thirds. Mahomed Ruhwan Khan v. Mussamut Khajah Buksh, 5 W. R., 221.

According to Mahometan law, when a man dies leaving no children, a sister's son can claim his inheritance after the widow has obtained her one-fourth share. Mahomed Noor Buksh v. Mahomed Hameedool Huq, 5 W. R., 23.

Land granted for the endowment of a khatihi or other religious office cannot be claimed by the right of inheritance. The right to the income of such land is inseparable from the office for the support of which the land was granted. Ja Afar Mohi-u-din Sahib v. Aji Mohi-u-din Sahib and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 19.

By Mahometan law, descendants in the male line of the paternal great-grandfather of an intestate are within the class of "residuary" heirs, and entitled to take to the exclusion of the children of the intestate's sisters of the whole blood. Mohdin Amid Khan v. Sayud Muhamud, 1 Mad. Rep., O. C., 92.

Semble,—According to the Mahometan law, want of chastity in a daughter, before or after the death of her father, whether before or after her marriage, is no impediment to her inheritance. Noronarin Roy v. Neemaiechand Neogy and others, 6 W. R., 303.

A legacy cannot be left to one of a number of heirs without the consent of the rest. Abeedoonissa v. Ameeroonissa, 9 W. R., 257.

Where it is sought to fix a person under the Mahometan law with liability for the debt of a person deceased, by reason of the receipt of assets, it is incumbent on the creditor to give some evidence of assets having been received. Fuzeeluloonissa v. Hoormutoonissa, Marsh., 218.

In proving a native pedigree, the oral statements of deceased relatives will be admitted in the absence of any registers of births and deaths.

By Mahometan law, second cousins in the male line are residuaries and exclude sister's children. Mohedeen Ahm d Khan and others v. Syud Mahomed, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 132.

By the custom of the Khoja Mahometans, when a widow dies intestate and without issue, property acquired by her from her deceased husband does not descend to her own blood-relations, but to the relations of her deceased husband. If no blood-relations of the deceased husband are forthcoming, the property left by the widow belongs to the Jamat.

Quære,—As to the degree of ownership which will entitle members of the deceased's husband's family to succeed. In the goods of Mulbai, 2 Bom. Rep., 292.

12.—WILLS.

A Mahometan lady made a will disinheriting her nearest relations and leaving her whole estate to her nephew "Nuslun bad Nuslun battun bad battun" (from generation to generation). Held that the devise to the nephew was absolute to him, and did not extend to his sons in case of his death before his aunt. Oomutoonnissa Beebee v. Ooreefoonissa Beebee, 4 W. R., 66.

Held that the bequest by a married woman of the whole of her estate to her brother, without the assent of her husband, was invalid according to the Mahometan law. Sheikh Muhammad v. Sheikh Imamuddin, 2 Bom. Rep., 53.

The appointment of an infidel executor does not invalidate a Mahometan's will, and, until he is removed by a Civil Court, all the acts of such an executor are good and valid. Jehan Khan v. C. K. Mandy, 10 W. R., 185.

A wasee-ut-namah, or will, divesting all the property rom the next heirs, is illegal under Mahometan law. Sheikh Jumunooddeen Ahmed v. Meer Hossein Ali, 2 W. R., Mis., 49.

According to Mahometan law, the consent of the heirs can validate a testamentary disposition of property in excess of one-third of the property of the testator, if the consent be given after the death of the testator. But if the consent be given during the lifetime of the testator it will not render valid the alienation, for it is an assent given before the establishment of their own rights. Chiraconvital v. Valla Pudlacal, 2 Mad. Rep., 350.

To establish the consent of a Mahometan heiress to a will, evidence of some act done at the time of its execution, or some act done subsequently, amounting to a ratification of it, is necessary. The Court will not presume the consent of a Mahometan heiress to a will, even although she continues to reside in a dwelling-house assigned to her by the will in question. Ramcoomer Chunder Roy v. Mussamut Faqueeroonissa Begum and others, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 119.

In the will of Khoja, Mahometan, written in the English language and form, a gift of a fund "to be disposed of in charity as my executor shall think right," is a valid charitable bequest, and it will be referred to the proper officer of the Court to settle a scheme for the application of the fund to charitable objects by analogy to Act 43, Eliz., c. 4. Where, however, the will is in the native language, and the word "Dharm" or "daram" is used, the word is held too vague and uncertain for the gift to be carried into effect by the Court, the Court dharm or daram including many objects not comprehended in the word "charity" as understood in English law. Gangbai v. Thavur Moolla, 1 Bom. Rep., 71.

By Mahometan law the consent given by heirs to a testator's will before his death is no assent at all; to be valid it must be given after the testator's death. Nusrut Ali v. Zeiannissa, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 146.

A Mahometan testator by will decreed that his moveable estate should not be divided or alienated by any of his heirs, and directed his executor to appropriate the net income, according to a schedule annexed to his will, among certain specified persons divided into two classes, viz., those who took and those who did not take by inheritance. Held that the intention of the testator was to endeavour to prevent any partition of the estate, and not to convert his heirs-at-law into mere annuitants taking grants from him. Rana Khajoorinissa v. Mussamut Roheemoonissa, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 190.

The rule that by Mahometan law a will does not require to be in writing is universal.

The omission to write the wish, where there was ample time for that purpose, may throw doubt on the fact of the words being used as the expression of the testator's last will.

But if the Court finds that the testator expressed his will, and that this was his last will, the omission to render it into writing will not deprive it of legal effect. Mussamut Tameez Begum v. Furhut Hossein, 2 N. W. R., 55.

Under the Mahometan law a person cannot devise more than one-half of his estate to his daughter. Mahomed Mudun v. Khodejoonnissa, 2 W. R., 181.

According to Mahometan law, a will is valid as against an heir if he affixed his signature to it as a consenting party thereto without undue influence. Khadejah Bibee v. Suffur Ali, 4 W. R., 36.

Case of a death-bed deed of gift by a Mahometan lady, which was ineffectually attempted to be set up as having been executed as a deed of sale in order to defeat the operation of the Mahometan law of wills, by which a testator is precluded from giving more than one-third of his property by will. Kumeeroonissa Begum v. Mirza Syfoollah Khan, 5 W. R., 198.

Plaintiffs claimed as purchasers from the daughters (as heirs) of a Mahometan. The son, intervening, was made a party to the suit, and set up a will executed by his father under which a large portion of the estate was endowed for charitable purposes, and the rest divided among the heirs. The lower Appellate Court found the will to be bonâ fide, and dismissed the suit.

Held that the will having been put in issue, the lower Appellate Court should have found whether the heirs were consenting parties; for the bequest by a Mahometan of more than one-third of his estate without the consent of his heirs is invalid. Baboojan and others v. Mahomed Nurool Huq and others, 10 W. R., 375.

1.—TENURES.

Where an ancient and permanent tenure is held by several persons in separate shares, and some of the sharers make default in the payment of their quota of the Government assessment, the portion of the tenure held by the sharers who paid their shares of the assessment cannot be resumed or forfeited by the Government. In such a case the onus lies on the Government to make out by clear evidence under what special contract, or agreement, or regulation it forfeits the entire tenure. Brett v. Ellaiya, 12 W. R., P. C., 33.

Where a tenure was or has become hereditary and transferable, and the rent has not been changed from the time of the Perpetual Settlement, the tenants (being intermediate between proprietor and ryots) are protected from enhancement, by Section 15, Act X of 1859. Dhanput Singh v. Goomon Singh and others, 9 W. R., P. C., 3.

The tenure of land in Bombay under the Portuguese was of a feudal character.

Creation and tenure of the ancient manor of Mazagon described.

Doctrine that the fief of the Middle Ages has sprung from the Roman tenure in emphyteusis mentioned.

Ceremonies of enfeoffment and livery of seisin in Bombay.

Distinction taken, with reference to the observations of Lord Kingsdown as to Calcutta in The Advocate-General v. Ranee Surnomoyee Dossee (9 Moo. Ind. Ap., 425-426,) between Bombay, which was held by the English in full sovereignty, and Calcutta, which was merely held by them as a factory. Nooraji Beramjee v. Rogers, 4 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 1.

The holding of an intermediate tenure does not remove the holder from the category of ryots whose lands may be enhanced under Section 17, Act X of 1859; nor does the sub-letting of part of a tenure alter the original character of the ryot's holding. Uma Churn Dutt and others v. Uma Tara Dabee, 8 W. R., 181.

When the conditions of a tenure have been settled by a compromise between the landlord and tenant, a subsequent mortgagee has no power to change the conditions so as to bind the landlord unless he has power expressly given him in that behalf, and the tenant is estopped from denying the conditions. Hur Pershad v. Oodit Narain and others, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 60.

In Mofussil Courts in this country, there is no distinction between legal right and equitable right to property. There is but one kind of proprietary right, not divisible into parts or aspects. Nawab Syed Munsoor Ali Khan Bahadoor v. Rajah Ojoodhya Ram Khan, 8 W. R., 399.

Held that any interference by the Collector to assign of his own authority lands in a bhágdári village to a tenant for cultivation is irregular and unauthorized. Raye Narottom v. Purushottam Girdhoretal, 2 Bom. Rep., 244.

Bunkur right is the right of cutting wood, and is indicative of a certain dominion over the soil. Rajah Leelanund Singh v. Maharajah Moheshur Singh, 3 W. R., P. C., 19.

There is no presumption that orchard lands in Behar are held on a bhaolee tenure, there being many instances of orchards there held on a mukdee tenure. The onus of proving the special nature of the tenure is on the zemindar suing for the value of trees cut down, and not on the tenant defendant. Doomun Singh v. Sookun Lall, 2 W. R., 12.

Phulkur, or the right of gathering fruits, is a right indicative of a certain dominion over the soil. Rajah Leelanund Singh v. Maharajah Moheshur Singh, 3 W. R., P. C., 19.

A shareholder is not precluded from purchasing the whole of a howala sold bonâ fide for arrears of rent due from himself and his co-sharer. All ousut howalas created by the co-sharers fall with the sale of a howala, unless specially protected by the howala lease. Hurree Churn Bose v. Meharoonissa Bibee and others, 7 W. R., 318.

A plaintiff who sues for a kubuleut against a kursa ryot, who is found to hold the tenure as a howlah, an intermediate and higher grade of tenure, must fail unless he can get rid of the incumbrance created by his predecessor. Doorga Soonduree Debia v. Dinobundhoo Kyburto Doss and others, 8 W. R., 475.

The fixity of a jumma of an ancient tenure is not affected by a different jumma being mentioned in the proclamation of sale of the same tenure. Maharajah Nilmonee Singh Deo Bahadoor v. Majah Ram Misree, 2 W. R., 9.

Where a jote jumma capable of descending to heirs is taken by inheritance, it is not competent to the ijaradar to make a new settlement in favour of any person to the prejudice of the heirs. Khemunkhuree Dossee v. Gooroo Proshad Mytee and others, 11 W. R., 379.

A. sued B. for possession, with mesne profits, of a share in certain talooks, alleging that he purchased it in execution of a decree. B. proved that he held the lands under the upanchowki title. The lower Court however awarded to A. mesne profits for six years. Held that B. having proved his upanchowki title, A. could only be entitled to a share of the upanchowki jumma, which was not of the nature of mesne profits, but of rent; and therefore a suit to recover that could not be brought in the Civil Court. Shib Kumar Joti v. Kali Prasad Sen, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 167.

A sursory jote tenure is not exempt from the operation of Sections 3 and 4, Act X of 1859, but is protected from enhancement on proof of twenty years' payment of uniform rent. Doorga Moyee Dossea v. Kassissur Debea Chowdhrain, 4 W. R., Act X R., 20.

A riparian proprietor may deal with the stream as freely as with any other portion of his land, provided only that he must not by so doing sensibly disturb the natural condition of the stream as it exists within the limits of other proprietors, whether above or below, or on the opposite side. Sheikh Monohur Hossein v. Kanhya Lall, 3 W. R., 218.

Held that when rights and interests in the talook were sold for arrears of rent under Act VIII of 1835, the purchaser obtained no power to destroy the itmamee tenure. Soobulchunder Paul v. Attur Ally and others, 11 W. R., 32.

The zemindar need not ordinarily look beyond the register for sale of a tenure of a registered defaulter. A. J. Forbes v. Protap Singh Doogar and others, 7 W. R., 409.

Regulation I of 1804, and not Regulation I of 1793, applies to the case of a person claiming as an heir to an invalid jagheerdar. Mussamut Sanoo v. The Government of India, 6 W. R., 311.

Neither the acceptance of farming leases by the widow quâ farmer, subject to the Government proprietary right, nor the sale of that Government right in any way, ipso facto extinguishes any talookdaree right existing in the abadkaree talookdar in that capacity, if otherwise valid. Huro Pershad Bhuttacharjee v. Bhyrub Chunder Mojoomdar and others, 8 W. R., 391.

The Government having once recognized the plaintiff's talook by selling it for arrears of rent to the parties through whom the plaintiff claims, and no disclaimer of his talookdaree right having ever been made by the plaintiff,—Held that it was not competent to the Government to deny the title of a tenure which it had by selling once guaranteed to the purchaser. Jeebun Singh Burmono v. The Collector of Backergunge, 2 W. R., 77; 2 W. R., 139.

A non-registered holder of a sub-talook cannot stop a sale under a decree if the amount of the decree be not paid. He may stop it by paying the amount of the decree, and then bring a suit against his vendors to establish his right as sub-talookdar; and on doing so he may require the talookdar to register his purchase, and compel him to do so, if necessary. Nittyanund Paul v. Ram Doollub Buttobyal, 2 W. R., 282.

The alienation of surburakaree tenure in Cuttack is not practicable without consent of zemindar. Doorjodhun Doss v. Chooya Daye, 1 W. R., 322.

The registration of a talook or of the sunnuds creating it is not absolutely necessary to prove the creation of the talook before the Decennial Settlement. The omission of any mention of such a talook in the Decennial or Quinquennial Settlement and the inclusion of the lands in the Decennial Settlement as part of the zemindary for which the jumma is assessed, does not afford any strong influence against the evidence of the talook being only a shikmee talook paying rent to the zemindar; the talookdars were not required to mention it, nor was it necessary for the zemindar to do so. Discussion of the evidence requisite to establish the existence of an old shikmee talook. Wise v. Bhoobun Moyee Debia, 3 W. R., P. C., 5.

In cases of recusancy of settlement, the farm made by Government on account of that recusancy will be maintained pending the period and to the extent of the farm, notwithstanding proprietary right may be disputed or decided in the Courts. Ameeroonissa Khatoon v. Abdool Ali, 2 W. R., 136.

The holder of an hereditary office such as a deshponde waton, cannot create an hereditary deputy. The appointment of a deputy made by a particular incumbent cannot extend beyond the life of such incumbent. Ravji Raghunath and others v. Mahadevrav Vishvanath, 2 Bom. Rep., 237.

The mode of succession in a poliyem is not such as to render the holder responsible for the debts of his predecessor. There is not a continuance of the previous estate in each successive holder, but a fresh estate created by the gift. However, as respects private property left by a deceased poligar, liability to the extent of the assets taken will attach upon the takers, if there was an obligation upon the owner of the property so taken to pay the debt. K. Subba Chetty v. Masti Immadi Rani, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 303.

There is no precedent for ruling that the holder of the survey field is incompetent to resign it without the consent of his heirs. A point of limitation must be decided, though raised at any stage of the case. Davalatabin Bhujanja v. Beru Bin Yadoji et al., 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 197.

The assent of the anandravans is necessary to a sale of tarawad land by a karanavan.

The chief andravan's signature to the instrument of sale is sufficient, but not indispensable evidence of such assent. Kapreta Ramen v. Makkhayit Mutoren and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 359.

When the úrálans of a devasvam are four tarawads, a sale of the urayama right by one tarawad without the consent of the others is altogether invalid. Ukanda Varriyar v. Ramen Nambudiri, 1 Mad. Rep., 262.

For upwards of a century the holders of an inam had paid an annual allowance to the parties represented by the appellants, plaintiffs below.

Held (Tucker, J., dissentiente) that the recipients had acquired a good title to the allowance by prescription, and that an original grant for a sufficient consideration must be presumed. Bhowanee and others v. Hussun Mirza, 1 Bom. Rep., 45.

Regulation XXV of 1802 strictly restrains the alienations of proprietary rights except in manner therein provided, and invalidates a disposal or transfer of such rights as against the Government and the heirs and successors of the proprietor making the disposal or transfer.

Semble,—Such alienation would be valid against the proprietor himself. A permanent lease is as much within the operation of Regulations XXV and XXX of 1802 as an absolute transfer by gift or sale. Subbarayubi Nayak v. Rama Reddi, 1 Mad. Rep., 141.

Section 25 of Regulation IV of 1793 is applicable to landed proprietors. Roghoobur Dutt v. The Government, 6 W. R., Mis., 50.

The rules laid down by Regulation X of 1802 were intended to take effect only within the tract of country described in Section 2, within which the administration of civil and criminal justice, &c., was, by Section 3, declared to be vested in an officer to be denominated the Civil Commissioner of the north-eastern parts of Rungpore. The proviso in Section 8 was not intended to give substantive powers to the Governor-General in Council in respect of other tracts of the country, and Clause 2 of the same section did not intend to take away the power of any Civil Court except within that tract.

The proviso contained in Section 8 does not authorize Government to separate any part of the Garrow country beyond that described in Section 2 from the district and from the general Regulations, but merely directs the separation of such tracts from the estates of the neighbouring zemindars, and the discontinuance of the collection of cesses by the zemindars from the Garrows. By Clause 2, Section 8, the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts is taken away only in respect of acts of the above description, done under the authority of the Government; but that does not take away the right of a zemindar to contest a survey award drawing a line which deprives him of part of his zemindary and his permanently-settled estate.

Where a Rajah had exercised rights and collected dues on certain hills and in forests north of an alleged line, and it was the unanimous opinion of all the revenue authorities that the forests were within his permanently-settled estate, the assumption by them and Government of such line as the boundary of the Rajah's estate, throwing upon him the onus of proving his claim to any portion north of that line, was held to be arbitrary and anomalous. If such proceedings were adopted under Clause 12, Section 5, Regulation IX of 1825, they were wholly irregular, and the irregularity can be no ground for excluding the Court from examining them.

When a man is found exercising, on both sides of a boundary line, without objection, rights of ownership or incorporeal rights, and when it is not shown that there is any other owner of the soil, or that any objection to the exercise of such rights was made during a long course of years, his acts cannot be treated as the encroachments of a wrongdoer.

Held (by Phear, J.) that where Government wrongfully draws a boundary line cutting off a portion of an estate settled with a zemindar's ancestors, and forbids his enjoyment of zemindary rights beyond such line, a cause of action is constituted upon which the zemindar can sue for a declaration of right under Section 15, Act VIII of 1859.

Where acts of user illustrate all the modes of enjoyment of which a disputed property can reasonably be expected to be capable, it can be rightly attributed to proprietorship of the tract upon which they were exercised. The Government v. Rajah Rajkishen Singh, 9 W. R., 426.

Where a copy of a decree for possession is sent to a Collector in pursuance of Clause 2, Section 24, Regulation XLVIII of 1793, he must decide whether the mutation of names ought to take place. But where the Civil Court issues a precept he is bound to obey. Naunhee Koonwar v. Kustooree Koonwar, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 141.

In a suit for confirmation of possession and declaration of lakheraj right against purchasers at a sale for arrears of Government revenue, it is necessary for the plaintiff to prove affirmatively that the land has been held rent-free from the time of the Permanent Settlement. Ram Churn Lall v. Huta Mahtoon, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 247.

If a tenure is transferred from one collectorate to another, and the holder of the tenure after receiving notice of the transfer continues to pay his revenue into the former collectorate, he is not entitled to take credit for such payment. But if he pays before notice and obtains a receipt, such receipt is a quittance as against Government. Thakur Chunder Roy v. Collector of Twenty-four Pergunnahs, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 336.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, held that in order to bring a talook within the scope of Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, it was sufficient to show that the tenure existed, and was capable of being registered at the time of the Decennial Settlement, the fact of actual registration not being an essential element in the formation of a talook.

Held further, that the effect of proof of the existence of a talook at the time of the Decennial Settlement is sufficient to throw the onus on the plaintiff to prove that it was held at a variable rent. Decision of the Courts below reversed. Radhika Chowdrain v. Bamasunduri Dasi, 4 B. L. R., P. C., 8; 13 S. W. R., P. C., 11.

A zemindar in the district of Cuttack granted the following lease: "In the Chawd-nak 1236 Amli, 17th day of the month of Brisa, Sri Hari Chuckerbutty grants to Nared Manti this istemrari (permanent) potta. For that I execute istemrari potta of my Khardigi Ayma in Mauza Bhimpur. Jote land, measuring four bigas, being previously to this in our occupation, you will cultivate and cause to be cultivated hereafter. Mokurrari (fixed) rent at Rs. 8-12 sicca you will pay from year to year. In case of flood or drought you will be allowed a reduction of rent according as such reduction will be allowed to others. To this Hari Chuckerbutty assents." A subsequent purchaser of the zemindari right obtained a fresh settlement of the zemindari under Government. The son and grandson of the grantee held successively under the lease.

In a suit by the zemindar against the holder for enhancement of rent, held that the pottah was a hereditary lease fixing the rent in perpetuity, and that it was binding on the representatives of the grantor. Karunakur Mahati v. Niladhro Chowdry, 5 B. L. R., 652; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 107.

Payment of rent marfatwaree confers no ryotee title on the marfatwar. Khooderam Chatterjee v. Rookhinee Boistobee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 197.

According to Regulation XLVIII of 1793, Section 14, no counterpart quinquennial registers in the native language are considered authentic unless attested by the Zillah Judge. Gobind Chunder Shaha v. Puddo Monee Dassee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 400.

The judgment in the case of Ven Kataramanier v. Ananda Chetty (V. M. H. C., 122) has gone too far in laying down the rule as to a pottahdar's right of occupation. Chockalinga Pillai v. Vythealinga Pundara Sunnady, 6 Mad. Rep., 164.

Held that whatever may be the right of the Government as to the collection of todá garás from villagers, where it does collect todá garás it is bound to pay over the amount so collected to the original garáshiá, or his representatives, if the hák is a perpetual one. Where Government has paid a todá garás hák to a garáshiá for a long and uninterrupted period of time, the onus of proving that the hák is not perpetual lies upon Government. Umed Sangi v. The Collector of Sarat, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 50.

A difference in assessment should be made between zerayet and bhowlie lands, a deduction being allowed as to the former on account of expenses of cultivation. Mussamut Rookumee Kooer v. Ram Tahul Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 156.

Where land has been held as a bagh, and no other right or interest therein is shown, it becomes ordinarily on removal of the trees a portion of the malgoozaree land of the village, and the occupant who brings it under cultivation is liable to the payment of rent. If the landowner and himself cannot by agreement fix the rent, a suit for the determination of the rate is maintainable under Clause 1, Section 23, of Act X of 1859. But where the occupant who brings the bagh under cultivation sets up a right inconsistent with the existence of the relation of landlord and tenant, and there is a contest between the parties as to their respective rights and positions, the clause is inapplicable. Sheepal Singh v. Rai Sataram, 3 N. W. R., 18.

The mere entry of the revenue records of land as sur will not make it sur land. Sur land is land which at some time or other has been cultivated by the zemindar himself, and which, although he may from time to time, for a season, demise to shikmas, he designs to retain as resumable for cultivation by himself or his family whenever his requirements or convenience may induce him to resume it. A zemindár cannot demise to a tenant as an ordinary cultivator, and, by an entry to which such cultivator is not a party, effect a material alteration in the status of the cultivator. Budley v. Bukhtoo, 3 N. W. R., 203.

Mandeedaree tenure is the tenure of a tenant with rights of occupancy who is entitled to hold at rates varying with the revenue, and he possesses privileges superior to those of an ordinary ryot. His rates of rent are not liable to enhancement.

Ranee Bunkut Nurseya v. Gouree Singh, 2 N. W. R., 369.

Where by an old pottah lands forming part of a zemindaree had been leased at a specified rent, there being no words in the pottah importing the hereditary and istimrari character of the tenure, the absence of such words may be supplied by evidence of long uninterrupted enjoyment, and of the descent of the tenure from father to son, whence the hereditary and istemrari character may be presumed. To rebut the evidence afforded by long uninterrupted enjoyment, and the descent of the tenure from father to son, it lies upon the party asserting the holding to be from year to year only and determinable at will to prove such assertion. Deen Dyal Singh v. Heera Singh, 2 N. W. R., 338.

Section 5, Regulation XXVII of 1793, has no application to bazars which did not exist in 1793. Moonshee Aftabooden Ahmed v. Mohinee Mohun Dass, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 48.

A mourussee jotedar with a right of occupancy has a right to lands which accrete to his jote, and the zemindar cannot take them away and settle them with other parties. Attimoollah v. Shaikh Saheboolah, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 149.

The proprietorship of a dakhilee village may remain in the hands of one or more parties, but that of an uslee village in those of proprietors with separate rights and interests. Syud Abdool Ali v. Mullick Sudderoodeen Ahmed, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 493.

A tullubee brihmottur tenure is not a lakheraj tenure, and it is not necessary for a landlord to bring a suit for its resumption before he can sue for enhancement of its rent. Rajah Nilmonee Singh v. Chunder Kant Banerjee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 251.

2.—Lakheraj Tenures.

A claim to lakheraj should not be thrown out merely because the lakheraj taidad contains no boundaries. Kottyani Debea v. Soonduree Debea, 2 W. R., Act X R., 60.

A landlord is not bound to sue for resumption before bringing a suit for a kubuleut in respect of lands which the defendant claims to hold as lakheraj. Mussamut Bibee Fuzlon and others v. Sheikh Abdoollah and others, 7 W. R., 169.

The holder of resumed invalid lakheraj land, within a Government khas mehal, is bound to pay rent according to the settlement of the revenue authorities under Regulation VII of 1822, until he sues in the Civil Court to set aside that settlement, or sues under Act X of 1859 for a mitigation or resettlement of rent. Hurro Pershad Chowdhry and others v. Shama Pershad Roy Chowdhry and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 107.

In a suit for possession and assessment of an alleged invalid lakheraj tenure, in which the defendant relies on possession under a series of documents showing the existence of a lakheraj title previously to 1790, the validity of the grant is not open to the Judge's consideration. The Judge has merely to determine whether the tenure was in existence before 1790; and if so to apply the Law of Limitation. Sheikh Saheb Ali v. Lalla Bissessur Lall, 1 W. R., 110.

A "subsisting lakheraj tenure" means one which existed before December 1st, 1790. Maharanee Indurjeet Koonwar v. Ramnath Singh, 3 W. R., 207.

In a suit to recover the possession of land from which the plaintiff, claiming to be a lakherajdar, has been forcibly evicted by the landholder, the plaintiff is not entitled to a decree for possession unless he can show a primâ-facie case of lakheraj tenure.

Semble,—If he show such primâ-facie case the Court will give a decree for possession, and leave the zemindar to dispute the existence or validity of the alleged lakheraj tenure in a resumption suit. Sreenath Lall v. Jumvey Sey Mullick, Marsh., 550.

If it is established, in a suit under Section 28, Act X of 1859, that the defendant's lakheraj tenure was created prior to 1790, it is immaterial whether it is within plaintiff's talook or not. Therefore the finding upon the question of parcel or no parcel by a Deputy Collector in such a suit will not be binding on the Civil Court in any suit which may thereafter be brought to resume the land as invalid lakheraj created prior to 1790, or in any other suit. Ramneedhy Boyde v. Sheikh Neamut, Marsh., 355.

In order to entitle a landowner to recover in a suit for the possession of lands in the actual possession of the defendants, who claims a lakheraj tenure, on the ground that such land is not lakheraj, but belongs to a rent-paying village, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to show that rent has been paid in respect of the land since the Decennial Settlement. Tarriney Pershad Ghose v. Kalleechurn Ghose, Marsh., 215.

The production of a lakheraj sunnud is not necessary to prove that land is held rent-free. The fact may be legally established by long and uninterrupted possession, without payment of rent, raising the presumption that the land had been held rent-free from the Decennial Settlement. Dhunput Singh v. Russomoy Chowdhrain and others, 10 W. R., 461.

Held that a question as to whether certain land claimed as lakheraj lay within defendant's share or not, did not come under Regulation XXXIX of 1793, and registration was not necessary to make the alleged lakheraj title a valid one. Where possession under such a title is shown the question is rather whether the onus should not fall on the party claiming it as mâl. Chadee Singh and others v. Beharee Tewaree, 10 W. R., 91.

The Full Bench decision ruling that before a plaintiff can resume lakheraj lands he must first prove that he has collected mâl rents, and defendant need not first prove his lakheraj title, not applicable to the present case, in which it was proved the plaintiff collected mâl rents from the time the land was capable of bearing any. Ramsoondur Chuckerbutty and others v. Ramessur Acharjee and others, 8 W. R., 454.

Where certain land apparently lakheraj was represented in village papers as part of mâl land, and included within the boundary of the revenue-paying mehal,—Held, on zemindar's suit for assessment of the land, that the onus of showing that the case is within Section 10, Regulation XLI of 1795 lies on the zemindar. The inclusion of the land in the boundary is not conclusive evidence, nor is it binding when the boundary has not been made judicially.

The landlord proving it to be so, the plaintiff claiming rent-free possession would be required to prove his rent-free possession (peaceably and not tainted with fraud) for sixty years before he can get a decree. Mahabeer Pershad v. Oomrao Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 167.

Where a lakherajdar, ousted by a pottahdar, sued to recover possession,—Held that the lower Court should not have tried the validity of the plaintiff's lakheraj title; but that if it found that the lakherajdar was in possession until ousted it should have restored him to possession, leaving the zemindar to sue to resume and assess the land on proof that it had paid mâl rents, and that he (the zemindar) was not barred by limitation. Sheikh Goburdhun and others v. Sheikh Tofail and others, 6 W. R., 190.

Where plaintiff purchased a certain quantity of land from a rent-free holder of the mouzah,—Held that, under the circumstances, plaintiff could not be treated as a mere cultivator, and liable to pay either rent or revenue. Sheikh Ahmed v. Gunnesh Pershad and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 9.

After resumption and settlement a lakheraj estate becomes, to all intents and purposes, a separate zemindary held from Government in perpetuity, the proprietors of which are, in accordance with the Full Bench ruling of the 14th December, 1867. (9 W. R., 1,) capable of granting portions rent free; the grantor taking such land, with the risk of losing it again in the event of the whole estate being sold for default on the part of the zemindar. Dabee Pershad v. Joy Lall Chowdhry, 12 W. R., 361.

Where there is a prima-facie rent-free holding it must be set aside in some other suit before rent or a kubuleut can be obtained under the provisions of Act X of 1859. Nund Kishore Lall v. Kureem Buksh Khan, 5 W. R., Act X R., 62.

The mere fact of a long prior possession of a service tenure on no rent at all gives the holder no exemption from the payment of rent when the service is no longer required or performed. Chunder Nath Roy v. Bheem Sirdar, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 37.

Under Section 10, Regulation XIX of 1793, grants of land made by zemindars free of rent are void. But where a grant binds the grantee to dig a tank and distribute water, such service is in the nature of rent to the zemindar. Peezeeroodeen v. Modhoosooddun Paul Chowdhry, 2 W. R., 15.

A suit for arrears of rent cannot be maintained in respect to rent-free land until the land has been assessed and the rent rate determined. Noor Ali and others v. Imteajooddeen Khan, 4 Agra Rep., R. A., 2.

A suit instituted by a zemindar in 1857, for the recovery of rent, for six years and nine months preceding its commencement, of land held rent free since 1796, under a grant alleged to be null and void under Section 10 of Regulation XIX of 1793, was held barred by sixty years' peaceable and uninterrupted possession of the grantee and his representatives according to the provisions of Regulation II of 1805. Held also that a suit to eject would be similarly barred. Mussamut Chundra Ballee Mittra v. Luckhee Debia Chowdhrain, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 25.

Held that the principle of the Full Bench decision in the case decided on the 19th March, 1868, (10 W. R., F. B., 14,) applies as much to cases in which defendant has held under an invalid lakheraj as to ryots whose rents are to be enhanced. Imdad Hossein v. R. F. Stack, 12 W. R., 454.

In order to lands being released from the assessment of Government revenue, they must be shown to be lakheraj lands which were in existence at the time of the Perpetual Settlement; it is not sufficient to prove lakheraj possession for 12 years. Eshan Chunder Shaha v. Hatimoozzumali Khurdkur, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 334.

In a case of a sale under Regulation VIII of 1819, where the putnee was a small piece of land, upon which there was no town or village or cutchery of any kind, and the peon stuck up the notice in the Collector's office and also at the sudder cutchery of the zemindar, and obtained the receipt of the defaulter in the latter place, he was held to have carried out substantially, as far as he could, the provisions of the law regarding notice. Hurry Kisto Roy v. Motee Lall Nunda, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 36.

Whatever might have been his position under former Governments, a lakherajdar in Assam is entitled to manage his lands in any manner he pleases consistently with existing regulations, and, as holder of a resumed grant which has been settled with him, to eject a tenant who has no right of occupancy or lease of any kind. Jullar Surma Patwaree v. Madhub Ram Atoi Boorha Bhukut, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 202.

Suit for ejectment and khas possession by an auction-purchaser under Act XI of 1859. The defendant's case was that after resumption of their lakheraj tenure a settlement had been made under Regulation VII of 1822 with the principal proprietor; and by that settlement it was arranged that the Government revenue payable by all the proprietors, the defendants among them, was to be paid through the principal proprietor, and that the defendants were to hold perpetual possession as shikmeedars, and that their rights should be reserved intact.

Held that the possession of the defendants as lakherajdars could not be disturbed as long as they paid the revenue assessed upon them under the settlement.

Held (Markby, J. dissentiente) that Clause 8, Section 10, Regulation VII of 1822, applies only to cases referred to in Clause 7, that is, of cultivating proprietors on putteedaree or byhacharee tenure, or the like, and not to a case of this kind. Ram Gobind Roy v. Syud Kushuffudoza, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 1.

Lakherajdars whose lands have been resumed have the right, under Section 15, Regulation VII of 1822 (if not barred by limitation), to bring a civil suit to revise, annul, or alter a settlement made by the Collector, not only as against those who claimed the settlement before the revenue authorities, but against all who have claims. Bishroop Hajree v. Dumonata Debia, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 537.

A resumption decree does not destroy the proprietary right of the lakherajdars, which continues unless and until they are dispossessed in due course of law. By obtaining a permanent settlement they acquire no new right; a cause of action accruing to them if ousted before settlement. Thakoor Dass Roy Chowdhry v. Nubun Kishen Ghose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 552.

Unless the holder of a resumption-decree takes steps under Regulation XIX of 1793 to have the revenue fixed by the Collector, and the defendant consents to pay the revenue required of him, he has no locus standi on holding the lands to bring suits for rent.

The rule to be followed in determining in what manner and under what Regulation the assessment of resumed lakheraj land should be conducted is, first to ascertain whether the existence of the lakheraj prior to 1791 has been decided by the decree for resumption.

It cannot be presumed that every case instituted under Section 30, Regulation II of 1819, dealt with an estate which was held lakheraj prior to 1791. Pogose v. Syed Ekram Hossein, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 483.

Where grants for holding lands exempt from payment of revenue have been made since 1st December, 1790, and the person who succeeds to the proprietary right in the estate takes possession under Section 10, Regulation XIX of 1793, and dispossesses the grantee of his proprietary right, he is authorized and required to collect the rents from such lands at the rates of the pergunnah. A decree, therefore, declaring the zemindar's right to assess rent on lands held under such grants, establishes, as between him and the person in possession, the relation of landlord and tenant. Ranee Shama Soonduree Debia v. Seetal Khan, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 474.

In mâl cases of title the question of possession is dependent on the question of title; whereas in lakheraj cases the title may fail, and yet if possession as lakherajdars, that is to say, possession without paying rent, is proved, it may be sufficient to give a lakheraj title. Radhagobind Dass v. Prokash Chunder Dass, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 108.

3.—Mokurruree Tenures.

A "mokurruree istemraree" holding is a perpetual holding at a fixed jumma. Munrunjan Singh v. Rajah Lelanund Singh, 3 W. R., 84.

The words "mokurruree istemraree" contained in a pottah must be taken in themselves to convey an hereditary right in perpetuity. Mussamut Lakhu Cowar v. Roy Hari Krishna Singh, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 226.

A mokurruree ryot may build a wall on his land, or do anything that does not so entirely destroy the land as to endanger the zemindar's ground-rent. Dheput Singh v. Halal Khoory Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, 279.

The plaintiff sued for rent claimed to be due under a kubuleut. It appeared that no such kubuleut had ever been executed, and that the document relied upon by the plaintiff was a forgery, but it also appeared that the defendant held land of the plaintiff under mokurruree jummas. Held that the plaintiff could not in this suit recover rent in respect of the occupation under the mokurruree jummas. Simroo Kareegur v. Anund Chunder Roy, Marsh., 57.

When a ryot alleges a mokurruree right by purchase the nature of his vendor's title ought to be enquired into, and whether it was or was not transferable. Gobind Chunder Mozoomdar v. Bissumbhur Dossee, 2 W. R., Act X R., 4; Banee Madhub Banerjee v. Joy Kishen Mookerjee, 4 W. R., Act X R., 17.

A mokurruree holding cannot be extinguished by a subsequent farming lease. Dhurm Roy v. Muddoosoodun Prosad Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 117.

When a mokurrureedar resigns his tenure the dur-mokurrurees created by him come to an end, but the position of ryots holding rights of occupancy is not affected by the extinction of either the tenure or the under-tenures. Koylas Chundra Biswas and another v. Bissesuree Dossee, 10 W. R., 408.

A mokurruree pottah granted by a Rajah of Tipperah to a member of his family is, by recognized custom, resumable on the death of the grantor; and a female member does not cease to be a member by marrying into another race. Roop Moonjuree Kooeree v. Beer Chunder Joobraj, 9 W. R., 308.

A mokurruree title judicially established cannot be disturbed by a decree for arrears of rent at different rates passed subsequently without reference to such title. Raj Roop Roy v. Chowdhry Ooganarain Singh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 85.

Section 11, Regulation XXVIII of 1828, requiring successions to mokurruree tenures to be reported to the Collector within six months, refers only to the security of the revenue, and not to private interests. Omission to pay rent may be a good ground for a suit for arrears of rent or for ejectment, but not for the cancelment of a pottah not otherwise impugned.

The acceptance of rent for forty years ratifies the original grant of a mokurruree pottah granted prior to Regulation V of 1812. Umritanath Chowdhry v. Koonj Behary Singh, W. R., F. B., 34.

A ryot having a right of occupancy can create a mokurruree lease; but the terms of a lease granted by him to a third party can only be binding as between them both. If the landlord dispossesses the sub-lessee without the sanction of law he is guilty of trespass. Dumree Shaikh v. Bissessur Lall, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 291.

In a suit to redeem a mortgage and to obtain possession,—Held that plaintiff had no right to redeem as being a mere mokurrureedar or a person holding under the mortgagor, and because the mortgage was at an end before the institution of the suit; and that he was not entitled to possession at once and he never got possession, and certain statements made by the zemindar in petitions filed in Court are not admissions under Act XIV of 1859 to take a case out of the ordinary rules of limitation. Lalla Doorga Pershad v. Lalla Luchmun Saha, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 272.

A permanent lease of a village in a muttah by the muttahdur is not invalidated by Section 8, Regulation XXV of 1802, although the lease has not been registered as required by that section. Subroyalee Naick v. Ruma Reddy, 1 Madras High Court Reports, overruled. Kurdappa Naik v. Annamalay Chetty, 4 Mad. Rep., 396.

Though the lease in this case contained no words importing an hereditary character, yet it was held to have the effect of being hereditary on the ground that the period of its continuance was not dependent on the life of any party, whether lessor or lessee, but on the continuance of the superior tenure. Lekraj Roy v. Kunhya Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 485.

A perpetual lease of a distinct portion of a zemindary is not a transfer within the meaning of Section 8, Regulation XXV of 1802, Madras Code. Vencataswara Naicker v. Alagoomoohoo Servacaren, 4 W. R., P. C., 73.

It is not absolutely necessary that any particular form of words should be used in conveying rights to hold at fixed rates. The grant of a mokurruree lease is beyond the scope of a naib's general authority. To enable him to give such a lease his principal's special consent or approval is necessary. Unoda Persaud Banerjee v. Chunder Seker Deb, 7 W. R., 394.

A., the registered holder of a dur-mokurruree lease which he took without notice of an agreement previously made by his lessor to grant a lease of the same property to B., was held to have a perfectly good title as against B.

Semble, per Norman, J.,—A person who has authority to conduct the negotiation respecting a lease is such an agent that a notice to him may be notice to his principal. Nuddear Chand Sein v. Kishoree Lal Chuckerbutty and others, 7 W. R., 463.

Where a manager or trustee has conveyed certain property to himself by a pretended deed of gift, and under such pretended title granted a dur-mokurruree lease, and his title is set aside by a decree of Court, the lessees cannot be allowed to maintain possession, especially if the lease itself was brought to question in the suit and set aside in the decree. Sheo Shunkur Lall v. Dhurm Joy Pooree and others, 8 W. R., 360.

Perpetual leases for building are only protected as held at a fixed rate, when the rent is fixed by the original leases. Surbomungula Dossee v. Maharajah Sustesh Chunder Roy, 2 W. R., 231.

A Government farmer of a village (the farm being for his life) sub-leased it, and the sub-lessee, in consideration of a certain sum, made a perpetual lease in favour of the special appellant at a certain annual quit-rent. Subsequently the proprietary settlement of the village (the possession being conditional on expiry of farm) was made with the sub-lessee, whose proprietary rights having been sold at auction were purchased by the plaintiff, who sued to set aside the lease. Held, on the construction of the lease, that the proprietor professed it to be a perpetual lease, without reference to its determination on the expiry of sub-lease, and that the auction-purchaser having the locum tenens of the person whose rights he purchased was estopped, as would have been the latter, from questioning the validity of the lease in favour of special appellant. Kurn Chowbey v. Jankee Pershad, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 164.

Where the purchaser of the rights of a mokurrureedar at a sale in execution sued to eject the parties in possession, who pleaded that they were under-tenants under leases from the last lessee, or even from dates prior to his mokurrureedar,—Held that defendants were not to be summarily turned out of their lands because they failed to show that the commencement of their holding was antecedent to the creation of the mokurruree which the plaintiff had purchased. If they were under-tenants bonâ fide holding and cultivating land within this mokurruree, they would be entitled to obtain possession until their holding was properly determined in due course of law. Pureeag Singh and others v. Pertap Narain Singh, 11 W. R., 253.

4.—Service Tenures.

Where the custom of the country was found to be that on the death of a service tenure holder without heirs his jaghir reverted to the grantor, the right of the grantor to the land on the death of the grantee without heirs was recognized. Rajah Ramessurnath Singh v. Huro Lall Singh and others, 6 W. R., 87.

In a suit to obtain khas possession of lands which were found to have been held of plaintiff and his ancestors by defendants and their ancestors upon a service tenure, but which the grantees alienated to strangers, without any acquiescence on the part of the grantor, and then ceased to perform the services, it was held that the defendants had forfeited their right to hold the land at all. Ramgopal Chuckerbutty and another v. Chundernath Sein and others, 10 W. R., 289.

A grant to a man and his heirs on condition of performing service, does not in general mean that the service is to be personally performed by the grantee or his heirs, but that the grantee is to be responsible for its performance. Shib Lall Singh v. Moorad Khan, 9 W. R., 126.

As an ordinary rule, if land is given on a quit-rent, or no rent at all, in consideration of service to be performed, the tenure would lapse when those services ceased.

Quære,—When no service has been required or performed for a long series of years, and the tenure has been allowed to be held at a quit-rent, or no rent at all, whether there has not been such a waiver of service as puts it out of the power of the grantor to resume the tenure, simply on the ground that he has now no need of the service for which the tenure was originally created?

Quære,—Whether when land is given at a quit-rent, on condition that the grantee shall aid the grantor in repelling the attacks of his enemies or for any other particular purpose, while the grantee is willing to render those services, the grantor can put an end to the contract by saying that he has no enemies to repel, and therefore no need of the grantee's further services? Maharajah Nilmonee Singh Deo v. Sheo Tewaree, W. R., 1864, 324.

A., the holder of a service tenure subject to a quit-rent to the zemindar, died, leaving his rent for the last three years unpaid. B., his son, succeeded him in the tenure. Held that the zemindar could not sue B. as A.'s successor in the tenure for A.'s arrears of rent. Rajah Nilmonee Singh v. Madhub Singh, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 195; 10 W. R., 255.

Bhoomears are bound to render certain customary services, but their lands are not resumable. Gopalnath Tewaree v. Bhooyah Oranoo and another, 6 W. R., 137.

5.—Chakeran Land.

When a party seeking a declaration of title to certain lands as chakeran rested his claim on the register of chakeran lands prepared in 1836,—Held that it was incumbent on him to show how the lands in question were omitted from the earlier registers of 1810 and 1813. The Collector of East Burdwan v. Ram Nidhee Koberaj, W. R., 1864, 353.

The registers of chakeran lands are public records supposed to contain a correct list of the chakeran lands in existence at the time of the Decennial Settlement. The Collector of East Burdwan v. Sheikh Imdad Ali, W. R., 1864, 358.

Suit for the resumption of certain chakeran lands on the appellant's talook, Government considered that the lands were appropriated to the maintenance of a chowkeedar, and that the holder of these lands was liable to the performance of none but police or chowkeedary duties. The talookdar (appellant) contended that the lands were gram surinjamee lands not liable to the performance of any but personal services to him, and not legally appropriated for the performance of these services, but resumable by him.

Held by the Privy Council that the lands in question were to be considered as appropriated to the maintenance of a chowkeedar in the talook; that the right of appointing such officer belonged to the talookdar; and that such officer was liable to the performance of such services to the talookdar as, by usage in the zemindary, chowkeedars were accustomed to render to the zemindar. Joykishen Mookerjee v. The Collector of East Burdwan, 1 W. R., P. C., 26.

6.—Ghatwali Tenures.

A suit will lie to assess lands occupied by ghatwals in excess of the area recorded in their isumnovisse. Rajah Jugo Jewan Lal v. Raghoonath Kopat and others, 6 W. R., 197.

When ghatwals hold land, not under a sunnud conveying a hereditary indefeasible right, but on payment of a quit-rent, with enjoyment of the profits of the land in lieu of wages, such possession, however long, would not entitle them to hold the land at a fixed jumma, or to retain a portion of the land after they have ceased to perform the duties for which the land was assigned to them. Rajah Leelanund Singh and others v. Nusseeb Singh and others, 6 W. R., 80.

Long possession (presumably from the Decennial Settlement) and gradual cultivation by a ghatwal on payment of a quit-rent (and not merely possession without cultivation) are evidence of an implied grant which protects the ghatwal from enhancement or assessment on the land so cultivated.

An adjudication by a competent Court made sixty years ago dismissing the landlord's claim to rent from the ghatwal is evidence of the highest order as to the right of the ghatwal in the suit now brought by the landlord for a declaration of right to take rent in future. James Erskine v. Manick Singh Ghatwal and others, 6 W. R., 10.

In the Kurruckpore ghatwali mehals the profits of the lands minus the quit-rent paid to the zemindar, were the remuneration given to the ghatwals for police services. Government illegally resumed those lands, dispensing with the services of the ghatwals, and settled the tenures with the ghatwals at half the rent current in that part of the country. The resumption proceedings having been set aside, it remained to determine to whom and in what proportions Government should refund the half jumma taken by it as rent from it by the ghatwals during the period of settlement. Held that, inasmuch as the ghatwals rendered no service during the period of settlement, the moiety of the jumma retained by them was ample compensation for any loss they might have sustained, and the zemindar was entitled to receive the whole of the moiety taken by Government, partly as quit-rent due to him, and partly as compensation for loss of the ghatwals' services during the continuance of the settlement. Rajah Leelanund Singh Bahadoor v. The Government and Thakoor Mano Rungan Singh and Tekait Loknath Singh, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 115.

The lands of the ghatwals of Khurruckpore are not capable of alienation by private sale or otherwise, nor liable to sale in execution of decrees, except with the consent of the zemindar and his approval of the purchaser as a substitute for the out-going ghatwal. Rajah Leelanund Singh v. Doorgabutty, W. R., 1864, 249.

Held that a right to reinstate a ghatwal in possession of lands cannot exist in the Government or in any person or body whatsoever. Annund Coomaree and others v. The Government, 11 W. R., 180.

A ghatwal of Beerhboom granted a lease to A. After A. and his heirs had been in possession of the lands under the lease for sixty years a surburakar appointed by the Court of Wards for the estate of the heir of A.'s lessor, then a minor, entered upon the lands, and ejected the person then in possession under the lease. Held that notwithstanding the ghatwals of Beerbhoom (independently of the recent Statute) had not the power of alienation, still having an estate in perpetuity so long as the services are performed and the rent paid, the lease could not be regarded as a nullity, and the surburakar was not justified in ejecting the tenant without legal process. Rungolall Deo and others v. The Deputy Commissioner of Beerbhoom and others, and three other cases, Marsh., 117; S. C., W. R., F. B., 34.

Permanent leases granted by the ghatwals of Beerbhoom prior to the Decennial Settlement, for the due performance of the police duties for which the lands were originally granted to the ghatwals, and have been held from generation to generation, cannot be set aside at the instance of the present sirdar ghatwals. The creation of such under-tenures is not beyond the powers of the ghatwals. Mukurbhanoo Deo v. Kostoora Koonwaree, 5 W. R., 215.

In the absence of express words to the contrary, ghatwali lands held under a lease which neither confirms nor recognizes the pre-existing status of the ghatwals, nor confers on them any right other than that of holding the lands at a fixed rate as long as ghatwal service is required from them, are resumable by the zemindar when that service is no longer required. Rajah Leelanund Singh v. Sarwan Singh, 5 W. R., 292.

A Commissioner of Revenue is not warranted by law, on the demise of a ghatwal, to consider the eligibility of rival claimants to the tenure (a perpetual and descendible one), and to reject the claims of the natural heir on considerations purely moral, e.g., having evinced a want of filial respect and dutiful feeling to his father. Lal Dharee Roy v. Brojo Lall Singh and others, 10 W. R., 401.

The ghatwals of Kurruckpore hold a perpetual hereditary tenure at a fixed jumma payable in money and service, and cannot be evicted by the zemindar except for misconduct. Munrunjun Singh v. Rajah Lelanund Singh, 3 W. R., 84.

The Civil Courts cannot interfere to reinstate a ghatwal who has been dismissed by the police authorities in the land which he formerly held as ghatwal. The right to possess the land depends on the tenure of the office. Debee Narain Singh, ghatwal v. Shree Kishen Sein, 1 W. R., 321.

In the absence of long usage a ghatwali grant confers a mere chakeran holding or interest. Refusal to review decision of Division Bench. 6th June, 1866, 9 Sevestre, 311. Sarwan Singh, petitioner, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 149.

Succession to ghatwalis is regulated solely by the nature of the ghatwali tenure, which descends undivided to the party who succeeds to and holds the tenure as ghatwal.

A woman is not incapable of holding a ghatwali tenure. Mussamut Kustoora Koomaree v. Monohur Deo; The Government v. Monohur Deo, W. R., 1864, 39.

The proprietor (K.) of a ghatwali talook in Bhaugulpore sold one mouzah out of it to defendant (L). Some time afterwards K.'s right was sold in execution of a decree, and purchased by plaintiff (C), who obtained a sunnud from the zemindar as ghatwal. Subsequently the zemindar having compounded with Government for a money payment in lieu of ghatwali services, gave G. a mokurruree pottah of the ghatwali estate. G. then sued L. for possession of the mouzah purchased by the latter.

Held that K. had no power to sell the whole of the ghatwali estate to L. without the consent of the zemindar; and that, when he sold a part the interest which he conveyed could not be higher than what he himself had; accordingly when his entire rights and interests were sold those of G. ceased.

Held that the zemindar, by granting a fresh ghatwali sunnud, appointed the grantee to the office of ghatwal, and disallowed the sale made by K. to G. Lalla Gooman Singh v. Hugh Grant, 11 W. R., 292.

Ghatwali tenures are perpetual holdings subject to condition of service. Rajah Leelanund Singh v. Thakoor Monorunjan Singh, 5 W. R., 101.

Suit for resumption of a ghatwali tenure. Held that the sunnud in this case was personal to the grantee, and that it did not confer on his descendants or representatives a hereditary transferable and permanent tenure at a fixed rate. Held also that the clearest and most precise definition, such as istemraree and mourosee, with the addition of nuslun ba nuslun (from generation to generation) would be necessary to support the appeal. Mussamut Sona v. Rajah Leelanund Singh, 5 W. R., 290.

The ghatwali lands in the zemindary of Kurruckpore are not liable to resumption and re-assessment under Clause 4, Section 8, Regulation I of 1793, relating to thannah or police establishments. The Government having persisted in their claim, after several decisions against them by their own officers acting as Judges, were adjudged liable to pay all the costs of the case. Rajah Leelanund Singh v. The Government of Bengal, 4 W. R., P. C., 77.

A suit for khas possession by Government will not lie in respect of ghatwali lands admittedly included in a decennially-settled estate. Gadhadhur Banerjee and others v. The Government, 6 W. R., 326.

Suit to recover possession of certain lands upon the ground that they were subject to a tenure for private service to be rendered to the zemindar, which tenure had been forfeited by defendant not having rendered such service. Plaintiff having failed to prove that the services were private, and that the tenure was forfeited on account of defendant's refusal to perform them, the decree of the lower Appellate Court in favour of defendant was affirmed in special appeal. Raja Nilmoney Singh v. The Government and others, 6 W. R., 121.

The rents of a ghatwali tenure are not liable for the debts of the former deceased holder of the tenure. Binode Ram Sein v. The Deputy Commissioner of the Sonthal Pergunnahs, 6 W. R., 129; 7 W. R., 178.

Although in custom the ghatwali tenure descended from father to son, no succession was legal or valid till confirmed by the zemindar, and reported by him to the Government authorities. Where Government has dispensed with the services of the ghatwals, the zemindar is under no obligation to continue to appoint, and may on a vacancy occurring settle the tenure as he pleases. Parties are required to have with them in Court, at the first hearing of the suit, all their documentary evidence, but need not file it then, unless it is called for. Mahbut Hossein v. Patasee Kumari, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 120; 10 W. R., 179.

Ghatwali tenures are not liable either to sale or attachment in execution of decrees. The surplus proceeds of such a tenure collected during the lifetime of the judgment-debtor are liable to be taken in execution as being personal property, but profits accumulated after the death of the judgment-debtor are not so liable. Kustoora Koomaree v. Binoderam Sein, 4 W. R., Mis., 4.

Where a ghatwali tenure was granted under a valid sunnud from a person representing the then Government in that behalf more than one hundred years ago, and had been allowed to change hands by descent or purchase without question, the zemindar was held incompetent of his mere motion without the assent and against the will of the Government, to put an end to the ghatwali, to deprive the ghatwals, and to treat them as common trespassers. Kooldeep Narain Singh v. Mahadeo Singh and others, 6 W. R., Cr., 199.

A ghatwali tenure was resumed by the Government under Regulation II of 1819. After the resumption, H. N., the former holder of the tenure, claimed settlement as proprietor. The Government denied his title, but offered him a lease on his giving security. On his failure to find security, the Government in 1841 made a temporary settlement with J. S., who entered into possession of the land. No malikana was reserved to or ever paid to H. N. In 1862 the Government settled the land permanently with J. S. The heir of H. N. then brought a suit in the Civil Court, praying that this settlement should be set aside, and for a declaration of his right to have a settlement concluded with him.

Held that, supposing H. N. ever to have had any legal right to a settlement as proprietor, the suit to enforce such right was barred by limitation, he having been effectually dispossessed, and the cause of action, if any, having accrued in 1841.

Note.—The Court appeared to consider that in fact H. N. never had any right to maintain an action in the Civil Court to compel the Government to make a settlement with him. Maharajah Joy Mungul Singh v. Tekait Pockharun Singh, 7 W. R., 465.

Where it was admitted that the ghatwal defendant's tenure dated from a time anterior to the Decennial Settlement, and before the creation of the zemindary, the defendant is protected, whether under Section 3, or under Section 15, Act X of 1859, from any fresh assessment. James Erskine v. The Government and Dwarkanath Singh and others, 8 W. R., 232.

When a ghatwal becomes a defaulter, it is in the power of the authorities, according to Regulation XXIX of 1814, to transfer his tenure, and that power is not put an end to by the money being offered before the tenure is actually made over to another person. Chitto Narain Singh Tekait v. Assistant Commissioner of Sonthal Pergunnah, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 203.

A ghatwal in the district of Beerbhoom is not competent to grant a lease of the whole or a portion of his ghatwali tenure in perpetuity. Ghatwali tenures in Beerbhoom are grants of land by the Government to individuals for the performance of certain police duties. These tenures are heritable, but the incomes arising from them cannot be charged or encumbered by the ghatwal in possession so as to bind his successor. Grant, G. v. Bangsi Deo, 6 B. L. R., 652; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 38.

As to the nature of ghatwali tenures and the rulings of the High Court which should govern such cases. Rajah Leelanund Singh v. Kunbya Lall, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 315.

7.—Khoti Tenure.

In a suit brought by a khot in 1862 to recover an hereditary share in a khoti village, which had been mortgaged by her husband in 1845, and taken directly under Government management by the Sub-Collector of Kulaba on failure by the mortgagee to pass the customary agreement (kubuleut) for the security of the revenue for the year 1851-52, the Court of first instance decreed the restoration of the khoti estate on payment by the plaintiff of any loss which may have been sustained by Government during its entire management, but the District Judge in appeal modified that decree by annexing a condition that the plaintiff was to observe the engagements which had been entered into between Government and the sub-tenants of the estate through the revenue survey which had been introduced during the direct management of the village by Government, whether as regards the rates of assessment or the right of tenancy.

Held, by Arnould and Newton, JJ. (Tucker, J., dissentiente), that plaintiff had no right to object to the condition subject to which the District Judge had allowed her claim to resume the khotship. Tajubeei v. The Sub-Collector of Kulaba, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 132.

Held that a khoti estate is an estate paying revenue to Government upon which an assessment is temporarily settled, and that a suit for its recovery should be assessed at eight times the annual assessment under Act XXVI of 1867, Schedule B, Art. 11, note (a), Sp. Rule 1 for the Bombay Presidency. Vithal v. Gopal Ganesh Binelkar, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 148.

Held that a khot is liable to be assessed for khoti profits in respect of land in his private occupation during the time that the khoti village is under attachment by Government.

Quære,—Whether a khot in respect of such lands is a tenant within the meaning of Section 11, Clause 1, of Bombay Act I of 1865, and whether the powers in Section 38 of that Act apply to such lands. Rámchandra Narsinha Mahupa v. The Collector of Ratnágiri, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 41.

Where the plaintiffs sued for the partition of a khoti estate, alleging that they and the defendants were joint proprietors thereof, and where the defendants admitted that the estate was originally joint, but set up that a partition had taken place more than a hundred and fifty years ago,—Held that the burden of proving that a partition had been made lay on the defendants, and that the mere distribution of land and tenants, such as is usual in the South Konkan, while a khoti estate continues to be held in co-parcenary, in no way established a formal partition. Bábáshet bin Govindshet et al. v. Jirshet bin Yesshet et al., 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 71.

8.—Zur-i-peshgee Tenure.

By a zur-i-peshgee lease granted upon the advance of Rs. 5,517, the lessee was to hold possession of certain villages for the term of five years, and to pay himself out of the proceeds of the villages interest on the loan; and the lessor undertook not to mortgage or alienate the property during the term, and not to oust the lessee, or, if he did that, he would pay him Rs. 1,000. Before the expiration of the term the villages were taken in execution, and sold under a decree at the suit of a third party, and the lessee turned out of possession. Held that the lessee had no claim against the villages for the principal money, and that the Rs. 1,000 were forfeited. Nundolall v. Mussamut Kullianeebuttee, Marsh., 209.

A mortgagor, one who has granted a zur-i-peshgee lease, can sue to recover possession of his lands before the expiry of the term fixed by the lease, on the ground that the mortgage debt has been satisfied by the mortgagee's receipts while in possession.

In the case of a mortgage by a zur-i-peshgee lease, the mortgagor is entitled to an account from the mortgagee, notwithstanding an express stipulation in the lease that the latter shall not be liable to account. Punjum Singh v. Mussamu. Ameena Khatoom, 6 W. R., 6.

A zur-i-peshgeedar is entitled as against purchasers from the grantor of his zur-i peshgee lease to hold possession of any village covered by his lease until his lien on it is satisfied. Chutter Singh and others v. Gobind Doss and others, 6 W. R., 122.

Where a decree-holder, finding a zur-i-peshgeedar in possession, paid the debt due by his judgment-debtor to the zur-i-peshgeedar, and entering on possession himself realized the rents, it was held that he could not demand wasilat from the judgment-debtor for the same period. Mussamut Sham

Soonder Kooer v. Rajendar Misser, 10 W. R., 390.

A zur-i-peshgeedar cannot compel his lessees to pay rent when both he and they are evicted by the zemindar. Bishen Dyal Singh v. Probhoo Dass, 1 W. R., 1.

Plaintiff, having given a lease on a zur-i-peshgee advance to the defendant, was declared entitled to sue for the balance of rents after giving the defendant credit for the amount of his advance.

The decretal order in such a case, after pronouncing the tenure liable on cancelment, should go on to say, according to Section 78, Act X of 1859, that it will be cancelled if the arrear be not paid within fifteen days. Giree Dharee Sahoo v. Mussamut Buksun, 1 W. R., 361.

A zur-i-peshgee lease being nothing but a simple mortgage, though it may in form be for a term of years, yet it may be cancelled on proof of discharge of advance with interest from the usufruct, or on payment of the money in cash. The purchaser of the proprietary rights in a zur-i-peshgee is not barred from suing to redeem, because he or those through whom he claims did not sue for an account within twelve years from expiry of term, or from discharge of the debt by the usufruct. Pultun Singh v. Reshal Singh, 1 W. R., 7.

A zur-i-peshgee lease (which does not provide for its cancelment in the event of a breach of any of its conditions, but provides for the cancelment of all sub-leases) cannot be set aside, because of the act of the zur-i-peshgeedar granting a kutkeena. The kutkeena may be set aside, and the zur-i-peshgeedar be liable in damages for any injury which may have accrued to the zemindar. Section 25, Act X of 1859, is not applicable to such a case, but only to cases when the period of the lease has expired. But as a zur-i-peshgee lease has always been treated as a mortgage, a suit to set it aside cannot be brought in the Collector's Court unless the terms of the lease distinctly provide for such a course of procedure in the event of a breach of any of its conditions. Mahomed Ali v. Batook Dao Narain Singh, 1 W. R., 52.

When a sub-lessee (kutkinadar holding from a zur-i-peshgeedar) pays the Government revenue on the default of the malik, who sells the estate to escape liability, the obligation to repay the same is a personal liability on the part of the malik, and cannot be enforced against the estate. Jhoo Bhugguth v. Syed Tara Hoom Hossein, W. R., 1864, 132.

A zur-i-peshgee lease is nothing but a simple mortgage, and may at any time be cancelled on the advance being proved to have been discharged with interest from the usufruct, or otherwise liquidated by the mortgagor, notwithstanding the non-expiry of the term mentioned in the deed. Nund Lall Doss v. Baluk, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 122.

A zur-i-peshgeedar is entitled to retain the whole property pledged to him until the whole debt has been paid to him. It is optional with him to relinquish any portion either on receiving a proportionate amount of what is due to him or otherwise. Hureehur Singh v. Dabee Sahoy, W. R., 1864, 260.

In a suit between Mahometans by the heirs of zur-i-peshgee mortgagee to recover the amount advanced, all the heirs of the mortgagee must be represented either as plaintiffs or defendants, or those who sue must claim in proportion to what they are entitled to under the Mahometan law. Mussamut Mujeedoonissa v. Syud Dilder Hossein, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 216.

Where a zur-i-peshgeedar abandons his right to possession under his lease, and sues to recover the money advanced, and obtains a decree which gives him no specific remedy against the property leased to him, his lease must be held to have terminated. Gouree Singh v. Fuzl Hossein, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 313.

The words in a zur-i-peshgee lease, "after the expiry of the term it will be competent to me (the mortgagor) in the month of Jeit of any year I can to pay the zur-i-peshgee and cancel the lease," were held to do no more than bar mortgagors re-entering in the middle of any year, in the event of the mortgagee's occupation continuing after the expiry of the lease, owing to mortgagor's default to pay off the loan, and that it contained no undertaking by the mortgagee to hold on until it suited the mortgagor to pay him off. Raj Goura Sunkur v. Baboo Bhola Pershad, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 211.

9.—Permanent Settlement.

The date of the Permanent Settlement is March 22nd, 1793. Rajessuree Debia v. Shibnath Chatterjea, 4 W. R., Act X R., 42; Dhunput Singh v. Gooman Singh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 61.

"The time of the Permanent Settlement" mentioned in Sections 3 and 4, Act X of 1859, was held to be the date of the Permanent Settlement of the Provinces of Bengal, Behar, and Orissa referred to in Regulation I of 1793, and not the date of the actual settlement of a particular zemindary with the owner thereof. Mussamut Poran Bibee v. Sedee Nazir Ally Khan, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 71.

A suit for enhancement before Act X of 1859 against a dependent talookdar. Held in special appeal that, independently of the question whether by proving a holding for twelve years before the Permanent Settlement the defendant can put the plaintiff out of Court, the defendant is also entitled to a separate finding on the question whether by a holding from the time of the Settlement he is entitled to the protection given by Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793. Muthooranath Roy v. J. Panioty, 1 W. R., 37.

Suit to contest enhancement. The plaintiff's admission that he had held since 1244 deprives him of the benefit of the presumption of having held at fixed rates from the time of the Permanent Settlement. But as the liability of the tenure to enhancement was decided against the zemindar in a former suit, that finding it was held must be treated as res adjudicata. Sreedhessary Chowdhry v. Muddun Koowar Jha, 1 W. R., 128.

A tenant is entitled, under Section 4, Act X of 1859, to the presumption of having held since the Permanent Settlement on proof of uniform payment of rent for 20 years. Shib Narain Ghose v. Kashee Pershad Mookerjee, 1 W. R., 326.

The date of the Permanent Settlement for the district of Jessore was April 11th, 1790. Huro Nath Roy v. Ameer Biswas, 1 W. R., 231.

A clear finding is necessary that the defendant has paid a uniform jumma for the land in dispute before he can have the benefit of the presumption of occupancy from the time of the Permanent Settlement. Ormon Khatoon v. Robert Savi, 1 W. R., 243.

Where a ryot has held the land at a uniform rate for a longer period than twenty years the presumption which would arise under Act X of 1859, Section 4, that it has been so held from the time of the Permanent Settlement, is rebutted if it appear that at a period subsequent to the Permanent Settlement a pottah was granted, showing that the title under which the ryot holds then commenced. Ramlall Ghose v. Lallu Picumlull Doss, Marsh., 403.

In a suit for resumption, where the defendant pleads a lakheraj tenure before 1790, the validity of the grant is not open to the Judge's consideration, but only whether the tenure was in existence before 1790, and if so to apply the Law of Limitation. Sagore Monee Dossee v. Bipro Doss Dey, 1 W. R., 249.

Even when the validity of a lakheraj may be questionable, the lakherajdar can plead limitation on proof of his ancestors having been in possession before 1790. Munneah Lall Baboo v. Mulkessur Banerjee, 1 W. R., 297.

The words "Permanent Settlement" in Act X of 1859 refer to the Permanent Settlement of 1793, and not to Permanent Settlements subsequently made. Sheoburn Lall v. Ram Purtab Singh, 3 W. R., Act X R., 20.

Where shikmee talooks at the time of the Permanent Settlement were comprised within the zemindar's estate, the talookdars will be subordinate to the zemindar. Chunder Kant Chuckerbutty v. Mupanny Dukhinea Odea, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 6.

The lower Appellate Court's order upon remand that plaintiff be declared entitled to the permanent settlement of the land in dispute instead of the defendants, and that she be substituted for the defendants as proprietor and declared liable to pay the rent of the estate instead of the defendants, was confirmed in special appeal subject to the proviso that the declaration of the plaintiff's rights now made will not entitle her to dispossess the defendants if they be in possession of the land as putneedars. R. Watson and Co. v. Ranee Brojo Soonduree Debia, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 376.

10.—SETTLEMENT.

A Government settlement, whether permanent or farming, so far from destroying the rights of a talookdar, always preserves them if there be really a dependent tenure. Hurropershad Bhuttacharjee v. Bhyrub Chunder Mojoomdar, 8 W. R., 391.

Where, owing to the refusal of the original possessor of a resumed maâfee land to fulfil the revenue engagements, the settlement was made with a stranger,—Held that such settlement could not confer upon him any right adverse to the original possessor after the expiration of that settlement, when the original possessor is entitled to claim settlement. Mahomed Ata-ool-lah v. Mahomed Mohi-ool-lah and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 231.

Held, on the construction of the settlement proceeding, that the arrangement under that proceeding was to continue for the period of settlement, and no longer, and that the respondents have acquired hereditary transferable interest as cultivators in the land by the zemindar's acquiescence in the action of the settlement officer. Ikramaly Khan and others v. Ludwa and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 113.

Where a claim to the proprietary rights was preferred by the plaintiffs at the time of settlement, and the settlement officer, on the objection of the defendants, ordered the plaintiffs to be recorded as hereditary cultivators, and referred them to the Civil Court to establish their right,—Held that the present suit brought to establish that right not having been instituted within three years from the date of the award of the settlement officer, was barred by limitation. Surdar Khan v. Chundoo and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 228.

In the settlement of a talook, after resumption by Government with thirteen persons, it is not to be presumed that all thirteen persons had equal rights, simply because the settlement was made with all of them jointly, particularly where the settlement proceedings show that the question of the extent of the shares was in dispute, and that the settlement was made jointly with the whole without prejudice to title. The onus of proving the extent of the plaintiff's vendor's title is on the plaintiff. Gooroo Churn Poddar and others v. Hafeeza Bibee, 7 W. R., 366.

When a temporary settlement expires, whether the holder thereof had been the proprietor of the land within the meaning of the old Regulations, or a stranger, the proprietor is entitled to come forward and to claim as of right from the Government a permanent settlement of the land, unless he has by his own conduct forfeited that right. Watson and Co. v. Brojo Soondery Dabee, 10 W. R., 395.

Long possession itself does not give a title to settlement if the parties asking for the settlement do not comply with the requirements of the law. Goluck Chundra Chowdhry and others v. Ali Mollah and others, 11 W. R., 378.

A settlement of a resumed lakheraj estate being made by the Collector with the plaintiff "subject to the orders of the Board of Revenue," the Board, or the Commissioner acting under rules laid down by them, may cancel the settlement at any time. Harlal Tewari v. The Collector of Bhaugulpore, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 82.

The mere fact of a lessee having received a malikana allowance from the Collector during the period of his temporary lease will not bar the right to a permanent settlement of any party who, under the law of alluvion, is entitled to settlement. Cally Chunder Chowdhry v. Manikurnika Chowdhrain, W. R., 1864, 149.

A Civil Court may set aside a settlement of land erroneously made by the Collector as forming part of a resumed mehal if the land has not actually been resumed. Abboo Bibee v. The Collector of Backergunge, 1 W. R., 255.

A settlement dol includes all that ordinarily passes as assets of the settlement, but not what is exclusively reserved as the right of the state, e.g., the right to the julkur of large navigable rivers, which, according to Clause 2, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, never passes to private individuals with whom Government makes settlements. The Collector of Jessore v. J. Beckwith, 5 W. R., 175.

Held that the mention of a cess in the wajib-oolurz and settlement proceeding was not equivalent to a judgment on a question raised so as to preclude adjudication on merits. Ram Chund and another v. Zahoor Ali Khan, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 135.

A landlord cannot maintain a suit for arrears of rent where a claim to hold the land rent free by some title of exemption is set up, and the question for enquiry in such a suit is not whether the land is or is not subject to assessment, but whether, referring to the circumstances under which rent has been withheld, the land can be regarded as rent-paying land.

The mere fact of the land being entered in the settlement papers as assessed, or that the annual papers contain entries, is not sufficient to justify a decree for arrears of rent. Chooneelall v. Mussamut Chitowla and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 137.

The late Maharajah Mitterjeet Singh was entitled to the levy of a tax upon pilgrims resorting to the temple at Gya. On the abolition of the tax by the Government a compensation was awarded to the Maharajah in lieu of it in the shape of a perpetual annual payment, which sum, it was settled by an agreement and a decree of a Sudder Court during the Maharajah's lifetime, was on his death to be divided in certain proportions between his two sons through whom the present appellant and respondents claim as their heirs respectively. Held that in whatever mode the Government might think proper to deal with this sum, with reference to the jumma, the rights of the parties could not be affected thereby without their consent, but would continue to be adjusted according to the proportions originally established. Maharanee Inderjeet Kooar v. Ismadh Kooar, 5 W. R., P. C., 14.

Where, upon a talookdar's refusal at the end of the period of his settlement to re-settle with Government at an increased rate, the jumma was put up to auction, after which the Government did re-settle with the talookdar upon the former conditions and the former description of the nature of the talook, it was held that Government renewed the contract, and placed the talookdar in exactly the position in which he would have stood had he never refused to pay the increased rent. Ognee Coomar Roy v. Kumola Kunt Roy and others, 11 W. R., 38.

Settlement papers prepared at the beginning of each year, and signed by the ryots, setting forth the quantity of nugdee lands to be held and the amount of rent to be paid by each tenant during the year, are admissible in evidence, and do not require registration, the amount of rent therein agreed to be paid being under Rs. 100, and the term being for only one year. Mussamut Nusrun v. Ram Debul Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 273.

Held that a settlement with Government for revenue did not establish proprietary right in the land; that the settlement and possession under it being evidence of a right to possession were also so far evidence of proprietary right, but did not necessarily constitute it, much less could they divest and destroy trusts to which the settlor was subject; and that antecedent trusts had been impressed by judicial decisions on estates acquired even under revenue sales, notwithstanding that such sales had the effect of clearing away preceding titles. Jugutmohinee Dossee v. Sookheemony Dassee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 41.

Assessment of revenue by Government upon invalid lakheraj land after resumption does not confer a new estate on the lakherajdar, and does not cancel or extinguish a mokurruree lease granted by the lakherajdar previous to the settlement, and during the time he was in possession of the land as lakheraj. Pratap Narayan Mookerjee v. Madhu Sudan Mookerjee, 8 B. L. R., 197, and 16 S. W. R., C. R., 35.

The powers given by Section 8 of Act XIV of 1863 to a settlement officer, for the decision of suits of the nature mentioned in Section 23 of Act X of 1859, or in Act XIV of 1863, do not give him power to try a right to resume and assess. Chowdree Jeychund v. Kadhoree, 2 N. W. R., 244.

The powers which the Government is authorized by Act XIV of 1863 to confer on settlement officers are limited to powers for the decision of suits of the nature mentioned in Section 23 of Act X of 1859, or in Act XIV of 1863, and there is no authority given to Government to invest settlement officers with any other of the powers which are vested in a Collector by Act X of 1859, consequently an application under Section 28 of that Act cannot be entertained by a settlement officer. Thakooree v. Dhuleep Singh, 2 N. W. R., 261.

With reference to lands settled by it, Government has nothing more than a right of action by virtue of its being proprietor, and not the right of action of an auction-purchaser; and only the former right passes by the settlement. Rughoonauth Surmah v. Gobind Chunder Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 170.

II.—GRANTS.

In construing grants by former Governments the rule of English law as to the construction of grants to the subject by the Crown is the correct rule to be applied by the Courts in India.

Where a sanad contained only the words "the village of Mánávali has been conferred on you as inám, to be enjoyed by you, your son, and grandson. The Government dues of the village, viz., the Koolbale Koolkunoo (i.e., all taxes and assessments) present taxes and future taxes, together with the house tax, but exclusive of háks due to hákdars, shall continue to be debited from year to year, from the year next succeeding,"—

It was held that the plaintiff's sanad did not operate as an alienation of the soil of the villages, or confer on him a proprietary title in it, and therefore gave the plaintiff no right for the timber growing upon the soil.

The owner of such a sanad, having only a right in the revenues and none in the soil of a village, cannot by thirty years' user become the proprietor of the timber. Váman Janárdan Johi v. The Collector of Thánd and the Conservator of Forests, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 191.

A suit for "arrears of rent" is not maintainable in order to raise the question as to the validity of an alleged rent-free grant. The question should be raised by a suit to assess the holding. Huree Chund v. Brij Coomar Singh, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 35.

The grant of a village in enam by the Government cannot deprive the meymoodars of their hereditary rights. To entitle the person in possession to the enjoyment of the office and receipt of the dues from the village it is not essential that the duties of the office should have been actually performed, if the party was prepared to discharge them when required. Claims to recover arrears of such dues are limited by Section 4, Regulation V of 1827 of the Bombay Code to 12 years. Beemá Shunkur and others v. Jamasjee Shaporjee, 5 W. R., P. C., 121.

Grants which are hereditary "nuslan bad nuslan butnun bad butnun" are declared transferable by gift, sale, or otherwise, under the terms of Section 15, Regulation XIII of 1795, and Section 15, Regulation XXXVII of 1793. Held that the grant in this case was not for the benefit of the family, but was confirmed to the grantee's son only. The family could have no other claim upon him than a natural obligation to help them, and their title to succeed to the grant could only accrue in regular succession.

Held also that the plaintiff's claim was not barred by general limitation, as the defendants were not found to be in possession for more than twelve years, nor was it barred by special limitation under Clause 3, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859, inasmuch as the plaintiff, having purchased the rights and interests of the first auction-purchaser, was not required to sue to set aside the sale. Bithul Bhut v. Lalla Raj Kishore and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 284.

An amaram grant is resumable at the pleasure of the zemindar. The grantees of such a grant, when resumed, if they remain in possession without payment of the assessment which they are lawfully bound to discharge, are liable to be sued for such arrears of assessment. Unidi Rajaha Raji Venkataperumal Rauze Bahadoor v. Pemmasamy Venkatadry Naidoo, 4 W. R., P. C., 121.

A suit to enhance is not maintainable against the descendant of the grantee of a hereditary conditional jagheer. The zemindar must first sue to resume on the ground that the jagheer has been determined by breach of the condition through neglect of the service. Nilmoney Singh Deo v. Ramgopaul Singh Chowdhry, Marsh., 518.

Land granted for the endowment of a Khatitu, or other religious office, cannot be claimed by right of inheritance. The right to the income of such land is inseparable from the office for the support of which the land was granted. Jáfar Mohi-u-Din Sahib v. Aji Mohi-u-Din Sahib and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 19.

Held, in the absence of proof on the part of Government to the contrary, that there is nothing in the nature of a tora garas payment which makes it incapable of alienation; and that without such proof Government receiving such sums cannot withhold payment of them from the alienee of the person to whom, but for the alienation, they would be paid.

Held also that tora garas hak does not come within the meaning of the word "lands" as defined by Section 32 of Bombay Act VII of 1863, and that a suit having reference to the recovery of sums due out of such hak is not affected by Section 27 of that Act. The Collector of Surat v. The Heiress of Kuvarbia, 2 Bom. Rep., 253.

Where by a sanad a grant was made of certain mauzas, specified as containing an estimated number of bigas, a recognition by the revenue authorities and Civil Courts of the grantee being entitled to forest land as part of that grant, although much exceeding the estimated area, was held to be binding on Government, and not to be an error within the meaning of Regulation VII of 1822, Section 6, Clause 3. Sheikh Zahuruddin v. Collector of Goruckpore, 4 B. L. R., P. C., 36; 13 S. W. R., P. C., 31.

In 1775 a rent-free sanad was granted to M. for having put down wild elephants, the consideration in future being to cultivate and keep up a body of men, and take care of the ryots. M. died, and a fresh sanad was in 1786 granted to R. and R., they being thought to be his heirs; but in 1107, M.'s true heirs having established their title, the Government gave them a fresh sanad in lieu of the one to R. and R., reciting the circumstances; both these sanads were to cultivate, keep up a body of men, keep off elephants, and attend to the safety of the ryots. Held that this was not a service tenure that could be resumed, and the subject of service tenures was explained. The zemindari in which these lands were situated was settled in 1802, and was in 1850 sold for arrears of Government revenue; the appellant claimed to set aside the sanad of 1807, on the ground that Government had no right to give such a sanad, but he contended that if it had it could be set aside by a purchaser at a Government sale. Held that the sanad was not a new grant, but a confirmation of the one made before the Decennial Settlement, and that Government was competent to give such confirmation. An admission by a jaghirdar in a suit brought by Government to assess the lands, that the lands were comprised in a zemindari, is evidence of that fact in a suit by the zemindar to resume those lands. Forbes, A. J. v. Mir Mahomed Jaki, 5 B. L. R., 529; 14 S. W. R., P. C., 28.

Regulation IV of 1831, Madras Code, which must be strictly construed, applies only to suits brought to try the validity of grants emanating from, or confirmed or affected by, the direct act and order of the Governor in Council. A written order under that law is not necessary in a suit brought by a person who claims to hold under an ancient and permanent tenure in existence before the Dewanny. Brett v. Ellaiya, 12 W. R., P. C. 33.

12.—INAMDARS.

A grant in inaâm-i-altamghá to N. and his children, "and their descendants in lineal succession, for generation after generation, in perpetuity and for ever," which was unburdened with any condition as to prospective service, and free from any religious, charitable, or other trust, held to confer an alienable estate.

Grants of land revenue for religious and charitable purposes, or for the future condition of civil or military service of the estate considered and to some extent classified; and the enactments and authorities, historical and legal, relating to the question of their alienability, mentioned. Krishnarav Ganesh v. Rangráv, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 1.

An inamdar having granted several mortgages upon his inam lands died. The right to hold the lands rent-free was ruled by Government to have ceased upon the death, but the inam was continued to his representatives subject to the payment of assessment, under the Government Circular of 1854.

Held that the original estate in the lands was not destroyed; that no new title in the inamdar's representatives was created; and that the lands continued chargeable in their hands with any valid specific liens created upon them by the inamdar. Vishnoo Trimbuck v. Tattiaoorf Wassoodeu Punt, 1 Bom. Rep., 22.

An inamdar to whom a village has been granted by Government, though bound to respect all existing tenant-rights, is under no obligation to grant unoccupied lands in "suti" or other permanent tenure, or to re-grant on the same tenure lapsed suti lands; nor does the mere taking up of lands in such a village constitute the occupiers suti tenants.

An inamdar's agent cannot, without express authority from his principal, grant lands on suti or other permanent tenure. Nasarvanji Hormasji et al. v. Narayan Trimback Patil et al., 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 125.

Where a family of kulkarnis in the Konkan was proved to have been in actual occupation of land under an inamdar, for ninety years, at a uniform rent,—Held, in the absence of proof of any lease for a more limited term as alleged by the plaintiff, that the occupants were entitled to hold as long as they paid the usual rent. Annaji Appaji v. Kasi Atmaji and others, 3 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 124.

Civil Courts have jurisdiction to enquire the title of lands enfranchised, and the sunnud granted by the Commissioner may be annulled, without destroying its effect as an enfranchisement of the inam.

In a suit by the adopted son of the late possessor of an inam to recover it,—Held that the plaintiff might recover, notwithstanding the production by the defendant of title-deeds showing that the land had been granted to the defendant by the Inam Commissioner. Cherukuri Venkanna v. Mantravathi Luksmi Narayan Sastralu, 2 Mad. Rep., 323.

Held that it was competent for an inamdar to alienate a third share of whatever interest he himself had in a family inam, in consideration of services rendered in recovering the inam itself; and that the grantee had a right to have the award made by the decree in the terms of the grant, which purported to bestow the third share in perpetuity. Sulbaiji T. P. Iriaah v. Rughuhulty Rellarthe, 2 Bom. Rep., 48.

An inamdar, though he cannot eject his tenants who have been in possession before the grant of the inam as long as they pay the rent due for their land, may nevertheless raise such rent at his pleasure (they not having acquired a prescriptive title), and is not restrained in doing so by the rates fixed by the Government survey. Hari bin Joti v. Narayan Acharjan, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 23.

The plaintiff brought a suit in 1860 against the defendants to recover his share in the joint family property. The present claim, which was for a share in the rents of certain inam lands, also joint family property, was not included in the suit of 1860. At the date of the former suit the land in respect to which the present suit was brought was subject to the provisions of Regulation IV of 1831, and the Civil Courts had no jurisdiction to try the suit in respect to such land without the permission of the Government. It did not appear that the plaintiff had applied to the Government for permission to sue. Held that the plaintiff was not precluded by Section 7 of the Civil Procedure Code from maintaining the present suit. Meaning of the words cause of action discussed. Pattaravy Mudali v. Andimula Mudali and others, 5 Mad. Rep., 419.

Regulation VI of 1831 prohibits the Civil Courts from taking cognizance of a suit brought to recover the value of three years' produce of certain land (held by the plaintiff on service inam tenure), on the ground that the defendant, who held a lease from the plaintiff, wrongfully refused to give up possession on the expiration of his lease, and continued to hold the land and to deprive the plaintiff of the possession and enjoyment thereof. Basappa v. Yenkatappa, 4 Mad. Rep., 70.

13.—Waste Lands.

Waste common land in which all the co-sharers have a joint ownership cannot be withdrawn from the common stock and permanently appropriated to the separate use of one, without the consent of all. Deig Paul Rai v. Bhando Rai and others, 3 Agra Rep., 341.

Held that the proprietors may, in consequence of their own acts, be entitled to separate possession of waste land newly brought into cultivation, although there may have been no regular Government partition. Uhlukh Rai v. Sheo Nundun Singh, 4 Agra Rep., 80.

Waste lands may be in the possession of some one. When limitation is pleaded, the plaintiff's cause of action must be deemed to commence from the date when adverse possession was taken. Eshan Chunder Rai v. Kali Coomar Rai, 2 W. R., 135.

An individual sharer cannot, without the consent, express or implied, of other co-sharers, make use of waste lands common to the whole village in such a way as to exclude permanently other co-sharers from all use or enjoyment of it. The law of joint property entitles another co-sharer to interfere and obtain restoration of the land to its former condition. Doulat Ram v. Tara, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 12.

The fact of land lying waste does not of itself show that no one is in possession. Mahomed Ali v. Shurum Ali, 8 W. R., 422.

Non-mirasi land left waste by a pottahdar may be granted by the Collector, without reference to the claim of the former occupant. Gengu Reddi v. Assal Reddi, 1 Mad. Rep., 12.

Lands held on the terms of an ordinary ryotwary settlement, with annual pottah, and left waste by the pottadar, may be legally granted by the revenue authorities.

The ryot has an indefeasible right of occupation only so long as he pays the Government assessment. Kumara Daba Mudali and another v. Nillatambi Reddi and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 407.

14.—Accretions.

Nadi bharati, or land raised out of the river, is not an accretion, and belongs to the person to whom the river was released by the resumption authorities. Hari Kishor Dutt v. The Collector of Dacca, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 116.

Gradual accretion may be claimed by a lakhirajdar as his property. Puthuram Chowdry v. Kuthenarain Chowdry, 1 W. R., 124.

Accretion on one side of a river is not claimable as belonging to an estate on the opposite bank., Punchanun Mullick v. Heera Lall Seal, 1 W. R. 173.

In case of an accretion to land by alluvion, the ryot is not entitled to a pottah from the zemindar in respect of the accretion in a case where he pays him no rent. Campbell v. Kishen Dhun Audhicaree, Marsh., 67.

Land forming the dry bed of a canal belongs to the estate in which the canal itself was included. Mirza Syfoollah v. Bhutton and others, 10 W. R., 68.

Land which accretes to an estate from the bed of an adjoining khal, not being a canal but a river, belongs by law to the owner of the estate. Dataram Nath and others v. Eshan Chunder Law and others, 11 W. R., 116.

A chur, B., formed by gradual accretion to an estate (Mouzah B.,) was resumed by Government, who successively made temporary settlements for it with the putneedar of Mouzah B., and finally with the zemindar. While the second settlement was in force, another chur formed, and a dispute arose between the putneedar of B. and the putneedar of an adjoining Mouzah, D., as to its ownership. Three suits were brought by the latter, claiming the second chur as an accretion to his estate, in all which suits he was successful, and in one of which Government was a party. Government then sued to set aside the decrees in the two suits in which it was not a party, and for possession of the land in dispute, and it was found in that suit that the land was continuous to chur B., and not to Mouzah D. Held that Government, having a right to revenue, but not to actual possession, could have no locus standi as plaintiff in such a suit. Mooktokeshee Debia v. The Collector of Burdwan, 12 W. R., 204.

Land cannot be legally proved to be an accretion to a talook, or a re-formation of diluviated land of that talook on its original site, where the stream between the land in question and the talook is found to be an unfordable stream, nor can possession under such circumstances give a plaintiff a right to a declaration of his title. Nobin Kishore Roy v. Jogesh Prokash Gangooly, 10 W. R., 272.

Where a permanent zimma tenure has been held at one rate of rent for more than twenty years, the terms of Section 15, Act X of 1859, as well as the provisions of Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, preclude the zemindar from assessing accretions to the parent talook. Juggut Chunder Dutt and others v. Despino Panioty and others, 8 W. R., 427.

The drying of the river or its becoming fordable between a re-formed chur and A.'s estate, does not divest the property from B., on whose estate it formerly formed, and give it to A. The Collector of Tipperah v. Doorga Persad Paray, W. R., 1864, 302.

Land gained by the gradual accession of a river, and added by the operation of nature to A.'s tenure, must be held to be A.'s property, although it be also established by evidence that this land has re-formed on a site which was formerly part of B.'s property. If it should be proved that the river flowed over the original site, and, receding, left the new formation and a fordable channel between it and B.'s property, B. would be entitled to retake possession of the newly-formed land on the old site, and he would not be deprived of it because the river was either fordable on A.'s side, or had wholly dried up. Henry Maseyk v. J. F. Hedger, W. R., 1864, 306.

Where an island was formed in a river, the lands adjacent to the banks of which were part of a zemindary,—Held that the island was not the waste land of any village or a portion of the holding of any ryots in the zemindary, but that the zemindar possessed in it all the incidents of ownership, including the power of making leases. Aubbaya and others v. Yarlagadda Suminida, 1 Mad. Rep., 225.

As long as any portion of an estate is in existence the zemindar is entitled to claim the land accreting to it as forming by law part of that estate. Bhoobunmohun Sircar v. R. Watson and Co., W. R., 1864, 64.

If a river merely changes its course, the old dry course of the river must be taken to have become private property; and as incident to and part of the same, the owner of the soil is entitled to all bheels or ponds, gulfs or damoores, in which water remains, but which do not communicate with the river except in the time of floods, and he can claim a settlement with the Government in respect of any julkur in the same. J. J. Gray v. Anundmohun Moitro, W. R., 1864, 108.

Case remanded for decision as to the extent of the applicability of the custom of Dhardhoora in regard to alluvial land. Naseer-ood-deen Ahmed and others v. Massamut Oomeedee and others, 3 Agra Rep., A. C., 1.

A joteedar under Government is not entitled to a pottah from the zemindar in respect of an accretion by alluvion to a jote, the rent of which is payable to Government. Kishen Dhun Audhikaree v. Campbell, W. R., F. B., 22.

Re-formed lands belong to the estate to which they accrete, even though separated from it by a shallow fordable stream. Kalee Monee Debia v. The Collector of Mymen Singh, 5 W. R., 55.

Prior occupation of alluvial land does not warrant the presumption of ownership of the diluviated land which was on the same site. Nobokissen Roy v. Juggobundhoo Bose, 2 W. R., 284.

The party to whose lands new formations accrete is entitled to them, though the accretion may have been caused by the washing away of the lands of another person. Adoomean v. Shibo Soondooree, 2 W. R., 295.

Alluvial lands claimed under grants from zemindar decreed to claimant, whose title was supported by zemindar. Mem Rakhan Roy v. Ram Dhyan Misser, 2 W. R., 324.

An accretion to a chur belongs to the owner of the chur, whether the channel between the main land and the chur is fordable or not. Kally Nath Roy Chowdhry v. J. Lawrie and Government, 3 W. R., 122.

A strip of land which in the dry season only is left dry between the permanent bank and the river cannot be private property until it rises beyond high-water mark, so as to become fit for cultivation; and when it does so rise the public will be entitled to the same access to the river as before. Maharanee Odhiranee Narain Koomaree v. The Nawab Nazim of Bengal, 4 W. R., 41.

The plaintiff sued for possession of a chur which he alleged had accreted to the remnant of the plaintiff's original estate, which had been left when all the rest of his estate was washed away. Held that the Court must decide what particular parcel (if any) was the remnant of the original estate, and must also decide whether the chur claimed was formed by accretion to that remnant. Rashmonee Dossee v. Bhubonath Bhuttacharjee, 12 W. R., 252.

In a suit for enhancement in respect of an accretion the plaintiff is not bound to show any established talookdary rates, but, if entitled to enhance, ought to obtain a decree for enhancement at a rate proportionate to that paid for the parent tenure.

In the case of accretions to recently-created tenures the question of enhancement will mainly depend on the engagements of the parties. Baboo Gopal Lall Thakoor v. Kumur Ali, 6 W. R., Act X R., 85.

There is no right of property in a mere site. Proof of mere identity of site is not sufficient to defeat the right of an owner to whose land an accretion or formation may be an increment. Narainee Burmonee v. Tarinee Churn Singh, 6 W. R., 40.

In a suit for possession of a chur, the plaintiff having obtained a decree for possession, he was declared entitled to mesne profits from date of institution of the suit.

As to mesne profits before institution of suit, the application by the Judge of the principle laid down in S. D. A. Rep., 1858, p. 513, affirmed. Jankee Bullub Sen v. Mohima Runjun Roy, 6 W. R., 76.

An ijaradar may be entitled to take possession of lands accreting to his ijara lands after he obtained the ijara, but he is not entitled to accretion of an older date than his own farm. Jam Ali Chowdry v. Prankisto Rai, 4 W. R., 65.

When land is gradually re-formed on two old sites identity of site can give no title to the former owners of the two old sites to the land re-formed in such old sites respectively; nor can identity of site give any title to land gradually re-formed, when it is formed by gradual accession partly to one estate and partly to another. Muthooranath Muzoomdar and others v. Tarinee Churn Singh, 8 W. R., 164.

The order of a Collector rejecting a claim to alluvial lands, on the ground that a settlement of them had already been concluded, is not an award within the meaning of Section 3, Act XIII of 1848. Shurut Soondery Dabee v. The Government and others, 7 W. R., 42.

Where land came up originally from the river as a small island, and gradually joined on to the plaintiff's estate after having been taken possession of by the defendant,—Held by Trevor, J., that the Government alone was entitled to the land, and not the plaintiff, to whose estate the land had joined.

Held contra by Glover, J., that as the land was an accretion to the plaintiff's estate he was entitled to take possession of it under Regulation XI of 1825, the defendant's possession notwithstanding. Mohineemohun Doss v. Juggobundoo Bose and others, 7 W. R., 103.

Limitation or adverse possession as to chur land may commence directly the land is in existence, and not from the time at which it becomes culturable. Any proof of ownership would be sufficient to show possession. Luckhee Dabia Chowdhrain and others v. The Collector of Mymensing and others, 7 W. R., 231.

The owner of land before it is inundated remains the owner of it when it is covered with water and after it becomes dry. Mussamat Imam Bandi and Wajid Ally Khan v. Hur Gobind Ghose, 7 W. R., P. C., 67.

Under the law of accretions no decree can be given merely on the ground of re-formations on old sites; but the party to whose land the new accretions are attached is entitled to them. Kazee Toraboodeen and others v. Sham Kant Banerjee and others, 6 W. R., 249.

The re-formation of land in the bed of a navigable river is not primâ facie to be ascribed to a loss from any particular riparian estate, nor is the land which has been removed from an estate by sudden avulsion reclaimable, unless the circumstances supply evidences of identity. A title by accretion is not established by mere proof of general inclusive boundaries at a time preceding the formation of the chur, but there must be proof of the nucleus of accretion. The land gained will follow the title of the particular land forming the nucleus.

The cultivation of chur lands, like that of waste or jungle lands, carries no primâ facie character of usurpation or wrong; and the claimant against the purchaser bonâ fide and without notice in possession must strictly prove his title. Ekowri Singh and others v. Hiralall Seal and others, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 5; S. C., 11 W. R., P. C., 2.

A suit for the assessment of lands accreted to a zimma tenure must be tried upon Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, the burden being on the plaintiff to prove that the tenure is liable to the assessment sought; and the provisions of that law are not affected by Regulation XI of 1825, as regards the mode in which, the conditions on which, and the burden of proof with which, the zemindar may proceed to assess. M. E. O. Panioty v. Juggut Chunder Dutt, 9 W. R., 379.

The question for consideration in a suit for possession of alluvial lands, is not when the land reformed and who took possession of it, but who was the owner of the kismust. Tarenee Pershad Chowdhry v. Sumboo Chunder Chowdhry, 2 W. R., 10.

Where plaintiff alleges that his and the defendant's villages were washed away, and have reformed on the same site, and no third party claims the new formation as an increment to his estate, the question of title will have to be determined by Clause 5, Section 4 of Act XI of 1825. Jannobee Chowdhrain v. The Collector of Mymensingh and others, 8 W. R., 287.

When a deluvion takes place, a right of suit to obtain an abatement of jumma accrues from the time when the plaintiff is compelled to pay the rent named in his pottah, without the allowance of the abatement claimed by him. G. R. Barry v. Abdool Ali, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 64.

Certain lands accreted to an estate, No. 667, and were temporarily settled as a separate estate, No. 3,148. During the currency of this settlement the owner sold his rights and interests in 667 to the plaintiff, and in 3,148 to the defendants. On the expiry of the temporary settlement the plaintiff, as owner of the parent estate, sued to establish his right to the permanent settlement of 3,148.

Held that the suit would not lie, and that the plaintiff had no claim to have a settlement of 3,148. Khub Lall v. Ghina Hazari, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 339.

A question as to the right to the possession of land either gained by gradual accession or re-formation or thrown up in a river or the sea, must be determined by an enquiry into the condition of the land, when it was originally gained by alluvion or thrown up and became the subject of property and capable of cultivation or occupation as such. If it becomes the subject of property as an island or navigable river, the fact that the channel between it and the main land dries up subsequently cannot destroy rights of property or possession which any person may have acquired in it while it continued to be an island. His possession is good and constitutes a right as against all persons except the Government. Kalee Pershad Mojoomdar v. Collector of Mymensing, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 366.

In a dispute as to the position of chur lands, where the change of the course of the river threw doubt upon their position, the judgment of the Court of first instance, given after local investigation, was upheld against the decision of the High Court, founded on inspection of the maps and on the arguments adduced before it. Rani Sarat Sundari Debi v. Prosanno Kumar Tagore, 6 B. L. R., 677 ; and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 20.

According to Clause 1, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, all gradual accessions from the recess of a river or the sea are an increment to the estate to which they are annexed, without regard to the site of the increment. Mere proof of identity of site (without proof of ownership) is not sufficient to defeat the right by accretion which the law gives to an adjacent owner. Katumonee Dossee v. Ranee Monmohinee Dabee, 3 W. R., 51.

Where property is wholly submerged by a river, land forming afterwards on the site will, when the ownership of that site is proved to exist in the former owner, remain in him, and the accretion will not belong to the adjacent proprietor. The decision in Kuttemonee Dossee v. Ranee Menmohinee Dabee is erroneous in not regarding the site of the increment. Lopez, F. v. Maddan Thakoor, 5 B. L. R., 521 ; 14 S. W. R., P. C., 11.

Where a chur or island is thrown up in a large navigable river, originally surrounded by deep, unfordable water, but between which and the estate of the zemindar a fordable channel has since been created, the criterion for deciding whether the Government has the right of disposing of that island, or whether the owner of the land to which it is most contiguous has that right, is to consider the state of circumstances at the time of the formation of the island, that is, at the time when it was thrown up, and not the state of things at any subsequent or fluctuating period, such as the subsequent silting up of the bed of the river between the island and the contiguous estate so as to form a fordable passage.

Act IX of 1847 does not alter the state of the law under Regulation XI of 1825, but merely lays down a procedure.

There is nothing in Act IX of 1847 to prevent the Government from taking possession of a chur after it has silted up, if the chur be one that the Government would be entitled to under Regulation XI of 1825. Mussamut Budrunissa Chowdrain v. Prosunno Kumar Bose, 6 B. L. R., 255; and 14 S. W. R., F. B., 25.

The evidence of Government having sent its officers to measure the land, and to surround it with pillars, is the very best evidence of possession of a lately formed chur. Collector of Furreedpoore v. Kalee Dass Hazrah, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 195.

Land reforming on a site of which the ownership is known becomes the property of the original owner, and is not to be regarded as subject to the provisions of the Regulations touching land gained by gradual accretion. Paragdutt Raoot v. Luchmun Pershad, 3 N. W. R., 111.

The custom of Dhardhoora is, when applied to lands gained otherwise than by gradual accretion, opposed to equity; and such a custom must be proved, not by the vague assertions of witnesses, but by a sufficient enumeration of instances.

Semble,—That the general law of alluvion in India, as well as in Europe, does not entitle a landholder to land which is annexed to his estates by a sudden change in the course of a river, and is still capable of being identified as part of the estate of another. Isree Singh v. Mirza Shurfoodeen, 1, 8 N. W. R., 142.

Ownership in soil is not lost because the subject of it becomes submerged; the owner of the site or sub-soil remains owner of the surface, and on reformation of the surface soil takes whatever falls within his known boundaries. Ordinarily there can be no right of accretion when the new formation is on the site of what was formerly held by an individual as his private property. Dwarkanath Roy v. Dinobundhoo Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 461.

15.—Rulings under Regulation XI of 1825.

The words "a large navigable river" in Clause 3, Section 4, Reg. 11 of 1825, are not applicable to the Goomta, but to such rivers as the Ganges and the Megna, upon which navigation can always be carried on. Mohinee Mohun Doss v. Khajah Assanoollah, 17 S. W. R., G. R., 73.

In Clause 4, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, the words "subject to the provisions stated in the first clause of the present section" do not apply to the formation and position of the newly accreted land, but to the owner's rights in them in relation to the Government. Mirza Syfoollah v. Bhutton, alias Bhuttessur and others, 10 W. R., 68.

Clause 1, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, refers only to under-tenants intermediate between the zemindar and the ryot, and to khoodkasht or other ryots who possess some permanent interest in their lands, and not to tenants from year to year. Zeheeroodeen Paikar v. J. D. Campbell, 4 W. R., 57.

Act IX of 1847 does not interfere with the rights of Government in its capacity of zemindar to take possession of and assess all accretions to its own estates under Regulation XI of 1825. Obhoy Churn Chowdhry v. The Collector of Dacca, 4 W. R., 59.

The words "at the disposal of the Government" in Clause 3, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, mean that the property in, and absolute right of disposal of, the land is vested in the Government, and not that the Government has merely a right to the revenue. Khellut Chunder Ghose v. The Collector of Bhaugulpore, W. R., 1864, 73.

Regulation XI of 1825 regards accreted land as the right of that party to whose estate the land is an accretion, and does not divide the accreted land according to the extent of each party's loss by diluvion. Cally Chunder Chowdhry v. Monikurnika Chowdhrain, W. R., 1864, 149.

In a suit for possession of alluvial land which plaintiffs claimed by right of accretion under the provisions of Regulation XI of 1825, and in which the question of accretion was put in issue, the lower Court's judgment was held not to be good in law, because it contained no clear finding as to whether the lands in dispute had re-formed on the original site of diluviated lands of plaintiff's estate, or whether they were accretions to that estate by recession of the river. J. P. Wise v. Juggobundoo Bose, 12 W. R., 229.

A river that can be crossed from one side zigzag in the dry season only, when the water is breast-high, and the main stream of which is indubitably on the other side, is not a "fordable" stream within the meaning of Clause 3, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825. Issurchunder Sein v. Kalee Doss Hajrah, 3 W. R., 95.

A decree (ex-parte) becomes inoperative if not executed within the time allowed by law, and a party who obtains such a decree, having accepted his status at variance with that assigned to him under the decree for a term beyond limitation, cannot, at any subsequent period, rely upon that decree as proof of his title, nor can it be accepted as such by the Courts.—Held further that Clause 1, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, applies only to lands gained by alluvion either gradually or suddenly, and not to lands existing as waste land subject to inundation and in one year rendered culturable by a deposit of earth by the action of the river. Ramjeeawa Rai and others v. Deep Narain Rai and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 78.

When a party has proved that land which formed part of his estate has, by a sudden change in the course of the river, been separated, he is entitled to recover such land under Clause 2, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825.

When a party claims such land upon the ground of immemorial custom he must prove such custom.

The canoongo papers are not sufficient evidence to prove immemorial custom.

The proceedings showing that such custom obtains on the banks of one river will be no evidence to prove that it obtains on the banks of another. Rai Manik Chand v. Madhuram, 3 B. L. R., P. C., 5.

A tenant-at-will is entitled to occupy an accretion to his holding so long as he retains possession of his original holding. Bhugabut Prasad Singh v. Durg Bijai Singh, 8 B. L. R., 73; 16 S. W. R., C. R., 95.

Under Clause 3, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, Government has no right to land thrown up as an island in the bed of a navigable river, when such island is formed on the site of land which had been washed away. Mani Lal Sahu v. The Collector of Sarun, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 93, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 424.

Under Clause 3, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, a riparian proprietor has no right to an island thrown up in a large navigable river, when the channel which intervenes between his land and the island is, under ordinary circumstances, and at the most favourable seasons, unfordable for sixteen out of twenty-four hours. Nabin Kishor Roy v. Jages Prasad Gangopadhya, 6 B. L. R., 343, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 352.

In a suit for possession when certain lands were decreed to plaintiff on the ground that having formed opposite to his villages, they subsequently became contiguous thereto by the gradual silting up of the bed of the river which had previously flowed between,—

Held that the decision was not in conformity with Clause 1 or Clause 3, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, and that it was necessary to determine how the land formed, whether it was thrown up as an island in the bed of the river, or was formed by gradual accretion to an estate; and, if by gradual accretion, to what lands it so accreted. Unnopoorna Debia v. Sreemutty Dassee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 254.

Where lands become annexed to a jote by gradual accretion within the meaning of Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, the jotedar is entitled to hold them on the same principle and under the same legal conditions as he holds the parent estate. Gobind Monee Debia v. Dino Bundhoo Shaha, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 87.

Before Clause 4, Section 1, Regulation XI of 1825 can have the effect of depriving a party of the title given by Clause 1, the opposite party must prove that the land in question was the bed of a small and shallow river which, with the julkur right of fishing over it, was recognized as the property of such opposite party. Ram Shurn Shahu v. Bhote Kinkur, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 268.

Under Regulation XI of 1825 a right of property in land gained by alluvion from a river (the bed of which is not the property of an individual) is acquired in two modes: first, where the land is gained by gradual accession by the recess of the river, in which case it becomes the property of the person in possession of the estate to which the land is an increment; and, secondly, when a chur or island is thrown up on a large navigable river, and the channel between such chur or island is fordable at any season of the year, the accession is an accession to the land or tenure most contiguous.

The ownership of the old site does not give a title to re-formation. Mohini Mohun Doss v. Juggobundoo Bose, 9 W. R., 312.

Lands washed away and afterwards re-formed upon the old site, which can be clearly recognized, are not lands "gained" within the meaning of Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825; they do not become the property of the adjoining owner, but remain the property of the original owner. Romanath Thakoor and others v. Chundernarain Chowdry and others, Marsh., 136, and W. R., F. B., 45.

Held that under Section 4, Clause 1, Regulation XI of 1825, tenants have a right to the land accreted to their holding; and if the tenant has acquired a right of occupancy in his original holding he would enjoy a similar right in the alluvial land, although he may not establish that he has held such alluvial land for twelve years. Oodit Rai v. Ramgobindo Singh and others, 2 Agra Rep., 206.

According to Clause 4, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, churs thrown up in small and shallow rivers, the beds of which are private property, belong to the proprietor of the bed of the river; but by Clause 1 of the same section, churs thrown up in rivers not small and shallow, the ownership of beds of which remains in the public, are an increment to the tenure of the riparian owner to whose land or estate it is annexed. Chundermonee Chowdhrain v. Sreemuttee Chowdhrain, 4 W. R., 54.

If alluvial land be surrounded by water fordable at any point, the owner of the land to which the chur adjoins has a primâ facie title to it under Clause 3, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825. The status of the land at survey, not on first formation, is to be looked to under Act IX of 1847. J. P. Wise v. Ameerunnissa Khatoon, 2 W. R., 34; and J. P. Wise v. Moulvie Abdool Ali, 2 W. R., 127.

Claims to alluvial lands under Clause 2, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825 (i.e., to lands as re-formed lands), are not superior to claims under Clauses 1 and 3 of Section 4, or under Section 5 of that Regulation, i.e., to lands as newly alluviated. J. P. Wise v. Ameerunnissa Khatoon, 2 W. R., 132.

When the Government sues for alluvial land as an ordinary riparian zemindar it is bound to prove, under the latter part of Clause 3, Section 3, Regulation XI of 1825, that the stream between the chur and the main land is fordable at some time of the year, and that it was fordable when the alluvium formed. Mussamut Tabira and others v. The Government, 6 W. R., 123.

The Government, when it claims land as a riparian proprietor, must prove its title like any other private proprietor. When a riparian proprietor claims land which has formed in front of his estate, from which it is separated by a running stream, he must, under Clause 3, Section 3, Regulation XI of 1825, prove that the channel between his property and the land claimed is fordable at some time of the year. The Government v. Mussamut Tabira and another, 7 W. R., 514.

Clause 1, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, prescribes that the right to the occupancy of accreted land is with the owner of the parent mehal or subordinate tenure, as the case may be. But so far from saying that it is revenue or rent free, or that the original revenue or rent assessment covers the demand both for the original estate or original subordinate tenure and for the accreted land, the very reverse is contemplated by the section, which provides for payment of revenue or rent, if payable under law or usage.

Accreted lands, when liable to enhancement at the ordinary neighbouring rates, are entitled to a deduction of 10 per cent. for collection charges, and 10 per cent. for talookdary profits. Juggut Chunder Dutt and others v. Panioty and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 48.

Proof of re-formation on an old site will not suffice to establish a claim under Regulation XI of 1825. Re-formations are governed by Clauses 1 and 3, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825. A claim to hold the land under Clause 2 can only be maintained by the old proprietor when the land has not been diluviated, but cut off by a change of the stream. T. Kenney v. Beebee Someeroonissa, 3 W. R., 68.

Where alluvial land has been formed in front of and contiguous to an old maâfee which had been resumed and settled with the maâfeedars,—Held that in the absence of any custom to the contrary the 1st Clause of Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, applies, and the portion so thrown up in front of the maâfee becomes an increment to the holding of ex-maâfeedars. Fuzi-ood-deen and others v. Mussamut Imteeaz-oon-Nissa, 3 Agra Rep., 152.

Held that Clause 3, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825 is applicable when the chur land is thrown up for the first time, and is not capable of being identified; but where the land thrown up forms a portion of the old mouzah, and can be identified, Clause 5, Section 4 of the said enactment would be applicable; and in the absence of any particular local custom the claim in respect of such land must be decided according to the principles of equity. Todee Singh and others v. J. S. Gardner, 2 Agra Rep., 342.

Quære,—To whom lands diluviated and afterwards re-formed belong. Kirtee Narain Chowdhry v. Protab Chunder Boorooah, W. R., F. B., 129.

The land "most contiguous" to a chur, as that phrase is used in Regulation XI of 1825, Section 4, Clause 3, is intended only to comprise the estate or estates with which the chur comes into contact along the length of the fordable part of a channel; and the whole chur becomes an accession to the land and part of the tenure of the party to whom such estate belongs, and no portion of it will cease to belong to him merely by reason of the deep water between it and the estate of another becoming shallow and fordable.

Held also, that after the chur had, by the first occurrence of the fordable channel, become part of A.'s property, all further accretions to it, if gained by "gradual accession," would also belong to A., even though the result would, in the aggregate, be a prolongation of the chur in front of estates on the river bank not belonging to him. Golam Ali Chowdhry and others v. Gopal Lall Tagore and others, 9 W. R., 401.

In a suit for alluvial lands, if the defendant pleads, and can establish his plea, that the lands in question were gradual accessions to his estate, neither the ground of re-formation on the old site, nor that of prior possession for a short period, can avail the plaintiff. If, however, the plea be found against the defendant, the matter must be disposed of according to Clause 5, Section 5, Regulation XI of 1825. Gobind Nauth Sandyal v. Nobocoomar Banerjee and others, 8 W. R., 206.

Held (in accordance with a ruling of the Full Bench) that, in the case of alluvial formations, mere identity of site is not sufficient to over-ride the positive title acquired by gradual accretion under the provisions of Clause 1, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825. Lyon v. Gray and others, 11 W. R., 189.

Under Regulation XI, 1825, chur land belongs to the proprietor of the estate to which it accretes, provided it is not separated from such estate by an unfordable stream. Shibchunder Ghuttuck v. The Collector of Tipperah, 5 W. R., 139.

Clause 2, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, does not apply to the case of an estate entirely lost by diluvion. Keshublall Chowdhry v. R. Watson and Co., W. R., 1864, 64.

Land gained from a river by gradual accretion belongs to the owner of the adjacent soil by the title of occupancy. Nasavanji Pestoinji v. Nasarvanji Darasha, 3 Bom. Rep., 360.

Act IX of 1847 refers to re-surveys of zemindary lands which the Government as such may cause to be made at certain intervals, and to assessment consequent on the changes ascertained by such re-surveys; but does not interfere with the rights of the Government, in its capacity of zemindar, to take possession of and assess all accretions to its own estates under Regulation XI of 1825. Obhoy Churn Chowdhry v. The Collector of Dacca, 4 W. R., 59.

16.—Khas Mehals.

The purchaser of a Government khas mehal is not bound by the transfer of the rights of any of the original tenants, which have never been registered or recognized by himself or by Government; but can sue the original tenants for their arrears of rent. Huro Mohun Mookerjee v. Ram Coomar Mitter, 1 W. R., 225.

There is no relation of landlord and tenant between the Government and the owner of khas mehals in the 24-Pergunnahs. The latter is the landlord of the ryots, and is not himself a ryot. The right and title of the Government are to the rent, but do not include a right to the possession of the lands, though such a right might arise by forfeiture or extinction of the ownership, and the onus is on the Government to prove its claim to the possession of the lands.

A dispute between two private owners, whether as to boundaries or lands, cannot divest the title of either to possession in favour of the Government, if the Government have merely a rent or jumma. The title to sue for dispossession of the lands belongs in such a case to the owner whose property is encroached upon. If he suffers his right to be barred by limitation the practical effect is the extinction of his title in favour of the party in possession, but his cause of action cannot be kept alive longer than the legal period of limitation of twelve years by the expedient of inducing the Collector to make common cause with him. Gunga Gobind Mundal and others v. The Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs, Prince Golam Mahomed and others, 1 W. R., P. C., 21.

17.—Julkur Tenures.

When a julkur dries up the dried land does not, as a matter of course, become the right of the holder of the julkur. Bissen Lall Doss v. Ranee Khyrunissa Begum, 1 W. R., 79.

The gradual flooding of a talook may destroy the talookdar's right of ownership in that portion of it which is so covered with water, and vest the rights of fishery therein in the owner of the adjoining julkur. But if by a sudden irruption of the river a definite and ascertainable area is submerged at once, that area does not become lost to the talookdar, nor does the owner of the adjoining julkur become entitled to extend his fishery rights over it. Moharanee Sibessuree Dabee v. Lukhee Dabee, 1 W. R., 88.

Regulation II of 1819 is not the Regulation under which Government should proceed when claiming julkurs of navigable rivers not forming portions of settled estates. All such cases are cognizable only in the ordinary Court (1), because of the total absence of the word "julkurs" in any of the resumption regulations, either before or after Regulation II of 1819; and (2) by reason of the difference in the nature of the claims between one to take possession of julkurs and one to resume lands. The Collector of Maldah v. Syud Suddrooddeen, 1 W. R., 116.

When it is found as a fact that both water and land are the property of the zemindar as such, the two rights are not to be separated. Chunder Coomar Roy v. Rajah Buroda Kant Roy, W. R., 1864, 63.

When the exclusive julkur right in a navigable river is set up against the ordinary rights of the state and the community it must be established by clear and strong proof. J. G. Bagram v. The Collector of Bhullooa; The Collector of Rungpore v. Ramjadub Sein, W. R., 1864, 43.

A proprietor of the entire julkur rights of a pergunnah is entitled to fish in any natural watercourse, or any jheel or pond not made by human agency. Khooroonamoye Chowdrain v. Joy Sunker Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, 267.

A. has no right to erect a bund on his own land, so as to intercept the passage of fish in a natural stream, and thereby render B.'s right of fishery less profitable. But if the bund has existed for many years without complaint, B.'s right of fishery must be deemed subject to A.'s right to keep up the bund. Ram Dass Surmah v. Sonatun Goohoo, W. R., 1864, 275.

The provision in a fishery pottah that the lessee cannot sue for recovery if, through his own neglect or otherwise, he fail to catch fish, was held to be no bar to the lessee's claim to a refund of rent from the time that possession of the subject of the lease was taken away, by order of a competent Court, from his lessor, and consequently from him. Ram Gopal Sein v. Abum Mullick and others, 7 W. R., 405.

The sharer of an ijmalee julkur is not debarred from collecting his separate julkur jumma if he legally can do so, simply because it suits the purpose of another sharer to receive, in lieu of such a jumma, a consolidated chittee jumma. Kashee Nath Dhur v. Gudadhur Paul and others, 11 W. R., 374.

By pottah certain land was leased, and a right of julkur or fishery in a bheel or lake was granted, on payment of certain jumma. The bheel became permanently dried up. Held that the grant being merely of the fishery, the lessee acquired no interest in the soil, and the lessor was entitled to re-enter on the land formerly covered with the water of the bheel. Suroop Chunder Mozoomdar v. Jardine, Skinner, and Co., Marsh., 334.

It matters not whence the water in which A. has a right of fishery comes. A.'s right is not lessened, nor B.'s increased, because a portion of the water formerly flowing in A.'s channel has been diverted from it, and because the water of B.'s river now flows through it. Nobin Chunder Roy Chowdhry v. Radho Pearee Debia and others, 6 W. R., 17.

A co-proprietor cannot be sued for trespass for fishing in a julkur in which he and the other proprietors were entitled to fish, merely because the julkur, by a change in the course of the river, ran over the land which was allotted to the plaintiff under a butwarra. In such a suit the plaintiff cannot obtain a share of the fish on the ground that he had a share in the julkur. Gobind Chunder Shaha v. Khaja Abdool Gunny and others, 6 W. R., 41.

The right of fishing in a navigable river does not belong to the public, nor is the Government prohibited by any law from granting to individuals the exclusive right of fishing in such a river. Chunder Jaleah v. Ramchurn Mookerjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 212.

18.—Ferries.

The mere fact of being the owner of both banks of a river does not give the right of ferry. Sofir Merdha v. Nobo Kishore Mohunt, 2 W. R., 286.

A plaintiff may recover possession of a ferry, of which he has been dispossessed by the defendant, though the form of his action may have been for obtaining possession of a ghaut. The right to ply the ferry may include also a right at certain seasons of the year to land upon or start from a part of the river bank not included in the land taken for the ferry. Brojo Kishoree Chowdhrain v. Bilash Monee Chowdhrain, 5 W. R., 195.

When a ferry, previously held under private management, has been declared to be a public ferry by the Government under Section 3, Regulation VI of 1819, an individual claiming compensation for the loss alleged to have been sustained by him in consequence of the extension of the authority of the Government cannot maintain an action in the Civil Courts to enforce his claims. The Collector of Patna v. Romanath Tagore and others, 7 W. R., 191.

A suit for tolls for the use of a ferry belonging to the plaintiff is not maintainable under Act X of 1859, Section 23, Clause 4. Furlong, manager for the Rajah of Durbungah v. Treelochun Singh, Marsh., 504.

Clause 2, Section 13, Regulation VI of 1819, only applies where there has been an accident. Where the Magistrate thinks that a ferry is improperly kept, and is in a dangerous condition, he should proceed under Section 4. Queen v. Deeyanutoollah, 7 W. R., Cr., 32.

A conviction by a full-power Magistrate under Section 9 of the Bombay Ferries' Act annulled for want of jurisdiction, as the Magistrate of the zillah alone was empowered by Section 16 summarily to hear and determine all offences against the Act. Reg. v. Prabhakar N. Soman, 3 Bom. Rep., Cr., 11.

On a reference by a Sessions Judge, a conviction and sentence by a District Magistrate under the Bombay Ferries' Act for conveying passengers for hire from Uran to Bombay was reversed, as the act charged did not constitute an offence under any section of the Act. Reg. v. Malhari Bin Shivje, 3 Bom. Rep., Cr., 41.

An appeal lies from the summary determination of the Magistrate of a zillah, under Section 16 of Act XXXV of 1850 (an Act for regulating the Bombay Ferries) to the Sessions Judge. Such appeal need not be preferred within eight days, under Section 14 of Regulation XIX of 1827. Reg. v. Malhâri Lavji et al., 6 Bom. Rep., Cr. Ca., 45.

There are proprietary rights in a private ferry of such a nature that another party may not so interfere with the profits arising therefrom by running a boat, if not exactly on the same line, at least within such a distance as for all practical purposes would be the same as if it were on the same line. Preventing parties from crossing in a person's ferry and driving his men away amount to dispossession. Kishore Lall Roy v. Gokose Monee Chowdrain, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 281.

A suit to re-open a ferry which had been included in a settlement of an estate obtained by plaintiff from Government, but which had been closed by orders of the Assistant Magistrate, was held not to be maintainable, the ghât where plaintiff wished to re-open it being within two miles of the place at which a public ferry was established. Dewan Ram Jewan Singh v. The Collector and Magistrate of Shahabad, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 132.

19.—Tolls.

A suit to recover rent on lease of toll arising from a canal or river navigation is not cognizable under Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859. H. W. Garland v. Rai Mohun Huzrah, 1 W. R., 15.

To justify a conviction under Section 6, Act VIII of 1851, for illegal collection of a toll on a public road the road must be a public road within the meaning of Section 2 of the Act. Narendronarain Singh and another, petitioners, 6 W. R., C. R., 48.

A., the lessee of a toll, was in arrear to Government in respect of the rent. The Magistrate issued a summons to him, whereby it was recited that a plaint had been preferred against him (A.) for the offence of not paying the sum of Rs. 262 for arrears of rent, and A. was summoned to appear before the Magistrate to answer the charge. A. did not appear on the day appointed, but had an application presented for postponement of the demand for arrears of rent, on the grounds therein stated. On the following day the Magistrate passed the following order: Whereas the debtor, defendant, has not appeared in person, the summons has not been obeyed; therefore it is ordered that a warrant be issued for the arrest of the defendant. Proceedings were afterwards taken upon the warrant. Held that all the proceedings taken by the Magistrate were irregular, and must be set aside. In the matter of Banka Behary Ghosh, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 17; and 11 W. R., p. 26.

Held that however analogous the positions of a farmer of tolls and a farmer of a ferry may be, the law which is applicable to the latter (Regulation VI of 1819) does not extend to the former. Bunkoo Behary Ghose, 11 W. R., 26.

20.—Timber.

Where tainzas or revenue certificates have been granted by the Conservator of Forests to the owners of timber, such timber cannot be parted with to third parties, except on the understanding that it is burthened with that lien, even although the tainzas are unendorsed. Ko Kywetnee v. Ko Koeng Bane, 5 W. R., 189.

Where one acquires, by license, an exclusive right to cut and to authorize others to cut timber in a forest, such right does not vest in him the timber in the forest. He might thereby have a right to recover damages against any person who, by cutting timber, should interfere with his exclusive right, but that would not vest in him the timber so cut by others. Richard Snadden v. Mahwine and Aga Syud Abdul Hossein, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 292.

The occupier of land who does not come under Section 40 of the Bombay Survey and Settlement Act, 1865, has not, in the absence of agreement, any proprietary right to the trees growing on his land. Govind Purshotum Kelatkar v. The Sub-Collector and Deputy-Conservator of Forests of Calcutta, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 188.

According to the timber trade in Burmah, the holding of what are called tainzahs does not give possession of the timber; and where the parties in a contract use the word "received" and do not think fit to use the word "entered," they must be taken to have intended the word "received" to have the meaning of having obtained possession of the goods and not merely of having entered and got tainzahs for them. The Burmah Company, limited v. R. Snadden, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 120.

21.—ZEMINDAR.

A suit is brought to recover possession of a piece of ground. Plaintiff had granted a putnee of certain lands, including the piece in question, and the putnee was ultimately sold for arrears of rent, when it was bought in by plaintiff. On taking khas possession plaintiff discovered that the plot in suit had been encroached upon and appropriated by defendant, who is admitted to have been in wrongful possession for more than twelve years before the institution of this suit.

Quære,—Is plaintiff's suit barred by lapse of time or not? In other words, when did plaintiff's cause of action arise?

Held per Phear, J., that on the completion of the auction sale the putnee merged in the superior title of the zemindar vendee, who thus became entitled, by virtue of his original rights as zemindar, to possession of the entire lands. The withholding possession constituted a new cause of action, independently of the fact of its being a persistence in that which was before a violation of the putneedar's right of possession. The decision of the lower Appellate Court is right.

Held per Bayley, J. (contra, decreeing the appeal), that the adverse possession by the third party is of the lands the proprietary right of which remained with the zemindar, and was not affected by the intermediate putnee right to collect rents, &c. On that proprietary right being interfered with the cause of action arose, i.e., whenever the adverse possession commenced. The zemindar could have sued whether there was a putnee or not; as he did not, limitation bars the suit. Rajnarain Roy and others v. Woomesh Chunder Goopto and others, 8 W. R., 444.

A certain quantity of seer land was given by a Mahometan zemindar to his daughter, on the occasion of her marriage, to be held by her as seer, that is to say, free from payment of rent, but not free from payment of revenue. Held that a zemindar was competent to make such grant, and his act is binding on the auction-purchaser, whose right is only to receive the revenue-rate from the grantee. Ahmud Oollah v. Mithoo Lall and others, 3 Agra Rep., 186.

Grants for tanks are invalid and resumable by the zemindar. Hureenarain Gossain v. Shumbhoo Nath Mundul, 1 W. R., 6.

A zemindar is not bound to accept and register any subdivision of a tenure previously registered as undivided. R. Watson and Co. v. Ram Soondur Pandey, 3 W. R., Act X R., 165.

The unregistered transferee of a transferable tenure cannot be treated by the zemindar as a trespasser, but, as against the zemindar who has evicted him, has a right to be restored to possession. Nobin Kishen Mookerjee v. Shib Pershad Pattuck, 8 W. R., 96.

When the zemindary rights in a property have been purchased by Government at a sale for arrears of revenue, and Government guarantees the rights and position of certain talookdars therein, and then sells its zemindary rights, the second purchaser is bound by the acts of the Government, and the talookdars, if dispossessed, may recover possession under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Mussamut Burnee Khanum v. Modhoosoodun Doss, 3 W. R., Act X R., 127.

An under-tenant may sue to recover his under-tenure sold by his zemindar for arrears of rent, although his name does not appear in the zemindar's register.

He may also prefer his claim in the Civil Court although he did not previously intervene in the Collector's Court under Section 106, Act X of 1859. Mooktokashee Dossia v. Brojunder Coomar Roy, 3 W. R., Act X R., 156.

A zemindar who receives his rents in full is not entitled to participate in compensation received by his putneedar for loss suffered by the latter in consequence of works being erected on land included in the putnee. The Maharajah of Burdwan v. Wooma Soonduree Dossee, 10 W. R., 12.

The mere deposit of rent in the Collector's office by the purchaser of an under-tenure in his own name and that of the registered tenant, is not sufficient notice to the zemindar of such purchase; nor is the mere acceptance by the zemindar of rent so paid an acknowledgment on his part of the purchaser as his under-tenant, but it is otherwise when there is acceptance with notice, notwithstanding that the transfer had not been registered. Mirtyun Jeya Sircar v. Gopal Chundra Sircar and others, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 131; 10 W. R., 466.

A., a zemindar, granted lands on kaul to B., B. assigned to C., but the lands being mostly in the hands of cultivators, C. only occupied those that had been in B.'s possession. The kist fell into arrear, and A. attached property of C.'s. Notice of the attachment was given before, but the property was not seized till after the whole of the arrears claimed had become due. C. resisted A.'s claim on the ground, substantially, that the sum demanded included arrears which had accrued on the lands not occupied by him. Held that as to the lands of which C. had obtained the actual possession there was such a privity between A. and C. as gave A. a right to realize the amount of kist outstanding in respect of those lands.

Held also that this right was not affected by failure to prove the execution of a muchalka by C. to A., or by the omission to furnish C. with a list of the property attached.

Held also that the attachment was not vitiated by the circumstance that notice of the attachment was given before a portion of the arrears claimed had become due. Kamala Mayar v. Ranga Rau, 1 Mad. Rep., 24.

A zemindar's estate is analogous to an estate-tail as it originally stood upon the Statute de donis.

The zemindar is the owner of the zemindary, but can neither encumber nor alienate beyond the period of his own life. Chintalapati Chinna Simhadriraj v. The Zemindar of Vizianagram and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 128.

A zemindary was attached in 1827, and the Collector, without authority from the Board of Revenue or the Government, remitted a portion of the tirvai, and continued such remission until 1842, when the zemindary was restored. The then zemindar and his successors continued the remissions, always, however, entering the faisal rates in the pottahs, and setting down the remissions as munasib.

In 1861 the plaintiff became lessee of the zemindary, and in 1862, pursuant to notice, he tendered pottahs for Fasli 1272 to the defendant and the ryots at the faisal rates.

Held, first, that the plaintiff was not precluded from raising the rents to the amount of the faisal assessment; secondly, that the Act of Limitations did not apply; and, thirdly, that the plaintiff might sue in a Court of Small Causes for the rent for Fasli 1272. Adimulam Pillai v. Kovil Chinna Pillai, 2 Mad. Rep., 22.

Where a zemindar alienated a part of the zemindari, and the terms of the Regulation XXV of 1802, Section 8, were complied with,—Held (Holloway, J., dissentiente) that the alienation was invalid against the plaintiff, the grandson of the zemindar.

Held also by the whole Court that the defendant and his father having held the land for a lengthened period on a claim of right, the plaintiff's suit was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Syed Ali Saib v. Sri Raja Janyasiroy Peddabahyara Simhulu Bahadar, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 5.

The appellant, a zemindar, sued to recover a portion of the zemindary granted by his grandfather upwards of 40 years ago, upon the ground that the grant was not made in conformity with the requirements of Regulation XXV of 1802; and that in the absence of the observance of the formalities prescribed the grant was void. Held that more than 12 years having elapsed since the title accrued to the person under whom the plaintiff derived his right to resume, the appeal should be dismissed. Sri Raja Setaram Kristna v. Stri Jagunti Sitayamma Garu, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 67.

A deed of gift of land forming part of a zemindary, executed by the zemindar in favour of his daughter five years subsequent to her marriage, is not valid. Sivanaranja Perumal Sethurayar v. Muttu Ramalinga Silhurayar, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 75.

In a suit to recover with mesne profits and other incidents a jirayati village alleged by the plaintiff to form part of his zemindary and to be wrongfully held by defendant by virtue of the execution of a decree of the late Commissioner of the Northern Circars passed in 1854, the defendant pleaded that he held on a permanent lease, subject to a fixed quit-rent; that he and his ancestors had held on that tenure since and previously to the Permanent Settlement; and that the quit-rent had been received from him by the plaintiff. The agent dismissed the suit, on the ground that the matter had been res-judicata against the plaintiff by a former decree in 1807.

Held that the matter of the present claim was not res-judicata, because the question of the existence and validity of the alleged grant, on which the defendant relied, was not determined in the former decree.

Held also that as the defendant stated that the plaintiff had received kuttubandi from him since 1857, the plaintiff's claim to eject could not be disposed of absolutely, on the ground that it was barred by the Limitation Act.

Held also that as the plaint praying for the recovery of possession proceeded on the ground, amongst others, of the validity of the grant relied on by the defendant, the question as to the validity of the permanent kuttubandi tenure claimed by the defendant was properly open for determination in the present suit. Vairicharla Surya Narayana v. Nadiminti Bhagavat Patanjali, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 120.

A meeras pottah granted by a person holding only a temporary lease is not valid against the right of the zemindar to take possession of the land on the expiration of the grantor's lease. Chundee Chunder Mitter v. J. Beckwith, W. R., 1864, 116.

Held that the defendant having failed to prove his right of possession to the house of an absconding ryot, either by sale or mortgage, was an intruder upon the holding of such ryot, and did not, by making additions or alterations, acquire any right against the zemindar who is not shown to have assented to such additions or alterations. Kundhyee and others v. Saheb Zuman Khan, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 9.

In a suit brought by a zemindar to recover either assessment at the rate of Rs. 5,000 per annum or a pergunnah, part of the plaintiff's zemindary, the defendant pleaded that he had held the pergunnah as his own before and ever since the Permanent Settlement, and that the claim was barred by both the old and new Statutes of Limitation. The lower Court overruled both pleas: the first, because it held that, under Regulation XXV of 1802, the zemindar's title could not be questioned; the second, because it considered that the decision in suit No. 6 of 1821 prevented the application of the Statute, on the ground of subsequent hostile possession, and that the plaintiff had had twelve years from the time he came into possession in which to bring the suit. Held, first, there is nothing in the Regulations relating to the Permanent Settlement showing an intention to affect rights of property in existence at the period of their being passed; secondly, that the decision in No. 6 of 1821 will not be followed, at all events in a case in which the present claimant is the grandson of him against whom, as to property of a normal character, the Statute would have begun to run. Srikrisna Devu Garu v. Sri Raja Ramachundra, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 153.

In 1856 the plaintiff, the zemindar of Tarla (who had attained his majority in 1853), instituted suits for the recovery of the two villages claimed in the present suit, on the ground that the villages were jirayati, and had been temporarily alienated, and he claimed a right of resumption. It was decided that the villages had formed a mokhasa jagheer from a date prior to that of the Permanent Settlement; and that as they did not constitute a portion of the assets of the zemindary at the date of the settlement, there was no right of resumption. Pending those suits, an order was issued by Government which plaintiff construed as a transfer to him of the Government right in the villages, and he founded the present suit on the lapse of the mokhasa to Government, and the order transferring the right to him. Held that the present suit is not res-judicata. Sri Sri Sri Ramachundra Suya Archandrana v. Dorvada Ramamia Chandiri, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 207.

Where it was sought to charge a zemindary with debts contracted by persons who were at the time usurpers in wrongful possession of the zemindary, solely on the ground that the documents evidencing the loans recited that they were for the purpose of discharging the kists due to Government,—Held that, in absence of any evidence on behalf of the creditor as to the circumstances in which the transactions were had with the usurping zemindar in possession, and the failure to connect the loans with the debts contracted by the former and lawful zemindars, the suit was rightly dismissed.

The case reported at 6 Moore's Ind. Ap., 393, distinguished. Chidambara v. Srimatu Muttuyvijeya and others, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 260.

Even if a zemindar thinks a ryot has absconded, he has no right to enter on the land without the assistance of the law. Jumeer Ghazee v. Goneye Mundul, 12 W. R., 110.

Regulation V of 1862 applies only to land subject to a permanent assessment, and held from Government by a zemindar under a permanent sunnud, or by a temporary occupant. Enamandaram Venkayya v. Venkatarayyan Reddi and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 75.

Where an island was formed in a river, the lands adjacent to the banks of which were part of a zemindary,—Held that the island was not the waste land of any village, or a portion of the holdings of any ryots in the zemindary, but that the zemindar possessed in it all the incidents of ownership, including the power of making leases. Sabbaya and others v. Yarlagadda Ankinudu, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 255.

An alienation of a portion of a zemindary by the zemindar in favour of his sister cannot operate independently of her claim to maintenance, so as to bind his successor, though the alienation may be binding as against the grantor during his life. Malavaraya Nayanar v. Oppaya Ammal, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 349.

A zemindar has no more power to charge a perpetual annuity in favour of a stranger on the income of the zemindary than he has to alienate the corpus. Narayanga Debee v. Harischandana Deva, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 455.

A zemindar granted part of his zemindary absolutely and died. His grantee was then dispossessed by a purchaser from his successor. Held that, as the conditions specified in Regulation XXV of 1802, Section 8, had not been observed by the former zemindar, the grant was voidable on the determination of his interest, and that consequently the disposition was legal. Pitchakattichetti v. Ponama Nitcayar, 1 Mad. Rep., 148.

Where a village, part of a zemindary, has been entered as a jagheer in the accounts of the Permanent Settlement, the zemindar cannot resume the village, and is entitled in respect thereof only to the usual kuttubandi. Harischandana Deva v. Ramanachandri and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 355.

Held that mere relationship does not constitute a class of cultivators, and a zemindar who allowed some of his kindred to hold at favourable rates, cannot be compelled to show similar favour to other cultivators who may be equally near in relationship to him. Dabee Singh v. Punchum Singh, 3 Agra Rep., 203.

Where the sale was in execution of decree, and it was proved by custom that the zemindar's right extended to one-fourth of the sale proceeds in cases of involuntary sale,—Held that the zemindar has a right to recover the fourth share of the proceeds of sale from the judgment-creditor who in truth reserved the sale price. The zemindar's right attaches to sale proceeds, and is a prior charge upon the proceeds. Byj Nath Pershad and others v. Mahomed Fuzl Hossein and others, 3 Agra Rep., 204.

A zemindar has a right in the trees grown on the land by the tenant; and although the tenant has a right to enjoy all the benefits of the growing timber during his occupancy, he has no power to cut the trees down, and convert the timber to his own use. The zemindar may sue to have his title in the growing trees declared. Sheikh Abdool Rohoman v. Dataram Bashee, W. R., 1864, 367.

A zemindar had no power before the Permanent Settlement to grant a rent-free tenure, or a tenure at a less rent than the share of the produce payable to Government for revenue; nor had he power to grant jagheers. Rajah Nilmoney Singh v. The Government and others, 6 W. R., 121.

A zemindar is quite competent to grant a tenancy to one person over the head of another, provided he does not thereby interfere with the previously acquired legal rights of that other. Mohun Chunder Dutt v. Fukeer Chand Deb and others, 6 W. R., 122.

When money was borrowed to pay the revenue due from a zemindary, and paid to the Government on that account, the bond given by the vakeels and managers of the zemindary to the trustee for the lenders in the English form, for the purpose of enabling them to enforce the personal engagements of the vakeels and managers in the Supreme Court, was held not to deprive the lenders of their right, under the law prevailing among the natives in matters of contract, to sue the zemindar in the Courts of the mofussil.

Held also that the laws of 1781 and 1787 were repealed by the laws of 1796 when this action was brought, and there was nothing in those two former Regulations which made it illegal for the zemindar to contract a debt, or for any other native to take an obligation from a zemindar, without the consent of the officers of revenue; but that such an obligation, if founded on a valuable consideration, would be equally binding upon the conscience of the zemindar, and the demand and the payment would be equally legal as if such consent had been obtained and registered, though no Court of Justice might have jurisdiction to enforce the right. Gopee Mohun Thakoor v. Rajah Radhanath, 5 W. R., P. C., 72.

The office of a bulahar is an office held only during the zemindar's pleasure, and the person holding such an office is removable by the zemindar. Sunnoo Khan v. Oodea, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 140.

A zemindar can only sue the holder of resumed lakhiraj land in possession for rent, but not oust him as a trespasser. Bhoopal Chunder Biswas v. Khan Mahomed Mollah, 6 W. R., 286.

A zemindar's estate is analogous to an estate tail, as it originally stood upon the statute de donis. Chintalapati China Shimbadriraj v. The Zemindar of Vizianagram, 2 Mad. Rep., 128.

The mere fact of a former putneedar allowing a former suit to go by default cannot prejudice the rights of the zemindar now in possession. Punchanun Mullick v. Hera Lull Seal, 1 W. R., 173.

When a zemindar dispossessed the purchaser of a jungleboory tenure, the title of whose vendor was acquired from the zemindar's naib, who had no power to grant such a pottah,—Held that the receipt of rent by the zemindar from the plaintiff and his vendor did not amount to a ratification of the plaintiff's right to hold under the pottah transferred to him by the vendor. A zemindar is not bound to recognize tenures not created by himself, or by any authorized agent on his part. Bissumbhur Poorkaet v. Bhuggobutty Churn Poorkaet, W. R., 1864, 292.

There is no restriction upon zemindars in respect of their power to grant pottahs and leases on any terms they please. Kalla Chand Talee v. Shamasoonderree Dabee Chowdhrain, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 130.

Semble,—Where a zemindar lets his estate in farm for a term of years, and so delegates the whole of his rights, privileges, and immunities to another person, he becomes himself bound by an adverse decision under Act IV of 1840, to which the farmer was a party. Lekhraj Roy v. The Court of Wards, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 395.

The zemindar or owner is bound by the dispossession suffered by his izardar. Brindabun Chunder Sircar Chowdry v. Bhoopal Chunder Biswas, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 377.

The illegitimate son of a zemindar of the Sudra caste is entitled to maintenance, and the maintenance is a charge upon the revenues of the zemindary. Coomara Vettapa Náikar, by his guardian, Moottoosawmy Naikar v. Venkatismara Vettia, 5 Mad. Rep., 405.

A suit was brought for maintenance by the stepmother and step-sister of a zemindar to be paid out of the income of the zemindary. The defendant contended that a partition having taken place of all the partible property of the family, and shares having been allotted to the defendant's stepbrothers, the sons and brothers of the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs' claim to maintenance was limited to the property of the defendant's brothers, and the plaintiffs had no claim to maintenance against the defendant. Held that the defendant was liable to pay and contribute to the maintenance of the plaintiffs, not only out of the partible property which he had obtained upon the partition, but also out of the income of the zemindary. Sivananauja Perumal Sethuroyer, zemindar of Oorcand and another v. Meenakshi Ammal and others, 5 Mad. Rep., 377.

The rule of impartibility applicable to zemindaries does not extend to personal property of a zemindar left at his death, and such property is divisible amongst his sons after his death.

Clause 13, Section 1 of the Limitation Act considered. Sri Sri Sri Rajah Rajeswara Gujapatty Naraina Deo Maharajulungaree v. Sri Sri Sri Virapratapah Rudragujaputty Naraina Deo Maharajalungaree, 5 Mad. Rep., 31.

It is contrary to the usage of the country for a putneedar to pay his rents by monthly kists, without a special agreement for that purpose. Jaykissen Mookerjee v. Janka Nauth Mookerjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 471.

A zemindar and putneedars being bound together by the terms of a written contract, the zemindar can only sue for rent on the terms of that contract, but not for rent for the use and occupation of his land. R. Watson and Co. v. Tarinee Churn Gangooley, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 494.

22.—Putnee Tenures.

Held by Kemp, J., that where, as in this case, four suits are brought with the common object of setting aside the sale of a putnee talook by four joint tenants, two of whom are not estopped under Section 7, Act VIII of 1859, this Court cannot in equity declare the sale to be good or bad in part, but must decide as to whether the sale is to stand or fall for the whole talook.

Per Ainslie, J.—But if one of the joint tenants in a former suit claimed a 2-anna instead of a 4-anna share, she cannot now be allowed to supplement her claim or take interests in the putnee which she could not have enforced independently of the sale.

Per Kemp, J.—On the death of a registered putneedar, a zemindar is not bound to recognize any one as his tenant without registration in his sheristah; nor is he prevented from putting in a sezawal to collect the rents until a declaration of the rights of the deceased putneedar's heirs.

A tender to stay a sale under Regulation VIII, 1819, must be of the whole of the zemindar's demand and without any condition as to its being kept in deposit by the Collector.

Per Ainslie, J.—It can only be on the ground that a sale is carried out in respect of arrears not really due that fraud and collusion can be imputed. Ram Churn Bundopadhya v. Sri Dropo Moyee Dassee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 123.

A putneedar is not bound to split up a tenure and to record separately the jumma payable by the holder of a share. Instead, also, of the latter bringing a suit in the first instance to compel the putneedar to register his share he should have made an application for registration to the putneedar under Section 27, Act X of 1859. Bhooputta Roy v. Umbica Churn Banerjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 169.

The "defendant talookdars" mentioned in Regulation VIII of 1793 are actual proprietors, not merely talookdars whose talooks are held under documents granted by proprietors which do not transfer property in the soil. Rajah Suttyanund Ghosaul v. Huro Kishore Dutt, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 474.

A putneedar deriving his title from and claiming under the zemindar, whose right to resume is lost, cannot, by reason of his being an auction-purchaser, revive a right which the zemindar is no longer himself entitled to exercise. Niranjun Acharjee v. Kuralee Churn Banerjee, 1 W. R., 197.

The holders of a talookee pottah from the zemindar are not bound to give kubuleuts to the putneedar. Munsoor Ahmed v. Azizooddeen, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 129.

The defendants, after making over by written agreement a share of an estate to A., forcibly retained possession of it. Held that A., though he never had possession of the property, might have sued to obtain possession of it, and that the plaintiff, as putneedar of A.'s son, can now sue to recover it. Brojo Lall Singh v. Bullubh Singh, 1 W. R., 216.

A putneedar is presumably entitled to exercise all the rights of ownership with respect to the land which the zemindar himself might, but for the putnee, have exercised. Uyaram Mundul v. Gyaram Naik, Marsh., 28.

The provision in a pottah that if any item is laid upon the zemindar over and above the sudder jumma, the putneedar shall bear a rateable proportion of it, held not to include the charges connected with the zemindaree dâk. Rohinee Kant Roy v. Tripoora Soondery Dossia, 8 W. R., 45.

A putneedar cannot question a transfer made and recognized by the zemindar before the creation of his putnee. Chunder Coomar Roy and another v. Pearee Lall Banerjee and another, 6 W. R., 190.

A putneedar is not liable to make good the dur-putneedar's payments to the zemindar, insufficient as they were to stop the sale of the putnee. Such payments must be made in Court. Mirza Mahomed Hossein Ali v. Sheikh Bukaoollah and others, 6 W. R., 84.

Where the terms of a putnee lease did not make the putneedar liable for the maintenance of the zemindary dâks, it was held that the putneedar was not liable for a tax which was imposed on the zemindar by Act VIII of 1862 (B. C.). Rakhal Doss Mookerjee v. Ranee Surno Moyee, 6 W. R., 100.

A putnee talook cannot be divided except by an act of the zemindar, or by an act recognized by him. A putneedar may generally transfer his tenure without the consent of his zemindar, but he can only do so in solido, and the transfer of a portion in no way affects the existence of the putnee in its entirety or the rights of the zemindar. Jadu Nath Sahawa v. Jadub Chunder Thakoor, 11 W. R., 294.

The payment of revenue into the Collectorate by a putneedar to save the estate from sale is equivalent to payment of the putnee rents to the zemindar. The fact that the zemindar had himself paid money into the Collectorate which he intended as revenue, but which by mistake was credited to a deposit account, and for which he took a receipt showing that the money was received as a deposit, and not as a payment of revenue, does not render the putneedar liable. Jotender Mohun Tagore v. Mussamut Kishen Monee Dabee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 11.

A purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree of one of several estates let in one putnee is not bound by any agreement between the putneedar and other zemindars regarding their shares of the entire putnee rent. Nor can he claim from the putneedar as his own share of the putnee rent a sum bearing the same proportion to the whole putnee rent as the sudder jumma bears to the sudder jumma of all the estates let out in putnee. In order to obtain redress in such a case, either the putneedar or one or all of the zemindars may have their fixed putnee rent properly apportioned among the several zemindars by a civil suit in which all the zemindars should be parties. Poresh Nath Roy v. Bishroop Dutt, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 16.

One proprietor having paid his own and his defaulting co-proprietor's share of the Government revenue to save the estate from sale,—Held that the former could recover from the latter his share of the Government revenue, but that he could not recover it from the latter's putneedar, who was entitled to all the profits of the putnee after payment of rent to his lessor; and that even if the putneedar had not paid rent to the lessor, that was a question between him and his lessor only. Bykant Nath Acharjee v. Gooroo Churn Bose and others, 7 W. R., 427.

By permitting a putneedar to take a quantity of land in addition to what is already held by him in putnee, and by receiving rents from him for such additional land for a series of years, a proprietor cannot, in the absence of any kubulcut from the putneedar or verbal agreement giving him the extra land in perpetual lease, be held to be debarred from resuming possession. Chunder Madhub Ghose v. Womesh Chunder Banerjee, 12 W. R., 188.

The Government purchased the zemindaree rights in a pergunnah, under Regulation XXI of 1822, at a sale for arrears of Government revenue, and re-settled one of the talooks in the pergunnah, which talook had been created subsequent to the Decennial Settlement, with the plaintiffs as talookdars. Subsequently and after the expiration of the terms for which they had re-settled with the plaintiffs the Government sold their zemindaree rights to the defendant, who ejected the plaintiff. Plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant in the Collector's Court under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859.

Held that the suit was properly brought under Act X of 1859. Held, further, that it was the intention of Government to retain talookdars in possession of their lands during the subsistence of their tenures subject to the condition of having their rents enhanced according to the pergunnah rates; and as in this case the proceedings which were taken by the Government showed that they did not cancel the plaintiff's tenure, the defendant who purchased from the Government could not eject the plaintiffs who were entitled to retain possession subject to a liability to enhancement. Under the Sale Law as it existed before 1822 a talookdar could not be dispossessed at the will of the purchaser; he was at most liable to pay the full pergunnah rate, and could only be ejected after refusal to pay the enhanced rate; but under Regulation 11 of 1822 dependent talooks created subsequent to the Decennial Settlement were liable to be wholly avoided and annulled at the option of the purchaser at a sale for arrears of Government revenue, unless they fell within the class contemplated by the 32nd Section of that Regulation. Where an auction-purchaser, under Regulation XI of 1822, intends to cancel a talookdaree tenure (a power which he might or might not exercise) he must take some clear step to declare the avoidance or cancellation of the tenure. Khajah Assanoollah v. Obhoy Churn Roy, 13 S. W. R., P. C., 24.

A zemindar who gives his estate in putnee lease has still such an interest in the property as entitles him to challenge the right of another who asserts that he holds it adversely to the zemindar on a lakheraj title. Okhoy Ram Janah v. Syud Mahomed Hossein, W. R., 1864, 213.

When consideration-money has been paid for a putnee lease, with a view to khas possession, and such possession is not obtained, the proper course is to repudiate the lease and bring an action immediately. Mokoond Chunder Roy v. Prankissen Paul Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, 287.

If a party leases an estate in putnee, reserving to himself the right of re-entry on condition of his wishing to hold the property khas, he cannot sue to recover possession for the purpose of leasing it to a third party. Rughoonath Coondoo v. Hurish Chunder Roy, W. R., 1864, 326.

Where the purchaser of a putnee talook sues to obtain registry of his name in the zemindar's books, a third party who claims to derive his title from the purchaser's vendor has no right on the ground of such failure to treat the purchaser as his tenant. Ram Narain Doss v. James Tweedie, 12 W. R., 161.

A putnee sale under Regulation VIII of 1819 is invalid if there was no arrear of rent at the date of sale, whether notice of the fact had been given to the Collector or not at the time of the sale. Shuroop Chundra Bhoomeek and others v. Rajah Pertaub Chundra Singh and others, 7 W. R., 218.

It is doubtful whether it is competent to the manager of endowed property to grant a putnee thereof. Motee Doss v. Modhoosoodun Chowdhry, 1 W. R., 4.

The sale of a putnee dissolves the relationship of landlord and tenant between the zemindar and the putneedar. Broonath Singh Roy v. Sreemutty Bhugobutty Dassee, 1 W. R., 133.

A putnee may be set aside as invalid, and made in fraud of creditors, notwithstanding the acquiescence of subsequent mortgagees. Jotendro Mohun Tagore v. Brojo Soondery Debee, 1 W. R., 362.

When a bonus is paid for a putnee talook not in existence there is an entire failure of consideration, and the person paying the bonus is entitled to a refund of it. The principle of caveat emptor does not apply to such a case. Kristo Lall Moitro v. Nobbo Coomar Roy, 5 W. R., 232.

A putnee had been sold for arrears of rent, and purchased in the name of C. D. Afterwards A. B., the zemindar, treated C. D. as his tenant, and petitioned, under Regulation VIII of 1819, to sell the putnee for arrears of rent which had become due after the sale which he alleged to be due to him from C. D. The rent was paid, and the putnee was not sold. A. B. then sued C. D., E. F. and his wife, G. H., jointly in the Collector's Court for subsequent arrears, alleging that the estate was purchased by E. F. and G. H. in the name of C. D. benamee for them.

Held that the mere fact of A. B. having treated C. D. as his tenant when he petitioned under Regulation VIII of 1819 did not estop him from now proceeding against E. F. and G. H.

Held also by the majority of the Court that the Collector had not jurisdiction to try the question whether E. F. alone was interested in the putnee, or how otherwise. (Per Kemp and Macpherson, JJ.—The question did not arise in the case.) Prosunno Coomar Paul Chowdhry and others v. Koylas Chunder Paul Chowdhry, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 327; 8 W. R., 428.

A present proprietor is not bound by a former proprietor's arrangement to allow the putneedar to pay his putnee rent direct to the Collector. Muddun Mohun Shaha v. Sookomoyee Chowdhrain, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 109.

Where a putnee tenure is sold under a decree against the tenant he is not liable for any rent which may accrue afterwards, notwithstanding the transfer may not be registered. Gopeekisto Gosamee and others v. Ram Comol Misry, Marsh., 212.

Where a tenant held lands in six villages under a putneedar at an admitted rent, and the putneedar subsequently granted durputnees to two different parties of two and four of the said villages respectively; the tenant having admitted a certain sum to be the rent payable in respect of the lands situated in the two villages,—Held, the durputneedar of the other four villages could sue the tenant for the rent payable in respect of the lands situated in the four villages comprised in his durputnee, without joining as co-plaintiff in the action the durputneedar of the two villages, and the rent payable to the durputneedar of the four villages was properly estimated as the difference between the admitted rent of the land in all six villages and the admitted rent of the land situated in the two villages. Bruja Lal Roy v. Sayamu Churan Bhutt, 6 B. L. R., 523.

23.—DUR-PUTNEEDAR.

The dur-putneedar leased the land in dispute to a tenant, who sub-let it to another, who again sub-let it. Each of these tenants reserved to himself the right of receiving rent from his own tenant, and of paying rent to his lessor. The dur-putneedar was cognizant of the several transfers, and continued to receive rent from her original tenant. She could not therefore plead that the transfers were made without her sanction, and that the lease to her tenant and the subordinate leases were cancelled. The last of the sub-lessees deserted the land. Held that his desertion could not deprive the other sub-lessees of their rights, or entitle the dur-putneedar to re-enter into possession of the land. Greesh Chunder Lahoory v. Ram Golam Roy, 12 W. R., 175.

A registered dur-putneedar is liable for the rent to the putneedar, though the former has sold his tenure to another person not acknowledged by the latter. A payment made by the vendee of the dur-putneedar (who has not obtained registration) to save the putnee from sale is a voluntary payment, and the registered dur-putneedar cannot seek to deduct the amount from the rent due by him. Lukheenarain Mitter v. Seetanath Ghose and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 317; 6 W. R., Act X R., 8.

Mesne profits cannot be decreed against a dur-putneedar, nor can rent be decreed in a suit for ejectment. Digbioy Chunder Neogey v. Jadub Churn Thakoor, 8 W. R., 181.

A dur-putneedar cannot be ousted so long as he pays his dur-putnee rents, except by regular course of law. Jadubchurn Thakoor v. Bholanath Singh Roy, 5 W. R., Mis., 51.

A dur-putnee lease granted upon the payment of a bonus contained a condition that if the annual rent remained for a longer period than one month in arrear, the lessor should have a right of re-entry. The lessor upon default in payment of rent, without availing himself of the forfeiture, instituted a summary suit for the arrears of rent; and upon an award therein the lands were sold for such arrears. Held that the purchaser, who bought the putnee tenure, without notice of the condition for forfeiture, was not subject to that condition. Deendyal Paramanick v. Juggeshur Roy and another, Marsh., 252.

Where a putnee is found to be benamee, a bonâ fide dur-putnee does not necessarily lapse. Dwarkanath Misser v. Sree Gopal Paul Chowdhry, 5 W. R., 240.

A putnee estate was the inheritance of five brothers, two of whom appropriated the whole of it. Held that the holder under a kaimi pottah from the dur-putneedar of the three ousted brothers could sue to obtain possession of his share of the estate. Tara Soondery Debia v. Shama Soondery Debia, 4 W. R., 58.

The status of a dur-putneedar does not depend upon registration or the consent of the zemindar. Khetter Paul Singh v. Luckee Narain Mitter, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 125.

24.—BHAGDAR.

In a suit brought by a bhagdari, or shareholder in a bhagdar village, to recover possession of a gabhan, or building-site, and a vada, or homestead, appurtenant to his bhag, from a stranger who had purchased at an auction sale a building created on the gabhan by a third person with the bhagdan's consent,—Held (reversing the decision of the District Court) that the purchaser of the building had only acquired a right to remove the building materials, and that he had no right, by reason of his having purchased the building, to continue, without the bhagdar's consent, in possession of the gabhan and vada, which by the Bhagdari Act could not be alienated apart or separately from the bhag, or some recognized subdivision thereof. Pranjivan Gavan v. Jaiskankar Bhagvan, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 46.

The custom in the Broach District of male first cousins succeeding to property held on the bhagdari tenure in preference to daughters or sisters, upheld in a case in which the bhagdars were Mahometans. Bai Khedu v. Dásu Lall et al., 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 123.

25.—MIRASIDAR.

Plaintiff, claiming as sole mírásídar of a village, sued the defendants as sukavasi tenants of cultivated land within the village for arrears of rent from 1856. Defendants denied plaintiff's title. The Civil Judge (reversing the decree of the Moonsiff) dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff had not proved the collection of the perquisites claimed within twelve years before the institution of the suit.

Held (reversing the decree of the Civil Judge) that if the defendants were sukavasi ryots and the plaintiff was sole mirasidar, and in that right entitled to certain annual dues for all lands cultivated by such ryots immediately on their being brought under cultivation, plaintiff's suit was not barred, except as to rent payable more than three years before suit. Kristama Chárvar v. Toppai Gaundan, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 381.

The mirasidar is the real proprietor of mirasi land, but ryots may be entitled to the perpetual occupancy of mirasi land, subject to the payment of the mirasidar's share. Such tenure, however, generally depends on long-established usage, and must be proved by satisfactory evidence. Alaiya Tirochittamballa v. Saminada Pillai and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 264.

Regulation V of 1822 is inapplicable to land held under a mirasidar or any ordinary proprietor. It applies only to land subject to a permanent assessment and held from Government by a zemindar under a permanent sunnud or by a temporary occupant. Enamandoram Venkayya v. Venkatanarayana Reddi and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 75.

A custom that some only of the mirasidars of a village should bind the co-owners of the village lands is valid. Anandayyan and others v. Devarájayyan and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 17.

The plaintiffs, mirasidars of a village, held on pungavaly tenure, sued their co-mirasidars, the owners of the remaining shares and others, occupants of land in the village, for a partition of the common lands of the village and an allotment to the plaintiffs of specific parts thereof proportionate to the shares which they represent.

In a former suit, to which all the present mirasidars were parties, either actually or as privies to those through whom they claim, it was decided that no right existed in any individual shareholder of the village to have allowed to him a distinct portion of the common lands in proportion to his share or shares. Held that the former decree declaring the impartibility of the common land of the village was conclusive in the present suit between the present shareholders upon the same question of right.

Semble,—The right to enforce a partition or allotment of the common lands of mirasi villages held in pungavaly tenure probably does exist. Sitaramaiyar v. Alagiry Jyer and 370 others, 4 Mad. Rep., 285.

The plaintiffs sued, as the mirasidars of a village, to establish their right to the grant of a pottah of certain waste land of the village, which had been granted to some of the defendants. The Collector, who was made a defendant, stated that the Hookumnamah Rules of the district directed that land should be given to mirasidars on their tendering sufficient security, and that the plaintiffs on previous occasions had received lands for which offers had been made by others in consideration of the plaintiffs' preferential right, but that they had failed to cultivate the lands or pay the assessment in breach of their agreements. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to the relief sought for. Collector of Madras v. Ramanuga Chariyar; Kullappa Naik v. Ramanuga Chariyar, 4 Mad. Rep., 429.

Where a mirasidar left his miras in 1850 without executing a razinamah resigning it, and the miras lay waste until 1855, when the defendant took it up and cultivated it, it was held that the cause of action of the mirasidar arose in 1855, when the miras was taken up by the defendant. Lakshuman Ramji v. Ramlal Valad Mahipata, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 66.

Plaintiff brought a suit to recover land which had been engaged by her husband, the kurnum of a village, but which on his death had been given to the defendant, with the office of kurnum. The land had been originally attached to the office, but the plaintiff's husband for a long time before his death was enjoying the land as his private property.

Held that the miras of the land continued to be attached to the office, notwithstanding that it may have been for some time enjoyed as private property; that the property, being annexed to the office, was indivisible, and as the Collector, in ejecting the plaintiff, appropriated the land to the office by putting it in the possession of the kurnum whom he appointed in place of the plaintiff's husband, the plaintiff had no right to recover. Seshaiya v. Garuamma, 4 Mad. Rep., 336.

Where a written instrument purported to create the relation of landlord and tenant for five years, the plaintiff's (lessor's) tenure being that of a mirasidar, that is, an hereditary tenancy under Government determinable on default in payment of the proportion of the Mothee Faisal assessment, payable for the land,—Held that the instrument did operate to create the relation of landlord and tenant, notwithstanding that the assessment was not permanently fixed. Held, also, that the written instrument was a lease, and was not liable to be stamped, by virtue of the exemption of Article 42, Schedule A, of Act X of 1862. Saminathaiyan v. Saminathaiyan, 4 Mad. Rep., 153.

26.—MAAFEEDAR.

An ex-maâfeedar, with whom a sub-settlement has been made of the resumed maâfee, is presumably not a hereditary cultivator, but his position is that of a proprietor subject to payment of Government revenue. Kumeed-ool-lah Khan v. Pran Sookh and others, 3 Agra Rep., 280.

A plot of maâfee land being resumed was settled with the ex-maâfeedar who engaged for the Government revenue for the term of settlement. The settlement with the ex-maâfeedars was made under Section 5, Regulation XIII of 1825; but under paragraph 161, Circular Order, Sudder Board of Revenue, under the rule laid down, Section 5, Regulation XXXI of 1803, which recognized them to be in possession as owners. Held that the mere fact of the last settlement having expired would not deprive them of the right of their being assessed with revenue as proprietors of maâfee land; but where there has been a grant of soil, and possession taken and long continued thereunder, the ownership thereof vests in the grantee, although the grant as to exemption from payment of revenue may be invalid and subject to assessment. Toolsee Ram and others v. Narain Singh and others, 3 Agra Rep., 265.

Held that the plaintiffs, being mere maâfeedars of a moiety of the right of Government, had no right to plant trees themselves or to prevent the zemindars from planting the trees, as they had no right to the land. Azhuroodeen and others v. Mohur Singh and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 165.

Where a mortgagee of a maâfee land was no party to resumption proceedings under Act X of 1859, Section 28, and the land was resumed with the mortgagor's consent,—Held the mortgagee or transferee from him is entitled to question the bonâfide character of the resumption proceedings. Sheikh Toobur v. Ooman Shunker, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 117.

Held that an ex-maâfeedar, the land after resumption being settled with him as proprietor on payment of the fixed Government demand through the lumberdar, cannot be treated as an ordinary cultivator, and served with notice of enhancement by the latter, who was only to get a certain percentage for collection, and not more. Syud Wazeer Ali v. Patrick Dunne, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 15.

A partition was made by the zemindars of their respective holdings and of their joint liability for the Government revenue, and though this partition was not carried out by the Revenue Court, but was acted upon by the zemindars, and the assignee of Government revenue also consented to such partition by accepting revenue from individual zemindars, and by holding them to be individually responsible for the amount due in respect of their several holdings,—Held that there was nothing to prevent the maâfeedar, who is the assignee of Government revenue, from assenting to any arrangement which the zemindars may make for the conversion of their joint into separate liability. Ranee Sarnomoy v. Ramchurn Singh and others, 3 Agra Rep., 251.

27.—PUTTEEDARS AND LUMBERDARS.

Held that a suit to recover lumberdaree right, or 10 per cent. allowance provided for in the administration paper, being other than a commission on actual collection, is not cognizable by the Revenue Court, under Act XIV of 1863, but by the Civil Court. Khoobee v. Akbar and others, 3 Agra Rep., 322.

Ordinarily a lumberdar in these provinces would collect the rent in putteedaree estates, but Section 7, Act XIV of 1863, recognizes a different state of things, where collections are made, not by the lumberdar, but by the several putteedars, who collect severally their several shares of rent. Bholonath v. Bisheshur Tewaree, 3 Agra Rep., 165.

Where profits received by a lumberdar are not taken by him as lumberdar, but in his individual character under a supposed mortgage title, such profits are not recoverable by a suit for profits in the Revenue Court. Khoob Singh v. Bulwant Singh and others, 3 Agra Rep., 302.

Held that a lumberdar is not liable for the rent which he without any wilful default on his part has never received, if he shows that he has done his duty in endeavouring to collect the same. Enayet Hossein and others v. Gholam Ally, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 276.

Held that a lumberdar is ordinarily bound to account for rents not collected if he does not exercise his power of such distraint with due diligence. Sees Ram v. Chait Ram, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 266.

Where a resumed maâfee estate comprising three puttees in an adaee mehal was assessed with a lump sum of Government revenue payable through the lumberdars of the adaee mehal, who were empowered to proceed summarily against the sharers of the puttees in case of default, and to bring the share of the defaulter to public sale, and were held liable to Government for payment of the revenue assessed on the three puttees, and in case of default their rights in the mehal, not of the sharers of the defaulting puttees, were liable to sale for satisfaction of Government demand on those puttees,—Held that the estate was not a putteedaree estate as contemplated by Section 2, Act I of 1841, and the right of pre-emption given to co-sharers of the puttee by that enactment could not attach to it. To constitute a putteedaree estate as contemplated by the 2nd Section of the Act it is necessary not only that it should come within the express terms of that section, but also that it should be liable to the same incidents which attach to the estates described in the section by the other provisions of the same Act. Salig Ram v. Pursidh Ram, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 186.

Where a maâfee land is, after resumption and assessment, left in the possession of the ex-maâfeedars, the persons entitled to collection or profits are, in the absence of any stipulation to the contrary, the ex-maâfeedars, and not the lumberdar of the village. Dal Chund v. Mussamut Seeta Koonwar and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 152.

A lumberdar is not chargeable in the Revenue Court in respect of profits payable at a time prior to his appointment, although he succeeded his father in the office. His liability in such a case, if any exists, arises not by reason of his official character, but as one of his father's heirs and representing his estate, and the suit must be brought in the Civil and not in the Revenue Court. Mata Deen v. Chunder Deen, 2 N. W. R., 54.

Construction of Clause 2, Section 1, of Act XIV of 1863.

Suits by co-sharers against co-sharers, who are not lumberdars, for a share of the profits, are cognizable in the Revenue Courts.

Such suits may also be brought against co-sharers who, without authority, have made collections in excess of their proper shares.

Suits for the profits of a maâfee, as well as of a khalsa estate, are so cognizable.

A lumberdar can maintain a suit in the Revenue Courts for his lumberdaree allowance, as well as for his ordinary profits as a co-sharer. Hur Narain v. Shiam Soonder, 1 N. W. R., Par. 13, p. 211.

The putteedars of a ryotwari village have not such a common interest, as putteedars, in all their holdings that they can jointly sue for the recovery of them. If in any case such a right exist, it must be established by evidence. Mayandy Tévan v. Nárá-naiyan, 4 Mad. Rep., 108.

28.—Malikana.

The right to malikana is a proprietary right constituting an interest in land, and not the same as rents; and the Law of Limitation applying to it is Clause 12, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859. Heranund Shoo v. Mussamut Ozeerun and others, 9 W. R., 102.

Old maliks, when allowed to receive malikana, instead of a settlement being made with them, are not entitled to retain possession. Sheikh Zahoor Huq v. Sheikh Morad Ali, 1 W. R., 82.

Held (by Glover, J.) that malikana is rent under Regulation VIII of 1793; that a cause of action for recovery of arrears of malikana is a recurring cause of action; and that failure to recover arrears for more than twelve years would not bar the right to recover for such period as has not been barred by the Statute—Clause 16, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859—that is, for a period of six years. Held (by Kemp, J.) that the suit was barred, as no malikana had been paid for more than twelve years. Bhuli Singh v. Mussamut Nehum Bhu, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 102; S. C., 12 W. R., 498.

A suit for a malikana allowance concerns the proprietary right in land. A dispute concerning it may be regarded in the same light for the purposes of jurisdiction as a dispute concerning the proprietary right itself. A suit of this special description is not one for a Small Cause Court. Mahomed Karamu-koollah v. Abdool Majeed, 1 N. W. R., Par. 12, p. 205.

29.—Under-Tenures.

Under-tenures fall with the original tenure of the defaulter, and are liable to enhancement by the purchaser of the tenure sold for arrears of rent. Tarucknath Poramanick v. R. McAllister, 6 W. R., Act X R., 34.

Where a party purchases another's zemindary rights in an estate in which that other had created an under-tenure with a fixed rent, the circumstance that payment of rent on account of such tenure was suspended while the zemindary was in the hands of the former proprietor does not affect the rights of his successor, or the fixity of the rent. Gudadhur Lall v. Ram Jhan Gundaree, 10 W. R., 212.

Shareholders with a tenant are primarily liable with him to the zemindar for the rent of the tenure, unless the zemindar comes to a separate agreement with them for the payment of their share. Where parties hold under or through the tenant the zemindar is not bound to recognize their holding as a separate holding; and his taking the rent of the whole tenure or a part of it from their hands, does not of itself amount to such a recognition as is contemplated in Section 16, Act VIII of 1865 of the Bengal Code. Sree Nath Chuckerbutty v. Sreemonto Lusker and others, 10 W. R., 467.

A co-sharer in an under-tenure cannot claim separate payment of his share of the rent without the written consent of the zemindar; and if the zemindar refuses to make a division of the property application should be made to the Collector under Section 27, Act X of 1859. Issur Chunder Ghosal v. Mooktoram Panda, 9 W. R., 606.

Under Section 105, Act X of 1859, an under-tenure is liable to sale in execution of a decree for arrears of rent for eleven years. Any party wishing to stay the sale, on the ground of his being the proprietor of the under-tenure, must comply with the provisions of Section 106. Doorga Pershad Bose v. Sreekisto Moonshee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 48.

Under Section 105, Act X of 1859, an under-tenure may be sold in execution of a decree, provided there be an arrear of rent adjudged. Maharajah Suttees Chunder Roy Bahadoor v. Modhoosoodun Paul Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 91.

Sales of under-tenures under Act VIII of 1835, for arrears of rent, are not required to be according to the procedure laid down in Regulation VII of 1799, but according to the procedure prescribed by Section 2 of Act VIII of 1835. Mussamut Monoshee v. Abdool Hossein and others, 7 W. R., 297.

The law gives an increment to a tenant or under-tenant in possession, without reference to the nature of his title. Narain Doss Bepary v. Soobul Bepary, 1 W. R., 113.

The purchaser of a transferable under-tenure, in execution of a decree for rent, may void any lease or holding within the tenure not specially protected by law, and consequently may sue for a kubuleut at rates paid for similar lands in the neighbourhood. Srishteedhur Mundul v. Gobind Surnokar, 6 W. R., Act X R., 15.

Act X of 1858 gave Government the power as to landed property acquired by confiscation thereunder (if it thought fit to exercise it) of ejecting ryots. As to under-tenures the words are of still stronger import. But it must be held rather to confer a power to cancel than absolutely and without act done to annul the tenures. Doorga Pershad v. Zorawur, 2 N. W. R., 75.

The Legislature did not intend to include in the term "under-tenures," in Section 7 of Act X of 1858, the holdings of ryots, but employed that term in the sense in which it is commonly used in this part of India, as applying to tenures of a proprietary character inferior to the zemindary, but superior to the khast karee tenure. Consequently such holdings were by that Act made voidable but not absolutely void. The power of avoiding such holdings expired with the Act. Syud Basit Ali v. Man Singh, 2 N. W. R., 140.

30.—Transferable Tenures.

According to the custom of the Hooghly district, a tenure granted for building purposes is transferable. Baneymadhub Banerjee v. Joy Kissen Mookerjee, 12 W. R., 496.

It is necessary that a tenure should be mokurruree in order to be transferable. Huromohun Mookerjee v. Ranee Lalunmonee Dassee, 1 W. R., 5.

The transferable nature of a tenure is a question to be decided in each case by reference to local custom only, and not by the evidence of a few antagonistic witnesses. Joykishen Mookerjee v. Rajkissen Mookerjee, 1 W. R., 153.

A voluntary abandonment of a permanent and transferable tenure for a long period, without any inevitable force, merger, or other cause beyond the power of the holder, is tantamount to an express relinquishment. If a man so abandon his holding for years, neither he, nor any one under him, can reclaim it. Chundermonee Nya Bhoosun v. Sumbhoo Chunder Chuckerbutty, W. R., 1864, 70.

There is nothing unreasonable in the custom by which the tenure of a khoodkasht ryot, who has built a pucca house on his land, and has acquired a right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859, is transferable. Chunder Coomar Roy v. Kadermonee Dossee and another, 7 W. R., 247.

A custom as to the transferableness of khoodkasht jotes need not be absolutely invariable. Chunder Coomar Roy and others v. Peareelal Banerjee and another, 6 W. R., 190.

A yearly tenancy cannot be transferred without the lessor's consent, and the fact that the lessee has had enjoyment under the pottah for a very long series of years does not alter the character of the interest originally created by the pottah. Lalljee Sahoo and others v. Bhugwan Doss, 8 W. R., 337.

Where a tenure is transferred by a ryot without sanction of his landlord, and the latter nevertheless receives rent from the transferree, and gives him dakhilahs for the year in which he is in possession, the landlord cannot oust him afterwards under a decree for the rent of previous years. Abdool Kureem v. Munsoor Ali and others, 12 W. R., 396.

The transfer of a tenure not transferable by the custom of the country gives the zemindar no right to take actual possession so long as the rent is paid by the recorded tenant or his heirs, and not by a stranger. Joy Kishen Mookerjee v. Raj Kishen Mookerjee, 5 W. R., 147.

The transfer of an ordinary ryot's holding need not be registered on the books of the zemindar. Joykissen Mookerjee v. Doorga Naran Nag and others, 11 W. R., 348.

A zemindar has a perfect right to bring a tenure to sale for arrears of rent without regard to the rights of the new tenant, while he is yet unregistered. Nobeen Kishore Mookerjee v. Shib Pershad Pattuck, 9 W. R., 161.

If a ryot not having a transferable tenure quits possession, makes over his interests, and gives over the land to a third person, he may be treated as having abandoned all rights formerly possessed by him in the land. When a purchaser takes possession of a non-transferable tenure, and interposes himself between the zemindar and the ryots on the land, he thereby commits a wrong, and the zemindar may sue to declare that no interest is vested in such purchaser, or to restrain him from interfering with the collection of rent. Hurree Hur Mookerjee v. Jadunath Ghosh, 7 W. R., 114.

When a tenure is not transferable, and no transfer has been consented to or adopted by the zemindar, the zemindar is entitled to treat the incoming ryot as a trespasser, and to evict him even in the middle of the year. But when a tenure is transferable the mere absence of registration, or of acknowledgment of the zemindar's right by the ryot, will not make the ryot such a trespasser as to justify the zemindar in evicting him in the middle of the year. Hurro Mohun Mookerjee v. Chintamonee Roy, 2 W. R., Act X R., 19.

Quære,—Whether a transfer of a ryotwaree tenure can be effected without the consent of the zemindar or talookdar, as the case might be, the immediate successor in estate. Maharanee Shibessuree Dabee v. Mothoor Nauth Acharjee, 13 S. W. R., P. C., 18.

B. and C. and their father held lands for upwards of thirty-five years, and built houses on the same. B. and C. sold their tenures to D. and E. A., the zemindar, who had not objected to the building, now sued to eject D. and E. as trespassers. Evidence was given that the tenures were, by the custom of the country, transferable. Held A could not eject D. and E.

Per Peacock, C. J.—If one man grants a tenure to another for the purpose of living upon the land, that tenure, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, is assignable. Beni Madhab Banerjee v. Jai Krishna Mookerjee, 7 B. L. R., 152.

Although it is the general rule in these provinces that a tenant's holding is not transferable without the zemindar's consent, yet the exceptions are so far from rare that it is necessary in each case to come to a distinct finding on this point, and decree accordingly. Meer Hadayet Aly v. Baboo Lall Singh, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, p. 38.

The right of transfer of mourousee rights, although by no means commonly enjoyed by tenants in these provinces, is nevertheless in some places sanctioned by local usage.

Where a person has made such a transfer without authority, it should nevertheless be enquired into, whether or not the landlord has sanctioned such transfer by accepting the assignee as tenant, and receipt of rent. Musumat Kooerya v. Doorga Pershad, 2 N. W. R., 139.

The purchaser of a ryotee tenure is bound to communicate with the zemindar and obtain his consent to the transfer of the tenure; without this being done, a gomashta's receipts of rent are not binding on the zemindar. Bhojohuree Bunick v. Aku Golam Ali, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 97.

Where rent is recovered without objection by successive landlords from the transferee of an intermediate tenure from the date of transfer, such receipt acts as a full and complete acknowledgment by the proprietor that he accepts the new tenant in the place of the old one. W. O. Allender v. Dwarkanauth Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 320.

Where a ryot makes a transfer of a tenure which is not transferable, the landlord is entitled to look to him as the party liable for the rent, but is not entitled to khas possession. Suddye Purira v. Boistub Purira, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 261.

The person into whose hands a transferable tenure comes is bound to pay rent to the landlord, unless kept out of possession and enjoyment by the fault of the landlord, and the landlord's right to claim rent from his tenant does not depend upon the fact of possession by the tenant. Gobind Chunder Chunder v. Krist Kant Dutt, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 273.

31.—Registration of Tenures.

Registration in the Collector's books is not of itself a proof of title. Gobind Nath Sein and others v. Gobind Chundra Sein, 10 W. R., 393.

The registration of a transferable tenure in a Government khas khureedah mehal is as necessary as in the estate of any other zemindar; but where a tenure is transferable the mere absence of registration or of acknowledgment of the zemindar's right by the ryot will not make the ryot such a trespasser as to justify the zemindar in evicting him in the middle of the year. Hurromohun Mookerjee v. Chintamonee Roy, 3 W. R., Act X R., 19.

The registration of a talook, or of the sunnuds creating it, is not absolutely necessary to prove the creation of the talook before the Decennial Settlement. Wise and others v. Bhoobun Moyee Debia, 3 W. R., P. C., 5.

The order of a Deputy Collector, under Section 27, Act X of 1859, requiring the zemindar to register the transfer of a tenure, though not appealed from to the Judge, is nullified by the order of the Judge in the zemindar's suit for rent, in which the Judge held that the tenure was not transferable according to the custom of the country. Huro Mohun Mookerjee v. Ranee Lalun Monee, 5 W. R., Act X R., 42.

Held that the tenure being a ryotee tenure, registration in the talookdar's sherista was not necessary under Section 27, Act X of 1859, which applies to tenures intermediate between the zemindar and the Collector. Wooma Churn Sett v. Hurree Persad Misser and others, 10 W. R., 101.

Section 4, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), applies only to under-tenants and ryots of whose possession there can be no doubt. The transferee of a tenure not in possession, instead of depositing the rents in Court under this section, should take steps, under Section 27, Act X of 1859, to register his transfer in the sherista of the zemindar, and to apply to the Collector in case of the refusal of the zemindar to do so. Dulli Chand and others v. Meher Chand Sahoo and others, 8 W. R., 138.

The zemindar is not bound to register the transfer of right of occupancy under Section 27 of Act X of 1859. Mussamut Taramonee Dossee v. Birressur Moozoomdar, 1 W. R., 86.

Mere cognizance or supposed cognizance by the zemindar of the fact of a party having purchased a tenure is not sufficient to cure the defect of non-registration of such tenure in the zemindar's sherista. J. C. Sarkies v. Kali Coomar Roy, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 98.

No action will lie against a vendor alone to compel him to procure the transfer by the revenue authorities to the name of the vendee of the registration of the property sold. The Collector (the registering officer) must be made a party to the suit. Mamgamma v. Timmapayo, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 134.

A non-registered holder of a sub-talook cannot stop a sale under a decree if the amount of decree be not paid. He may stop the sale by paying the amount of the decree, and then bring a suit against his vendors to establish his right as sub-talookdar; and on doing so he may require the talookdar to register his purchase, and, if necessary, compel him to do so. Bitiyanund Paul v. Ram Doollub Buttobyal, 2 W. R., 282.

Non-registration in the zemindar's sherista does not invalidate the sale of a tenure. Bharut Roy v. Ganganarain Mohaputter, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 211.

The separate registry of the names of shares in the zemindar's sherista is not proof of separation of their shares. Gureeboollah Khan v. Kebull Lall Mitter, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 124.

A Collector in Chota Nagpore cannot be compelled to register the name of any one as proprietor of an estate. Lalla Bissen Pershad v. Collector of Hazareebaug, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 397.

A zemindar is bound to look only to his registered tenant; the equivalent of registration being presumed where he receives rents from his tenant in recognition of his tenancy. Dhunput Sing Roy v. Vellayet Ali, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 211.

Where an arrear of putnee rent is due, the zemindar in applying to the Collector to bring the property to sale need not recognize any one except the registered putneedar. Raghub Chunder Banerjee v. Brojonauth Koondoo Chowdry, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 489.

When arrears of rent become due a zemindar is not bound to look beyond his book for the party liable, except when he has recognized other persons as his tenants either by receipt of rent or in other ways. Where neither the Hindu widow who has succeeded by inheritance nor the reversioner chooses to pay the arrears of rent which have fallen due upon a tenure, it must, if sold for such arrears, pass to the purchaser by the sale. Anund Moyee Dassee v. Mohindro Narain Dass, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 264.

32.—Boundaries.

An adjudication of the boundaries by the revenue authorities under Act I of 1847 is not final and conclusive, but is, like any other judicial award made under Regulation VII of 1822, open to question by regular suit in the Civil Court within three years (Clause 6, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859). Sheikh Sujjad v. Syad Sahit Ali, 3 Agra Rep., 140.

Boundary disputes are not cognizable in a Revenue Court. Rughoonath Sahoy v. Boondir Mundir, 1 W. R., 36.

A decision in a boundary suit decides only the question of right to possession of the land, irrespective of the right to assess. Mahomed Ali Khan Chowdhry v. Jadub Chunder Chuckerbutty, W. R., 1864, 60.

In a boundary dispute, oral evidence is quite insufficient to establish either the fact of possession or of title. Goluck Chunder Bose v. Rajah Sreemurd Rajeshurree Biddiadhur Soondeah Nurrendur Bahadoor, W. R., 1864, 135.

Zemindars have no authority, without the sanction of Government, to alter the boundaries of their permanently-settled estates, and to transfer villages from one zemindary to another. Such an arrangement is of no binding effect, except between the parties who have made it. Ramchunder Banerjee v. Muddunmohun Tewaree, W. R., 1864, 355.

If the defendants in a boundary suit accepted in a former suit a particular map as correct, their acceptance is legal, though not conclusive, evidence against them in the boundary suit, and is tantamount to an admission, and stands upon a very different footing from the decree in the first suit. Gordon, Stuart, and Co. v. Beejoy Gobind Chowdhry, 8 W. R., 291.

Section 13, Regulation III of 1828, was intended to make provision for the immediate settlement of the limits of the Sunderbuns; hence it fixed peremptorily a period after which the demarcation of those limits, made by the Special Commissioner to that end appointed, should be final. No person can come in after that period (namely, three months from the dates of the Commissioner's proceeding fixing the boundary) pleading infancy or other ground for re-opening the question of boundary, since the geographical boundary line was necessarily to be one and the same for all the world. Even within the period of limitation allowed, no one could be heard to object to the line, unless he declared and offered proof that at the time of the survey he was in the occupation of a definite quantity of land cleared and under cultivation within the line. After the line had once become final, no party could be heard to say that even cultivated lands within it were part of his settled zemindary. Rajah Baradakont Roy v. The Commissioner of the Sunderbuns, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 33.

In a case where boundaries of land are disputed, an appeal from the mamlatdar lies to the Collector. A District Judge has no power to entertain such an appeal. Appeal referred to the Collector under Act XVI of 1838. Narayan Vayankatesh v. Dhundu Damodharetal, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., 167.

Held that the mere fact that the river forms the constant boundary between two districts cannot in the absence of any dhardhara custom affect the rights of riparian proprietors. Dhoolhin Hurpaul Koonweree v. Ubsuck Singh and others, 3 Agra Rep., A. C., 18.

The custom of dhardhara applies to lands thrown up or formed by fluvial action either in one year or in the course of a number of years. Whether it is equally applicable to chuckee formations or tracts of land severed by a sudden change in the course of a river, and yet preserving their identity of site and surface after the severance, must be determined by proof of the extent of the custom. Mussamut Ranee Katiyanee v. Sheikh Mahomed Shurf-ood-deen, 3 Agra Rep., 189.

In equity, if through the default of a tenant or a copy-holder, who is under an implied obligation to preserve the boundaries of separate estates which he holds, there arises a confusion of boundaries, the Court will interfere as against such tenant or copy-holder to ascertain and fix them.

In a case in which the boundaries of three talooks had been found to be unascertainable, it was decreed that they should be defined and fixed in such a manner that the produce of the total land in each talook should bear the same proportion to the jumma payable by such talook as the produce of the whole of the said lands bears to the total of the jummas payable on account of the three talooks. Khemamoyee, alias Khemessuree v. Shoshee Bhoosun Gangooly and another, 9 W. R., 95.

The mere fact of the revenue authorities defining and declaring the local boundaries of a district does not necessarily change the rights of property in land in that or any other district; nor does the right of property in land necessarily change with every alteration in a river or other natural feature of a locality. Hurendur Lall Shahoo v. Maharajah Rajender Purtab Sahee, 1 W. R., 260.

Suit concerning the boundary line between contiguous mehals. The land in dispute (which, with the mehals adjacent, originally formed part of a permanently-settled zemindary, consisted of revenue-paying mehals, and of mehals alleged to be lakheraj, all belonging to one proprietor) was so situated that it necessarily belonged either to Havelee, one of the latter, or to the contiguous rent-paying mehals. The Permanent Settlement did not define the boundary, nor was it fixed in subsequent resumption proceedings against Havelee, which ended in a temporary settlement of that mehal for twenty years. The ownership of Havelee having become severed from the ownership of the other mehals, the question of boundary arose, not as a question of revenue between the Government and a zemindar, but as one of title to land between the zemindars and proprietors of two contiguous and separate estates.

The appellant having failed to prove that no part of the disputed land was included in the respondent's settlement (some portion at least being shown to belong to Havelee), and also having failed to prove by independent evidence his own right to recover the land specified in the plaint,—Held that the suit should not have been determined upon that mere failure on his part to support the burden of proof cast upon him, because the judgment would be as final and conclusive between the parties as an adjudication on the merits would be, and its effect would be to give something to the respondent which on the evidence belonged to the appellant's mehals. The rights of bunkur (a right of cutting wood), phulkur (a right of gathering fruits), are rights indicative of a certain dominion over the soil. Rajah Leelanund Singh v. Maharajah Moheshur Singh, 3 W. R., P. C., 19.

Held that to make the acts of the head-men of a village in boundary disputes and other matters binding on the co-sharers it is not necessary that there should be specific authority by power of attorney or otherwise, or subsequent express or implicit assent or sanction in absence thereof. Requisite authority may be inferred from the facts of each case by showing that the head-men of the village have usually in similar disputes been permitted to act and represent for the other sharers.

Held also that agency in every case can only be created by the will of the principal, and his will may be manifested in writing or orally, or simply by placing another in a position so as to be understood according to ordinary rules and usages to represent and act for one who has placed him. Gungapershad and others v. Rampershad and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 31.

The finding of the Subordinate Judge that the plaintiff had been more than twelve years in possession as lakherajdar was held sufficient to dispose of the question of boundaries and sufficient to establish a primâ-facie title at any rate for the plaintiff, whilst, on the other hand, the defendant had failed to make out any other title either by showing a grant or that he had been in possession. Mohabeer Inswar v. Dowlut Sonar, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 385.

Where the plaintiff sued to recover a quantity of land by rectification of certain survey awards, which he averred demarcated erroneously the boundary between his zemindary and the zemindaries of the defendants, it was held, on a consideration of the evidence, that his suit was rightly dismissed because he failed to prove the position or existence of a stream which he stated was the true boundary between the zemindaries. Rajah Leelanund Singh v. Rajah Mohindro Narain Singh, 13 S. W. R., P. C., 7.

Unless there be very good grounds for dissenting and differing from the reports made by the Deputy Collectors upon local investigations, the Courts even in India, and à fortiori the Courts in England, in dealing with boundary questions ought to give great weight to them and to be guided by them. Ram Gopal Roy v. Gordon, Stuart, and Co., 17 S. W. R., C. R., 285.

The appellant having obtained a decree in 1854 declaring him to erect boundary pillars according to a certain khusrah,—Held that it was now a work of great difficulty to ascertain and define the boundaries, and that the Court in executing that decree was not precluded from taking into consideration other decrees between the same parties, not as contradicting or altering that khusrah, but as explaining and supporting the views taken by the Court of what the boundaries really were according to the khusrah. Maharajah Rajendro Kishore Singh v. Hyabul Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 379.

Where boundaries are removed or destroyed and when new ones are to be fixed, or where a question arises where boundaries run, the case falls under Section 3 of Bombay Act XI of 1866; but where the question between the parties is whether there has been an encroachment by the defendant on the lands of the plaintiff the Civil Courts have jurisdiction. Bápuji Balvant v. Raghunath Vithal, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 72.

An award of the Collector under Act I of 1847 in respect of boundaries is not final, even though undisturbed on appeal; nor is he competent to do more than demarcate by visible and tangible marks the boundaries between estates and fields. Ram Jewan Singh v. Radha Pershad Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 109.

In a suit by the lessee of a mouzah to recover possession of a piece of land from a lessee of an adjoining mouzah, both making title under one zemindar, where a survey had taken place at a time when both mouzahs to which respectively the land was claimed as belonging were in his possession, and when neither of the leases were in existence,—Held that the suit involved simply a question of boundary, and what was to be ascertained was to which mouzah the land in dispute was found to belong at the time of the survey. Ameeree Begum v. Gobind Pandery, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 35.

In order to ascertain what land is actually leased it is necessary to look to the boundaries mentioned in the lease, and not to the estimated area. Kaza Abdool Mannah v. Baroda Kant Banerjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 394.

In a suit for possession where it was found that a rivulet had come in from a river and formed a disjunction between the disputed land and plaintiff's property, but that the rivulet was closed up and the river had returned to its proper channel, and on the surface of the disputed land there still remained marks of its having belonged to the plaintiff,—Held that the finding sufficiently identified the land in suit as the property of the plaintiff, within the meaning of the Full Bench Ruling (3 W. R., p. 61).

Held that as the last person found to have had land in occupation was the plaintiff, and as his possession had never been disturbed (the lands having ever since been submerged) there was a sufficient finding of possession to entitle plaintiff to a decree in confirmation of title. Maharanee Indurjeet Kooer v. Mohunt Jumna Doss, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 164.

33.—Survey Proceedings.

A co-proprietor of a joint undivided estate is bound by a survey award and compromise to which the other joint proprietors were parties when notice of the survey proceedings was served on the proprietors jointly, and not on him individually. Huro Lall Roy v. Sooruj Narain Roy, 3 W. R., 7.

A purchaser is bound by a survey award passed against the persons from whom he derived his title. Allyat Chinaman v. Juggut Chunder Roy, 5 W. R., 242.

A lessee under the Court of Wards is competent, under Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), to make a general survey of the lands comprised in his lease. R. Watson and Co. v. Bhoonya Koonwar Narain Singh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 105.

To make a survey demarcation effective it is not absolutely necessary that there should be any more special sanction by the Collector than a general acceptance of the survey proceedings as correct.

Hunooman Chobay v. Bindhoo Toraba, 10 W. R., 336.

The demarcation of a Survey Court cannot override the decree of a competent Court as to right and title of land. Huro Nath Roy v. Anund Chunder Roy, 1 W. R., 329.

An official opinion of the superintendent of survey regarding the trustworthiness of the survey proceedings is not legal evidence. The survey proceedings are not conclusive as to title. Lulut Narain Singh v. Narain Singh, 1 W. R., 333.

An award by the superintendent of survey is not conclusive evidence of a contested right in a regular suit. Koylas Chunder Ghose v. Raj Chunder Banerjee, 12 W. R., 180.

In a case for setting aside a survey award which declared the plaintiff and the opposite party entitled to certain chur lands to the extent they had respectively lost by diluvion, and the residue to be held jointly according to their shares,—Held that the opposite party had no right to sue for rents on the plea of joint possession, for he must first have fixed what lands are to be appropriated by him, and what by the intervenor separately, for the loss suffered by each party by diluvion; and after that how much, and what, of the remainder is entitled to be held jointly. Tarinycant Lahoory v. Ranee Mundul and others, 7 W. R., 203.

To constitute a survey award there must be a decision on a bonâ-fide contention between the parties after a proper investigation into the points of issue between them.

A plaintiff suing for confirmation of possession must first prove that he is in actual bonâ-fide possession of the land over which he wishes to have his title confirmed. Nobo Kishen Roy and others v. Gobind Chunder Sein and others, 6 W. R., 317.

Section 42 of (Bombay) Act I of 1865 (which prohibits an occupant from relinquishing his holding, unless he gives a written notice to the Collector on or before the 31st of March in each year) is not applicable only to the holders of land under a survey settlement, but by implication imposes on the revenue officers the obligation of giving the holder notice when an increased assessment is about to be demanded from him, within a reasonable time before the latest date on which he can exercise his right of relinquishing his lands. Govind Vinâyak Gadre v. The Collector of Ratnâgiri, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 101.

The lower Appellate Court was of opinion that, as plaintiffs alleged that the disputed lands were fraudulently caused to be demarcated with defendant's zemindaree at the time of the survey, and as plaintiffs were not parties to the survey proceedings, the present suit was barred by limitation under the decision in 10 W. R., 15. Held that in order to bring a suit within the purview of that decision it was not enough for plaintiffs to say that this fraud was committed against them by the saheb defendants, and that these defendants were still in possession of the lands as belonging to them and other neighbouring proprietors; but that it was necessary for them to show that they themselves were in possession of the disputed lands at the time when they granted the putnee to the saheb defendants, and that they made over that possession to those defendants at that time. Gopal Kishen Sircar v. Ram Narain Koondro, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 175.

34.—MEASUREMENT.

A proprietor of land need only show that he is in undoubted possession of the property to entitle him to ask the assistance of the Court to enable him to measure his land. Raj Chunder Roy v. Kishen Chunder, 4 W. R., Act X R., 16.

The abandonment to a grantee of all rights of measurement as against the ryots, with a view to resumption of lands within the talook, does not apply to a measurement of the talook itself as against the grantee, and does not amount to a restraint of the right of measurement under Act VI of 1862, (B. C.) Kebul Kishen Doss v. Jaminee, 5 W. R., Act X R., 47.

The Judge's dictum that even if proof of a double standard of measurement were shown, such a double standard could not be recognized by the Courts, is wrong in law. Different and double standards of weights and measurements do exist all over the country. In determining all such customs the existence or otherwise of the particular custom in the particular locality or thing which is the subject of dispute must be looked to. Bhuggobutty Churn Mookerjee v. Panaoollah Moonshee, 1 W. R., 224.

A zemindar is not entitled to measure the lands of a lakherajdar holding a rent-free tenure within the limits of his estate. Ranglal Sahu v. Siali Dhar Das, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 27; S. C., 11 W. R. 293.

A ryot having under the provisions of Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, deposited with the Collector a sum of money alleged to be due as rent, the zemindar refused to receive it on the ground that the rent due was less than the amount deposited.

Held that it was beyond the competency of the Collector to go into an enquiry as to the quantity of land held by the ryot and the circumstances under which he had been ejected. Bacharam Paul v. Asghur Fakeer and others, 10 W. R., 423.

Act VI of 1862 (B. C.) applies to cases where the amount which the ryot thinks due is deposited by him, and the landlord may either accept it or sue for whatever he himself may deem due to him for the same period for which the deposit is made; but not to suits for rent for the year preceding that for which the deposit is made. Sheikh Mahomed Shuruoolah Chowdhry v. Musst. Rumya Bibee and others, 7 W. R., 487.

Act VI of 1862 does not forbid the Court to advert or give effect to a tender not followed by a deposit or payment into Court of the money, nor does it alter or affect the discretionary power of the Court to award interest or costs in a decree for arrears. Bissonath Dey v. Hurro Pershad Chowdhry, 2 W. R., Act X R., 88.

Any suit instituted under Act VI (B. C.) of 1862 may be considered as instituted under Act X of 1859, even though it be a suit for measurement of land; and an intervenor in such suit, who claims the right to receive the rent, is entitled to have his claim determined under the express terms of Section 77, Act X of 1859. Jonaye Sirdar v. Dwarkanath Roy, 12 W. R., 322.

In a suit to recover possession of land which plaintiff had purchased from the tenant defendant, and which (while in plaintiff's possession) the talookdar defendant, in collusion with the tenant defendant had caused to be sold by auction in execution of a decree obtained for arrears of rent, notwithstanding plaintiff had tendered the rent, and deposited it with the Collector,—

Held that the tender, followed by a deposit under Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, was legal and sufficient. Wooma Churn Sett v. Hury Persad Misser, 10 W. R., 101.

Where a person sues to have the assistance of the Collector to measure lands, of which he alleges himself to be the proprietor by purchase, he is not entitled to have such assistance if his title is disputed, and if he is found not to have been in possession or in the receipt of rents from the date of his purchase. Durga Churan Mazumdar v. Mahomed Abbas Bhaya, 6 B. L. R., 361, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 399.

On an application to measure the lands of a particular estate, the Collector is not empowered by Act VI (B. C.) of 1862 to determine summarily the character of every holding upon that estate, but only to enquire how and by whom every portion of land therein is held, and what rent is payable in respect of such land. In the event of a Collector recording that particular tenants claimed to hold as mokurrureedar, a Civil Court would have jurisdiction to determine a title on which a cloud had been cast by his proceedings. Wise, J. P. v. Lakhoo Khan, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 50.

A party is not entitled to benefit from a deposit under Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, if it was paid in without a tender to and refusal by the opposite party. Kristo Protibar v. Alladinee Dassee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 4.

The fact of a party's land having been measured under the provisions of the above section cannot take away his right to intervene under Section 77, Act X of 1859. Wise, J. P. v. Bansee Saha, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 51.

Where a measurement, under Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, was completed without any objections having been made to it by the ryots while in progress, it was held that it was not competent for the Judge in appeal to set aside the proceedings on objections made subsequently. Goluck Kishore Acharjee v. Kesha Maja, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 23.

The award of additional damages under Section 2, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), is discretionary, and not imperative. Before awarding such damages the Court in the exercise of its discretion must look to the condition of the parties and the particular hardships inflicted on the landlord by the omission of the under-tenant to pay his rents. Baboo Rambuddun Singh v. Ranee Sree Koonwar, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 22.

Under Section 2 it is discretionary in the Judge to award damages. Gopal Lall Thakoor v. Mahomed Kadir, W. R., Act X R., 75; Bolyechund Dutt v. Punchanun Chobay, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 84.

Before awarding damages for arrears of rent under Section 2, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), the Court should find whether, when the rent was demanded, it was withheld without just reason or not. Mohanund Chowdhry v. H. A. Eglinton, 1 W. R., 343.

Retrospective effect is not to be given to the penal provision of Section 2, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.). Nobokanath Dey v. Rajah Boradakunth Roy Bahadoor, 1 W. R., 100.

Damages are not awardable under Section 2, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), in a suit for rent in which the plaintiff's allegations as to the rate of rent have been disbelieved and a decree given him at the rates admitted by the defendant. J. Beckwith v. Moulvie Noorjumma, 2 W. R., Act X R., 11.

In a suit for rent, where defendant claimed credit for a sum which he had deposited under the provisions of Section 4, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, in the Deputy Collectorate of the subdivision within which plaintiff's mâl-cutcherry was situated, giving notice to plaintiff under Section 5,—Held that defendant was entitled to a set-off. Grish Chundra Sen v. The Eastern Bengal Jute Manufacturing Company, 10 W. R., 492.

Section 6, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, refers to the period within which suits on account of rent which has accrued prior to the date of the deposit under Section 5 may be brought, not to suits for rent at an enhanced rate after notice. Sheikh Ahmed Hossein v. Sheikh Keramut, 8 W. R., 354.

Under Section 10, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), an appeal lies to the High Court in cases above Rs. 5,000 in value, relating to the measurement of land. Under Section 9 of the same Act a zemindar can measure all the lands of his zemindary whenever he pleases, unless he is restrained by any express engagements. Khaja Abdool Gunnee v. Rajah Suth Churn Ghossal, 2 W. R., Act X R., 86.

Under Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), only a proprietor who is in receipt of the rents of an estate or tenure has a right to make a general survey and measurement of the land comprised in such estate or tenure. J. P. Wise v. Ram Chundra Bysak and others, 7 W. R., 415.

Held by the majority of the Court (Seton-Karr, J., dubitante) that a proprietor of an estate is entitled, under Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), to measure the lands of any subordinate tenure within the limits of his estates, whatever the character or size of the tenure or the amount of rent paid in respect of it. Baboo Run Bahadoor Singh v. Munuram Tewaree, 8 W. R., 149.

There must be some express restriction before a zemindar can be precluded from the benefit given him by Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), of measuring the lands in the possession of his ryots. Ooma Churn Biswas v. Shibnath Bagchee and others, 8 W. R., 14.

A Judge, on appeal, has power under Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), to declare by what standard measurements are to be made. J. B. Mackintosh v. Koylas Chunder Chatterjee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 59.

The Collector has no jurisdiction in an application by the zemindar, under Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), for assistance to measure the holding of his ryot, to fix the standard of the pole with which the land is to be measured.

An appeal from the decision of a Deputy Collector in a suit under Section 9, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, lies not to the Collector, but to the Zillah Judge. J. Erskine and Co. v. Gholam Khezur, 9 W. R., 520.

Plaintiff applied for measurement under Section 9 of Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), alleging that he held certain kamar lands of the zemindar under an ikrar from that person.

A putneedar with a putnee lease from the zemindar intervened and claimed the lands as part of his putnee. Held, reversing the decision of the Judge on appeal from the Deputy Collector, that this was a case cognizable by the revenue and not the Civil Courts. Haradhun Dutt and others v. Hadjee Mahomed and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S. 301; 6 W. R., Act X R., 14.

Section 9, Act VI of 1862, gives no authority to proprietors to survey or measure lakheraj land. Golam Khejur and another v. Messrs. Erskine and Co., 11 W. R., 445.

The purchaser of a subordinate tenure who did not enter his name in the talookdar's sherista, and whose tenure therefore was not wholly disconnected from the estate to which it had been joined, is liable to have his lands measured under Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.). J. Tweedie v. Ram Narain Doss, 9 W. R., 151.

In an application for assistance to measure the land of a ryot, under Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), the Collector has no power under Section 11 to fix with what pole the measurement is to be made, but such questions are to be reserved for after-proceedings, when any action is taken upon the result of such measurement. Ramanath Rakhit v. Muchiram Paramanik, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 63; S. C., 11 W. R., 510.

Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), gives a proprietor the right of making a general survey or measurement of lands comprised within his estate or tenure, not of lakheraj lands held under an independent title, for these, until resumed and assessed, form a distinct and separate estate. Prosunnomoyee Debia v. Chundernath Chowdhry and others, 10 W. R., 361; 2 B. L. R., S. N., 5.

Under Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), the proprietor who can claim to measure must be a proprietor in possession, and not a proprietor out of possession, although he may be able to prove his title. The only question which the Collector has to try under that section is, which person is in possession, and his decision is final only as to possession and not as to title. The unsuccessful party has a right to sue in the Civil Court for a declaration of his right. Kalee Dass Nundee and others v. Ramguttee Dutt and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 10.

A single suit simply to measure lands may be brought under Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), against several defendants, although their rights and tenures are different. Shushee Bhoosun Banerjee and others v. Nubocoomar Chatterjee, 8 W. R., 94.

Per Kemp, Phear, Mitter, and Hobhouse, JJ.—When the right of a proprietor to make, under Section 9, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), a measurement of a tenure is disputed solely on the ground that the pole with which the measurement is attempted to be made is not the standard pole of measurement of the pergunnah, as provided in Section 11, and the parties are at issue as to what is the length of the standard pole, the Collector has jurisdiction to enquire into and decide as to the true length of the standard pole.

Couch, C. J., and Bayley, and Jackson, JJ., contra.

Per Bayley, Kemp, Phear, Mitter, and Hobhouse, JJ.—If the Collector has jurisdiction his order is appealable. Srimati Manmohini Chowdrain v. Premchaund Roy, 6 B. L. R., 1; 14 S. W. R., F. B., 5.

An appeal from an order of a lower Appellate Court on an application under Section 9, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, not being otherwise provided for by the Court Fees' Act, may be admitted on a 6-annas stamp. Puriav Bhuggut v. Donzelle, W. M., 14 S. W. R., C. R., 21.

Held (upholding the judgment of Glover, J., in 14 W. R., p. 121) that a person who alleges himself to be the proprietor of an estate, but who is not in receipt of the rent, is not entitled, under Section 9, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, to ask for the assistance of the Collector in measuring his lands. That section is intended to provide for cases, when a proprietor, or other person in possession of an estate, is opposed in making measurement by the occupants of the land, and not for cases where the title of the person claiming the right to measure is a matter in contest. Doorga Churn Doss v. Mahomed Abbas Bhooyan, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 399.

In a suit under Section 9, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, for aid to measure his ryots' land, plaintiff claimed the proprietorship, as purchaser from the owner, while defendants denied the proprietary right of either plaintiff or his vendor. The Deputy-Collector finding that plaintiff's vendor had been proprietor, and had received rent up to the date of sale, gave plaintiff a decree, which was reversed by the Judge in appeal as made without jurisdiction. Held (Mitter, J., dissentiente) that the Judge was right, and that it was not enough for plaintiff to be able to prove his title, he having been bound to show that he was a proprietor in possession in some way or other.

Held (Mitter, J., dubitante) that as the Deputy-Collector's decision proceeded on a ground common to all the defendants, the Judge had jurisdiction under Section 337 of the Code of Civil Procedure to reverse the decree on the appeal of only one of the defendants. Doorga Chunder Dass v. Mahomed Abbas Bhooyan, 14 S. W. R., C. R., p. 121.

A Collector's jurisdiction to allow a measurement where the proprietary right to the land is contested is not barred by Sections 9 and 10, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), if he is satisfied that the party seeking his assistance to measure is in receipt of the rents. If the Collector disallows the measurement on the ground that the applicant is not in receipt of the rents, the party aggrieved may appeal to the Civil Court. J. Smith v. Baboo Nundun Lall, 6 W. R., Act X R., 13.

Sections 9 and 10 of Act VI do not embrace the case of a neighbouring zemindar alleging to be wronged by the act of the Collector or the measuring zemindar. His remedy is in a separate civil action. Baboo Permessaree Pershad Narain Singh v. Sheikh Nubee Buksh, 2 W. R., Act X R., 101.

On application to the Collector for an order for the measurement of certain lands under Section 10, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), a third party intervened, but the Collector passed an order in favour of the applicant, which the Judge reversed in appeal, on the ground that the law gave the Collector no jurisdiction to determine the right to make a measurement where the proprietary right to the land was contested. In special appeal the High Court simply reversed the Judge's order withour any direction for the trial of the appeal by him de novo. On review of judgment the order of the High Court was amended, and the case remanded to the Judge to determine, according to Sections 9 and 10 of the above Act, which party was in receipt of the rents, and under which of these sections the application for measurement had been made, and to decide accordingly. Baboo Nundun Lall v. J. S. Smith, 7 W. R., 188.

Semble,—If the application had been under Section 10 of the Act the Collector would have had jurisdiction to declare the length of the standard pole. Braja Kishor Sen v. Kasim Ali, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 78; S. C., 11 W. R., 562.

In a suit for rent on the basis of a jummabundee made under the provisions of Section 10, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, it was held, with reference to the terms of Section 20, read with Section 19, that the duty of ordering the preparation of the jummabundee and adjudicating and deciding the suit belonged to the subdivisional Revenue Court. When a subdivision has been placed under the jurisdiction of a Deputy Collector, all proceedings under Section 10 must be taken in the Revenue Office of the subdivision. Nesoo Sirvar v. C. J. Phippe, 10 W. R., 454.

Section 10, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), merely empowers revenue officers to decide what rate of rent the tenant of a particular parcel of land has been paying, and does not empower them to declare that rent at a certain rate shall be paid simply because rent at that rate has been paid by the tenants of neighbouring lands. Amut Manjhee v. Joy Chunder Chowdhry, 12 W. R., 371.

Section 10, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), contemplates possession by the receipts of rents for those lands of which the measurement is required. Pareejan Khatoon and others v. Bycuntchunder Chuckerbutty and others, 7 W. R., 96.

Section 10, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), contemplates the case of a proprietor of an estate who, by reason of inability to ascertain who are the persons liable to pay rent to him, is unable to measure his estate; but not that of a putneedar who knows who is liable to pay rent to him, and whose attempt to get the Collector's assistance in a minute measurement of the lands held by each of the ryots is simply with a view to harass and oppress them. Dwarkanath Chuckerbutty and others v. Bhowanee Kishore Chuckerbutty and others, 8 W. R., 12.

Where ryots combine to withhold from the landlord information requisite to enable him to collect his due rents, one suit may be brought against a number of them, under Section 10, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), for measurement and ascertainment by the Collector of the details of the tenures of each ryot. R. Solano v. Soobron Roy and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 4.

Where the progress of a measurement under Section 10, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862 is interfered with by a third party claiming the land, the proper course for the Collector is to hold his hand, leaving it to the parties to seek their remedy in the Civil Court. J. P. Wise v. Bansee Shaha, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 51.

Proceedings under Section 10, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, cannot be taken on the application of one shareholder in a joint undivided estate; the word "proprietor" implying the sole proprietor or whole body of proprietors of the land for the measurement of which application is made. Moolook Chaund Mundle v. Modhoosoodun Bachusputty, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 126.

A party applying under Section 10, Act VI (B.C.) of 1862, is entitled to measure only such lands as are comprised in his estate, and for which he is entitled to receive rent; he is not entitled under cover of that section to measure lands not comprised in the estate which he has purchased. Khugendronath Mullick v. Kantee Ram Paul, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 318.

A Collector proceeding under Section 10, Act VI (B.C.) of 1862, to measure lands in respect of which rent has not hitherto been paid, is not entitled to assess or ascertain the rents which ought to be paid, or which are fair and reasonable. Sree Misser v. Crowdy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 243.

An applicant under Section 10, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, must first prove what steps he has taken to obtain the knowledge of the tenures in his estate, and that he is unable to measure because he is unable to ascertain them. If his averments are objected to, and the Collector proceeds without enquiry, the proceedings are invalid and without jurisdiction.

An applicant under the above section must be the proprietor of the estate, and not a shareholder only in the proprietary body. Mahomed Bahadoor Mojoundur v. Rajah Raj Kissen Sing, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 522.

An Ameen deputed to make a measurement under the provisions of Section 10, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, is bound to record the state of things as actually existing, and has no business to record what he thinks ought to be the rates. If, however, the Ameen, or the collector superintending his proceedings, does any act not in conformity with this section, the remedy for any party dissatisfied is to appeal to the Civil Court within the time and in the manner prescribed by Act X of 1859. Bala Thakoor v. Meghlum Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 269.

Under Section 11 of Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), the standard pole of the pergunnah is the standard to be used in the measurement of lands, and ought to be assessed either under kubuleut or otherwise. J. P. Mackintosh v. R. Watson and Co., 3 W. R., Act X R., 123.

Section 11, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), does not preclude the use of the standard measuring-rod of a tuppah. Surbanund Pandey v. Ruchia Pandey, 4 W. R., Act X R., 32.

The decision of a Collector, under Section 11, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), is not appealable. The Collector is the depository of the standard pole of each pergunnah; and it is exclusively within his province to declare what the standard of such pole is. Tarucknath Mookerjee v. Meydee Biswas, 5 W. R., Act X R., 11.

Under Section 13, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), the determination of a Deputy Collector admitting the rehearing of a case decided ex-parte is final, and no appeal lies to the Judge. Kunuck Monee Debia v. Gunga Ram Doss, 3 W. R., Act X R., 135.

The order of a Deputy Collector admitting a revival under Section 58, Act X of 1859, is final under Section 13, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.). The Collector has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from and reverse that order; nor the Zillah Judge to reverse the order of the Collector. Kistonath Biswas v. Brojender Nauth Bhadoory, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 15.

In this case the Deputy Collector refused plaintiff's application to set aside a rent decree as passed against him upon a confession of judgment fraudulently filed by other parties. The value of the suit being beneath R's. 100, he ought to have appealed to the Collector under Section 14, Act VI of 1862, (B. C.). Having failed to do so, he was held to have no right to bring a suit for the purpose in the Civil Court. Raj Kishen Mookerjee v. Madhoo Soodun Mundle, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 413.

Under Section 19, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), one Deputy Collector may hear an appeal (if referred to him by the Collector) from the order of another Deputy Collector. Josin Kagzee v. Kylashnath Haldar, 2 W. R., Act X R., 10.

A Deputy Collector cannot, under Section 19, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), hear appeals upon reference by a Collector. Kally Narain Roy Chowdhry v. Sadoorunissa Beebee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 65.

The Deputy Collector has no power under Section 19 of the Bengal Act VI of 1862 to hear an appeal from another Deputy Collector.

Semble,—The object of this section was to give to Deputy Collectors, specially entrusted with those particular powers, all the powers which were conferred on Deputy Collectors upon reference by the Collector, or Deputy Collectors placed in charge of subdivisions without such reference. Kally Narain Roy Chowdhry v. Mussamut Sadoorunissa Khatoon, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 3.

Section 20, Act VI (B. C.) of 1862, refers to a suit (not to execution proceedings) and to a suit as yet untried. It does not empower a Collector to withdraw a suit already under trial before a Deputy Collector for the purpose of being tried elsewhere. Annund Mohun Surmah v. Grija Kant Lahoorey, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 222.

The Collector's jurisdiction obtains where no subdivisional officer exists, the terms of Section 20, Act VI of 1862 being inapplicable where there are no presiding officers. Rakhul Chunder Roy v. Guggun Chunder Dutt, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 498.

35.—Sale Laws.

Where a gatkuli tenant omitted to pay the assessment on his gatkuli land, and the defendant obtained possession of it, the lower Court decided that the gatkuli tenant, having omitted to pay his assessment, had lost all title to his land.

On special appeal the High Court remanded the case for the lower Court to enquire whether the Government had taken action in the matter by putting the defendant in possession; as if not he would be merely a trespasser, and the gatkuli tenant would be entitled to recover. Malhari Valad Rughoji v. Inkaram Valad Darkoji, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 86.

A suit for rent having been brought in the Beerbhoom Collectorate and decreed, the case was referred in execution to the Collector of Burdwan, within whose jurisdiction the property lay. The tenure was sold by the Deputy Collector of the latter district and purchased by the decree-holder. Appeals were made to the Collector and the Commissioner by the judgment-debtor, and were rejected by both officers. The judgment-debtor then brought a suit for possession in the Civil Court, and obtained a decree reversing the sale on the ground that the decree for rent had been made by a Collector who had not jurisdiction.

Held, that after all that had passed, it was too late to raise the question of jurisdiction. Ooma Soonduree Dossee v. Bipen Beharee Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 292.

Application having been made to a Deputy-Collector to execute a decree for rent, the judgment-debtor in order to save his tenure from sale brought the money into Court, and it was taken by the decree-holder. This was done while the question was being litigated in the Civil Courts whether the decree was not barred by limitation. The result was that the decree was declared barred.

Held that the judgment-debtor's only remedy was by a suit in the Civil Court to get back the money. Ghannoo Sing v. Ram Gobind Sing, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 231.

If the purchase-money of a putnee is in deposit in the Collectorate, and the zemindar, judgment-debtor, fails to assist the judgment-creditor in recovering his dues, he is liable for interest in the entire sum. Preolall Gossain v. Gyan Turungi-nee Dossia, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 161.

A sale in the Revenue Court upon a decree for rent obtained at the instance of the izaradar and locum tenens not of the sale owner or the whole body of owners, but of the owner of a fractional share of the estate, being according to Act X of 1859, Sections 108 to 110, a sale not of the tenure but of the rights and interests of the holder of it, as in an ordinary Civil Court execution, cannot prevail against a prior sale in execution of a Civil Court decree.

Quære,—Whether a sale in the Revenue Court which passed the whole tenure can prevail against a prior sale by the Civil Court. Koolada Pershad Misree v. Goureechund Misree, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 352.

Where a tenure is duly sold for arrears of rent under Act X of 1859 and Act VIII (B. C.) of 1865, the absence of a shareholder's name from the proceedings does not as a matter of law invalidate the sale as against him. Doorbijoy Mahtoon v. Prithee Narain Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 30.

A sale having been effected by order of a Deputy-Collector, an appeal was made to the Collector, who set aside the sale. The Commissioner, however, considering that the Collector had no jurisdiction, and that no injury had been made out, reversed the order of the Collector. Held that the sale did not become confirmed or otherwise final and conclusive before the date of the Commissioner's order. Prannath Roy v. Troyluckonauth Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 284.

A landlord who purchased a tenure which has been sold in satisfaction of his own decree for rent, having objected to the attempted possession of a mortgagee who was executing a decree for foreclosure, a suit was framed under Section 239, Code of Civil Procedure, which having come up in appeal to the High Court was remanded for the purpose of determining whether the lease on which the lands had been held contained any stipulation reserving a right of sale for arrears of rent. It having been found that there was no such reservation, the tenure was held to have been sold subject to incumbrances, and the purchaser to have been bound by the decree of foreclosure passed against the former holder. Mohesh Chunder Banerjee v. Chunder Monee Dabee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 237.

The fact of no notice having been served in the mofussil is sufficient ground for setting aside a sale for arrears of rent. Nugendro Chunder Ghose v. Musruff Bibee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 17.

Appellant brought a suit under Act X of 1859, for rent due by a deceased person against his widow as widow and guardian of her infant son, but obtained a decree against the widow only as sole heiress and representative, on the ground that the son having been adopted into another family was not the heir of his father. Difficulties having been interposed in the way of executing that decree, he brought a suit in the Civil Court and obtained a decree, affirmed by the High Court, the result of which was to affirm that the son was the heir of his natural father. In execution of the Collector's decree the estate of the deceased was sold under Act XI of 1859, the certificate of sale making a distinct reference to the Civil Court's decree. Held that the estate of the deceased was sold in execution for his debts, and that the interests of his widow, the registered proprietor and ostensible owner of the estate, as well as of his son, if he had any interest, was bound by that decree; that the decree obtained by the appellant in the Civil Court was a mere decree inter partes and not a decree in rem, and that as between appellant and respondent (who had obtained a decree in the Civil Court against the deceased in his lifetime, but now only sought to enforce it against the widow and the infant son, and to impeach the sale in execution of appellant's decree), the appellant was entitled to and could not be deprived of the benefit which had resulted to him from his greater diligence in enforcing his demand. The General Manager of the Raj Durbungah under the Court of Wards v. Maharajah Coomer Ramaput Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 459.

The sale by a Collector of a whole talook in one lot for arrears of revenue, without specific authority previously conferred by the Board of Revenue, was held to be an act unauthorized by the general rules and principles of the Regulations, and not rendered valid by the subsequent authorized confirmation of it by the Board, and by the appropriation of the surplus proceeds of the money by the defaulting proprietor. The proprietor's acquiescence in a sale made, as he believed, by the authority of the Board of Revenue did not give legal efficacy to a sale altogether void for the want of such authority, or bar his claim to annul the sale on that ground.

The Courts below, without entering into any investigation of the profits made by the purchaser during his occupation of the estate, assumed that he had reimbursed himself the amount of the purchase-money and interest out of the profits of the estate. The Privy Council, however, saw no ground for such an assumption, and directed that an account should be taken of the principal and interest due to the purchaser in respect of the purchase-money paid by him, and also of the net profits made by him out of the estate during his occupation; and that on payment to him of whatever may appear due to him on taking such account, possession of the talook should be delivered to the proprietor.

The Privy Council further, acquitting the purchaser of all blame in the transaction, reversed so much of the decrees of the Courts below as condemned him in costs, and ordered each party to bear his own costs in all the Courts. Maharajah Mitterjeet Singh Bahadoor v. The Heirs of the late Ranee, widow of the late Rajah Juswant Singh, deceased, 6 W. R., P. C., 15.

The decree of a Court reversing a putnee sale on the ground of non-service of due legal notice should make allusion to the return of the purchase-money, and also decide whether the purchaser is entitled to obtain further damages and costs from the zemindar who had caused the sale. Sheikh Abdoollah v. Oomed Ali and others, 6 W. R., 321.

The sale of an estate in execution of a decree under Regulation XX of 1795 is not impeachable on the ground that the Court, in ordering the sale, dealt directly with the Collector of the Zillah, instead of with the Board of Revenue, the principal object of that Regulation having been the security of the public revenue. Rajah Mohesh Narain Singh v. Kishnamund Misser, 5 W. R., P. C., 7.

The plaintiff purchased the right, title, and interest of a judgment-debtor in a certain jumma sold in execution of a Small Cause Court decree. Subsequently the same land was sold by the same creditor in execution of another decree obtained in the Collector's Court, and the defendant purchased. In a suit to set aside the second sale,—Held that when a tenure has once been sold in execution of a decree of a Civil Court, the Collector's Court has no power to put it up again as the property of the former tenant. Samiraddi Khalifa v. Haris Chandra, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 49.

Regulation XX of 1795 directed that when any Court of Civil Judicature should have occasion to sell lands in execution of a decree, it should transmit a copy thereof to the Board of Revenue, which was with all practicable dispatch to cause the lands to be disposed of at the presidency, or in the district in which the lands were situated, as they might deem most advantageous to the proprietor. In 1843 a copy of a decree was transmitted for execution to the Board of Revenue in compliance with the Regulation; but no sale was then affected. Afterwards two other futile attempts to sell the lands under the decree were made, and then the decree-holder sold the lands to a third party, upon whose application the decree was executed by the sale of the lands of the judgment-debtor under it by order of the Court, and without any further recourse to the Revenue Board. Previous to such sale the proceedings had been taken off the file, and the number of villages, owing to some inaccuracy, was differently stated in the later order, and the total sum was increased by adding the interest which had accrued due between the two orders.

Held that the purchaser at the sale acquired a good title; for it would be contrary to general principles, and a senseless addition to all the vexations of delay in the course of procedure, to hold that when for any reason, satisfactory or not, the execution of a final decree in a suit fails or is set aside, and the proceedings as regards that execution are taken off the file, the whole suit is discontinued thereby, and the further proceedings for the same purpose were to be considered as taken in a new suit. Nor was it true in any material sense that either the properties to be sold or the sums to be recovered were different: and the principal object of the Regulation being the security of public revenues, that object had been fully answered by the communication to the Commissioner in 1843, and the proceedings which were taken by him upon it.

Several years after the purchase by the defendant of immoveable property at a sale in execution of a decree, the judgment-debtor sued this purchaser for the lands, on the ground, amongst others, that the notices required by Regulation XX of 1795, Section 12, had not been affixed previous to the sale. Held that the onus of proving the default in affixing the notices lay upon the plaintiff, the judgment-debtor. Three attempts to sell land taken in execution under a decree had been rendered abortive by the acts of the judgment-debtor, and a delay of seven years occasioned, during which by his conduct he defeated the execution of the decree. When the property was put up for sale for the fourth time, the Collector rejected the two highest bids, on the ground that neither of the bidders could produce a mookhtearnamah from the persons for whom respectively they professed to act as agents, nor produce the required deposit, and he declared the third highest bidder the purchaser of the land. Held that under the circumstances the conduct of the Collector was justifiable, and the sale valid. Rajah Mohes Narain Singh v. Kishnanund Misser and others, Marsh., 592.

Where a tenure was brought to sale by a landlord in execution of a decree by a Revenue Court, and purchased by him, though no arrears of rent were due, the lower Civil Courts were held to have been justified in concluding that the sale was fraudulent, and in setting it aside as illegal. Brojendro Coomar Chowdry v. Ram Coomar Holdar, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 32.

Where the shares of a zemindary hypothecated by the lessee are to be sold to recover arrears of rent due to the Court of Wards, no attachment is necessary, and the Collector has no power to attach the property previous to sale. Fogessur Sahoy v. Gopal Lall, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 173.

(b) Sale of Waste Lands.

The Court cannot extend the period of thirty days allowed by Section 5, Act XXIII of 1863, for preferring a suit to contest an award by the Board of Revenue.

The filing of a vakalutnamah is not an institution of such a suit. Taranath Dutt v. The Collector of Sylhet, 5 W. R., Waste Land Court Ref., 1.

In a suit under Section 5, Act XXIII of 1863, by a claimant to waste land proposed to be sold or otherwise dealt with on account of Government, or by an objection to the sale or other disposition of such land, the plaint must be on a stamp of Rs. 100. Greesh Chundra Roy and others v. The Collector of Sylhet on the part of Government, 7 W. R., 349.

A purchaser of land sold as waste land under Act XXIII of 1863 cannot be compelled to grant a pottah to a person alleging himself to have been in occupation of the land before the sale. If the claimant has omitted to come in due time to stay the sale, and the land has actually been sold, his only remedy is by a suit under Section 18 for compensation, making the Collector a defendant. Magun Pollan v. Lieutenant-Colonel E. Money, 7 W. R., 474.

(c) Sales for Arrears of Revenue.

A purchaser at an auction sale for arrears of revenue is to be bound not by what is represented to him by private parties (i.e., the serishtadar and other officers, as in this case), but by the conditions which, previous to the sale, are published by a notification in the official gazette. Pirthee Ram Chowdry Roy Bahadoor v. The Collector of Goalparah, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 531.

A purchase by a managing member of a joint Hindu family, in his own name, at a revenue sale held under Act I of 1845, is not affected by Section 21 of the Act. A suit by one of the members for recovery of possession of his share of the property purchased by the managing member in his own name, but for the use of the family, is not a suit to oust a certified purchaser, and therefore not affected by Section 21, Act I of 1845. Tundan Singh v. Pukh Narayan Singh, 5 B. L. R., 546; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 347.

The object of Section 5, Regulation XLIV of 1793, taken together with Section 7, was not the destruction of the under-tenures upon the sale of the parent estate for arrears of Government revenue. It only empowers the purchaser at such sale to avoid the subsisting engagements as to rent, and to enhance the rent to that amount at which, according to the established uses and rates of the pergunnah or district, it would have stood had the cancelled engagement so avoided never existed.

Quære,—Whether such a power is given only to the purchaser or to him and his heirs, or whether it is a power attaching to the zemindary and passing to subsequent purchasers. Ranee Surnomoyee v. Maharajah Suttees Chunder Roy Bahadoor, 2 W. R. P. C., 14.

By a sale in execution of the rights and interests of a judgment-debtor as recorded proprietor of a Government resumed revenue-paying estate, released rent-free lands lying in the estate do not pass to the purchaser. Dol Gobindmonee Debia v. Sheikh Imdad Ali, 5 W. R., 170.

Suit brought in 1821 to annul the sale of a zemindary in Allahabad which took place in 1802 for arrears of revenue. The Privy Council concurred in the conclusion come to by the Mofussil and Sudder Commissions constituted by Regulation I of 1821, that the sale ought, notwithstanding the great lapse of time, to be set aside; but, considering the bonâ-fide character of the sale, awarded compensation to the purchaser. Deep Narain Singh v. Lall Chutterput Singh, 6 W. R., P. C., 27.

Where, by an old pottah, lands forming part of a zemindary had been leased at a specified rent, but there were no words in the pottah importing the hereditary and istemraree character of the tenure,—Held that the absence of such words was supplied by evidence of long and uninterrupted enjoyment, and of the descent of tenure from father to son, whence that hereditary and istemraree character might be legally presumed.

The zemindary was sold for arrears of Government revenue under Regulation XI of 1822. The purchaser's representatives sued to enhance the rent of the under-tenure. Held that they had no right to enhance. The rights of the purchaser were defined by Sections 30-33 of Regulation XI of 1822, which were repealed by Act XII of 1841, and that Act, with the exception of the 1st and 2nd Sections, was again repealed by Act I of 1845. Neither of the two last-mentioned Statutes contains any saving of rights acquired under the Statutes which it repealed, but expressly limited the enlarged powers which it gave to purchasers at sales for revenue arrears to purchasers at future sales. A sale for arrears of revenue cannot of itself merely, and without any act, proceeding, or demonstration of will on the part of the purchaser, alter the character of an under-tenure.

Semble,—Section 5, Regulation XLIV of 1793, is now of no force for any purpose but that of declaring the general principles upon which all the subsequent legislation has proceeded, viz., that of putting a purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue in the position of a party with whom the perpetual settlement of the estate was made. Where an under-tenure existed at the time of the Decennial Settlement, the only right which the zemindar could exercise over it was that conferred by Section 51 of Regulation VIII of 1793. Rajah Satya Sarun Ghosal v. Mohes Chunder Mitter, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 23; 11 W. R., P. C., 10.

Subordinate under-tenures not created in good faith are not protected when the tenure itself is sold for arrears of revenue. Doorga Churn Kur Sircar v. Anundmoyee Debia, 3 W. R., 127.

A sale of a tenure under Act VIII of 1835 for arrears of current revenue conveys the whole tenure free from all encumbrances. Dwarkanath Doss v. Manick Chunder Doss, 3 W. R., 197.

By Regulations XIV of 1793 and VII of 1799 the Governor-General in Council may order a sale for arrears of a monthly instalment of revenue before the close of the year; but in order to warrant that act there must be an arrear of a previous year or of a monthly instalment. Kirt Chunder Roy v. The Government, 5 W. R., P. C., 41.

An estate having been sold for arrears of revenue under Regulation XI of 1822, it was purchased by Government, and the Government, as landlord, raised the rents throughout the property. Held that the revenue sale cancelled all former arrangements entered into intermediately by the former proprietors, and that the fresh settlement made by Government with the present proprietors will not restore former arrangements and rates because they happen to be the heirs of the former proprietors. Gungamonee v. Mussamut Luteefoonissa Chowdhrain and others, 7 W. R., 196.

At a sale for default of payment of Government revenue the Collector is bound to sell to the highest bidder, even though (as in this case) that bidder be the husband of the person in arrear. Cornell v. Mussamut Oodoy Tara Chowdhrain and others, 8 W. R., 372.

The sale of an estate for arrears of revenue where no such arrears exist is null and void, even though it is regularly conducted, and the purchase is made bonâ fide. Sreemunt Lall Ghose v. Shama Soondery Dossee, 12 W. R., 276.

Semble,—A tuppa right is annihilated by a sale held under Act VIII of 1835, and Clause 7, Section 15, Regulation VII of 1799. Mussamut Zeenut Bebee v. Mussamut Rahatoonissa and another, 7 W. R., 243.

In a suit to recover possession by the ostensible purchaser of an estate sold for arrears of revenue under Act I of 1845, where it was found that plaintiff had stood by ever since his purchase and had for 11 years allowed defendants to remain in possession and enjoy the usufruct as proprietors,—Held that the burden of proof was rightly thrown on the plaintiff. Shaikh Johur Ali v. Brindabun Chunder, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 10.

The surplus proceeds of a sale made for default of payment of putnee rent, though under attachment by a Civil Court in the hands of the Collector, continues to be the property of the putneedar until ordered to be paid away by an order from such Court. Saefoollah Khan v. Luchmeeput Sing Doogur, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 58.

According to Regulation VIII of 1819, the sale of a putnee tenure for arrears of rent must take place on a day in the Bengalee month of Jeyt. Beeharam Mookerjee v. Issur Chunder Mookerjee, W. R., 1864, 4.

The purchaser of the rights and interests of a putneedar in a putnee talook sold for arrears of rent purchases the talook subject to whatever claims the zemindar has against it for rent, and has no claim against the surety of the putneedar by reason of the name of the latter appearing as the owner of the talook in the zemindar's papers or otherwise. He may sue the other sharers for the money which he has paid on their account. Obhoy Chunder Bundopadhya v. Nilambur Mookerjee, W. R., 1864, 73.

A sale of a tenure for its own arrears passes the tenure free from all incumbrances. Sheikh Allee Buksh v. Rubjee Mundul, 4 W. R., Act X R, 32.

When a putnee is sold for default on the part of the putneedar in paying his rents, a dur-putneedar who has paid his rent to the putneedar for the the period to which the default relates may sue for damages, although himself a defaulter for a later period. Madhub Anund Moitro v. Mussamut Joy Koomaree Bibee, 5 W. R., 201.

A bonâ-fide purchaser at a sale for arrears of rent has a preferential title over a purchaser at a prior sale in execution of a decree of the Civil Court; but damages may be recovered by the latter from the zemindar and the defaulting tenant on proof of collusion and fraud. Gopal Mundul v. Soobhudra Boistobee, 5 W. R., 205.

Suit to set aside a sale of a moiety of a putnee tenure by a widow, and a subsequent and alleged collusive sale for arrears of rent under Regulation VIII of 1819. Held that if the defendant was in possession under a title from the widow, his subsequent purchase at the auction-sale, six years before the death of the widow, did not give him a new title against those claiming through the widow, especially when the plaintiff alleged that the defendant had allowed the putnee to fall into arrears, and then purchased it himself. Woomesh Chunder Mookerjee v. Bissessuree Debee and others, 6 W. R., 8.

The purchaser of a tenure sold for arrears of rent acquires the tenure free from all encumbrances and under-tenures created by the defaulter. Jan Ali v. Sufeena Bibee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 36.

A tenure purchased in execution of a decree for current rent cannot be re-sold for the arrears of former years, which must be recovered from the former proprietor. Mussamut Luteefun and another v. Sheikh Mean Jan, 6 W. R., 112.

A sale of an under-tenure for arrears of rent (not affected by Act VIII of 1865, B. C.) does not extinguish encumbrances created by the defaulter before the sale, unless there is a written stipulation providing for the sale of the tenure for its arrears. Mohima Chundra Day v. Gooroo Doss Sein, 7 W. R., 285.

Where a decree was for arrears of rent due upon a tenure, it was held that, though the sale proceedings specified that the rights and interests of certain parties were sold, yet the tenure itself was sold, and all the co-sharers were jointly liable. Alimooddeen v. Sabir Khan and others, 8 W. R., 60.

A ryot's tenure having been sold for arrears of rent under an Act X decree, the purchaser is entitled to be put in khas possession of the entire tenure as it originally stood, notwithstanding that the sons of the ryot have been occupying huts on the land for more than twenty years. The circumstance that the purchaser happens to be the superior landlord does not diminish his right. Teelottuma Debee and others v. Brojo Lall Shamunt and others, 8 W. R., 478.

Where a tenure is sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, and a certificate of sale is granted by the Collector, it must be presumed that all the ordinary proceedings relating to the payment of the purchase-money have been fulfilled. Fyazooddeen Bhooya v. Shumsoonnissa Bibee, 12 W. R., 508.

No sales for arrears of rent, not even sales under Regulation VIII of 1819, have ipso facto the effect of cancelling tenures created by defaulting owners; they merely give to a purchaser power to cancel such tenures if he thinks proper. Modhoosoodun Koondoo v. Ramdhone Gangooly, 12 W. R., 383.

A purchaser under a sale for arrears of rent is not entitled to have the purchase set aside on the ground merely of an irregularity in sticking up the preliminary advertisement, unless he can show that he has been prejudiced thereby. Joynub Bebee v. Mirza Ahmed Jan, Marsh., 31.

Where a tenure inherited by a Hindu widow from her deceased husband is sold for arrears of rent under Act VIII of 1835, the purchaser does not acquire merely her personal rights, nor do the rights acquired by him cease at her death. Chowdry Zahooral Huq v. Gooroo Churn Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 329.

Where a tenant commits default, and purchases the tenure when it is sold in execution of a decree against himself, he cannot claim the benefit of the law relating to auction-purchasers under Section 105 of Act X of 1859 and Section 11, Regulation VIII of 1819, and ask the Court to set aside the title of a third party which had been created by himself. Where he himself has sold to a third party he is bound to recognize that party's purchase, and also all bonâ-fide leases under that party.

Where the lease by which a howala tenure is created does not expressly reserve it for sale for non-payment of rent, the rights of an auction-purchaser cannot arise under Regulation VIII of 1819. Meheroonissa Bibee v. Hur Churn Bose, 10 W. R., 220.

Not merely recorded shareholders, but all actua defaulters (such as joint putneedars), are prohibited from being purchasers of putnee. Gouree Komal Bhuttacharjee v. Raj Kishen Nath, 5 W. R., 106.

Act XIX of 1843 gives the preference, generally speaking, to a subsequent kobala which is registered over a prior one unregistered. To avoid its operation a plaintiff must show that the vendor not only sold and parted with his rights in the property, but actually made over possession to him.

If, however, the second sale was illusory, proving fraud on the part of the vendor, it would not stand in the way of plaintiff's right. Mussamut Butoolun v. Mussamut Ozeerun, 8 W. R., 300.

A putneedar who had obtained two decrees, one for back and current rents, and another for back rent, first sold the tenure in execution of the decree for back rent, and within three days after its sale caused it to be sold again in execution of the decree for back and current rents. Held that as the case of the purchaser at the first sale was not that of a defaulting tenant, the arrears not having accrued during his incumbency, he was not barred from instituting a suit in the Civil Court to set aside the second sale. Sowdaminee Dossee v. Bholanath Shaha, 9 W. R., 363.

In a suit to set aside a sale in execution of a decree for arrears of rent due up to Aghran, 1262, the plaintiff, who claimed under a deed of conditional sale, was held not entitled to a decree on the following grounds :—

He was not a registered tenant at the time of the sale, but as a sezawal was legally in possession.

The plaintiff never tendered the arrears for which the sale was made.

Under Act VIII of 1835 no separate attachment of a mehal or notification of sale in the mofussil is necessary in order to render the sale valid.

The change of date of sale from a holiday to the next advertised public sale day is not in this case such a postponement of the sale as to require any new distinct notification.

A sale is not invalid because it is not for the full complete arrears due at the end of the year; it may take place at the end of the year for such arrears as may then be existing.

No fraud or collusion was proved to justify the sale being set aside.

In this case, not the rights and interests of the defaulter, but the tenure itself passed for the arrears due upon it.

Attachment by the appointment of a sezawal is no bar to a sale for arrears due before such attachment. A. J. Forbes v. Protap Singh Doogar and others, 7 W. R., 409.

To sell an estate for arrears under Act XI of 1859, after lulling the proprietor into a false security by failure to give him a notice which the law prescribes as a condition precedent of a sale, is of itself a very material injury irrespective of the amount of purchase-money realized, and one amply sufficient to warrant a Court in annulling the sale under Section 33. Mohabeer Pershad Singh v. The Collector of Tirhoot, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 137.

A. purchased a share of B.'s talook at an auction sale, in execution of an ex-parte decree obtained against B., under Section 105 of Act X of 1859. B. obtained leave under Section 58 of Act X of 1859 to revive the suit, and succeeded in getting it dismissed. He now sued to set aside the sale to A. Held that the sale to A. was binding against B., notwithstanding that the decree in execution of which it had taken place had been set aside in review, provided the sale was bonâ fide. Jan Ali v. Jan Ali Chowdhry, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 56; S. C., 10 W. R., 154.

The sale by a Civil Court of a judgment-debtor's rights and interests in a tenure in execution of a money-decree is, if not obtained by fraud, a good sale for what it is worth, and the same property cannot be re-sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent against the former tenant. Tirathanund Thakoor v. Paresman Jha, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 449.

A sale of land for arrears of Income Tax under Act XXXII of 1860 does not render a mokurruree title to the land void, with reference to Act XI of 1859, which has no relation whatever to such a sale. Sheopersaud Singh v. Muthoorapershad and others, 10 W. R., 31.

Under Rule 4, Section 97 of the Income Tax Act (XXXII of 1860), a return made to the Income Tax Officer is not conclusive evidence against the party making it upon the point of perpetuity of tenure. Jowahir Lall and another v. Tekeit Pookurum Singh, 6 W. R., 252.

(g) Payments to avoid Sales.

Money deposited to protect from sale a tenure advertised under the provisions of Act VIII of 1865 must, under Section 6, be considered as a loan made to the proprietor of the tenure, which becomes security to the depositor, who is entitled, on applying, to obtain immediate possession in order to recover the amount from any profits belonging to the tenure. Kartick Surmah and another v. Bydonath Sacconee and others, 10 W. R., 205.

A shikmeedar is not entitled to recover money voluntarily paid by him to preserve an estate from sale. Poorno Chunder Doss Chowdhry v. Sreenath Goopto, 6 W. R., 173.

By Act II of 1845, Section 9, it is enacted, with reference to sales for arrears of revenue, that Collectors shall, at any time before sunset of the latest day of payment, receive as a deposit, from any party not being a proprietor of the estate in arrear, the amount of the arrear of revenue due from it, to be carried to the credit of the said estate; and if the party depositing, whose money shall have been so credited as aforesaid, shall prove before a competent Civil Court that the deposit was made in order to protect an interest of the said party which would have been endangered or damaged by the sale of the estate, he shall be entitled to recover the amount of the deposit, with interest, from the proprietors of the estate. Held that the person so depositing money for arrears does not thereby acquire any lien on the estate. Fagun v. Sreemotee Dossee and others, Marsh., 226.

Instalments of Government revenue, paid by a mokurrureedar on account of his predecessor, being necessary payments made to save the estate from sale, are recoverable, but not under Act X of 1859.

Payments on account of Government revenue in excess of lease are not recoverable. Bunwaree Kishore v. Joy Chunder Gossain, 2 W. R., 262.

In a suit for contribution of Government revenue, when the defendants plead that the plaintiff was in exclusive possession of the entire property as manager, and had paid the revenue out of it before accounting to them for the surplus profits, the Court should not proceed simply on the fact of payment by the plaintiff, but should also consider whose money was paid. Sham Lall Seth v. Hurro Soondery Goopta, 5 W. R., 29.

Suit for Government revenue paid by mortgagee in possession of property mortgaged for a debt secured by an instalment-bond executed in his favour by the mortgagor through a mookhtear. Although the plaintiff could not prove the execution by the defendant of the power of attorney in the name of the person alleged to have signed the bond for the defendant, yet as the plaintiff had paid the arrears of revenue due of the mortgaged property in the bonâ-fide belief that he had a rightful interest in it, and would thereby save the property from sale, and be entitled to recover the money so paid, such payment was held to be not officious, and the suit was decreed. Badaum Koowar v. Lalla Seetul Pershad, 5 W. R., 126.

A putnee tenure which had been attached by G., in execution of a decree against D., was claimed by S., whose claim was allowed. Upon this G. instituted a suit against S. and others, to have the putnee declared to be the property of D., and being successful, had the putnee sold in execution of his decree against D., became the purchaser, and got possession. After this he saved the estate from being sold for arrears of rent which had accrued prior to his purchase, by paying up the amount due. He subsequently sued D. and S. to recover the amount so paid. S., who had meantime appealed to the Privy Council, succeeded in obtaining a reversal of the decree under which G. had sold the putnee; but this reversal did not take place before G. had instituted the suit for recovering the arrears he had liquidated.

Held that G. was entitled to recover from S. the amount which had been paid by him to save the putnee from being sold. Gopal Chundra Chuckerbutty v. Oodoy Lall Dey, 10 W. R., 115.

A suit by a mortgagee to compel a mortgagor to repay him the amount of Government assessment, which he has been compelled to pay when in occupation of the mortgaged property, is in the Mofussil an obligation in equity to repay, and is not cognizable by a Court of Small Causes. Vithobá Keshaashet v. Shábájiráv, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 122.

A dur-putneedar paying money as rent to save the putnee from sale is entitled to a refund, even though his name has not been registered in the office of the superior holder. Khetter Paul Singh v. Luckhee Narain Mitter, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 125.

Where a tenant is left in that condition in which he is compelled to pay his landlord's debt to save his own security from forfeiture, the circumstances constitute a sufficient authority to make the payment, e.g., the payment of Government revenue to save the estate from sale. Hills, J. v. Wooma Moyee Burmonee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 545.

(h) Rights of Purchaser.

Where a ryot's tenure is sold in execution of a decree under Act X obtained by the zemindar, the purchaser is not the ryot's vendee, nor bound by any decision to which the ryot was a party, or by an allegation or admission of that party. Shumbhoo Chunder Singh v. Ram Narain Doss, 9 W. R., 217.

The principle under which purchasers of estates at revenue sales acquire such estates in the condition they were in at the Permanent Settlement, is equally recognized by the last Sale Law (Act XI of 1859) as by the laws previous to it, and applies as much to actual encroachments on the talook or estates by neighbours as to incumbrances or under-tenures created on it by the old proprietor or by his laches. Goluck Monee Dossee v. Huro Chunder Ghose, 8 W. R., 62.

A purchaser at a sale for arrears of Government revenue, suing to establish his right to chur lands which had accredited to the purchased estate, is not bound by an agreement entered into by the prior owner with the owners of the adjoining estate to divide the chur equally; such an agreement is an alienation of or encumbrance on the purchased estate, and therefore, under Section 26 of Act I of 1845, void as against the purchaser (dissentiente Campbell, J.).

But, per Norman, J., and Campbell, J., it would seem that purchasers under any of the Sale Laws since Act XII of 1841 may be bound by a decree in a boundary suit against the prior owner. Boykuntnath Chatterjee v. Ameeroonissa Khatoon, 2 W. R., 191.

The purchaser of a zemindary sold in execution of a decree is entitled to all the rents accruing due from the date of his purchase; and if the tenants or ryots, after having had notice of his title, choose to continue to pay their rents to, or for the use of, the former proprietor, they do so at their peril, and cannot plead such payments in answer to a suit for rent by the new owner. The Collector of Rajshahye v. Hursoondery Debia, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 6.

A purchaser of a putnee sold in execution buys it with all its liabilities, including instalments due to the zemindar. Sheikh Khoda Buksh v. Degumburee Dossee, W. R., 1864, 207.

A decree against a vendor obtained before a Collector cancelling a pottah of a jote which has been sold, is not binding on the purchaser of the jote if the purchase was made before the transfer of the tenure to him took place. The purchaser having entered into possession became a "ryot holding under a pottah, the term of which had not expired," within Section 21, Act X of 1859, and therefore could not be rejected otherwise than in execution of a decree made in a suit against himself. Lalljee Sahoo and others v. Bhugwan Doss, 8 W. R., 337.

Where by custom the zemindar is entitled to a quarter share of the sale proceeds as his huq zemindary, he is entitled to recover it on the occasion of sales, either absolute or originally conditional, but subsequently becoming absolute by foreclosure from the vendor and the purchaser, and the latter cannot be discharged from his liability by proving that he has paid all, including zemindar's dues to the former, it being incumbent on him to see that the zemindar is satisfied in respect of his dues.

Held further that, under the circumstances, the plaintiffs, the zemindars, were entitled to one-fourth from Rs. 450, the principal amount repayable, and not from the amount ascertained at the time of foreclosure to be due to the mortgagee, including interest, inasmuch as the deed made no provision for payment of any sum as interest. Heera Ram v. Honourable Sir Rajah Deo Narain Singh and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 63.

Held by the majority of the Court (dissentiente Kemp, J.) that the Government, as auction-purchaser of the zemindary rights of a pergunnah, having waived all right to cancel the tenures of the dependent talookdars, and having admitted them to settlement and otherwise recognized their rights, the zemindar, as purchaser of those rights from the Government, could not put in force against the talookdars any rights which his vendor had waived. The vendee of zemindary rights cannot enforce against under-tenants any rights waived by the vendor. Joogul Kishore Roy v. Khaja Ahsanoollah, 4 W. R., Act X R., 6.

The Government, as auction-purchaser of the zemindary right of a pergunnah, having waived all right to cancel the tenures of the talookdars, and having admitted them to settlement and otherwise recognized their rights, it was held that the defendant, a purchaser, could not put in force against the talookdars any rights which his vendor had waived. Obhoy Churn Roy v. Rajah Asanoollah, 2 W. R., Act X R., 81.

The purchaser of a zemindary, with notice of an alleged mokurruree tenure, is entitled to enquire into the validity of such mokurruree, and to enhance the rents if the mokurruree is found really not to exist. Modhoosoodun Sircar v. Umurnath Ghose, 5 W. R., Act X R., 38.

The purchaser of an ijara, who has been formally put into possession after a contest, is liable to the zemindar for the rents of the ijara, whether he collects rents from the ryots or not. Rajah Indoo Bhossun Deb Roy v. Chunder Coomar Roy, 5 W. R., Act X R., 58.

A zemindar, in execution of a decree, sold the rights and interests of his tenant. He subsequently ejected the purchaser at that sale under a decree (dating prior to the above sale) for arrears of rent and ejectment under Section 78, Act X, which latter decree became complete on the expiry of fifteen days without deposit of the arrears due.

Held that until the purchaser adopted means to have his name registered in the zemindar's sherista, the latter was not bound to give him notice to pay the arrears due on the tenure which he purchased before proceeding to give effect to the decree. Bhubo Tarinee Dossia v. Prosonomoye Dossia, 10 W. R., 304.

In the sale of a putnee tenure for arrears of rent, effected under Section 108, Act X of 1859, the tenure would pass, free of incumbrances, if the sale took place in accordance with the provisions of Regulation VIII of 1819; i.e., if the right of bringing to sale for an arrear of rent had been specially reserved by stipulation in the engagements interchanged on the creation of the tenure. Brindabun Chunder Chowdhry and others v. Brindabun Chunder Sircar Chowdhry and others, 8 W. R., 507.

The power of a purchaser at a revenue sale to annul all incumbrances is limited to purchasers of entire estates. Kalidass Ghose v. Chandra Mohini Dasi, 8 W. R., 68.

It cannot be maintained that the purchaser of property sold under a decree in favour of a mortgagee takes the property free from such lease or farm as the owner might have found to be expedient or convenient, provided the value of the property was not impaired and the operation of the mortgagee's lien not impeded. Banee Pershad v. Reet Bhunjun Singh and others, 10 W. R., 325.

The object of Section 54, Act XI of 1859, is to protect only bonâ-fide incumbrances executed in contemplation of an impending sale, or in fraud of a possible purchaser. Monohur Mookerjee v. Joykishen Mookerjee, 5 W. R., 1.

In a suit by a dur-mokurrureedar against ryots for a portion of rent for one year (1273) and the whole rent of the next (1274), the defendants contested the latter claim on the ground that the rights of the mokurrureedar having been sold in execution under Act VIII of 1865 (B. C.), the right of the dur-mokurrureedar had been extinguished by the operation of Section 16, and that they had paid the rent for that year to one D., who intervened and was made a party.

Quære,—Could the purchaser determine for himself whether he acquired the tenure free of all incumbrances, or whether the incumbrances were of the kind excepted in Section 16, Act VIII (B. C.) of 1865, which would survive? Woomasoonduree Dossee v. Beerbul Mundul and others, 11 W. R., 563.

A., a zemindar, sold the rights of B., his putneedar, for arrears of rent under Regulation VIII of 1819. This sale was subsequently set aside at the suit of B. for irregularity. A. then sued B. for the arrears under Act X of 1859, and B. pleaded limitation. Held that A. was not guilty of a trespass in bringing the property to sale under a defective notice, and A. could not have sued for arrears pending the proceedings to set aside the sale. Rani Shurnomoye v. Shoshee Mookhee Barmani, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 1.

An auction-purchaser under Act I of 1845 is not entitled to sue to enhance the rent of a tenant, not being a ryot or cultivator, without his consent.

Quære,—Whether the auction-purchaser is entitled to take free of all incumbrances created by the defaulting proprietor. Joggodeshurry Dossia v. Umachurn Roy, 7 W. R., 237.

Act I of 1845 was not intended to afford statutable protection to a purchaser at a sale brought about by fraudulent default on a preconcerted arrangement, for the purposes of title. Nawab Ayed Munsoor Ali Khan Bahadoor v. Rajah Ojoodhya Ram Khan, 8 W. R., 399.

Section 21, Act I of 1845, does not apply to a suit brought to oust the certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of another person, but to make void a pottah granted by his mother. Bissonath Surma Bhuttacharjee v. Moran, W. R., 1864, 353.

The rights of an auction-purchaser under Act I of 1845 are modified by Section 1 of Act X of 1859. Rajmonee and others v. Goluck Chunder Sircar and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 102.

An auction-purchaser is no exception to the rule by which every landlord is bound to ascertain the nature, extent, and conditions of his ryot's holding before he serves him with a notice of enhancement. The necessary information may always be obtained by the landlord proceeding under Act VI (B. C.) of 1862. Lalla Singh v. Mussamut Bibee Reazoonissa, 8 W. R., 271.

An auction-purchaser is not bound to wait for his rent until he can clear away all fraudulent incumbrances created by his predecessor. Jotendro Mohun Tagore v. Kinkuree Debee, W. R. (1864), Act X R., 57.

An auction-purchaser cannot eject a ryot having a right of occupancy, or enhance his rent, except in the manner prescribed by law. Dabee Bhuggut v. Beechun Raoot, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 111.

Right of auction-purchaser to evict under Clause 3, Section 26, Act I of 1845, barred by possession as a khoodkasht kudeemee ryot having a right of occupancy. Syud Lotf Ali Khan v. Kashee Dyal, 1 W. R., 6.

The talook in this case having come into the possession of Government by resumption in 1841,—Held that the auction-purchaser could have no better title, and could be in no better position than the Government at the time of resumption. Moonshee Buzlool Rahman v. Prandhun Dutt, 8 W. R., 222.

An auction-purchaser under Act VIII of 1865 is not at liberty, without notice of his intention to cancel a pre-existing under-tenure, or other act on his part, to avoid any encumbrance. Gobind Chunder Bose and another v. Alimoodeen and others, 11 W. R., 160.

The title of a purchaser at a sale for arrears of Government revenue, to void an under-tenure and eject the tenant, will depend upon whether the tenure is protected under any of the clauses of Section 37 of Act XI of 1859, and whether the tenant has a right of occupancy. If the tenant can prove such a right he cannot be ejected under Section 37. Sheo Purshun Singh v. Maharajah Rajendro Kishore Singh and others, 12 W. R., 123.

An auction-purchaser of the rights and interest of one of several zemindars who at the time of the purchase held only certain nankar land in lieu of their zemindaree right during the continuancy of the maâfee grant by Government to another party, stands in the place of the zemindar, not in respect of the nankar land only, but in respect of all the right to settlement as zemindar after the maâfee grant comes to an end. Gokul Pershad v. Rughonath and others, 3 Agra Rep., 245.

The plaintiff held certain lands in talook Q, under a howladari patta; Q was sold for arrears of rent, under Act VIII of 1835, and purchased by the defendant. After purchase the defendant dispossessed the plaintiff from his lands, on the ground that he had purchased the talook free from all incumbrances created by the late defaulting talookdar. The plaintiff brought this suit to recover possession of his lands from the defendant. Held that a purchaser of a tenure, under Act VIII of 1835, does not necessarily acquire it free from all incumbrances. Case remanded for trial of the genuineness of the plaintiff's patta. Mir Jasimuddin v. Sheikh Mansur Ali, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 149, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 11.

When the former proprietor had a right to bring a suit to resume and assess lakheraj land, the auction-purchaser of his rights and interests acquired the same right under Section 54, Act XI of 1859. Dabee Munnee Chowdhrain v. Faqueer Chunder Shaha, W. R., 1864, 293.

The title of an auction-purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue accrues not from the date of sale, but from the date on which the sale was confirmed, and certificate granted under Section 20, Act I of 1845. Dheput Singh v. Moothooranath Jah, W. R., 1864, 278.

When a putnee granted by a Hindu widow, though in appearance a duly registered tenure falling within the 3rd Exception of Section 37, Act XI of 1859, was in reality a fraud which the owner or reversioner might have avoided,—Held that a revenue sale passes the right of avoiding it to the auction-purchaser. Ram Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Kashinath Moetro, W. R., 1864, 66.

The purchaser of an estate sold for arrears of revenue on the 29th Pous, the latest date of payment of the revenue due for the three months previous to Pous, is not entitled to recover from the defaulter the amount of revenue which he was subsequently obliged to pay for the month of Pous. Khema Soondery Dossia v. Nundcoomar Goopto, 4 W. R., 75.

The right to hold nij-jote lands necessarily passes with the sale to the auction-purchaser. Joy Dutt Jha and others v. Bayee Ram Singh, 7 W. R., 40.

Where an auction-purchaser did not avail himself of the power vested in him by law to avoid and annul a tenure created by his predecessor,—Held that it was not open to any person now holding his estates, and still less to a mere lessee claiming under him, to avoid the tenure. Tara Chand Dutt v. Mussamut Wakenooissa and others, 7 W. R., 91.

An auction-purchaser of the rights of Government in a talook sold for arrears of revenue is not privy in estate to the defaulting proprietor. He does not derive his title from him, and is bound neither by his acts nor by his laches. The purchaser moreover is bound by no limitation which would not bind or affect the Government. Buxlool Rohoman v. Pran Dhun Dutt, 8 W. R., 222.

When a putneedar's rights and interests in a putnee are sold during the pendency of a suit brought by him against his tenants, the purchaser acquires the putneedar's privilege to carry on the suit. Wilson v. The Government and others, 12 W. R., 122.

Semble,—The purchaser of a holding in a khas mehal sold under Act VIII of 1835 cannot claim the position or privileges accorded by Sections 37 and 52 of Act XI of 1859 to purchasers of permanently-settled estates, or of estates sold in districts not permanently settled, sold for arrears of revenue. Kylashchundra Shaha v. Ranee Shurnomoyee Dossee, 7 W. R., 318.

The auction-purchaser of a talook seeking to obtain possession against the former proprietors, many of whom are cultivators holding separate possession of specific portions and having their houses on the land, must sue them specially for those portions to which they lay claim. He cannot sue the whole community in the aggregate for all the lands of the village. Ramchunder Paul v. Omora Churn Deb, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 155.

When an auction-purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue creates a putnee he cannot sue to annul an under-tenure within that putnee, as his whole power under Act XI of 1859 passes to the putneedar, who alone can institute such a suit. In such a case the putneedar's competency to sue is not affected by the fact of his being a tenant of only a portion of the estate, provided that portion contains the tenure which is sought to be resumed. A putneedar, under such circumstances, though he may recover rent, is not entitled to eject an under-tenant who had been allowed to dig a tank and remain in possession undisturbed by the former proprietor for a long period (say upwards of 30 years), and who must therefore be assumed to have held with the acquiescence of the former proprietor, such acquiescence being equivalent to a lease. Sreemunt Ram Dey v. Kookoor Chaund, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 411.

When a sale takes place under the provisions of Act VIII (B. C.) of 1865 the whole tenure is sold, the purchaser acquiring it free of all incumbrances created by any holder. Sadhun Chunder Bose v. Gooroo Churn Bose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 99.

(j) Rulings under Regulation VIII of 1819.

Clause 1, Section 14, Regulation VIII of 1819, does not contemplate that any party may, by depositing the amount due, stay a sale of a putnee, but only a party having a recognized interest in such putnee. Kristo Jeebun Bukshee v. A. B. Mackintosh, W. R., 1864, 53.

On the sale of a talook under the provisions of Regulation VIII of 1819, all subordinate tenures, such as ousut talooks, howalahs, neem howalahs, do not necessarily lapse: it would depend very much upon the terms of the pottah or grant under which the original talook was created. Dwarkanath Doss Biswas v. Manick Chunder Doss, 9 W. R., 200.

A mere application by a putneedar to have his title registered is not sufficient. Section 6, Regulation VIII of 1819 prescribes the legal course if registration is refused. Kristo Jeebun Bukshee v. A. B. Mackintosh, W. R., 1864, 53.

By the words "residing in the neighbourhood," the Regulation does not make it imperative that the attesting witnesses shall be residents of the village, but may be taken to include men living within a short distance of the cutcherry. Mohinee Dossee v. Juggodumba Dossee, W. R., 1864, 382.

A sale under Regulation VIII of 1819 does not ipso facto annul all tenures created by the defaulting putneedar, but the purchaser, if he thinks proper, can avoid them. Modhoosoodun Kandu v. Ramdhun Gangooly, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 431; 12 W. R., 383.

Plaintiff claimed an eight-annas share of a putnee as purchased by the official assignee of an insolvent, Dad Aly, whom the Principal Sudder Ameen found to have been owner in his own right by inheritance of the share of the putnee of which defendant's ancestor, Govind Ram, having deposited arrears of rent, was in possession as gireesdar under the provisions of Regulation VIII of 1819.

Held that Govind Ram was substantially in the same position as a mortgagee in possession under an usufructuary mortgage; and that plaintiff, as a purchaser from such a mortgagor, would have no cause of action until the debt was paid off. Boistub Churn Bhadro and others v. Tara Chand Banerjee, 11 W. R., 357.

A dur-putneedar who has paid a deposit in order to stay the sale of the superior tenure under Clause 4, Section 13, Regulation VIII of 1819, and has come into possession of the tenure, and is entitled to the profits of it, is bound to give notice of his title to the ryots. In the absence of such notice he cannot recover from them rents already paid by them to the putneedar. Nilmonee Roy v. J. Hills, 4 W. R., Act X R., 38.

Looking to the terms of Section 8, Regulation VIII of 1819, it was an object of the Legislature to provide a sufficient notice to a defaulter before sale of his tenure, fifteen days' time (but not less) being considered sufficient; and without such notice no sale can be a sale duly held under that law. Huronath Goopto v. Juggun Nath Roy Chowdhry and another, 11 W. R., 87.

Where a Court finds that the notice prescribed in Clause 2, Section 8, Regulation VIII of 1819 has been duly served, it need not find whether the peon who served the notice complied with all the directions of the Regulation as to what should be done in verification of such service. Omission to comply with those directions does not vitiate a sale under the Regulation, provided notice is duly served. Sona Beebee v. Lall Chund Chowdhry, 9 W. R., 242.

With reference to the provision in Clause 2, Section 8, Regulation VIII of 1819, that the service of notice of sale of a putnee talook shall be attested by three substantial persons,—Held that the word "substantial" must be understood in its ordinary sense, and not be taken to mean simply men who can readily be found. Gopal Kishore Shoor v. Mudun Mohun Haldar, 2 W. R., 188; Mohinee Dossee v. Juggodumba Dossee, W. R., 1864, 382.

A defaulter cannot, under Regulation VIII of 1819, purchase a putnee sold on account of his default to pay the putnee rent, either in his own name, or in that of any other person. Mirza Mohamed Nusseer v. Kishen Mohun Gayee, W. R., F. B., 92.

Non-payment of the arrears of rent decreed in a summary suit gives the cause of action to a regular suit, under Section 18, Regulation VIII of 1819. Nubokishen Mookerjee v. Mudhoo Soodun Gangooly, 4 W. R., 99.

The plaintiff's former suit for rent upon a kubuleut dated in 1258 having been dismissed, and the kubuleut pronounced spurious,—Held that he was not estopped from now suing to set aside a pottah of 1244 under which the same defendant claimed, the validity of the pottah not being in issue in the former suit. Under Clause 2, Section 11, Regulation VIII of 1819, all leases originating with the late defaulting holder of a putnee talook, creating a middle interest between him and the actual cultivators, held to be cancelled on sale of the talook.

Costs awarded are for Rs. 5,000, as defendant, by not objecting to the valuation of the suit, forced the plaintiff to appeal to the High Court instead of the Zillah Court; an appeal lying to the latter within that amount. Oomanath Roy Chowdhry v. Raghoonath Mitter, W. R., F. B., 10.

Personal service of notice of sale on a defaulting putneedar is not a sufficient service under Regulation VIII of 1819, Section 8, Clause 2. The notice should be stuck up in the cutcherry of the Collector, and a copy or extract of the notice published at the cutcherry or principal town or village upon the land of the defaulter. Bykunt Nath Singh v. Maharajah Dheraj Mahtab Chund Bahadoor, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 447.

There is nothing in Regulation VIII of 1819 which will allow a putnee to be sold in separate lots, even though the whole putnee be sold by separate lots on the same day. H. Cowell v. Mohadeb Mundle, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 182.

A zemindar cannot bring a suit in the Civil Court to compel the purchaser of a putnee in his estate sold by auction for arrears of rent to furnish security for the amount of half the yearly jumma. If the purchaser of the putnee is not willing to give security for the payment of his rent, the zemindar's remedy is, under Regulation VIII of 1819, Sections 5 and 7, to appoint his own sezawal, or collector, and deduct his own rents from the collections before handing over the surplus to the putneedar, who moreover is declared by Section 7 to take all the risk of the attachment.

This remedy of the zemindar is not affected by the grant by him of a dur-putnee to a third party. Jay Kissen Mookerjee v. Jankunath Mookerjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 470.

One of several grantors of a putnee pottah cannot get rid of the putnee as to a share in the putnee by a suit as ijaradar of that share for rent against the ryots. The putnee must be upheld until set aside by a regular suit. Raj Chunder Roy Chowdry v. Unnoda Pershad Mookerjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 221.

Upon the sale of a putnee talook for arrears of the landlord's rent, the purchaser acquires it free of all incumbrances created by the outgoing putneedar; and, according to Act XIV of 1859, Section 7, the purchaser's cause of action arises from the date of sale.

Semble,—The purchaser cannot recover possession with damages without previous notice or demand of possession. Brojo Soondur Mitter v. Futick Chunder Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 407.

Where the sale of a putnee for default was reversed on the ground of notice not having been served as required by law, the purchaser was held entitled to a refund and to his costs from zemindar. Bykunt Nath Singh v. Maharajah Dheraj Mahtab Chund Bahadoor, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 447.

In a suit by a purchaser of a putnee at a sale for arrears of rent to enhance the rent of the ghatwal, under Regulation VIII of 1819,—Held that ismnawisi papers for 1811-1813, stating that the amount held by the ghatwal was 100 beegahs, did not entitle the plaintiff to enhance the rent of the surplus over that 100 beegahs in the face of satisfactory oral evidence of long uninterrupted possession. W. Farquharson v. Dwarkanauth Singh, 8 B. L. R., 504, and 16 S. W. R., P. C., 29.

An estate was sold under Clause 2 of Section 8, Regulation VIII of 1819, for arrears of rent due by a putneedar to the zemindar. Prior to the date of sale, the amount due was paid by the putneedar to an accountant in the Collector's office, as in satisfaction of arrears, but no notice was given to the zemindar or Collector. A suit was afterwards brought to set aside the sale, on the ground that, in consequence of such payment, there were no arrears due at the time of sale. Held, per Norman and Macpherson, JJ., that the suit could not be maintained. Per Mitter, J., if the custom of the Collectorate was, as alleged by the plaintiff, for payments in satisfaction so to be made to the Collector's accountant, the sale ought to be set aside. Krishna Mohan Shaka v. Munshi Aftaheddeen Mahomed, 8 B. L. R., 134, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 560.

Where a putneedar's possession is disturbed by the zemindar, and he is prevented from collecting the rents of certain kists, he is not liable for those kists.

Where a talook is sold for arrears, the putneedar who is sold out is not liable for the rent of the month in which the zemindar presented the petition enjoined by Clause 3, Section 8, Regulation VIII of 1819. Darimba Debia v. Nilmoney Singh Deo, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 180.

A putnee lease containing words to the effect that the putneedar could give no dur-putnee or mokurruree lease at a jumma less than the jumma of the putnee, was held to confer no such power as that described in Clause 1, Section 11, Regulation VIII of 1819.

A portion of a putnee tenure cannot be sold under the provisions of Regulation VIII of 1819; and if an auction-purchaser acquires any of the rights of the putneedar he is bound by the acts of the latter as regards the grant of leases. Mohadeb Mundle v. Mr. H. Cowell, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 445.

An under-tenant who has saved the superior tenure from sale by depositing the amount of rent due, not only has the security of the tenure which he preserves, and of which he can obtain possession on application to the Collector, but he also has a right to recover the amount deposited by him as a loan in an ordinary suit. Ambika Debi v. Pranhari Das, 4 B. L. R., F. B. R., 77; 13 S. W. R., F. B. R., 1.

The purchaser of a putnee talook, under Regulation VIII of 1819, sued for a kubuleut at an enhanced rent. The former putneedar had brought a similar suit, and the Court had declared that the rent was not liable to enhancement. Held that the purchaser was bound by that decree. Taraprasad Mittra v. Ram Nursing Mittra, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 5, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 283.

An issue on a fact is open to determination as between plaintiff and defendant, although a finding on that fact has been arrived at between those parties in a former suit in which they were both defendants.

Held, by Jackson J. (Mookerjee, J., dubitante), that a zemindar who puts up for sale a putnee under Regulation VIII of 1819, guarantees to the purchaser that there are some lands appertaining to the putnee, and if it turns out that there are no such lands (that there is in fact no such putnee), the purchaser will be entitled to recover his purchase-money. Khelut Chunder Ghose v. Kishen Gobind Deb, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 128.

The object of a notice of sale for arrears of rent is to give information not merely to parties wishing to purchase, but to the defaulter; and if the notice is not stuck up in the manner prescribed by law (Clause 2, Section 8, Regulation VIII of 1819), it is open to the defaulter to plead that he has been undamaged, and the sale becomes illegal. Rughub Chunder Banerjee v. Brojonauth Koondoo Chowdry, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 489.

In a suit to set aside the sale of a putnee tenure, where a purchaser is made a co-defendant under Section 14, Regulation VIII of 1819, and it is decreed that the purchaser may recover the purchase-money from the zemindar defendant,—Held that the purchaser may proceed in execution without a fresh suit. Preolall Gossain v. Gyan Tarunginee Dassee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 161.

(k) Rulings under Act XI of 1859.

The object of the Sale Law (XI of 1859) is to give a title to the purchaser which shall not be open to challenge by anybody; and the only ground on which a revenue sale can be set aside is (Section 25) that of irregularity in conducting the sale, in which case the Commissioner can set it aside on a petition of appeal presented to him within fifteen days of the sale. The petition may disclose a case of hardship or injustice where irregularity does not exist, as, for instance, that the sale has taken place where no arrear is due, and under such circumstances the Government, under Section 26, may set aside the sale. Woomesh Chunder Chatterjee v. Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs, 8 W. R., 439.

A sharer of a joint talook, whose share consists of a specific portion of land, can obtain protection from a sale for arrears of revenue only under Section 11, Act XI of 1859. Common registry of the talook as a shikmee talook under that Act will not preclude any person, thinking himself wronged by such registry, from suing for the cancelment of the same. Gour Chunder Goopto v. Tara Konee and others, 6 W. R., 217.

Held that there is nothing in Act XI of 1859 which makes it illegal for a former proprietor or co-sharer to be a purchaser of his estate at a sale for arrears due on that estate. Mussamut Neynum v. Muzuffer Wahid, 11 W. R., 265.

An auction-purchaser under Act XI of 1859 has no right to question the act of a single co-sharer in respect of a lease granted by him of land separately enjoyed by him under an arrangement made by the several co-parceners by which such a lease by one of them was to be looked upon as the act of all. Monohur Mookerjee v. Joy Kissen Mookerjee, 6 W. R., 315.

Where there has been a sale under Act XI of 1859 for arrears of revenue, but it is found that no revenue is actually due to Government, the sale must be set aside as not coming within the provisions of the Act. Maugeni Rahim v. Collector of Jessore, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 144.

A mortgagee who obtained a decree for possession with mesne profits on 11th May, 1864, sued the mortgagor under Section 9, Act XI of 1859, to recover a sum alleged to have been paid by plaintiff on account of Government revenue for the quarterly kist falling due on the 25th June following.

Held that as at the time the deposit was made plaintiff was the proprietor of the estate in arrears, he was not a party contemplated in Section 9, and the suit did not lie. Jussoda Dassee v. Matunginee Dassee, 12 W. R., 249.

The proprietors of a certain lot having obtained a separation of their shares under Section 11, Act XI of 1859, there remained one share (comprising one village and one-third of three other villages), which was sold for arrears of revenue and purchased by W. Of this share W. sold one village to P., who agreed to pay a certain sum as his share of the Government jumma, and applied to the Collector to open a separate account at the rate which had been agreed upon. The shareholders having objected, the Collector referred the parties to the Civil Court under Section 12. P. then brought a civil suit for a separate account. Held that there was no legal objection to the plaintiff's having his separate share opened at the rate he mentioned, even if the jumma on the share which remained in W.'s possession was excessive; for if the whole estate were put up to sale for arrears on account of that share, the other shareholders could always protect themselves by paying the sum due. Poornochunder Banerjee v. Ram Kanye Ghose, 12 W. R., 242.

A sharer of a joint talook, whose share consists of a specific portion of land, can obtain protection from a sale for arrears of revenue only under Section 11, Act XI of 1859. Common registry of the talook as a shikmee talook under that Act will not preclude any person thinking himself wronged by such registry from suing for the cancelment of the same. Gour Chunder Goopto v. Tara Konie and others, 6 W. R., 217.

A. in exchange for his lakheraj land obtained in 1761 from his zemindar 441 beegahs of mâl land which the zemindar thereupon created rent-free. The zemindar fell into arrears, and the zemindary was sold. Subsequently three persons, who had become owners of the zemindary, applied to the Collector, under Section 11, Act XI of 1859, and the Collector opened separate accounts with each of them for the revenue of their respective shares. The revenue due from one of them fell into arrears, and his share which included the 441 beegahs was sold under Section 13, and purchased by the plaintiff, who now sued the descendants of A. to recover possession.

Held that a sale of a share of a zemindary, under Section 13, Act XI of 1859, does not convey to the purchaser the share free from all encumbrances created by the former zemindar, but he acquires the share, as laid down in Section 54, subject to all incumbrances.

Held that under Section 3, Regulation II of 1805, possession of land for a period upwards of sixty years since the passing of Regulation XIX of 1793, without payment of rent, bars the remedy of the zemindar to dispossess the holder or to resume the land as mâl. Kasinath Koowur v. Bankobehari Chowdhry, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 446.

Section 13, Act XI of 1859, does not say that when an application has been made for a separate account, but when a Collector shall have ordered a separate account, that he is to put up to sale only the share in respect of which an arrear of revenue may be due. Maharajah Rajender Kishore Narain Singh v. Mussamut Doorga Koonwar, 7 W. R., 154.

Where certain howla and neem-howla tenures were never set aside by the Revenue Settlement or Revenue Commissioner's orders, from the time they were recorded as existing rightful hereditary tenures of those classes at the first settlement,—Held that the purchaser of the ousut talook cannot eject the holders of those tenures under Section 32, Act XI of 1859, so long as they pay their jumma according to the settlement jumma-bundee. Burd Kant Laha and others v. Gobind Chunder Gooho, 7 W. R., 50.

Section 33, Act XI of 1859, contemplates an action against the individual wrong-doer, irrespective of Government and co-parceners. Gunga Narain Bose v. Mr. William Cornell, 10 W. R., 442.

An appeal against the sale of an estate for arrears of Government revenue must be made to the Revenue Commissioner, otherwise the Civil Court is not competent, under Section 33, Act XI of 1859, to entertain a suit for the annulment of the sale. Mohun Lall Tagore v. The Collector of Tirhoot, 1 W. R., 356.

A lease of a share is protected under Section 54, Act XI of 1859. Kally Puddo Ghose v. Monohur Mookerjee, 7 W. R., 295.

A certified purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue, suing to recover possession of land from which he has been ousted, is not debarred from the benefit of Section 36, Act XI of 1859, unless he has acknowledged himself to be a benameedar. Jadub Ram Deb v. Ramlochun Muduck, 5 W. R., 56.

A sale by order of a Revenue Court can be set aside by a decree of the Civil Court, even if held directly under Act XI of 1859. Joydoorga Dabia v. Gopal Chunder Banerjee, 9 W. R., 538.

A purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue, with a paramount title under Section 37, Act XI of 1859, acquires the estate free from any incumbrance which accrued thereupon from the laches of former proprietors, in the same way as he would have acquired it free from any incumbrance created by sale, lease, or mortgage.

In the absence of any proof to the contrary such purchaser must be assumed to be the owner. Thakoor Dass Roy Chowdry v. Nubeen Kishen Ghore, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 552.

In a suit to recover possession of a share of an estate on the ground of purchase at a sale in execution, which share was alleged to have been knocked down by the Collector to another party in an execution sale under Act XI of 1859, where it was found that the plaintiff's purchase had not been bonâ fide, the right, title, and interest of the decree-holder having been previously purchased benamee by the judgment-debtor himself,—

Held that the real purchaser was the judgment-debtor, and that the holder of the rent-decree could properly sell either the estate or the said right, title, and interest. Lalla Juggessur Sahoy v. Gopal Lall, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 54.

Under Section 53 of Act XI of 1859 a co-proprietor who purchases an estate at a sale for arrears of Government revenue takes it subject to the incumbrances created by the defaulting proprietor. Mahomed Gazi Chowdry v. J. G. Leicester, 7 B. L. R., Ap., 52, and 16 S. W. R., C. R., 136.

The plaintiff and A. and B. were joint owners of an estate paying revenue to Government. The names of A. and B. were alone recorded in the rent-roll of the Collector. A. and B. alienated certain specific portions of the lands of the estate to their wives, and applied to the Collector, under Section 11 of Act XI of 1859, to open a separate account for payment of the proportionate share of the revenue payable in respect of the lands so alienated. The plaintiff objected to such separation, on the ground that the lands had never been divided, but always held ijmali, and that A. and B. claimed a larger share than they owned; but his objection was rejected by the Collector, on the ground that he was not a recorded proprietor, and the application of A. and B. was granted. The plaintiff now sued in the Civil Court for a declaration of the extent of his share in the joint estate, and to have the order of the Collector set aside. Held that the Civil Court had jurisdiction to entertain such a suit, and that it was not necessary to make the Collector a party. Hargobind Das v. Baroda Prasad Das, 6 B. L. R., 614; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 112.

A suit will lie in the Civil Court in respect of an act done by a Collector under Section 11 and the following Sections of Act XI of 1859, although he is not made a party.

Where an application is made to a Collector by a registered proprietor for a separate account, and the application is objected to within the meaning of Section 12, or the Collector considers that an objection is regularly taken, he has no jurisdiction to dispose of the matter, but should refer the parties to the Civil Court. Poorno Chunder Gangooley v. Mudden Mohun Mojoomdar, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 67.

In order to come under the protection of the third clause of Section 5, Act XI of 1859, it is not necessary that an estate under attachment by order of a judicial authority must also be managed by some revenue authority; all estates under attachment, whether managed by the Collector or not, being entitled to the benefit of the special notice described in that section.

How the term "estate" in the description attached to Section 5, Act XI of 1859, should not be restricted to its primâ-facie meaning of an whole estate, but must be extended somewhat beyond, as intended to apply to such shares as are referred to in the first portion of that section. Mohabeer Persaud Singh v. Collector of Tirhoot, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 423.

Whatever is sold under Act XI of 1859 can only be sold for arrears of Government revenue, and unless such arrears can be shown to have been due, any sale under that law will be void, inoperative, and without legal effect, and the title supposed to be given by the sale certificate will be subject to such defect. Ram Gobind Roy v. Syud Kushuffudossee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 141.

5 W. R., Civil, 56, and 11 W. R., Full Bench, 16, the former on Section 36, Act XI of 1859, and the latter on Section 260, Act VIII of 1859, considered and applied to a case under Section 21, Act I of 1845. Shaikh Johur Ali v. Brindabun Chunder, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 10.

An estate does not cease to be under attachment merely by the appointment of a manager under Section 243, Act VIII of 1859.

A suit to set aside a sale under Act XI of 1859, on the ground that no arrear of revenue was due, may be brought in the Civil Court without previous appeal to the Commissioner. Thakur Churn Roy v. The Collector of 24-Pergunnahs, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 336.

Under Section 3, Act XI of 1859, a Court may in its discretion, if the property be small, or for any other sufficient reason, allow any relative of a minor to sue on his behalf, without a certificate of administration. Surendur Lall Sahoo v. Maharajah Rajendur Purtap Sahee, 1 W. R., 260.

A notification issued under Section 5, Act XI of 1859, is simply a public call on the debtor to pay his debt by a fixed date; it does not operate as an attachment by the Civil Court. Nurkoo Ram and another v. Ramjoorawan Singh and others, 9 W. R., 481.

Held (by Dwarkanath Mitter, J.) that Section 21 of Act I of 1865, and Section 36, Act XI of 1859, do not apply to a purchase under Act XII of 1841. Booa Russoolee and others v. The Nawab Nazim of Bengal, 11 W. R., 382.

(l) Rulings under Act VIII of 1865.

At a sale held under Act VIII of 1865, the defendant purchased a shikmee tenure, and obtained possession thereof. Subsequently he ousted the plaintiff from certain lands, and hence the suit by the plaintiff for recovery of possession thereof, on the ground that the property in dispute was a lakheraj tenure created by the Rajah of Tipperah, and that the plaintiff was owner thereof, partly by purchase and partly by inheritance. The lower Appellate Court found as a fact that the late shikmeedar, and not the Rajah, had granted the lands in dispute as bramatar, but not in favour of the person through whom the plaintiff claimed. It however passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff, as he had been unlawfully dispossessed.

Held that the plaintiff having failed to prove the case as set up by him, and upon which he claimed, cannot be entitled to a decree upon grounds other than those stated in the plaint.

Held that under Section 16, Act VII of 1865, the incumbrances created by the former holder were voidable by the auction-purchaser, and that the plaintiff should show that the former holder could create such right. Iswar Chundra Chuckerbutty v. Bistu Chundra Chuckerbutty, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 97.

The relation between landlord and tenant is that of parties to a contract. The contract is entire and single. If a portion of a tenure be sold either by the tenant or in execution of a decree of the Civil Court against the tenant, in the absence of any consent by the zemindar, the only mode in which effect can be given to the alienation is to treat the purchaser as holding a rent-free tenure subordinate to that of the original tenant.

A brick-built house is not an "incumbrance" or a tenure within the meaning of that word in Section 16 of Act VIII of 1865 (B. C.), which a purchaser at a sale for arrears of rent can remove.

In this country the ownership and right of possession in the soil does not necessarily carry with it a right to the possession of buildings erected thereon.

A tenant who held a piece of land on a lease erected a brick house upon the land without the permission of, but without any objection by, his landlord. In execution of a decree of the Civil Court against the tenant in January, 1865, the materials of the house and the site on which the house was built were sold separately to two individuals from whom the defendant purchased both. On the 31st July, 1866, the tenure itself was sold for arrears of rent to one N., from whom the plaintiff purchased it. The plaintiff brought this suit to recover possession of the land free from all incumbrance by the removal of the house. The Court refused to give the plaintiff a decree for possession. Shibdas Bandapadhya v. Bamandas Mukhapadhya, 8 B. L. R., 237, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 360.

A purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree held under Act VIII of 1865 (B. C.), cannot be ousted from the property purchased by him without proof that the decree and sale were fraudulent, and that he (the purchaser) was a party to or had notice of the fraud. Damadar Roy v. Nimanund Chuckerbutty, 7 B. L. R., Ap., 1; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 365.

A purchaser of a tenure sold under Act VIII of 1865 (B. C.), for arrears of rent, cannot, under Section 16, eject a ryot who has acquired a right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859, under the former tenant. Nilmadhab Karmokur v. Shibu Pal, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 18; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 410.

Section 16 of Act VIII of 1865 (B. C.), does not apply to the purchaser of the rights and interests of the holder of a fractional share in an under-tenure. Harasoondari Dasi v. Kistu Mani Chowdrain, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 37; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 257.

The object of Section 16, Act VIII (B. C.), 1865, is to protect, not merely any one class of tenants, but the leaseholder of the particular land leased: the expression "khod-khast ryots" as used there meaning "resident and hereditary cultivators." Koontee Debee v. Hirdoy Nath Durreepa, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 206.

The purchaser of a partnership in a tenure, in other words, of a shareholder's rights, acquires no right to retain possession against a person who buys the tenure itself when sold for arrears under Act VIII (B. C.) of 1865. Huro Narain Giree v. Doorga Churn Giree, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 319.

Where the rights and interests of a judgment-debtor are sold in execution under Act VIII (B. C.) of 1865, the tenure itself does not pass, much less does it pass free from all incumbrances; and the purchaser is not entitled to eject tenants who have been occupying and cultivating the land for more than twelve years. Raj Kishen Mookerjee v. Dusruth Soothrodhur and others, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 234.

When a tenure is sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent under Act VIII (B. C.) of 1865, the tenure itself passes, and not merely the right, title, and interest of the tenant whose name is registered in the zemindar's book. Fatima Khatoon v. The Collector of Tipperah, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 433.

As a general rule when a tenure is sold in execution of a decree, under the provisions of Act VIII of 1865 (B. C.), the whole tenure passes, unless there is some reservation made at the time of the sale, Huro Gobind Biswas v. Domonter Dabee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 304.

Act VII of 1868.

In sales held by the Collector for the realization of Government demands realizable as arrears of revenue, the procedure laid down in Act VII of 1868 (B. C.) is to be followed. Therefore where a fine has been imposed for non-attendance of proprietors before a Deputy-Collector for the purpose of a partition under Regulation XIX of 1814, and the amount had been ordered to be paid on a given day but was not so paid, but tendered subsequently, —Held that the Collector ought not to have sold the property of the defaulters. He was bound to receive the amount tendered. Mohan Ram Jha v. Baboo Shib Dutt Sing, 8 B. L. R., 230; 17 S. W. R., C. R., 21.

1.—MISCELLANEOUS.

The plaintiff occupied as kashtkar a piece of land in a mouzah which was subsequently leased in farm. The farmer granted a pottah of a portion of the mouzah, including the plaintiff's holding, to Sheodeen, to whom, instead of the farmer, the plaintiff subsequently paid rent. In the absence of any evidence as to the nature of the pottah granted to Sheodeen, and of any consent on the part of the plaintiff to change his status, he did not lose his status of kashtkar, and was not liable to ejectment by reason of the ejectment of Sheodeen. Mataputut Singh v. Mata Dyal, 4 Agra Rep., 275.

Regulation XXVII of 1793 applies only to hauts and bazars which were in existence when it was enacted, not to those of a later date. Chunder Nath Roy v. Moonshee Zemadar, 16 S. W. R., C R., 268.

Where a summary suit for rent was pending under Regulation VII of 1799, when Act X of 1859 came into force, though judgment was given after it came into force, the right to bring a regular suit under Regulation VIII of 1831 was not affected by Act X of 1859. Govind Chunder Mookerjee v. Calla Gazee and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 119; 7 W. R., 185.

Regulation XIX of 1793 refers to grants to hold land free of revenue, not to grants made by a private individual free of rent. A party holding under a joutuck grant from a zemindar containing no reservation of rent, is entitled to hold rent-free. Kamesuree Dassee v. The Court of Wards, 12 W. R., 251.

A suit brought under Section 30, Regulation II of 1819, must be assumed to relate only to lakheraj created prior to 1st December, 1790, and is therefore not exempt from limitation under Section 10, Regulation XIX of 1793.

The plaintiff was allowed to amend his plaint by stating when his cause of action accrued, and if it accrued beyond the period ordinarily allowed for commencing such suit, by stating the ground on which he claimed exemption. Hera Monee Dabee v. Koonj Behary Haldar, 2 W. R., 207.

Held by Peacock, C. J., and Jackson and Macpherson, JJ., that the grant by a zemindar for valuable consideration of a piece of land to be held without payment of rent is valid as against the heir of the grantor, or a purchaser from him by private sale of the zemindary; and that, under Section 10, Regulation XIX of 1793, such heir or purchaser is not entitled to resume the land.

Held by Bayley, Norman, and Seton-Karr, JJ., contra.

Held, nem. con., that the opinions (reduced to writing) of Judges who heard the case, but who had ceased to be Judges of the High Court before judgment was pronounced, could not be treated as judgments in the case, but must be regarded as mere minutes or memoranda. Mutty Lall Sein v. Gyal Deshkur Roy, 9 W. R., 1.

The rate given in the butwarra papers is necessarily not the fair rate for lands; for under Section 19, Regulation XIX of 1793, the gross produce of each village is calculated with the proportion of the public jumma assessed thereon. Luleet Narain Singh v. Gopal Singh and others, 9 W. R., 145.

A zemindar by a sunnud dated in 1830 (after reciting that there was no water in talook A., and that the river being at a distance great inconvenience was felt for want of water, in consequence of which desertion took place in the village), granted to B. 22 beegahs of land rent-free, stipulating that B. should dig a tank on the land, and continue to distribute water. In a suit to annul the grant, on the ground that it was void under Section 10, Regulation XIX of 1793,—Held by the majority of the Court (dissentiente Levinge, J.) that grants of land made by zemindars free of rent are void under the provisions of that enactment.

But further held by the majority of the Court (dissentientibus Trevor, J., and Loch, J.) that the grant in question was valid, the reservation of a right to the use of the water by the tenants of the zemindary being a benefit or service in the nature of rent reserved to the zemindar, and that the grant was therefore either not one of those intended to be dealt with by Section 10, Regulation XIX of 1793, or was one which the zemindar was empowered to make by Regulation XLIV of 1793. Peezrooddeen v. Modosooddun Paul Chowdhry, 2 W. R., 15.

Suit for khas possession of land made over to plaintiff on a butwarra. The defendant pleaded twelve years' adverse possession, and that he was entitled to retain possession on payment of rent, as the lands were occupied by gardens made by his ancestor.

Held that Section 9, Regulation XIX of 1814, does not apply to the lands made over to the plaintiff under the butwarra; that section referring to the dwelling-houses of co-sharers and to offices, buildings, and ground immediately attached to those dwelling-houses, which the lands in suit were not proved to be. Lulit Narain v. Gopal Singh, 9 W. R., 145.

The defendant had been declared entitled, under Section 9, Regulation XIX of 1814, to hold certain lands as attached to his dwelling-house, at an equitable rent payable to the landlord. The landlord subsequently sued in the Revenue Court for enhancement of rent of these lands. Held that a suit for the rent of such lands could not be maintained in the Revenue Court. Held also, per Glover, J., that the rent so fixed on that land must be considered the fixed rent of the homestead of the house and ground, and not therefore capable of enhancement. Shaw Khairuddin Ahmed v. Sheikh Abdul Baki, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 65; 11 W. R., 410.

Held that Section 20, Regulation XIX of 1814, had no reference to a case where no partition had been made, and plaintiff was not a co-sharer. Foolbashee Kowar and others v. Urzun Sahoo, 12 W. R., 134.

Where a suit had been struck off the file on default under the old law, Regulation XXVI of 1814 ("kharij" being the word used), it was held that there was no "decision" such as is contemplated by Section 148 of the present Procedure Code. Gunga Ram and others v. Khem Narain Poorea, 11 W. R., 250.

2.—Landlords.

Where a kubuleut stipulates that A., the tenant, shall not on the expiry of his lease be liable to pay a rent higher than that reserved in the lease, and that the landlord shall not then let the land to any other tenant, but that A. shall not be entitled to erect any permanent building, or to excavate a tank, it was held that under these stipulations the landlord was not bound to re-let the land to A. at the close of the term of the lease. Held also that the fact of his allowing the tenant to hold over did not affect the landlord's right to resume possession after due notice. Fukeeroonissa Begum v. Chunder Monee Dossee and others, 12 W. R., 538.

Where a landlord stands by and allows his tenants, without any objection whatever, to erect pucka buildings upon his land, notwithstanding a stipulation in the kubuleut restraining them from so doing, he is precluded by his conduct from turning them out of possession. Baneymadhub Banerjee v. Joykissen Mookerjee, 12 W. R., 495.

The plaintiff hired a thatched bungalow of the defendant, entered into possession, and after living in the house some time lit a fire in the fireplace in one of the rooms. The chimney took fire, and the plaintiff's furniture was destroyed. He subsequently ascertained that the chimney had been thatched over, of which fact he had been all along ignorant.

Held that the landlord, defendant, was liable in damages for the loss sustained by him.

Per Kemp, J.—The landlord should have given the defendant notice of the defective construction of the chimney. The defendant had a right to assume that it was properly built. Radha Krishna v. W. C. O'Flaherty, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 277.

A., a Hindu, died, leaving his widow, B., and his mother, C. B. adopted D. C. granted a patni-patta to E. of certain property belonging to the estate of A. During the minority of D., B. received the rent from E., and afterwards D., on attaining majority, realized rent from E. by suits under Act X of 1859. Twelve years after attaining majority, D. sued for cancellation of the patni lease and for obtaining khas possession of the property. Held that the suit was not barred. The receipt of rent was no confirmation of the patni lease; it only created the relation of landlord and tenant. Held, also, that the plaintiff was not entitled to khas possession before the relationship of landlord and tenant was legally determined by a reasonable notice.

Semble,—Such notice should expire at the end of the year. Bunwari Lal Roy v. Mohima Chundra Kunwar, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 86; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 267.

Where tenants after mortgaging their land agree to pay an increased rent to their landlord, who is ignorant of the mortgage, and the property is afterwards sold in satisfaction of the mortgage-debt, the zemindar is entitled to recover the increased rent from the tenants or from the party who has succeeded to their rights and interests. Lalla Mitterjeet Singh v. Raj Chunder Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 449.

The right of a landlord to receive rent from a farmer depends upon his securing to the latter quiet possession, and giving him proper and lawful means of realizing rents from the tenants. Kristo Soondur Sandyal v. Koomar Chunder Nauth Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 230.

3. Tenants.

When a tenant holds on after the expiration of a lease, he does so at the same rent, and on the same terms and stipulations as are mentioned in the lease, until the parties come to a fresh settlement. Sheikh Enayatoollak v. Sheikh Elahee Buksh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 42.

In a suit to recover a village alleged by the plaintiff to have been let to defendant on service-tenure by ancestor of the plaintiff, and to be resumable at the pleasure of a successor, the only facts proved in evidence were a holding for a long period of years, and a payment of rent to the plaintiff, the zemindar. Held that such facts establish merely a tenancy from year to year. N. S. Vasudeun Patrudu v. Sri Rajah Sanyasiraj Peddabaliyara, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 1.

A ryot who holds lands in excess of his tenure is a trespasser, and not a tenant, and cannot be sued for enhancement. The landlord's remedy is to eject him by process of law, or to sue for a kubuleut in respect of the excess lands. Rajmohun Mitter and others v. Gooroo Churn Aych, 6 W. R., Act X R., 106.

An auction-purchaser of the rights and interest of the zemindar in an orchard cannot be treated by the latter as his ryot, because the area of the orchard is included in the settled area of the village of which he is the proprietor, and a suit by the latter to impose rent on the garden and for delivery of kubuleut is not maintainable. Mootee and others v. Roora and others, 3 Agra Rep., 159.

Where no pottahs and muchalkas have been exchanged between the parties, occupants of lands cannot be sued for its proceeds, even though they have admitted the plaintiffs to be the proprietors. Tanuviyán and others v. Valanaganda and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 3.

Buildings and other such improvements made on land in the mofussil do not by the mere accident of their attachment to the soil become the property of the owner of the soil. If he who makes the improvement is not a mere trespasser, but is in possession under any bonâ-fide title or claim of title, he is entitled either to remove the materials, or to obtain compensation for the value of the building, at the option of the owner. Thakoor Chunder Paramanick and others v. Ramdhone Bhuttacharjee, 6 W. R., 228.

Where a tenant holding under a terminable lease which does not provide for re-entry makes no allegation of previous possession, and there is no admission of it on the other side, the tenant is bound to go out at the expiration of his term; and if he claims a right of further occupancy it is for him to prove that right. Puddomonee Dassia v. Jhollab Pally and others, 7 W. R., 283.

No length of possession will give a tenant a title by prescription to a dam which was erected by the tenant on his landlord's land by permission of the landlord. Kessava Pillai v. Peddu Reddi and others, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 259.

Where there is nothing to show on what tenure a tenant holds from his landlord, the presumption is that he is a yearly tenant. Endar Lálla and Dayá Khusál v. Lalla Huri et al., 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 111.

A person is not entitled to remove additions which he may have made to a building, but is at most entitled only to compensation for present value, or for the expenses incurred in making the additions. Gopal Mullick v. Annund Chunder Chatterjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 363.

A tenant holding over for some time without renewal of his lease is entitled, whether he has any right of occupancy or not, to retain possession of his tenure until either he resigns it or is ejected in due course of law. Oomee Lochun Mojoomdar v. Nittye Chund Poddar, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 467.

Continuous payment of rent for about a hundred years was held to give rise to a presumption that the tenant held under a maurasi title. Brojanath Kunde Chowdry v. Lakhi Narayan Addi, 7 B. L. R., 211.

A. brought a suit in the Collector's Court against B., C., D., and E. for arrears of rent in respect of land demised under a pottah to F. He joined G. and H. as defendants. According to the terms of the pottah they were sureties for F. It was admitted that F.'s name was used benami in the pottah, and that he took no interest. A. sued B., C., D., and E. as the parties interested and in possession. C. objected that a new settlement had been made and a new pottah granted; that he held a moiety only of the lands, and was not liable for more; and that D. was his ryot, and ought not therefore to have been made a defendant. D. and E. contended that they were liable in respect of the lot comprised under the pottah, and had already paid rent for it to A.

under a decree, but objected that they ought to have been sued separately from B. and C. B. did not appear. The lower Court held that C. had failed to make out his case, and that D. and E. were liable in this suit, and passed a decree ordering them to pay the amount admitted by them to be due from them, and the other defendants to pay the remainder of the claim. C. appealed. On the appeal, Peacock, C. J. (Mitter, J., contra) held that the plaintiff's suit must be dismissed, the lease being to H., and not to the defendants; that the Court below had founded its decision on matters extraneous to the lease, which it had no jurisdiction to enquire into. C. appealed under Section 15 of the Letters Patent.

Held, by Kemp and Jackson, JJ., that the Collector had full jurisdiction to entertain the suit, which was properly brought against those who were in the actual possession of the land, and that these persons were really the tenants; that the form of the decree passed by the Collector was correct, the plaintiff having consented to the decree being given in that form; that the sureties had really made themselves responsible for those who were really interested under the lease, and not for F.

Prasanna Kumur Pal Chowdry v. Kailash Chundra Pal Chowdry distinguished. Held by Norman, J., (dissenting) that the terms of the lease under which F. was alone interested could not be contradicted by oral evidence; that F. alone was bound to the lessor under the lease; that the defendant could not be sued as tenant, unless subsequent to the pottah and kubuleut something had occurred creating the relation of landlord and tenant between them and the lessor; that no such relation or any contract creating such relation between the parties could be implied from the circumstances of the case, and the suit should be dismissed. The Revenue Court had therefore no jurisdiction. But whether in the Revenue or Civil Court, D. and E. could not be sued jointly with B. and C., nor could G. and H. Bipinbehari Chowdry v. Ram Chundra Roy, 5 B. L. R., 234; 14 S. W. R., C. R. 12.

Plaintiff's ancestor held certain lands from Government under a settlement at a fixed rent of Rs. 10-13 annas, but was subsequently appointed bhoonyee with a remuneration of Rs. 6-8, recoverable by deduction from the rent, leaving only 6 annas and 4 pies payable to Government by way rent. Held that the sunnud of appointment to the office of bhoonyee created no jageerdaree right, but that on the contrary the reservation of the rent of 6 annas 4 pies seemed to indicate that the tenancy remained, giving no right of exclusive occupancy to plaintiff as against defendant. Choitah Mohuntee v. Bhikaree Mohuntee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 410.

No tenant taking land is entitled, without some specific agreement on the subject, to change the nature of that land, or to make any permanent alteration in the state of landlord's property. If a person wishes to lease lands for the purpose of making bricks, that should be the subject of a special agreement between the parties, in the same way as when parties take lands for building purposes. Anund Coomer Mookerjee v. Bissonauth Banerjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 416.

The tenancy of an ordinary puttahdar in this Presidency when properly created entitles the tenant to the right of occupancy for the purpose of cultivation, until default in the payment of the stipulated rent or surrender to the landlord in writing, and the right of the tenant is assignable as a mortgage security. A verbal surrender by the tenant to the landlord after the assignment was known to the landlord cannot be relied on as rendering the assignment void. Venkaturumuniar v. Anunda Chetty, 5 Mad. Rep., 120.

A tenancy which is to continue year by year is a continuing tenancy so long as the parties are satisfied; and though terminable at the option of either party at the end of any year is not ipso facto terminated at the end of every year. Maloddee Noshyo v. Bullubbee Kant Dhur, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 190.

The repudiation of a tenant's title by his landlord can only form one cause of action, however often that repudiation is repeated. Nund Kishore Singh v. Huree Pershaud Mundle, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 64.

A tenant who alienates his tenure does not thereby subject it to forfeiture. Dwarkanauth Misree v. Kunye Sirda, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 111.

A tenant holding over a number of years on sufferance without a pottah is a yearly tenant, and if ousted without notice he may recover possession. But if he holds over under a pottah which has recently expired he is a trespasser, and may be turned out without being entitled to relief. Sadhoo Jha v. Bhupwan Oopadhya, 5 W. R., Act X R., 17.

A person cannot claim a right of occupancy as heir of a tenant-at-will.

The Civil Court has jurisdiction in the case when the claim is not based upon the allegation that the plaintiff has been illegally ejected by the person entitled to receive rent of the land.

A claim to be maintained in possession is liable to dismissal if the plaintiff be found not to be in possession at the date of suit. Busheer-ood-deen and others v. Dal Chund, 4 Agra Rep., 236.

4.—RYOTS.

Possession as a khodkast kudeemee ryot having a right of occupancy (but not merely as a khodkast ryot for twelve years), bars an auction-purchaser's right of eviction under Clause 3, Section 26, Act I of 1845. Syud Loft Ali Khan v. Kasee Dyal, 1 W. R., 6.

The mere division of a ryot's holding among his heirs (each one paying his share of the old rent separately) does not destroy the continuity of the old holding. The default of one shareholder will vitiate the tenure of all, and give the landlord a right of enhancement. J. Hills v. Besharuth Meer, 1 W. R., 10.

Act X of 1859 does not apply to a dispute between two ryots concerning the same land. Modhoosoodun Chuckerbutty v. Nufur Bowal, 1 W. R., 196.

A tenant holding a term under a farming lease of land which he might sub-let is not a ryot, and therefore does not by twelve years' occupation acquire a right of occupancy under Act X of 1859, Section 6.

A right of occupancy cannot be acquired by occupation for twelve years under Section 6, Act X of 1859, when such occupation has been by virtue of a lease granting a term of years, and during the whole or part of such occupation the term had not expired. Hurris Chunder Khoondoo v. Alexander, Marsh., 479.

Ryots do not lose their rights of occupancy, or their right to hold at fixed rates, merely because they cannot produce a written lease. Doorga Churn Mullick v. Bhcormun Manjhee, 6 W. R., 195.

Held by a majority of the Court (dissentiente Steer, J.) that the farmer of a Government khas mehal, as the party entitled to the rents, can accept a surrender of a tenure, and therefore is competent to assent to the division of a ryotee holding within his farm into several distinct and separate holdings. Huree Mohun Mookerjee v. Gora Chand Mitter, 2 W. R., Act X R., 25.

Section 13 of Act X of 1859 is applicable not merely to ryots having rights of occupancy, but to all under-tenants and ryots. The landlord cannot, by giving notice of enhancement, compel the tenant to pay more than a reasonable rent, and he cannot enhance without notice specifying the grounds of enhancement. The onus of proving the existence of the grounds alleged is upon the landlord. Bakranauth Mundle v. Binodram Sen, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 25; 10 W. R., F. B., 33.

The sub-letting of a tenure does not necessarily make a ryot a middleman. A ryot who holds land under cultivation by himself, or by others taking under him, is not a middleman. His holding, therefore, is not one the transfer of which requires registration under Section 17, Act X of 1859, and a suit will lie in the Civil Court in such a case to an unsuccessful claimant under Section 106 of that Act. Karoo Lall Thakoor v. Luchmeeput Doogur, 7 W. R., 15.

Where ryots continue to pay rent to the parties from whom they got their leases of turuf and nowabad lands, the mere fact that Government resumed and separately settled the nowabad lands with the turufdars will not injure the rights of the ryots, nor affect the resumption arising from uniform payment of rent for twenty years. All that the purchaser of the nowabad lands sold for arrears of rent can claim is a kubuleut for the proportion of the rent assessed on the nowabad lands, and hitherto paid to the turufdars. Huro Doss Raha v. Traheeram Paul and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 15.

By Act XVI of 1864 no unregistered lease for a term exceeding a year can be received in evidence in any civil proceeding, however small the value of the property leased.

Where proprietors purchased a tenant's rights, and sued to eject one, who alleged that he held the pottah from the tenant, it was held that the tenant, being a simple ryot, without transferable rights, could not give a third party any right of possession as against the proprietors of the estate, and that the holder of the pottah from the tenant was a mere trespasser. Shaikh Omar v. Abdool Guffoor and others, 9 W. R., 425.

A ryot may not possess the right to alienate his holding, either temporarily or permanently, but, in the absence of any local custom or stipulation that upon alienation the ryot shall be liable to ejectment, it does not follow that, by assumption of such right, he becomes liable to ejectment by process in the Revenue Court under the 5th Clause of Section 23, Act X of 1859. Nuthoo v. Dan Suhai, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 279.

Although in a mouzah cultivators may not possess the right of alienating their holdings, yet if, with a knowledge of such an alienation, the zemindar accepts rent from the alienee, he recognizes the alienee's position, and is as much bound as if he had expressly assented to the alienation. Rommun Singh v. Maharajah Eshree Pershad, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 144.

Held that a ryot having right of occupancy forfeits his holding and is liable to ejectment therefrom if he plants trees on a portion of his holding without the landlord's consent. Tez Singh and others v. Ram Dass and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 125.

Where the admitted mileek lands of a ryot were found by survey to be somewhat in excess of the land released to him by resumption proceedings based on a former survey, it was held that the excess could not be assumed as a matter of course to be mâl lands. Denobundhoo Suhye and others v. The Court of Wards, 11 W. R., 347.

In a suit to recover land out of a parcel alleged to have been granted to plaintiff and defendant jointly, under an amulnamah from the zemindar, defendant pleaded that the amulnamah, although nominally granted to himself and the plaintiff, had been in reality granted for the benefit of them and three other persons, and that all five had occupied the land, at first jointly, and afterwards severally, and that all their names had been recorded in the zemindar's sherista. The zemindar also was made a defendant.

Held that the question in this case was between the several persons claiming to hold the land, and not between them and the zemindar, and that the question of occupation was of the greatest possible consequence. Gopee Mytee and others v. Modhoo Mytee, 11 W. R., 303.

A ryot does not become a middleman simply because, instead of cultivating the land, he erects shops on it, and receives the profits from the shopkeepers. Khuggoorunissa Begum v. Amed Riza, 11 W. R., 88.

Occupation as a trespasser, or cultivation by a trespasser, cannot confer a right under Act X of 1859, and cannot be taken into account in considering whether such trespasser has occupied as a ryot for twelve years. Sheikh Peer Buksh v. Sheikh Meahjan, W. R., F. B., 146.

A ryot is not competent to contest the authority of a jumma-nuvis to grant a hookumnamah when the zemindar (though made a defendant to the suit) does not appear and challenge the authority of the jumma-nuvis. Hur Gobind Kote v. Japra Haree, W. R., 1864, 276.

A zemindar obtained a decree against a ryot for assessment, on the ground that the ryot held under an invalid lakheraj, but instead of assessing turned the ryot out of possession. Held that a suit by the ryot for recovery of the land on the ground of anterior possession is not sustainable, and the ryot must prove his title as against the zemindar; his anterior possession under the invalid lakheraj, the decision as to which he did not sue to set aside within the proper time, being the possession of a mere trespasser, and not that of an occupant ryot.

Sreemutty Wooma Soondery Thakooranee v. Kishore Mohun Banerjee and others, 8 W. R., 238.

A suit by a zemindar to eject a ryot who holds on after the period of his lease, is cognizable by the Civil Court, and not under Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1859, by the Collector. Sadut Ali v Srimati Sadattoonissa, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 101; 12 W. R., 37.

An occupant ryot in Assam does not forfeit his right to a pottah from Government by not applying for it so soon as another who was not in possession of the land. Mora Rabha v. Dhur Rabha, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 158.

A ryot holding a jote, for which he pays a particular rent to a Collector, who holds the land under khas management, is an "under-renter" within the meaning of Section 25, Regulation VII of 1799, and if he default in the payment of rent the proper procedure for the Collector is to sell his land at the end of the year. Rungo Kopohooa v. Dehassur Mussulman, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 302.

A ryot's tender of payment to be valid must be made at the proper place and to a person authorized to receive the same. Eshan Chunder Roy v. Khajah Assanoollah, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 79.

5.—Acknowledgment of Tenancy.

In a suit to enhance rent it was held that the payment of rent by defendant to a third party did not prove that the relation of tenant and landlord did not exist between defendant and plaintiff, where such payment had been made to that party, not as landlord, but under a deed of assignment from plaintiff's father. Kristo Dhun Pundit v. Mahomed Nukee Kotwal, 10 W. R., 495.

By receiving rent the landlord acknowledges an existing tenancy; and he cannot therefore eject the tenant for non-payment of rent due for any period prior to that in respect of which he has received rent. Sheikh Peer Bux v. Mowzah Alli, Marsh., 25.

The receipt of rent for 1268 by the landlord bars his right to eject the tenant for non-payment of rent due up to the end of 1267, the receipt for rent being an affirming of tenancy for that period. The receipt of rent for 1268 has the same effect as if the landlord had at the commencement of 1268 created a new tenancy. Sheikh Peer Bux v. Mowzah Ally, W. R., F. B., 10; Ind. Jur., O. S., 7.

It is not absolutely necessary that receipt should exist for twenty consecutive years before the date of suit to entitle the ryot to the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859. Mattyani Dabea v. Soondury Dabea, 2 W. R., Act X R., 60.

If a person being aware that another is in possession claiming to hold under a lease accepts rent from him, he thereby ratifies the lease so far as he has the power to do so; and if he wishes to protect himself from the ordinary inference that he recognizes the lease he is bound to give distinct notice to the tenant that he intends to dispute its validity, so as to leave the tenant an opportunity of refusing payment. Juggeshur Buttolezal v. Rajah Roodro Narain Roy, 12 W. R., 299.

A landowner who, after the expiration of a lease, continues to receive rent for a fresh period, must be considered to have acquiesced in the tenant continuing to hold upon the terms of the original lease, and cannot turn out the tenant, or treat him as a trespasser, without giving him a reasonable notice to quit. Ram Mhelawan Singh v. Mussamut Soondra and others, 7 W. R., 152.

Where a tenant has repeatedly acknowledged that a person in possession of the proprietary right was entitled to receive rent, and has in fact attorned to him, he cannot afterwards be allowed to question the validity of the title of such person on the ground that the instrument by virtue of which possession of the proprietary right had been obtained was unregistered. Shums Ahmed v. Goolam Mohee-ud-deen, 3 N. W. R., 153.

Where a tenant has been allowed to hold over leases on the expiry of their terms, and has continued in possession under those leases, it must be supposed that there is an implied agreement between him and the landlord, and the tenant under such circumstances is entitled to hold on until served with a legal notice to quit. Jumant Ali Shah v. Chowdra Chutturdharee Sahee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 185.

An under-tenant who has dug a tank and been in possession undisturbed by the former proprietor for a long period, such acquiescence being equivalent to a lease, cannot be ejected by the putneedar. Sreemunt Ram Dey v. Kookoor Chund, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 481.

By accepting rent the zemindar assents to the transfer of a tenure, whether the whole is sold or a part only. Bharut Roy v. Gunganarain Mohaputti, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 211.

Held that a zemindar, by taking the rent of the plaintiff's purchased lands after the rent was deposited by him in the Collector's treasury, virtually admitted the plaintiff's status as purchaser from the former ryots, and that he had attorned to him as landlord; and that as this payment was made long before the zemindar sued the former ryots for enhanced rent under Act X of 1859, the decrees obtained in that suit must have been collusive. Gudadhur Banerjee v. Khettramohun Surmah and others, 7 W. R., 460.

6.—Determination of Tenancy.

An otti-holder, like a kânámdar, forfeits his right to hold for twelve years by denying the janmi's title. Kellu Esadi v. Puapalli and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 161.

The acceptance of the rent by the landlord after the institution of a suit to recover possession of the land is not a waiver of a forfeiture by the tenant under a condition in the lease. A tenant, upon payment of all costs of the suit, will be relieved from the consequence of such forfeiture, in accordance with the practice of Courts of Equity in England and America. Timmarsa Puranik v. Badyi Kuppaganda, 2 Bom. Rep., 70.

The Court will not relieve against the forfeiture of a lease caused by non-payment of rent, although the lessor on previous occasions has waived the forfeiture. Cuttenho v. Souza, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 15.

It was stipulated in defendant's lease that, on his failing to pay any instalment of the rent, plaintiff might appoint a sezawal to collect direct from the under-tenants.

Held that the appointment of such a sezawal will not determine defendant's lease, and that he was still liable for any deficiency in the rent after the sezawal's collections were credited. Fakiruddin Mahomed Ahasan v. C. J. Phillips, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 53; 11 W. R., 468.

Any rule which prohibits a tenant from improving his holding is one which on grounds of public policy Courts are bound to restrain within its strictest limits.

When a zemindar insists on his right to prohibit the construction of kutcha wells, he should be required to prove that the right claimed by him customarily exists in the estate.

Forfeiture is not bound to be deemed the invariable penalty for breach of contract occasioned by the construction of a well.

When such forfeiture is claimed, and the right to claim it is proved, the Court should consider whether an adequate remedy cannot be secured to the landlord without depriving the tenant of his whole interest in the holding, and if it finds that such a remedy can be given, and that the tenant has not deliberately invaded his landlord's rights, but, admitting his own position as tenant, has acted in what he believed to be the exercise of a right, or in the honest belief that his act would not meet with objection on the part of the landlord, it should refuse to oust the tenant, and leave the landlord to seek a remedy which would be more proportionate to the injury he has sustained, and amply relieve him from its effects.

Semble,—If a zemindar has before the construction of a well by a tenant provided sufficient means of irrigation, he will be entitled to receive rent at the rate payable by the cultivators of the same class as his tenant for land with the like facilities for irrigation in places adjacent, and will not be deprived of the right to claim rent at irrigated rates because the cultivator does not choose to avail himself of the irrigation provided for him, or thinks fit to make an outlay on the construction of a well which will not materially increase the productive powers of a holding to a greater extent than they would have been increased had the cultivator availed himself of the means of irrigation placed at his disposal by the zemindar. Sheo Churn and others v. Bussent Singh; Ramguthun Singh v. Moonshee Meda, 3 N W. R., 282.

When there is no custom of the country to the contrary, six months' notice to quit is proper notice. This period must have elapsed before the plaint is filed, and the time occupied in the suit before decree cannot be counted. Nánábhai Rustamji v. Pestanji Jamsetji, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 31.

Where a landlord assigns his right to another, his lessee cannot put an end to the obligation to pay rent, if, after becoming aware of the arrangement, he made no objection. If the assignee dispossesses the lessee, he cannot sue the latter for rent. Gour Dyal Singh v. Sheikh Hubeel Hossein, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 83.

7.—Right of Occupancy.

A ryot with a right of occupancy, though holding under a temporary pottah for a term of years, cannot be ejected by his landlord, unless the latter can prove a stipulation under Section 7, Act X of 1859. Sheeb Dyal Pauleet v. Dwarkanath Sookul, 2 W. R., Act X R., 54.

A sub-tenant of a cultivating ryot cannot acquire a right of occupancy. Ketal Gain and others v. Nadur Mistree, 6 W. R., 168.

The mention in a pottah of a certain term for which a rate of rent is fixed, is not of itself evidence that there is no right of occupancy. Nund Lall Singh and another v. Jumun Singh, 6 W. R., Act X R., 38.

Though a ryot may have asked for a pottah at fixed rates, yet if it be clear from the facts pleaded by him that he never claimed the benefit of Section 3 of Act X of 1859, and pleaded only the facts required by Section 5 of the Act, he is entitled to obtain a pottah at fair and equitable rates for the period specified in the plaint, or, if necessary, to be fixed by the Court, if he can prove his allegation of having held at the same rate for twenty years, and so acquired a right of occupancy. Shaikh Lotf Ali v. Manick Chand Chuckerbutty, 6 W. R., Act X R., 76.

Mere priority of occupation of a chur by A does not warrant the presumption that the land which before diluviation was on the same site as the chur now is belonged to A's ancestors. Nobokissen Roy v. Juggobundhoo Bose, 2 W. R., 284.

Ordinarily a holding under a bhagdaree tenure (i.e. upon a rent consisting of a portion of the produce) would establish a right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859. Hureehur Mookerjee v. Biressur Banerjee and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 17.

In the absence of proof of any separate class of ryots within the general body of occupancy ryots, the general body of such ryots must be held to be "the same class of ryots" to whose standard a ryot with a right of occupancy may be raised, although some may be more and some less ancient than he. Ram Coomar Dhara and others v. Bhoyrub Chunder Mookerjee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 33.

Only those tenants who cultivate their lands or sub-let them to actual cultivators of the soil are entitled to rights of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859. Bindabun Chunder Chowdhry v. Issur Chunder Biswas, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 1.

A sub-lessee from a ryot having a right of occupancy can gain no right of occupancy for himself under Section 6, Act X of 1859. D. N. Gilmore v. Surbessuraee Dossee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 72.

A right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859, cannot be acquired by a ryot holding over for more than twelve years after the expiration of a sub-lease for a term by a ryot having a right of occupancy. Jummuttunnisa Bebee v. Noor Mahomed, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 77.

A tenant evicted by his landlord from land to the occupation of which he is entitled may maintain a suit under Act X of 1859, Section 23, notwithstanding he has no "right of occupancy" under Section 6 of the Act. Dhujah Roy v. Meer Sukhawut Hossein, Marsh., 492.

A lessee cannot claim to be considered a tenant by virtue of a right of occupancy if he has never pleaded such a right, and after he has denied the landlord's right altogether. Jardine, Skinner, and Co. v. Ranee Shama Soondery, 3 W. R., 144.

Neem howalas (even though they may not comprise the right of holding at a fixed rent), and all other such rights of occupancy established by the ancient prescription and custom of the country, are transferable tenures. Purchasers from neem howaladars are consequently entitled to rights of occupancy. Juggut Chunder Roy v. Ramnarain Bhuttacharjee, 1 W. R., 126.

The mere fact of plaintiff suing for enhancement implies the tenant's right of occupancy, for a tenant-at-will may be ejected if he refuses to pay such rent as the landlord demands. A right of occupancy is a transferable tenure; but the zemindar is not bound to register the transfer under Section 27. Mussamut Taramonee Dossee v. Birressur Mozoomdar, 1 W. R., 86.

A tenant having a right of occupancy cannot create an intermediate tenure between himself and the zemindar. Hureehur Mookerjee v. Jodoo Nath Ghose, 7 W. R., 114.

A tenant who has a permanent right to the occupancy of land subject to payment of fair and equitable rent has, as a matter of course, a right to sub-let the land to the extent of his own interest therein. Khoshal Mahomed v. Joynooddeen, 12 W. R., 451.

Where plaintiff had cultivated land, and defendant had taken away the crops produced,—Held that plaintiff would have no right to recover the value of the crops, unless he either had good right as against the defendant to occupy and cultivate the land, or had been led by the conduct of the defendant to suppose that he had such right. If he had cultivated with the knowledge of defendant, that would give him a right to the produce, even though not entitled to the occupation. Obhoy Churn Sein v. Ram Hurree Adhikaree, 10 W. R., 300.

A tenant having a right of occupancy can create a lease, and the lessee from him is entitled to hold the lands under the terms of the lease, the zemindar being entitled to nothing but the rent which the ryot who holds from him immediately has agreed to pay. Jumeer Gajee v. Goneye Mundul, 12 W. R., 110.

In a suit by a lessee to oust the tenant in possession,—Held that the tenancy must be shown to have been legally determined by notice to quit, demand of possession, or otherwise.

Semble,—A right of occupancy can be gained in land let for the purposes of grazing cattle or horses. W. Fitzpatrick v. George Wallace and others, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 317; 11 W. R., 231.

No right of occupancy is acquired by a tenant's simply occupying and paying rent under a grant for no specified period.

A suit does not necessarily fail because plaintiff fails to prove allegations in his plaint which are not material to the plaint. Ramdhun Khan v. Hurrudhun Poramanick, 12 W. R., 404.

A. sued for a declaration of right of occupancy founded on a pottah and long possession, and alleged that he had under-let to ryots the land demised by the pottah, but that B. had obtained a decree against them for rent. The lower Court on appeal held that A. had determined his tenancy by quitting the land. Held that A. did not, by sub-letting, transfer the right of occupancy. Hurrun Chunder Pal v. Mukta Soondery Chowdhrain, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 81; 10 W. R., 113.

The rights of a tenant cannot be destroyed by the relinquishment of rights by the purchaser from a putteedar from whom the tenant held by pottah. Before the tenant can be ousted, it must be ascertained whether he holds under a legal title and one which gives him a right of occupancy. Chutter Dharee Singh v. Jutta Singh, 4 W. R., 76.

A ryot with a right of occupancy does not, by sub-letting his land, lose his right; but the sub-lessee thereby gains no right. Kalee Kishore Chatterjee v. Ram Churn Shah, 9 W. R., 344.

Holding land as a ryot, if for a sufficient period, gives a right of occupancy, whether the land has been held under renewed leases or on a continuous lease. Khuggooronissa Begum v. Ahmed Reza, 11 W. R., 88.

The transfer of a right of occupancy does not work as a forfeiture of the rights and interests of occupant ryots themselves in the land. Gora Chand Moostafee v. Buroda Pershad Moostafee and others, 11 W. R., 94.

Held that land newly broken and brought under cultivation by a ryot cannot be received as zemindar's seer land, nor can the former be held to be a mere shikmee cultivator incapable of acquiring right of occupancy in the land. Jhugro and others v. Lantoo Pandey, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 32.

The plaintiff in this case succeeded to his uncle's holding, who had a right of occupancy. The zemindar permitted him for about six years to hold the land without any new arrangement. Held that the plaintiff is entitled to recover the land as against the zemindar, his occupation being presumed to have been regarded as a continuation of the right of occupancy already acquired. Brijhbookun and others v. Bhyrow Dutt, 4 Agra Rep., 240.

In the absence of any evidence of special custom, —Held that a nephew could not inherit the tenant-right from his uncle, whose legal heirs were his sons, nor could the latter transfer their right of inheritance to their cousin, or confer on him such a right by consenting to his occupation of the land. Omrao Singh v. Pertar, 4 Agra Rep., 143.

By Section 21, Act X of 1859, a ryot with a right of occupancy can be ejected in execution of a decree under the Rent Law. Raj Mohun Neogee and others v. Anund Chundra Chowdhry and others, 10 W. R., 166.

By adverse holding for more than twelve years, a tenant gains a right of occupancy as against his predecessor, even if the latter's absence has been involuntary in consequence of transportation, there being no exception in the Limitation Act with regard to plaintiff's absence from such cause. Domun and others v. Shubul Koolal and others, 10 W. R., 253.

In a suit to recover possession of land which defendant alleged himself to have held for more than twelve years under a mokurruree lease, where the lower Appellate Court, finding that defendant failed to prove his mokurruree right, declared he had no title to hold as a squatter,—Held that the lower Court ought to have found what was the nature of the occupancy, and how long it had subsisted. Jorwar Singh v. Hakeem Khyrut Aly, 10 W. R., 360.

A transfer of a mere right of occupancy gives no title to the transferee against the zemindar.

Ranee Doorga Soondery v. Brindabun Chunder Sircar, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 57; 11 W. R., 162.

Held that plaintiffs, as holders of a lease from the proprietor which gave them the right of cutting grass and other spontaneous produce of the lands, did not, merely by reason of lengthened enjoyment, acquire any right of occupancy in respect to such holding, that the tenure under which they claimed to hold was not a holding of land within the meaning of Section 6, Act X of 1859, and they must, in the absence of an express condition otherwise determining the period of lease, be held to be tenants-at-will holding year by year at the pleasure of the landlord. Goor Doil and another v. Ramdut and another, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 15.

The question of a prescriptive right of occupancy cannot arise in a case where a tenant sues to recover possession of land from which he alleges he has been illegally ejected. The tenant might have been in lawful possession only six weeks, and yet his eviction might have been illegal, and he would be entitled to recover. Shaikh Bahadoor Ally and another v. Domun Singh and others, 7 W. R., 27.

Where the zemindar consents to the transfer of a tenure from one ryot to another, the possession of both must be considered to be continuous, and the right of occupancy to date from the time of the first holder. Huro Chunder Goho v. A. D. Dunn, 5 W. R., Act X R., 55.

The holder of a ryotee jote is protected by Section 6, Act X of 1859, and has a clear right of occupancy against the purchaser of the putnee talook 14 years after his purchase. 5 W. R., Act X R., 63.

A right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859, is not affected by a mere change in the farmers. Sheo Churn Singh v. Gora Chand Ghose, 3 W. R., Act X R., 125.

When possession for twenty years, as on a mourosee lease, is found, the right of occupancy is inherent under the lease and under Section 6, Act X of 1859. Gowree Kant Banerjee v. Goluck Chunder Pakrashee, 4 W. R., Act X R., 49.

When a zemindar has dealt with a defendant as with a ryot having a right of occupancy, the failure of the ryot in a former suit to establish a higher position may reduce him to, but cannot deprive him of, the status attributed to him by the zemindar. Puddo Lochun Bhadooree v. Chundernath Roy, 5 W. R., Act X R., 51.

The setting up of a hostile title against the zemindar by a tenant under a pottah found to be fraudulent amounts to a disclaimer and forfeiture of all rights of occupancy to which the tenant might have been entitled had he set up his title under Section 6, Act X of 1859. Mirza Nadir Beg v. Mudduram, 2 W. R., Act X R., 2.

Remote heirs are not allowed to succeed to a right of occupancy. Sons, or immediate heirs residing with the ryot in the village, succeed on his death. Mussamut Pem Kooer v. Upper Balee Sing, 2 N. W. R., 86.

A zemindar does not, by the mere receipt of a rent from a purchaser from the tenant having a right of occupancy, sanction the sale to the purchaser so as to give him a right of occupancy. Gaur Lal Sirkar v. Rameswar Bhunuk, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 92.

In order to establish a right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859, a ryot is not entitled to add to his own possession the possession of his vendor, even with the consent of the zemindar to the transfer to him. Hyder Buksh v. Bhoopendro Deb Koonwar, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 179.

Proof of defendant's right of occupancy by her possession for more than twelve years, even though she might have failed to prove her pottah was a sufficient answer to plaintiff's claim to khas possession of the land in question, and the Subordinate Judge was held to have gone quite out of his way to declare that the plaintiff could enhance defendant's rent. Munsoob Bibee v. Ali Meah, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 358.

A. and B. jointly obtained a pottah of a piece of land from the zemindar for a period of five years. Afterwards A. alone obtained a pottah for another period of five years. Upon the expiry of this period, A. held on for two years longer, when he was dispossessed by the zemindar. In a suit by A. for recovery of possession on the ground that he had acquired a right of occupancy,—Held that he had not acquired a right of occupancy. Sheikh Mahomed Chaman v. Ramprasad Bhagat and others, 8 B. L. R., 338.

From 1824 to 1832 the defendant held certain lands as cultivator; from that year to 1839 he obtained a lease from the zemindar of the village in which the lands were situate; from 1839 to 1843 he continued to hold these lands as cultivator; from that time to 1862 he again obtained a lease of the village, retaining these lands in his own cultivation; and after the expiry of the lease he continued to cultivate the lands. In a suit by the zemindar for possession, on the ground that the defendant was holding over after the expiry of his lease,—Held that the defendant had acquired a right of occupying under Section 6, Act X of 1859. Makandi Lal Deebie v. L. G. Crowdry, 8 B. L. R., Ap., 95.

A ryot who has held or cultivated a piece of land continuously for more than twelve years, but under several written leases or pottahs, each for a specific term of years, is entitled to claim a right of occupancy in that land, unless there is in the pottah an express stipulation contrary thereto. Pandit Sheo Prikash Misser v. Ram Sahoy Singh, 8 B. L. R., 165; and 17 S. W. R., C. R., 62.

A tenant with a right of occupancy does not lose that right merely by making an arrangement to pay a certain rent for his holding for a certain number of years; but if he surrenders his rights and return for an enlarged holding his occupancy right will be destroyed. Dirgang Singh v. Foorseet, 1, 5 N. W. R., 99.

Ordinarily tenants having a right of occupancy may, on the expiry of any agricultural year, relinquish their holdings by giving the landlord due notice; and the determination of the tenure of the tenant, whether by forfeiture or relinquishment, will put an end to the tenure of the shikmee holding under the tenant. The relinquishment of the holding will ordinarily put an end to the sub-tenures, provided such relinquishment be accepted by the landlord in good faith. Where the landlord procures the relinquishment of the holding to defeat the underleases he should be held bound by such underleases, although custom may not authorize the tenant to grant leases to inure beyond the duration of his own interest. Hoolassa Ram v. Pursotun Lal, 3 N. W. R., 63.

Ordinarily the period during which lands are held under a pottah, or lease, is not to be excluded from the computation of the time necessary to give to the ryot a right of occupancy. Hooba Khan v. Munsur Ali, 3 N. W. R., 37.

To the land in suit (a tank), producing water-nuts, which do not grow spontaneously, but are the result of sowing or planting, a right of occupancy can be acquired. Moolchand v. Cheetree, 1, 11 N. W. R., 175.

If a ryot has a right of occupancy, and insists on that right, he impliedly undertakes to give a kubuleut at fair and equitable rates if his landlord requires him to do so. But if the right of occupancy is absent the ryot can only remain on the land by the permission of the landlord, viz., on such terms as may be agreed upon between the landlord and himself. Rajah Sutto Churn Ghosaul v. Gouree Pershad Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 117.

The mere fact of a landlord permitting a tenant to hold over for a year beyond the term of his lease cannot create any right of occupancy in the tenant's favour. The landlord's cause of action in such a case arises when he is refused the right to re-enter. Kabeet Shaha v. Radha Kissen Moullick, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 146.

A mere change in the proprietary title of an estate does not entitle a putneedar, who holds from the new proprietor, to eject a tenant who can prove a right of occupancy. Ram Ghose v. Radha Churn Gungooly, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 416.

A zemindar occupying his own lands as nij-jote cannot, when the zemindaree passes into other hands, lay claim to them on the ground that he is a ryot with rights of occupancy. A. Reed v. Sree Kissen Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 430.

A bhowlee tenure may be a goozashta tenure; and a ryot who pays rent in kind and is in possession of, or cultivates, land for a period of twelve years, has a right of occupancy in the land so held or cultivated by him so long as he pays the rent in kind for the same. Jutto Moar v. Mussamut Basmuttee Kooer, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 479.

The right of occupancy stated in Section 6, Act X of 1859, cannot be transferred except as laid down in that Act. When a jote is transferred, even with the consent of the zemindar, the transferree merely acquires a new jote on the terms on which the old tenure was held, but he is not entitled to make up his right of occupancy by adding the time during which his predecessor held it. Tara Pershad Roy v. Soorjee Kant Acharjee Chowdry, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 152.

A zemindar cannot eject tenants who have been holding or cultivating for a period of more than twelve years, even though they were originally tenants-at-will. Hyder Buksh v. Bhoopendro Deb Coomer, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 231.

By holding for twelve years a ryot does not acquire a right of occupancy, if the land has been sub-let to him for a term, or year by year, by a ryot having a right of occupancy. Nil Koomal Sein v. Danesh Shaikh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 469.

The strict Hindu law of inheritance does not universally apply to the descent of occupancy-rights. Mere title by the law of inheritance is not to be regarded in determining the descent of an occupancy-holding. A remote heir, not in possession, cannot on the death of the ryot claim the holding. Bodhoo Rae v. Mussamut Lal Beebee, 2 N. W. R., 126.

8.—Relinquishment of Tenancy.

When a cultivating ryot goes away from the land which he has occupied, and neither cultivates nor pays rent for it, he has wholly relinquished the land. The relinquishment need not be in writing. Muneerudeen v. Mahomed Ali and others, 6 W. R., 67.

Non-payment of rent, coupled with the fact that the plaintiff was for five years out of possession, was held to amount to a relinquishment of land. Nuddear Chand Poddar and others v. Modhoosoodun Dey Poddar, 7 W. R., 153.

Where land relinquished by the original tenant is settled by the zemindar with other ryots, the former ryot cannot be held liable for rent, even though his relinquishment was not accompanied by a notice given in writing. Mahomed Gahzree v. Shunker Lall and others, 11 W. R., 53.

9.—Taxes and Cesses.

The nature and results of Governor Aungiers' convention stated; and the origin of "pension and tax" in Bombay traced. Naoroji Beranjee v. Rogers, 4 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 1.

A person seeking a refund of income-tax illegally assessed upon him may, under Section 137, Act XXXII of 1860, apply to the Commissioner, i.e., it is "lawful" for him so to apply, but there is no law that he must do so. He may legally sue in a Civil Court to recover the illegal assessment. The Collector of Fureedpore v. Goroo Dass Roy, 11 W. R., 425.

Held that if the biswadars were not liable to cesses claimed, those holding under them cannot be liable to plaintiff's claim; and that the liability of the defendants, whether they may be lessees or mortgagees under the biswadars, must depend, firstly, on the liability of the biswadars themselves; and secondly, on the terms of the lease or mortgage under which they are found to be in possession. Dhunee Ram and others v. Morlee Dhur, 3 Agra Rep., 325.

Where the talookdar has engaged to pay certain cesses for roads, schools, &c., he cannot recover them from the biswadars, unless they are bound to pay them by some positive law, or have engaged or have consented to do so; nor is any individual biswadar bound to pay merely because his copartners have agreed to pay or have paid them. Dhunee Ram v. Moorlee Dhur, 3 Agra Rep., 326.

All cesses being illegal when not specifically included in the contract under which the ryot pays rent, the mere payment of rent, including a cess for three years, cannot legalize an illegal impost. Dhalu Poramanick v. Anund Chunder Tolaputter, 5 W. R., Act X R., 86.

A Government lessee is not entitled to sue for a declaration of his right to levy a cess upon a jotedar who grazes his cattle on his own jote within the precincts of the lessee's mehal, there being no contract between them whereby defendant is bound to pay such a cess. Bhugeeruth Shikdar v. Ramnarain Mundur, 9 W. R., 299.

A tenant adjudged to pay a particular cess or demand in a particular year is not therefore compelled to pay it for ever. Orjoon Sahoo v. Annund Singh and another, 10 W. R., 257.

Held that a suit substantially brought to prove a right to collect cesses not authorized under the provisions of Clause 1, Section 9, Regulation VII of 1822, being for an illegal object was not maintainable. Khyrat Ali v. Mahomed Yaseen Khan and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 207.

Where a tenant pays a sum of money for rent in advance he cannot call upon his landlord to refund an amount paid on his account of house and land assessment rate. Doorgachurn Mullick v. Owen Moses, executor of the estate of the late Genthoon Aviet, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 115.

The owner of the land is not liable for the tax assessed on a house built upon the land by his tenant. Wooma Nundo Roy v. Lord H. Ulick Browne, 6 W. R., 30.

In the absence of a special agreement a claim for an illegal cess cannot be recovered in a Court of law. Soanum Sookul and others v. Sheikh Elahee Buksh and others, 7 W. R., 453.

Every contract relating to the collection from ryots and payment to the zemindar of an illegal cess is ab initio void. Kamala Kant Ghose v. Kalu Mohamed Mandal, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 44; S. C., 11 W. R., 395.

Abwabs and mahtots being no longer leviable when they form part of rent payable, a zemindar is entitled to have a fair rate fixed. Herrikosima v. W. Stephenson, 1 W. R., 298.

A sum collected by a tehsildar as purvi-bhika or present for the zemindar on the Unnoprashun ceremony (first eating of rice after birth), considered as an illegal cess. Nobin Chunder Roy v. Goora Gobind Surmah, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 447.

A suit cannot be maintained for a cess which was not avowed nor sanctioned nor taken into account in fixing the Government revenue at the settlement. Sheikh Bisharut Aly v. Seetul Misser, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 40.

A suit may be maintained by a zemindar to establish his right to a cess, and to question the validity of an order of the settlement officer refusing to record the cess. Mahomed Ali Khan v. Oomrao Singh, 2 N. W. R., 425.

10.—Resumption.

An under-tenure is not destroyed by the resumption of a lakheraj tenure by Government. Furzul Bunoo v. Azeezunnissa Bibee, 3 W. R., 72.

The manager of a religious endowment cannot sue for resumption of invalid lakheraj land. Nobin Chunder Roy Chowdhry v. Pearee Khanum, 3 W. R., 143.

A zemindar is entitled to resume lands held under an invalid grant, or no grant at all, in which a tank was allowed to be excavated by the defendant, not for the public benefit, but for a bonus. Chunder Kant Chuckerbutty v. Bunko Beharee Chunder, 3 W. R., 177.

A zemindar is not precluded from resuming lakheraj land situated in a dependent talook, though such dependent talookdar has no right to resume. Jugernath Gossain v. J. G. N. Pogose, 4 W. R., 43.

An auction-purchaser was not allowed to resume lands held by the defendants under an alleged lakheraj title, because the defendants showed that an ineffectual attempt to resume the grant had been made in 1793, and that the title had been unchallenged ever since. Possession was thus carried back to a period anterior to 1790. Nobo Lall Khan v. Maharanee Adheeranee Narain Koonwaree, 5 W. R., 191.

A decree in a suit for resumption must be obtained before rent can be recovered against a tenant holding under a lakheraj tenure. Hill v. Khuvay Sheikh Mundul, Marsh., 554.

A decree for resumption under Section 50, Regulation II of 1819, does not entitle the proprietor of lakheraj land to bring a suit for a kubuleut in a Revenue Court before the revenue is fixed and he has agreed to pay the same. Until this has been done the relation of landlord and tenant cannot come into existence. Madhub Chunder Bhadro v. Mohima Chunder Mozoomdar, 12 W. R., 442.

In order to support a suit before the Collector for the resumption of a lakheraj tenure under Act X of 1859, Section 28, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to show that the defendants hold under a lakheraj tenure created since the 1st of December, 1790; and such a suit will not be supported by showing that the defendant's lakheraj tenure is void on other grounds, as on the ground that a lakheraj tenure under which he claimed to hold, although of date prior to 1790, was invalid.

A plaintiff has a right to appeal specially against a decision, if the decree, as explained by the judgment, is erroneous. Maharanee Indurjeet Koonwar v. Choken Sahoo, Marsh., 301.

A zemindar cannot sue to resume a jagheer on the ground of its alienation by the grantee, so long as there are heirs male of the grantee existent. Raja Rameswar Nauth Singh v. Heeralol Singh, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 170.

The resumption of lands by Government, and the making a fresh settlement of the resumed lands without any allusion to their being held in trust for charitable purposes prior to the resumption proceedings, are not conclusive proof that there was no such trust. The only question decided by the Government in resuming was that those who claimed the land as lakheraj had not been able to prove that the land was held under any such religious or charitable trust as would debar Government from resuming. Rajah Leelanund Singh Bahadoor v. Ishuree Nundun Duttjha and others, 8 W. R., 316.

When land is resumed as invalid lakheraj, there is no provision of law which compels Government, under a decree of the Civil Court, to make a settlement with the ex-lakherajdar, if, for some reason of its own, it declines to do so. Bheekoo Singh and others v. The Government and others, 10 W. R., 296.

The ruling of the late Sudder Court as to the final and conclusive character of a resumption decree was held not to apply to what was subsequently done administratively by a settlement officer, the proper distinction being that the decree of the resumption Court as to the liability of the resumed mehal to be assessed with a Government demand is final; but the subsequent dealing by the settlement officer with alleged proprietary right and claim to land not mentioned in the decree, is open to the jurisdiction of the Civil Court. Mahomed Ghazee Chowdhry v. Lall Bibee and others, 10 W. R., 103.

Property which had been unlawfully resumed by Government was, on appeal, released by decree of the Privy Council. Held that the owner was entitled to recover mesne profits from the date of the decree. Government may be sued by any person injured by its acts of unlawful resumption.

A claim for mesne profits may be joined in one action with a claim for money had and received. Ramnarain Mookerjee v. Maharajah Mahatab Chund Bahadoor, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 48.

The resumption by Government of a parent estate does not nullify the existing rights of a howaladar within the estate, or deprive him of the benefit of the presumption arising under Section 16, Act X of 1859. Mathoor Nath Gungopadhaya v. Sheeta Monee, 9 W. R., 354.

A sub-tenure created before and in existence at the time of the Decennial Settlement cannot be invalidated by any subsequent settlement of the mehal in which it is situated. Resumption of lakheraj land under the Revenue Law does not destroy any such sub-tenure in the estate resumed. Abdool Ali and others v. Ramgutty and others, 2 W. R., 12.

One lakherajdar cannot maintain a suit for resumption against another, and force the defendant to prove his title. Kaem Khan v. Mussamut Bibee Saheba Jan and others, 7 W. R., 362.

A suit brought under Section 10, Regulation XIX of 1793, to assess or resume invalid lakheraj created subsequent to 1st December 1790, is exempt from limitation.

In such latter suit the onus is on the plaintiff to show that the case is one falling within Section 10, Regulation XIX of 1793; or, in other words, that the grant was subsequent to 1st December, 1790. Sonaton Ghose v. Moulvie Abdool Turrub, 2 W. R., 205.

In a suit by Government under Regulation II of 1819 to resume invalid lakheraj land held by a mohunt, as the interests of the zemindar who claimed a portion of the lands sought to be assessed, as forming part of his permanently-assessed estate, were liable to be affected by the decision of the Collector,—Held that he had a right to intervene and become a party to the suit, and to prefer an appeal from the decree. The decree of the Special Commissioners, under Regulation III of 1828, is final, if no appeal or petition of review is presented within a reasonably sufficient period. Maharajah Moheshur Singh v. The Government of India, 3 W. R., P. C., 45.

The holding of a lakherajdar, after a decree of resumption, is not that of a trespasser, and he is fully entitled to remain in possession of the land without paying rent until the zemindar assesses rent upon him. Hureebuns Burhul and others v. Joykissen Mookerjee, 6 W. R., 92.

The mere admission by the defendant that the lands in question are within the plaintiff's zemindary is not sufficient to start the plaintiff's case when he sues, as zemindar, to cancel and resume an illegal hereditary jungleboree tenure. Radha Kishen Singh Durpo Shaha Deb v. Bissumbhur Singh Puttur, 6 W. R., 130.

To bar a zemindar's right to resume, as invalid lakheraj under Section 30, Regulation II of 1809, lands in excess of 100 beegahs, it must be shown that the lands are held under a sunnud in excess of 100 beegahs, or under different sunnuds each in excess of 100 beegahs. Mahomed Munsoor v. Umbica Churn Roy, W. R., 1864, 132.

When land beyond 100 beegahs in extent is admittedly held by a lakherajdar the presumption is that it is held under one grant, and that it is resumable by Government, and not by the zemindar. To rebut the presumption the zemindar must show that the land, though beyond 100 beegahs in extent, is held under different sunnuds. Rajah Jogendro Narain Roy v. Hurry Doss Roy, W. R., 1864, 145.

Talookdars have no legal right to sue for resumption of areas containing more than 100 beegahs of land. Gopal Chunder Roy v. Oodhub Chunder Mullick, W. R., 1864, 156.

A zemindar is not precluded by Regulation XIX of 1793 from suing for the resumption of invalid lakheraj lands exceeding 100 begahs held under several sunnuds, provided none of them singly is a grant for more than 100 beegahs.

The release of lands covered by one such sunnud from the claim of Government to resume, on the ground that they were under 50 beegahs, does not bar the zemindar's right to resume them. Elias v. Moonshee Mahomed Peezeer, W. R., 1864, 217.

When a zemindar engages to pay a certain amount of revenue on certain lakheraj lands, on condition of Government stopping resumption proceedings in respect to such lands, he has a right under that engagement to resume invalid rent-free tenures below 100 beegahs in extent, whatever had been the nature of agreement with Government in previous years, but he has no right to resume lands of greater extent than 100 beegahs covered by one sunnud. Beer Chunder Joobraj v. Umakant Sein Bahadoor, W. R., 1864, 232.

Shikmee talookdars under lakherajdars, whose lands have been resumed by Government, cannot sue for a settlement. They can only claim to have their shikmee rights upheld. Grish Chunder Roy v. Boydonath Dey, W. R., 1864, 262.

If lands adjudged to Government in a resumption suit diluviate and re-form on the same site, Government does not thereby lose its rights to them, nor is it obliged to institute wholly new proceedings. Diluvion does not create any new right.

Resumption proceedings are final and not liable to question by the Civil Courts. But when proceedings take place in the nature of extensive settlements with other parties after intermediate and temporary settlements, and acts are done wholly without jurisdiction, or lands are taken not included in the original decree, there should be a remedy to parties deeming themselves to have been wronged thereby. The Collector of Dacca v. Kishen Kishore Chatterjee, W. R., 1864, 273.

A zemindar cannot sue a dependent talookdar (the possessor of resumed lakheraj lands) for confirmation of possession, and for an injunction to prevent him from committing waste. The only possession that a zemindar can obtain after a decree for resumption is a constructive one derived from the receipt of rent from the tenant. The digging of a well by the talookdar is not an act of waste requiring a perpetual injunction. Mugnee Ram Chowdry v. Gunesh Dutt Singh, W. R., 1864, 275.

In a suit for resumption of lakheraj land, the onus of proving the existence of the lakheraj tenure before 1790 is on the defendant.

Registration by the Collector in 1795 as lakheraj affords presumption of the lakheraj having commenced before 1790. Omesh Chunder Roy v. Dukhina Soondery Debia, W. R., F. B., 95.

When a ryot's house fell down, and he left the site vacant, without rebuilding or asserting his intention to rebuild it for more than a year,—Held that by this long inaction the ryot forfeited any right which he possessed to the use of the site of his old house, and that the zemindar was at liberty to resume the land, and use it at his discretion. Mussamut. Bunnoo v. Sheo Buns Kando, 3 Agra Rep., 9.

A suit for resumption of julkurs of navigable rivers not forming part of settled estates is cognizable only in the ordinary Courts, (1) because of the total absence of the word "julkur" in any of the Resumption Regulations, either before or after Regulation II of 1810; and (2) by reason of the difference in the nature of the claims between one to take possession of julkur and one to resume lands. The Collector of Maldah v. Syed Sudduroodeen, 1 W. R., 116.

In a suit for resumption of invalid lakheraj the burden lies on the defendant to prove the validity of his title, and if he does not appear, on proof of the notice having been served on him, a decree should pass in favour of the plaintiff. B. O. Elias v. Tithraram Roy, 1 W. R., 164.

Under Act XIV of 1859 a zemindar cannot resume land whether lakheraj or not, held from before 1790. Even an auction-purchaser is barred by limitation if the ryot can prove that the land was in the possession of those through whom he claims before 1790. Radha Kisto Mytee v. Bhugwan Chunder Bose, 1 W. R., 248.

The release by Government of land under 50 beegahs in extent as a boon to the cultivator is not per se a bar to the zemindar's suit to resume it as invalid lakheraj. B. O. Elias v. Brohmo Moyee Burmonee, 2 W. R., 43.

Where in a suit for possession of resumed lands the plaintiff contends that the laws under which the lands in dispute were resumed (Regulations II of 1819 and III of 1828) contemplate assessment and not ejectment, the plaintiff must prove that he had formerly applied for and been refused a settlement of the lands. Khaja Abdool Gunny v. The Commissioner of the Sunderbuns, 2 W. R., 239.

The Government when acting as agent of a zemindar can only sue to resume invalid lakheraj lands under 100 beegahs: the onus of proof of its being mâl when so claimed is on the zemindar. Ram Lochun Sircar v. Denonath Paul, 2 W. R., 279.

A tank granted subsequently to 1790 is liable to resumption in the absence of proof of its having been either the condition of the grant or the intention of the grantor that the tank should be a public benefit. Such a case does not come within the ruling of the Full Bench of January 9th, 1865. Judoonath Sircar v. Bonomalee Mitter, 2 W. R., 295.

Where the resumption officer, as directed by Section 15, Regulation II of 1819, supplied the defendant in a resumption suit with a copy of his reasons for considering the lands in question liable to resumption, and subsequently, in the absence of the defendant, declared the lands liable to assessment,—Held that as defendant failed to appear either in person or by agent it was impossible for the resumption officer to give him the warning mentioned in Section 16 of the same law, and the legality of the proceedings was not affected by the omission. Buroda Kant Roy v. The Commissioner of Soondurbund, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 180.

Regulation II of 1819, Section 30, does not apply to a suit in a Civil Court for resumption under Section 10 of Regulation XIX of 1793. In such suits the onus is upon the plaintiff to prove a primâ-facie case. The decisions in Sonatun Ghose v. Moulvi Abdool Furar and Hira Mani Debi v. Kunj Behari Holdar upheld. Harihar Mukhopadhaya v. Madab Chandra Babu and another; Naba Krishna Mookerjee v. Kailas Chundra Bhuttacharjee and others, 8 B. L. R., 566.

The payment of a hák in respect of a majumdari watan, though charged on villages, is not "a share of the revenues thereof," within the meaning of Section 32 of (Bombay) Act VII of 1863.

Government has no power to resume majumdari watans where it dispenses with the services in respect of them, if the holders of such watans are ready and willing to perform such services.

The law in the Bombay Presidency recognizes the right of females to hold majumdari watans, males being appointed by them to perform the service. The Government of Bombay v. Damudar Parmamondas, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C. P., 202.

In a suit for resumption, where plaintiff stated that defendant was holding the land in dispute under a pretended lakheraj title, without specifying whether that title was anterior or posterior to December, 1790, it was found that defendant had not proved that his alleged lakheraj existed prior to that date, and the suit was decreed. Held that from the fact of the Court having adopted a procedure which is only sanctioned in the special cases provided for by Section 30, Regulation II of 1819, it was not a necessary inference that the decree was made under that Regulation.

Held that even if made under Section 30, Regulation II of 1819, a resumption decree bearing an earlier date than the Full Bench Ruling of 25th January, 1865 (11 Weekly Reporter, page 91), would not establish that the grant resumed was of earlier date than 1st December, 1790. Modhoosoodun Sagoory v. Nepal Khan, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 440.

The Government, when it holds a resumed mehal on its rent-roll as its khas property, holds it as and with all the rights and liabilities of a private zemindar, and is therefore entitled, under Regulation XI of 1825, to claim accretions to the khas estate. The Collector of Pubna v. Ranee Surno Moyee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 163.

The title of the purchaser of an estate settled by Government after resumption must depend upon the resumption decree.

Thus the opinion of a Deputy-Collector to the resumption and settlement officers that certain lands belonged to an estate settled by Government in 1844, after the resumption, was held to give the purchaser of that estate from Government no right to disturb the uninterrupted possession of defendants at least from 1842, when there was an express finding by the first Court that the lands in question were not covered by the resumption decree, and it also appeared that the opinion of the Deputy-Collector had notwithstanding become a dead letter. Shib Ram Doss v. Sudanund Surmah, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 557.

A suit for resumption was instituted against A., B., and C. The summons was not served on A., he being dead at the time it was issued, and, as B. could not be found, the summons was served by being affixed to the sudder gate of A.'s and B.'s house. An ex-parte decree was passed as against A. and B., declaring that the tenure was invalid lakheraj, and that the land was the plaintiff's mâl land. Held that there was no decree declaring the lakheraj invalid, which was a good and binding decree against C. and those claiming under him; and that, as the summons was not served on A., nor his representatives made parties to the suit, the whole of the proceedings in the suit were utterly infructuous except as concerned B., there having been great irregularity and carelessness on the part of the Court in allowing the suit to proceed at all against A. under such circumstances. Mohesh Chunder Sein Goopta v. Dhun Monee Dassee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 357.

Decrees made under Regulation II of 1819 prior to the 25th January, 1865, for the resumption of grants of later date than 1st December, 1790, cannot be held to be void; for error in procedure in a trial does not per se render void a decree which on the face of it is one the Court was competent to make. Madhoo Soodun Sagoory v. Nepal Khan, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 440.

A mokurruree tenure granted in perpetuity cannot be resumed by the grantor, even if the grantee dies without leaving heirs. Mirza Himmut Bahadoor v. Ranee Soonat Kooer, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 549.

Where land is resumed and assessed by a settlement officer, the tenant is bound to pay rent at the rate assessed by the settlement officer. Woomanath Roy Chowdry v. Debnath Roy Chowdry, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 471.

11.—Rulings under Sundry Regulations.

Regulation V of 1822 is inapplicable to land held under a miraseedar or any ordinary proprietor. Yanamdram Venkaya v. Shillakaree Venkata Narain Reddy, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 131; 1 Mad. Rep., 75.

Regulation V of 1822 does not apply to disputes respecting irrigation. The disputes mentioned in Section 18 of Regulation V of 1822 are subjected to the procedure provided by Regulation XII of 1816. Nagendra Rau v. Mahomed Kanitaraganar and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 230.

Section 9, Regulation VII of 1822, relates only to settlement, not to collection of rents, and does not entitle a person claiming from Government as a private zemindar to have enhanced rents without proceeding under the law for the collection of rent, and without giving notice of enhancement under Section 13, Act X of 1859. The Nawab Nazim of Bengal v. Ram Lall Ghose, alias Jogobundhoo Ghose, 6 W. R., Act X R., 5.

A claim for a cess or collection not avowed and sanctioned at the time of settlement nor taken into account in fixing the Government jumma, is illegal under Clause 1, Section 9, Regulation VII of 1822, and consequently inadmissible. Hushmut Ali v. Seeta Ram, 3 Agra Rep., 336.

Lands were occupied by the Government for the purpose of making an embankment without the observance of the formality required by Regulation I of 1825. Held that the owner of the land was entitled to maintain a suit against Government for the rent of the land during the time he was kept out of possession. Joynarain Bose v. The Collector of twenty-four Pergunnahs, Marsh., 56.

12.—Kubuleut.

Kubuleuts proved in the ordinary way ought to have due weight given them, even though not filed so early in the litigation as the Judge would have expected. Kashee Chunder Turkobooshun v. Kally Prosunno Chowdhry, 9 W. R., 452.

A kubuleut is not a "lease" within the meaning of Section 13, Act XVI of 1864. Amjed Ali v. Ala Buksh, 9 W. R., 537.

In a suit for kubuleut at the rate mentioned on the allegation that that rate was the current rate prevailing in the village, it was held that this assertion may be read as sufficiently indicating that the ground for enhancing the rate was the first ground of Section 17. Bhama and others v. Mohur Singh, 2 Agra Rep., R. C., 2.

In a suit for a kubuleut the decree of a Civil Court adjudging the land in question to the plaintiff cannot extinguish the right of an intervenor nor a party to the decree found under Section 77, Act X of 1859. Rajcoomar Chowdhry v. Brojokishore Bose, gomastah, 5 W. R., Act X R., 1.

Until a landlord sues a ryot for a kubuleut he can only recover whatever rent the ryot is willing to pay. But before the zemindar can sue for kubuleut he must tender a pottah to the ryot. Pertab Chunder Banerjea v. C. J. Phillippée, 2 W. R., Act X R., 56.

Upon the death of a tenant under a jagheerdar his widow passed kubuleut, agreeing to hold the land on the same terms as her late husband; and that in the event of her marrying again she should have no right to the holding; but that if she got her husband to live in her house she might continue to hold the land. She afterwards remarried, and held the land till her death.

In an action brought by the second husband to recover possession of the land, as the heir of his wife,—Held (reversing the decrees of both the Courts below) that the plaintiff had no right to recover possession, and his wife had merely a personal interest in the holding, which ceased upon her death. Kamalooddin Newab Mir v. Bhika Manji, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 49.

In a suit for declaration of title and confirmation of possession, where plaintiff claimed as having the right, title, and interest of the former zemindar in execution of a decree against him, urging that the lands were part of the khas lands of the estate, and defendants claimed the lands as part of their mourosee tenure obtained from the same zemindar, —Held that attested kubuleuts filed by the plaintiff, though good evidence as between plaintiff and the tenants of the land, could not in regard to a third party be held as evidence in the absence of the tenants themselves, who should have been examined. Mohima Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Poorno Chunder Banerjee and others, 11 W. R., 165.

In a suit to recover rent at an enhanced rate after notice had been granted, a kubuleut was put in in support of the plaintiff's case, and was admitted by defendants. A pottah put in by defendants was found by the lower Court to be a forgery.

Held that plaintiff's contention that the kubuleut does not give the full terms of the agreement binds him to show beyond all reasonable doubt what were the actual terms of the pottah. Having failed to do this, the kubuleut was treated as complete and conclusive evidence of the nature of the tenancy, which was inferred by the Court to be permanent and at a fixed rate. Golam Ali v. Gopal Lall Thakoor, 9 W. R., 65.

A 10-annas shareholder (C.) in a factory, who was also manager of the whole, executed a kubuleut stipulating that as long as he was the mookhtear the lessor (plaintiff) was at liberty, in the event of the rent not being paid punctually, to take khas possession, or to lease the property to other parties; and that in case of another mookhtear being appointed, or the property being sold, the factory as well as the mookhtear or purchaser would be responsible for any arrears accruing before or after. C. then mortgaged the factory to L., who subsequently obtained a decree entitling him to satisfy his mortgage by the sale of the factory. Plaintiff sued C. and L. to obtain a declaratory decree to the effect that the factory could be sold in satisfaction of his decree for rent under Act X of 1859, free of incumbrances created by the bonds.

Held that, as no money was advanced for the lease, and no debt was due from the lessee to lessor, plaintiff had no lien on the factory in satisfaction of a debt.

Held that plaintiff could have proceeded under Section 110, Act X, and then under Section 111, if L. objected to the sale of the factory; but having no prior lien upon the factory he had no cause of action as against L. Chummun Lall Chowdhry and others v. Rajah Rughoobundun Singh and another, 11 W. R., 194.

The absence of a pottah in writing cannot of itself release the zemindar from the conditions of the agreement entered into with the tenant as established by the written kubuleut. Shaikh Dunoollah v. Shaikh Amanuttoollah, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 147.

13.—Suits for Kubuleut.

Where the purchaser of a share of a talook which had been attached under Section 26, Regulation V of 1812, and was under attachment nearly 30 years, sued for a kubuleut, and his suit was opposed by an intervenor who had purchased another share, it was held that the Judge was wrong in dismissing the suit because the intervenor and her vendors had been in exclusive possession before the attachment; the sole question having been, who was actually and in good faith in receipt and enjoyment of the rent before and up to the time of the suit? Kalee Mohun Roy v. Shaikh Nazir and others, 8 W. R., 516.

When a landlord sues to obtain from his ryot a kubuleut at a given rate of rent, and the Court finds that that rate exceeds the rate which, in the judgment of the Court upon the evidence before it, would be fair and equitable, the plaintiff is not entitled to a decree for a kubuleut at the lower rate, but his suit should be entirely dismissed. If, in a similar case, the plaint mentions no date for the commencement of the kubuleut, the plaint does not disclose a sufficient cause of action, and ought to be returned. The Court may however supply the omission by specifying in its decree the time from which the kubuleut ought to commence. Golam Mahomed and another v. Asmut Ali Khan Chowdhry, 10 W. R., F. B., 14.

In a suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rate, under a pottah, the terms of which were that the lessee should hold the lands for four years rent free; that after measurement the lands were to be assessed; that then he was to pay four annas a beegah in year 1265, 6 annas in 1266, and eight annas and three gundas in 1267 and for five years after,—Held that this did not constitute a mokurruree holding at a fixed rate. The case was remanded to ascertain what were the rates of similar lands in the neighbourhood in 1274, and decree to be made accordingly.

Held also that a fresh ground could not be taken in appeal which had not been taken below, though based upon a Full Bench ruling. Kasimuddi Khandkar v. Nadir Ali, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 265; S. C., 11 W. R., 164.

Where, in answer to a suit for a kubuleut at a specified rent, defendant pleaded in the Court below, not that plaintiff was not entitled to any kubuleut at all, but that he was not entitled to a kubuleut at the rates he claimed,—Held that defendant could not be allowed in special appeal to take advantage of the Full Bench ruling at 10 W. R., F. B., 14, and ask for the suit to be dismissed. Gholam Aly and another v. Augur Ali, 11 W. R., 105.

In a suit before the Collector for a kubuleut, on the ground that the defendant had occupied and cultivated certain lands of the plaintiff, the defendant pleaded that he was co-parcener with the plaintiff of the land, but he admitted that he had given a kubuleut for some of the lands he occupied. Held that since by giving the kubuleut the defendant had acknowledged the plaintiff to be his landlord, the onus of proving the plea was upon the defendant. Juggobundoo Mozoomdar and others v. Goorroopersaud Roy and others, Marsh., 54.

Where a plaint asks for a kubuleut for a given term, without specifying the date from which the term is to commence, it is in the discretion of the Court to fix the proper term. Poorno Chandra Roy v. W. Stalkartt and another, 10 W. R., 362.

In a suit for a kubuleut at higher rates, where a third party intervened under Section 77, Act X of 1859, the first Court determined the case between the plaintiff and the intervenor upon a matter of title, and allowed that determination to govern his decision between the plaintiff and the defendant, decreeing to the plaintiff the kubuleut sued for. The decision was affirmed by the lower Court.

Held that there had been a mis-trial, the sole question to be decided between the intervenor and plaintiff having been whether the latter had bonâ fide received the rent up to the date of suit, and the question between the plaintiff and defendant was whether they stood in the relation of landlord and tenant; and if so whether plaintiff was entitled to the kubuleut which he asked for. Omed Aly v. Prosono Coomar Chowdhry, 10 W. R., 97.

A landlord cannot compel every trespasser upon his land to execute a kubuleut; he is entitled to a kubuleut only from his tenants. Mohunt Jalha v. Koylas Chandra Dey, 10 W. R., 407.

An auction-purchaser cannot compel the holder of a tenure in perpetuity to execute a kubuleut acknowledging himself to be a tenant for one year at an enhanced rent. Haran Chandra Ghose v. Gooroochurn Sircar, 10 W. R., 421.

In a suit for a kubuleut at a specified rate of rent the first Court found that plaintiff was not entitled to a kubuleut at the rate claimed, but decreed that he should obtain one at the old rates Defendant appealed to the Judge on the ground that as plaintiff had not proved his claim to a kubuleut at enhanced rates, no decree for a kubuleut should have been given.

Held in special appeal from the Judge's decision dismissing the appeal, that the objection was a perfectly good one, and that as plaintiff had failed to make out his title to a kubuleut at the rent claimed his suit ought, under a late Full Bench ruling, to have been dismissed. Deen Dyal Poramanic v. Surendranath Roy, 10 W. R., 77.

In a suit for a kubuleut, where the ryot pleaded that others besides plaintiff were his landlords, and the lower Appellate Court found that plaintiff was only one of several shareholders, and came to the conclusion that inasmuch as he had not proved what his share was, or that defendant had notice of it, his suit must be dismissed,—Held that the decision was correct in law, and that a decree was rightly refused. Nassarut Ali and others v. Abdool Kureem Chowdhry, 11 W. R., 373.

In a suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rate, a claim to the nerikh may be considered to be a claim to the pergunnah rate, i.e., the rate paid by the same class of ryots for similar land in the neighbourhood. Omrit Lall Bose v. Arbach Cazi, W. R., Act X R., 47.

Where the tenure of a defendant is declared liable to assessment in a suit passed between him and the plaintiff's vendor, the plaintiff can sue for a kubuleut, as he is thereby only carrying out the provisions of the decree obtained in that suit. Modhoosoodun Chowdhry and others v. Ram Mohun Ghur, 8 W. R., 473.

In a decree for a kubuleut the term for which it is to remain in force should not be fixed.

An objection that the judgment of the Court of first instance is erroneous under a ruling of the Full Bench of the High Court, not taken before the lower Appellate Court, will not be allowed to be taken in special appeal. Narattam Dass Chowdhry v. Roso Pearee Chowdhrain, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 271.

A suit for a kubuleut will not lie for a portion only of the land included in an entire holding. Ram Doss Bhuttacharjee and another v. Ramjeebun Poddar and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 103.

A suit for a kubuleut is a suit to enforce the performance of a contract for future occupation of the tenure, and cannot be maintained where there is no evidence of defendant having ever agreed to hold the land of the plaintiffs, or ever paid them rent. Chunder Nath Nag Chowdhry v. Asanoollah Mundul, 10 W. R., 438.

In a suit for kubuleut at an enhanced rent,—Held by Norman, J., that the Judge was not at liberty to reject, as matters which he could wholly leave out of consideration, any of the evidence before him in a case where the witnesses were unimpeached in their general character and uncontradicted by any testimony on the other side, and where there was no improbability in the facts which they related, and that the probative force arising from concurrent testimony was the compound ratio of the probabilities of the testimonies taken singly.

Held, by Seton-Karr, J., that, as there was a break of three years in the period of uniform payment which would give rise to the presumption of uniform holding from the time of the Permanent Settlement, the Judge, instead of accepting dakhilas, merely because they were not denied by the plaintiff, should have found whether the dakhilas were satisfactorily proved and attested, and, if so, whether they could legally support a uniform payment for 20 years. Rajah Radha Kant Deb v. Khema Dossee and others, 7 W. R., 105.

Where a plaintiff suing for a kubuleut at enhanced rates obtained a decree below, though he was found not entitled to the rate of rent which he claimed, the High Court, considering that under a ruling of the Full Bench the suit should have been dismissed, of its own motion in special appeal reversed the decree, notwithstanding the objection was not taken in the written grounds of appeal. Hameed Ali and others v. Afaoodeen, 10 W. R., 213.

Where a suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rent is decreed without any term being fixed by the Court, the kubuleut executed is inoperative beyond the year of demand. Rajah Kristo Chunder Murdraj v. Poorosuttum Dass, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 424.

A proprietor of a fractional share of an undivided estate may sue to obtain a kubuleut from the ryot, without making his co-sharers parties, when there is no dispute as to his share, and when the tenant has paid him rent separately for his share. The want of specification of boundaries in a kubuleut is no ground for dismissing a suit for a kubuleut, when all the particulars of area are given as required by Section 2 of Act X of 1859.

The lower Appellate Court ought not to have entertained the objection of the defendant that no pottah had been tendered before the institution of the suit, as the objection had not been taken before the first Court. That issue was not essential to the right determination of the suit upon the merits. Ramanath Rukhit v. Chund Huri Bhuya, 6 B. L. R., 356; and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 432.

In a suit for obtaining a kubuleut, failure to prove the exact quantity of land for which the kubuleut is sought to be obtained renders the suit liable to dismissal. Shib Ram Ghose v. Pran Piria, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 89; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 280.

A decree of a Civil Court in a suit (the plaint of which referred to Section 30 of Regulation II of 1819, and Section 10 of Regulation XIX of 1793) which declared the right of the zemindar to assess rent on land not proved to have been held under a grant prior to 1st December, 1790, is sufficient to establish the relationship of landlord and tenant between the zemindar and the party against whom the right of assessment was declared. Srimati Sandumini Debi and another v. Sarup Chandra Roy and others, 8 B. L. R., Ap., 82 ; 17 S. W. R., C. R., 363.

A suit will not lie in the Revenue Court for the delivery of a kubuleut until the plaintiff has established that the relation of landlord and tenant subsists, or has been admitted between himself and the defendant. Keisurga v. Chotoo, 1,4 N. W. R., 781.

14.—When Suits for Kubuleut will Lie.

The tender of a pottah is not necessary before a suit for a kubuleut can be laid. Modhoosoodun Chowdhry and others v. Ram Mohun Ghur, 8 W. R., 473.

The purchaser of an undisputed share of an estate may obtain from the Revenue Courts a decree for a kubuleut in respect of his share. Nidhy Ram Sircar v. Dhun Kishen Bhutlacharjee and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 53.

In a suit for a kubuleut, on the allegation that the defendant is holding a specific quantity of land under him, if the plaintiff's allegations are disproved, and the relation of landlord and tenant is not established, the plaintiff's suit must altogether fail.

Quære,—Whether a suit for a kubuleut on an allegation of the kind stated will lie? Yakoob Ali and others v. Kaernoollah and others, 8 W. R., 329.

The previous tender of a pottah is not absolutely necessary to entitle a landlord to a decree for a kubuleut. The decree may make the obtaining of the kubuleut contingent on the offering of a corresponding pottah. Munsoor Ali and others v. Bunoo Singh and another, 7 W. R., 282. See also Sheikh Woolfut Hossein v. Jumoona Doss, W. R., (1864), Act X R., 60. Nityanund Ghose v. Kissen Kishore, W. R., Act X R., 82. Mahomed Yacool Hossein v. Sheikh Chowdhry Wahed Ali, 4 W. R., Act X R., 23.

The purchaser of a transferable under-tenure in execution of a decree for rent may void any lease or holding within the tenure not specially proved by law, and consequently may sue for a kubuleut at rates paid for similar lands in the neighbourhood. Sristeedhur Mundul v. Gobind Surukar, 6 W. R., Act X R., 15.

There is nothing illegal in a suit for a kubuleut against jotedars. The plea of holding at fixed rents cannot be urged by a defendant who, on his own showing, is not even a tenant with a right of occupancy. Ramzan Ali v. Rajcoomar, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 13.

In order to entitle a landlord to sue for a kubuleut he must tender a pottah. Abbay Sunkur Chuckerbutty v. Rajah Indra Bhuran Deb Roy, 4 B. L. R., F. B. R., 58, and 12 S. W. R., F. B., 27.

15.—When Suits for Kubuleuts will not Lie.

Until the right to assess has been properly determined, a suit for a kubuleut will not lie under Act X of 1859. Maharajah Ramnath Singh Bahadoor v. Huro Lall Pandey and others, 8 W. R., 188.

A suit will not lie for kubuleut for a portion of the lands included in one entire holding, for which entire holding a kubuleut and pottah have been already exchanged between the parties. Abdool Ali and others v. Yar Ali Khan Chowdhry, 8 W. R., 467.

A separate kubuleut cannot be claimed for uncultivated lands already comprised in a lease, on the ground that such uncultivated lands have now been brought into cultivation. Sheikh Mahomed Kaloo Chowdhry v. Fedaye Shikdar, 8 W. R., 219.

It is not competent to landlords to whom a joint kubuleut has been given without any specification of shares to institute separate suits, and to call upon the Collector, on the original contract between the parties, to apportion to each plaintiff that share of the rents to which he may be entitled. Kalee Churn Singh and others v. E. R. Solano and others, 8 W. R., 200.

A proprietor of a fractional share of an undivided estate, though receiving a definite portion of the rent from the ryot, is not entitled to maintain against him a suit for a separate kubuleut in respect of such undivided share. Ranee Sarutsundari Debi v. Watson, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 159; S. C., 11 W. R., 25.

One of the shareholders of an undivided zemindary cannot institute a suit to obtain a separate kubuleut from a ryot for his fractional share thereof. Udaya Charan Dhur v. Kalitara Dasi and others, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 52 ; S. C., 11 W. R., 393.

A landlord cannot bring a suit to compel a ryot to execute a kubuleut unless he first tenders a pottah to the ryot, such as he is entitled to receive under Section 9, Act X of 1859; and a suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rate of rent cannot be supported without a previous notice under Section 13, Act X of 1859. Ukhoy Shunker Chuckerbutty v. Rajah Indro Bhosun Deb, 12 W. R., 27.

The defendant was under-tenant in respect of lands which his lessor held under a modafut from the zemindar. Subsequently the lessor left, and the zemindar gave to the defendant a pottah for part of the lands covered by the modafut, and to the plaintiff a pottah for the whole land covered by the original modafut, but did not assign any of his rights as zemindar to the plaintiff, to recover or enhance the rent reserved in the pottah he had granted to the defendant.

Held, in a suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rate, that the plaintiff and defendant were not in the position of landlord and tenant, so as to enable the plaintiff to maintain his suit. Kulam Sheikh v. Pandur Mundel, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 252 ; S. C., 11 W. R., 128.

Before a landlord can sue for a kubuleut he must tender a pottah. But the objection that a pottah had not been tendered should be made in the first Court or in the lower Appellate Court, and not for the first time orally in special appeal.

A landlord cannot sue for a kubuleut in respect of a portion of the land held under an istemraree pottah. Doorgakant Mozoomdar v. Bisheshur Dutt Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 44; see also Troyluckhonath Chowdhry v. Kuleema Bibee, 2 W. R., Act X R., 96 ; and see also 1 W. R., 82.

A suit for a kubuleut is not the correct mode of establishing a title. Where a separate title is pleaded, and there is no proof of receipt of rent from the party from whom the kubuleut is required, the question of title must be decided before the suit for a kubuleut can proceed. Syed Jeshan Hossein v. Bakur, 3 W. R., Act X R., 3.

A suit for a kubuleut will not lie for a right to fish in certain waters. Mohun Gobind Sein and others v. Nittaye Haldar, 6 W. R., Act X R., 101.

No suit for a kubuleut can lie where the plaintiff has never received any rent from the defendant, nor has there been any contract between the two to pay and receive rent, and where therefore there is no relationship of landlord and tenant between them. Sreemunto Koondoo v. Brijonauth Paul Chowdry, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 296.

16.—Suits on Kubuleuts.

In a suit on a kubuleut, the Court of first instance found that the kubuleut had not been signed by the defendant, but by a third party, and that there was no evidence that such third party was authorized to sign it. The Judge on appeal reversed the decision. Held that the decision of the Judge holding the defendant responsible for the signature of a person of whose authority there was no evidence was erroneous in point of law, and was a ground of special appeal. Sham Chand Bysack v. Bungo Chunder Chatterjee, Marsh., 556.

The plaintiff claimed rent under a kubuleut, and turned out that the document upon which he relied was a forgery. Held that he could not, after thus failing to prove the kubuleut, be allowed to show that the defendant had paid him rent for a number of years.

An admission that rent was due after a particular rate is good evidence against the defendant making the admission, but is not evidence against his co-defendants. Naranee Dossee v. Nurrohurry Mohonto, Marsh., 70.

The plaintiff sued on a kubuleut which the Court pronounced a forgery. Held that, notwithstanding an allegation by the defendant that he had paid all his rent to the plaintiff, the suit was properly dismissed, without investigation as to whether rent was due in respect of any other obligation. Bhoyrub Chunder Chowdhry v. Huradhun Ghose, Marsh., 561.

A landlord cannot claim rent under a kubuleut where the lessee has never obtained possession, delivery of possession being ordinarily a condition necessary for the maintenance of an action for rent. Hurish Chunder Koondoo v. Mohenee Mohun Mitter, 9 W. R., 582.

Plaintiff sued upon a kubuleut, and filed a pottah in support of it. The pottah having been rejected, and the kubuleut not proved, he was held not entitled to fall back on a general statement that he has a jote pottah; that the lands in dispute are part of the same; and that he can oust the defendant who was duly in possession. Gobind Chundra Lahoory and others v. Jardine, Skinner, and Co., and others, 7 W. R., 163.

Where a tenant had executed a kubuleut to four persons, held two of them could not sue him for arrears of rent in the Collector's Court, making the other two co-sharers, or their representatives, defendants jointly with him. Ganga Gobind Sen v. Gobind Chandra Roy, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 39.

17.—Lease.

A. agreed to take at a stipulated rent a portion of the property leased to B. for the remainder of B.'s lease. Almost immediately after B. surrendered his lease to the landlord (S.), who gave a fresh lease to R., to whom he afterwards sold all his rights. A. continued in occupation some time, and on relinquishing was sued for rent at the stipulated rates. A. denied liability, alleging that he had made no agreement with R., but, from the time of R.'s purchase had held under him as a tenant-at-will.

Held that A. was bound, under the terms of his contract, to pay the rent for as many years as the lease had to run to his lessor, or to the person who represented his lessor. H. Ruston v. W. L. Atkinson, 11 W. R., 485.

Where A. taking a putnee to the prejudice of B., has notice of an agreement existing between B. and the zemindar, he cannot in equity maintain the lease which he has obtained, but B. will be entitled to relief against him. Dwarkanath Chowdhry v. Komul Lochun Doss Mundle and others, 10 W. R., 414.

Plaintiff took a sub-lease of land from a party who was lessee under the proprietor, but who, without ever receiving possession, surrendered his rights under his lease by a deed of estafa executed subsequently to the sub-lease.

Held that plaintiff had no right of action against the proprietor. Beejoy Gobind Singh v. Sunkur Dutt Singh, 10 W. R., 367.

The plaintiffs were mokurruree lease-holders, prior to whose lease the proprietor granted a pottah of the same land to A., with a stipulation that A. should not let the land to others without leave. A. afterwards, with the proprietor's consent, sold his lease to B., who again, without such consent, sold his rights to the defendants. The plaintiffs sued to eject the defendants as trespassers. Held that as there was nothing in the condition on which the plaintiffs (as exercising the proprietor's rights) rely that implies right of re-entry upon the land in case of a breach of that condition, the only effect of the want of the plaintiffs' consent on the part of the plaintiffs to B.'s sale was to maintain unimpaired B.'s liability to the landlord, without reference to the arrangement between B. and any other parties. Gordon, Stuart, and Co. v. Taylor, W. R., F. B., 9.

Held by the Court of first instance, and confirmed on appeal, that a covenant in a lease for years to grant a new lease on the expiration of the existing term under and subject to all covenants, as in the first lease contained, is satisfied, if such new lease contain the like covenants as the former lease, except the covenant for renewal. P. and O. Co. v. Kunnyloll Dutt, 2 Hyde's Rep., 217.

The defendant had unsuccessfully intervened in a suit between landlord and tenant, setting up a lease as middleman. Held that the landlord was entitled to sue in the Civil Court to have such lease declared fictitious. Raghubar Chowdhry v. Bhaikdhari Singh, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 48; S. C., 11 W. R., 455.

Where two parties bind themselves under an indenture, drawn up in the English form, the one to lease and the other to pay rent for certain land, the contract is complete, and a suit for arrears of rent due under it will lie under Act X of 1859, although no separate kubuleut is executed. Kishen Doss and another v. Hurry Jebun Doss and others, 10 W. R., 324.

The term thekadar is properly applicable to hereditary cultivators only when they have also a theka or lease of a share in, or the whole of, the profits of an estate. Buij Nauth v. Manglee, 2 N. W. R., 411.

A thekadar is ordinarily a person who holds a theka or lease of the whole of a zemindar's interest in a village.

There is nothing in the law which renders a writing necessary to the creation of such an interest.

It is not to be inferred from the mere circumstance that persons accepted a theka that they forewent their existing right. Leela Dhur v. Bhugwan and others, 3 N. W. R., 39.

A lease for no definite time, but fixing an annual rent (সন বসন) falls within Clause 4 of Section 17 of Act XX of 1866, and must be registered in order to be admissible in evidence. Ramkumar Mondle v. Brajahori Mridha, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 75; 10 W. R., 410.

A lease providing for enhancement if the lands are found on measurement to exceed the quantity stated in the lease, does not necessarily give the right to abatement if the lands are found to be less than that stated in the lease. Ram Kant Chowdhry v. Bindabun Chunder Gope, 2 W. R., Act X R., 71.

Construction of the term "abadkaree talookdaree" in a lease explained.

Neither the acceptance of farming leases by the widow quâ farmer, subject to the Government proprietary right, nor the sale of that Government right, in any way ipso facto extinguishes any talookdaree right existing in the abadkaree talookdar in that capacity, if otherwise valid. Huropershad Bhuttacharjee v. Bhyrubchunder Mojoomdar, 8 W. R., 391.

Where the right, title, and interest of the owner of a house are purchased at a sale in execution, and the purchaser finds the house in the occupation of a lessee at a fixed rent, his giving the lessee notice that, after a certain date, he intends to charge him at a particular rate does not give him a right to rent at that rate. If not content with the rate fixed in the lease he can only get such sum as the Court finds to be a fair and reasonable rent. James Fegredo v. Mahomed Madessur and others, 10 W. R., 267.

A sum taken by a landlord as an advance, to be credited to his lessee in his accounts as rent, may be considered as security for the payment of the rent, but does not change the lease into a mortgage. Baboo Gridharee Singh v. M. Collis, 8 W. R., Cr., 497.

In a lease which provides for rent-free possession for 12 years, the rent-free possession contemplated does not necessarily date from the year of the lease, so that in a suit more than 12 years after the granting of the lease the lessee is entitled to plead that he has not yet had possession rent-free for 12 years. Bharut Chunder Roy v. Issur Chunder Sircar, 2 W. R., Act X R., 78.

Where a lease is not in writing, but the terms of holding are specified in a notification addressed by the lessor to his servants, such an acknowledgment is, as against the lessor, conclusive evidence of the terms of the agreement.

Where a lease for a fixed term of seven years contains no words to import a continuance of the interest after the death of the grantee, nor any expressions which point to any earlier determination of the interest, the primâ-facie meaning is a continuance for seven years, and that the lease did not terminate with the death of the original lessee, but survived during the remainder of the term to his heirs and representatives.

The onus is on the party who seeks to show that the transaction should be governed by Hindu law that the primâ-facie construction is contrary to the Hindu law, or the established custom of considering such contracts in Bengal. In this case the lessor having, on the death of the lessee, granted a putnee of his whole estate, including the farm in dispute, was adjudged liable to pay to the representatives of the lessee damages for the time they were deprived of the beneficial enjoyment of the farm, according to the increased rent which the new lessee had undertaken to pay. Maharajah Tej Chund Bahadoor v. Sree Kanth Ghose and others, 6 W. R., P. C., 48.

A pottah granted by a lessee from Government, whose lease fell in by his own default, cannot enure beyond the temporary interest of the grantor. Bomeezoonissa Saheba and another v. N. Joachim, 6 W. R., Act X R., 88.

A. conveyed land to B., with a collateral agreement to repurchase within a certain period; the right to redeem, however, being dependent upon the due performance by A. of the conditions of a certain lease of the land in question which A., remaining in possession, agreed to take from B. The rent falling in arrear, B. sold the land to C. within the period allowed A. to redeem.

On appeal the High Court set aside the sale, holding that there was no natural connection between the lease and the condition to redeem, and that the clause for forfeiture was so vaguely worded as to have the appearance of a mere threat, as in equity in the absence of specific mention of the nature of the failure which is to bring down the penalty of forfeiture, ought not to be enforced. Anonymous, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 130.

A lease granted by an ijaradar is not good beyond the term of the ijara.

It does not lie within the ordinary scope of a naib's authority to grant leases; special authority to grant them is necessary. Ooma Tara Debia v. Peena Bibee, 2 W. R., 155.

Where the appointment of a sezawal to collect the rents is provided for in the lease, in the event of the tenant failing to pay his rents, such appointment, when made, cannot be regarded as either avoiding the lease or evicting the lessee. Fukeeroodeen Mahomed Hossein v. C. J. Phillip, 11 W. R., 464.

A Government ijaradar's covenant with Government that he will not object to the use of the tanks, roads, cow-path, &c., within his ijara, does not prevent him from making settlements for those tanks, roads, &c.; and the mere fact of his giving a lease to one party cannot interfere with another party's right to use such road, or the waters of such tank, or give that other party cause to sue for a declaration of title. Woosam Aly v. Jan Aly and others, 11 W. R., 394.

A lease for a term of years contained a proviso that if in any year the rent should be three kists in arrear the lessor might appoint a sezawal, and the lessee would pay his salary; and if, notwithstanding the appointment of such sezawal, the arrears of rent were not paid by the end of the year the lessor should be at liberty to rescind the lease. Held that it was a condition precedent to the right of the lessor to rescind the lease, that he should have appointed a sezawal. Lall Lutchmee Pershaud v. Bhoodun Singh, Marsh., 474.

A lease contained a stipulation that the ryot should give up such part of the land as was unfit for the cultivation of indigo, and should not sub-let the same. Held that as the lease contained no proviso for forfeiture, or right of re-entry for the breach of this covenant, the landlord was not entitled upon such breach to maintain a suit under Act X of 1859, Section 23, Clause 5, to eject the ryot. Gooroopersaud Sircar v. Philippes, Marsh., 366.

A lease was granted for a term of years at a certain reserved rent payable by instalments, with a stipulation in the kubuleut that in case default were made in the payment of such instalments on the days they severally should become due, the tenant should pay interest thereon at the rate of one per cent. per mensem. Held that the landlord was entitled to interest at the rate agreed upon, in respect of instalments of rents during the several periods they had remained due, notwithstanding he had received such instalments from time to time after the days for payment. Rutty Kunt Bose v. Gungadhur Biswas, Marsh., 40.

A lease purporting to be for a certain term of years contained a proviso that if at any time the lessee should make default in payment of rent the lessor should be at liberty to let the lands to another lessee. Held that the introduction of this proviso did not make the lease operate as a grant in perpetuity so long as the rent was paid, but merely had the effect of enabling the lessor to determine the lease within the term, in case of default by the tenant in paying the rent. Shanye Rujree v. Burtin, Marsh., 250.

A lease contained the following words: "You shall continue to pay the sum of sicca rupees 5 fixed on the whole as ticca jumma of the said mouzah every year, and having cleared the villages of jungle, and having brought the lands under cultivation, yourself and through others, as usual, enjoy and occupy the same with your sons and grandsons in succession." Held that the lease conveyed an absolute interest, and that the grantee and his heirs were entitled to transfer it; and that a transferee, not an auction-purchaser, was not liable to enhancement of rent. Watson and Co. v. Joggeshur Attah and others, Marsh., 330.

In every agreement to lease land there is an implied contract that the lessor will give peaceable possession of the land leased to the lessee. Munee Dutt Singh v. William Campbell, 11 W. R., 278; S. C., 12 W. R., 149.

In strict law a farmer forfeits his lease by the withdrawal of the personal security given by him at the time of taking the farm. But cases of forfeiture are not favoured when no injury has resulted, or when a money compensation is a sufficient remedy.

Mere unpunctuality in the date of payment of rent is no ground for forfeiture. The zemindar, if he has sustained injury by such unpunctuality, may sue for the interest due during the period in which the different instalments remained unpaid and for conditional forfeiture, but he cannot demand at once the absolute forfeiture of the property.

When there is a covenant not to sub-let, what constitutes a sub-lease causing forfeiture? Held that the lessee must transfer all his rights of collecting rents and of suing for them in the Courts; and that although a sub-lease may not be so absolute and complete as to make the lease ipso facto void, yet it may be such a fraudulent evasion of the terms of the covenant as to entitle the plaintiff to equitable relief.

The mere fixing of a sum to be paid by the sub-tenant to the farmer, and the declaration of the sub-tenant's right to all sums collected beyond that amount, are not sufficient to convert an agency into a sub-lease. Alum Chunder Shaw Chowdhry v. W. Moram and Co., W. R., 1864, Act X R., 31.

Though the holder of a younger brother's appanage has no power of complete and absolute alienation of property, of which he has only a limited tenure for maintenance, still a lease granted by him is good as between him and the grantee and those claiming under the grantor, at least during the grantor's life. Mining leases, like leases for building, are among those which the regulations particularly favour as being in their nature such as to require a long time for profitable working. Gordon, Stuart, and Co. v. Tikaitnee Scolas Kowaree, W. R., 1864, 370.

By indenture dated 1st February, 1856, A. leased certain premises in Calcutta to B. for a term of ten years, as from 1st November, 1855, at a rent of Rs. 100 per month, payable monthly. A. covenanted with B. to grant to her on her request, to be made within three months of the expiry of the term, a fresh lease on the same terms for three years, and that it should be lawful for B. at any time during the second lease, or extended lease, to remove or sell and dispose of all, or any part, of the screws and machinery which were at the time of the granting of the lease, or during the term or extended term might be, upon the premises, and immediately upon or within two months after the expiration of the term or extended term to remove, &c., the buildings, &c., which then were or might at any time, during the term or extended term, be erected on the premises by B., her executors, administrators, or assigns. B. erected buildings during her tenancy under the lease.

The defendant, on 24th August, 1858, became, by various mesne assignments, the assignee of the lease, without notice to A., and subsequently repaired and erected buildings on the land.

The defendant continued to occupy the premises, and paid the rent in the name of B. up to August, 1866. No renewal of the lease (which expired on 31st October, 1865) was ever demanded by B. or by any one claiming under her.

The plaintiffs who had become A.'s representatives in June, 1866, gave notice, through their attorneys, on 6th September, 1866, to B. to quit on 1st November, 1866, and not to remove buildings and fixtures put up since 1st November, 1855; and on 1st November, 1866, the plaintiffs, in pursuance of the notice of the 6th of September, demanded possession of B. and of the defendant who was in actual occupation of the premises.

Held that the acceptance of rent by A. and his representatives from the defendant holding over after the expiration of the original term did not constitute a renewal of the lease for three years; that the defendant was not entitled to a renewal for three years; that the tenancy after 1st October, 1865, was a monthly tenancy in the name of B., and was terminated on 31st October, 1866, by the notice of 6th September, 1866; that the defendant was not entitled to remove buildings erected; that he might remove the machinery. Brojonath Mullick and others v. Weskins, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 163.

Where a joint lease was given to many persons, with an entirety and equality of interest among the tenants, the resignation of some of the joint lessees does not necessarily operate to void the lease. Mohima Chunder Sein v. Petambur Shaha and others, 9 W. R., 147.

In a suit for a declaration of right to, and to obtain possession of, a ryotee jote by virtue of an amaldaree pottah granted to plaintiff by defendant, where the terms of the pottah were substantially that the plaintiff was to have a ryotee jote at a certain jumma, and that on there being a measurement and re-assessment the plaintiff was to be liable to pay higher (i.e. pergunnah) rates, there being no mention of consideration or any reference to a right of occupancy,—Held that plaintiff could not urge that the written contract conveyed to him a right of permanent possession for due consideration, nor could defendant be legally called upon to prove payment of consideration.

Held also that as defendant had, on the contemplation of a re-measurement and re-assessment, tendered a pottah at the pergunnah rates which plaintiff had refused, the latter was not entitled to possession and to the lease claimed in the suit. Bango Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Nuzmoodeen Ahmed and others, 11 W. R., 156.

An instrument which is in terms a temporary lease is as binding on the lessor quâ lease, where the tenancy is to commence at a future day, or on the determination of an existing lease under which another lessee is in possession, as where it commences immediately. Pitchakutti Chetti v. Kamala Nayakkan, 1 Mad. Rep., 153.

In a suit against a Collector for an illegal seizure and subsequent usurpation of plaintiff's shares in an Agraharam village for non-payment of tirvai due from other tenants of the village, and to recover the increased tirvai imposed by the Collector,—Held that the plaintiff's right to enjoy his share of the village lands under the original pottah was not legally determined by resumption; and that, continuing liable only to the fixed rent, the plaintiff is entitled to the return of the amount paid under compulsion, in excess of such rent, at the date of the suit. Ellaiy v. Late Collector of Salem, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 59.

The fifteen days' grace allowed to a lessee prior to ejectment cannot be negatived by any condition in the lease. Madhub Chunder Adit Chowdry v. Ram Kuloo Beeparee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 151.

Where a lease contained a stipulation against sub-letting without the lessor's consent, and the lease violated this stipulation, it was held that the stipulation was a reasonable one, and that the lessor might either bring an action for damages for its breach, or a suit for an injunction to restrain such sub-letting by the lessee. Mohaná, widow of Gumáhi v. Shekh Sádodin et al., 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 69.

Every breach of an agreement for a lease does not entail forfeiture of the lease, but where forfeiture is provided as the penalty for breach of a particular clause it may be enforced for such breach. Mahomed Faez Chowdry v. Shib Doolaree Tewaree, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 103.

For breach of a covenant by an izardar not to excavate a tank in the lands leased to him, or if so to be liable to eviction by the zemindar, and to pay the cost of filling up the tank, no suit will lie at the instance of the zemindar for the recovery of a fractional portion of the lands covered by the lease, but the zemindar may declare the lease cancelled and resume the whole of the lands, or he may sue for cancellation of the lease, and he may also sue for damages occasioned by the excavation of the tank. Maharajah Beer Chunder Manick v. Shaikh Hossein, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 29.

Suit to eject defendants (who held under a lease, Exhibit A) from a house-ground and to compel them to remove the buildings thereon erected. The defendants pleaded that A was a permanent lease, and that plaintiff had no right to eject. The lease A expressly authorized the lessee to build. The Court of first instance, holding that A was not a permanent lease, decreed as sued for. The Appellate Court, while concurring with the moonsiff as to the construction of A, gave to the plaintiff the option of paying for the house and resuming the land, or of receiving the value of the land from the defendant. Held, that the decree of the Principal Sudder Ameen was right. Máhálatchmi Ammál v. Palani Chetti, 6 Mad. Rep., 245.

Ejectment by landlord against tenant. It appeared that the land in dispute was the property of a muttum of which the plaintiff was the trustee; and had been let to the defendant's father under a muchâlka (Exhibit A) dated 14th August, 1837, entered into with the Collector, the manager of the property on behalf of the Government. The tenancy continued to be regulated by this agreement until plaintiff, in 1867, demanded an increased rent, which the defendant refused to agree to pay. Upon that demand and refusal the plaintiff, at the end of the fasli, and without tendering a pottah for another fasli stipulating for the increased rent, brought his suit to eject. The defendant (appellant) contended that the right to put an end to his tenancy was conditional upon his failure to pay the rent fixed by the agreement. Held by Scotland, C. J., upon the construction of the muchâlka, that the plaintiff possessed the absolute right to put an end to the tenancy at the end of the fasli, unless the condition relied upon by the appellant was by force of established general custom (which had not been alleged), or positive law made a part of the contract of tenancy.

By Holloway, J.—That whether the express contract was binding on the pagoda or not, it gave no right to hold permanently, and that there is nothing in any existing written law to render a tenancy once created only modifiable by a revision of rent, but not terminable at the will of the lessor exercised in accordance with his obligations. Enamandoram Venkuyya v. Venkantanáráyana Reddi and Nalitambi; Puttar v. Chinnadevannáyagom Pillai, (1 M. H. C., 75 and 109), doubted. Chockalinga Pillai v. Vythealinga Pundara Sunnady, 6 Mad. Rep., 164.

Suit to recover the proprietary right in a village belonging to plaintiff's muttah, which was let to defendant's father under a pottah and muchâlka, and which on the death of her father and since the defendant refused to surrender, upon the grounds (1) that the right had been leased permanently, subject to the regular payment of the stipulated rent, which condition had been strictly fulfilled; (2) that her father had expended large sums in making substantial permanent improvements in the village, and that he had by gift transferred the tenancy to her.

Held that on the true construction of the terms of the pottah and muchâlka only a tenancy from fasil to fasil was created. Jessie Foulkes v. Rajahrathnee Mudali, 6 Mad. Rep., 175.

A lease granted by a zemindar for a longer period than the term of his own engagement with the Government is not absolutely void for the excess, but only voidable and may be confirmed. Semble, that Act XVI of 1842 applied to agricultural leases, not to bonâ-fide leases for other purposes. Nita Ram v. Nanuck Dass, 1, 3 N. W. R., 47.

A perpetual or permanent lease at a low fixed rent, made by a zemindar who obtained the zemindary by self-acquisition, is binding upon the zemindar's successors, although the instrument was not registered under Regulation XXV of 1802, Section 8. Mutta Viran Chetty v. Rani Kattama Natchiyur, 4 Mad. Rep., 463.

The right to assign or sub-let is as well established an incident of a tenancy at a rent for a determinate period when the contract of letting is silent on the subject as it is of an estate for life or of inheritance, and there is nothing in the nature of the conditions attached to a zemindary estate which renders an assignment of a lease of such estate an exception to the general rules. Held, on the construction of a lease, that the language did not evidence a contract purely personal to the lessee and his heir so as to exclude the right to assign. Venkatasamy Naick v. Srimata Muthuvijia Ragunanda Remi Kathama Natchiar, 5 Mad. Rep., 227.

The defendant's father was engaged in litigation for the purpose of obtaining possession of a zemindary under a lease for ten years, given by the zemindar, commencing in 1857. While the suit was pending the defendant's father sold five-eighths of his interest under the lease to the plaintiff, and agreed to give plaintiff possession in consideration of certain sums of money paid and certain liabilities undertaken by the plaintiff. The defendant's father obtained possession in 1865, but refused to put the plaintiff's agents in possession on the ground that the plaintiff had not complied with the terms of the agreement. In giving a decree for the defendant's father against the lessor, the Privy Council reserved to the zemindar leave to institute a suit for redemption upon payment to the defendant of all sums advanced to him. In a suit instituted by the zemindar for redemption in 1866, a razinamah was signed by the plaintiff and defendant in the suit, by which the term of the original lease was extended to the year 1875 for the considerations therein contained. In 1867 the plaintiff brought a suit for possession, and claimed the benefit of the stipulations contained in the razinamah, or for damages. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to possession on the ground that defendant was not in possession under the old lease, but plaintiff was entitled to recover damages for loss of profits during the defendant's possession under the old law. Ramasawmy Naik v. Vinuithuthan, 5 Mad. Rep., 257.

A perpetual or permanent lease at a low fixed rent, made by a zemindar who obtained the zemindary by self-acquisition, is binding upon the zemindar's successors, although the instrument was not registered under Regulation XXV of 1802, Section 8. Muttu Viram Chetty v. Rani Kuttama Natchiyar, 4 Mad. Rep., 463.

A permanent lease of a village in a muttah by the muttahdar (plaintiff's father) is not invalidated by Section 8 of Regulation XXV of 1802, although the lease has not been registered as required by that section. Subrayalu Naick v. Rama Reddy, 1 Madras High Court Reports, overruled. Kendappa Naik v. Annamalay Chetty, 4 Mad. Rep., 396.

Where there are no words in a lease extending its provisions to other parties beyond the lessee, its term must be interpreted as applicable to the lessee only, unless the Court is able, from the conduct of the parties and the surrounding circumstances, to come to a different conclusion.

Where a lease contains a condition whereby the lessor agrees not to put an end to the mukurruree of his lessee, except on the occurrence of a fresh settlement on the part of Government, it does not follow that the lessor intends to constitute a hereditary lease if no Government settlement took place. Lekhraj Roy v. Kunhya Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 262.

Where a lessor gives his lessee power to sub-let, and the latter sub-lets, the sub-lessee obtains rights against both of which he cannot be deprived without his own consent. The lessee's surrender of his lease cannot operate to the prejudice of the sub-lessee. Nehaloonissa v. Dhunnoo Lall Chowdry, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 281.

Where a lease gives the lessee the right to continue in possession until money borrowed from him is liquidated, the lessor is put in the position of a mortgagee, and, to the extent of the security given, the lessee is in the position of a mortgagee, but the lessee is not entitled to have the property sold. Kewal Sahoo v. Baso Narain Singh, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 445.

A lease for more than a year is not the less a lease because a condition is attached to the consideration, and because its term may be lessened on the payment of a sum of money by the lessor. Such a lease cannot be used in evidence unless it is registered. Buksh Ali Boohean v. Sreemutty Nabotara, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 468.

18.—POTTAH.

It is not necessary that any particular form of words should be used in a pottah conveying rights to hold at fixed rates. Afsur Mundul v. Ameen Mundul and others, 8 W. R., 502.

Pottahs need not be attested or registered. Ram Joy Sein v. Nunda Moyee Debea and others, 10 W. R., 374.

Even if a ryot's pottah be declared by a Court to be null and void his title to the occupancy right laid down in Section 6, Act X of 1859, is not affected, provided he has held or cultivated continuously for a period of twelve years. Shib Nath Roy v. R. T. Watson & Co., 8 W. R., 374.

Where lands in excess of the number of beegahs specified in a pottah have been held for more than 60 years, and have always been considered to form part of what was covered by the pottah, they are held to have been occupied as land included in the pottah since before the Decennial Settlement, and the rent of them cannot therefore be enhanced. Janokee Bullub Chuckerbutty v. Nobin Chunder Roy Chowdhry, 2 W. R., Act X R., 33.

A pottah which bars enhancement may be good as regards the person to whom it is granted, but not as regards his heirs not mentioned in the pottah. Rajessuree Debia v. Shibnath Chatterjea, 4 W. R., Act X R., 41.

A pottah must not, primâ facie, be assumed to give an hereditary interest, though it contains no words of inheritance; "pottah," as used in Act X of 1859, being a generic term, which embraces every kind of engagement between a zemindar and his under-tenants or ryots.

Where proof exists of long uninterrupted enjoyment of a tenure, accompanied by recognition of its hereditary and transferable character, it is sufficient to supply the want of the words "from generation to generation" in the pottah, and the tenant cannot be dispossessed by his superior. Dhunput Singh v. Goamun Baee, 9 W. R., P. C., 3.

Suit for ejectment and mesne profits before Act X of 1859. The defendant (a planter) was allowed to continue in possession of certain lands until a certain time, when he was to relinquish all but those fit for indigo cultivation, which he was to keep, on paying rent to and taking a pottah from the plaintiff. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant did not take a pottah; the defendant answered that he applied for one and was refused. Held that the landlord was bound to make a positive tender of a pottah, and not to insist on his tenant taking the initiative. Huronath Roy v. Gow Smith, 2 W. R., 73.

A jungleboore pottah granted by a Hindu widow, and acquiesced in and confirmed by various persons interested in disputing it, cannot, whatever its original defects, be cancelled at the suit of one of the persons who had recognized it. Ram Sagur Singh v. Ranee Kasheesuree, 2 W. R., 291.

The words "such lands continuing to be used for the purposes specified in the leases" in Clause 4, Section 26, Act I of 1845, do not restrain the effect of a lease for clearing land of jungle solely to such time as jungle remains to be cut on the land; but should be taken to mean that the lease will stand good as long as the land is kept clear of jungle, and not allowed to fall back into its old state.

If a pottah gives the tenant power to extend his lease beyond the land originally made over to him under the pottah, and gives the same rent for the additional land as for the other land, such additional land is not assessable with the pergunnah rate of rent; but the pottah is good and binding even on an auction-purchaser as respects the whole of the land cultivated by the tenant. R. Watson & Co., v. Jhukroo Singh, 1 W. R, 195.

A prior pottah granted by an ijaradar, and ratified by the zemindar subsequently to his grant of a new pottah of the same to another party, cannot be questioned by that other party, who may however seek his remedy by a suit against the zemindar Jeeaoollah Mundul v. Rajah Indoo Bhooson Deb Roy, 5 W. R., 207.

The mere production of a pottah, without proof of possession under it, cannot avail. Sheikh Luckhee v. Sheikh Babur, 5 W. R., 213.

A pottah which provided that the grantor was not to alienate or lease the property to any other party during the term of the pottah, without giving the lessees under the pottah the refusal, was upheld. Mohima Chunder Sein v. Pitambur Shaah and others, 9 W. R., 147.

Where a pottah does not contain words specifying the right of re-entry, the Court will hold that such right exists. While land is held which a pottah which defines the period for under the land is to be held, no right of occupancy can accrue, although such a right may accrue under Section 6 in certain cases. Shadhoo Jha v. Bhugwan Chunder Opadhea and another, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 75, and 5 W. R., Act X R., 17.

A tenant not having a right of occupancy is not entitled to a pottah under Section 8, Act X of 1859, unless there is an agreement with his landlord fixing the rate of rent.

A tenant not having a right of occupancy is not entitled to an abatement of rent under Act X of 1859, Section 18. Sree Nobodeep Chunder Sircar v. Lallah Seeb Loll, Marsh., 325.

On the hearing of a suit for a pottah, it appeared that, by a mistake in calculation, a small arrear of rent was due to the defendant. Held that the Judge might notwithstanding make a decree in plaintiff's favour. Rughoo Roy v. Sreeram Roy and others, Marsh., 257.

In a suit against a Collector for an illegal seizure and subsequent usurpation of plaintiff's shares in an Agraharam village for non-payment of trivari due from other tenants of the village, and to recover the increased trivari imposed by the Collector,—Held that the fact of pottahs having been issued separately to each tenant, stating the share of land occupied, without defining the holding by boundaries and the proportionate amount of assessment which the cultivator is to pay for it, though affording cogent evidence of the distinct liability of each for the amount of trivari stated in his pottah and no more, is not conclusive evidence of such individual liability. Ellaiya v. Late Collector of Salem, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 59.

Where a pottah recited that the rent was to be paid from father to son, who were to occupy the land and build a house thereon, although there were no formal words to the effect that the rent was never to be changed, the fixed character of the rent was presumed from long and uninterrupted enjoyment and the descent of the tenure to the present occupant. Pearee Mohun Mookerjee v. Raj Kisto Mookerjee, 11 W. R., 259.

Where a pottah, after providing for payment of rent by the dur-putneedar "year by year, month by month, and kist by kist," contained a distinct declaration that if the dur-putneedar did not at the end of each month pay up the amount due for that month he should from the first day of the succeeding month pay interest upon the amount in arrear, the Court held that the Judge below was not correct in his construction of the pottah that the dur-putneedar was not bound to pay rent in equal monthly kists, nor liable to interest if he did not so pay it. Bhyrub Chunder Banerjee v. Meer Ameeroodeen, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 173.

The word "karindah" as used in the pottah in this case was held to be merely a term used to set forth what was the status of the person to whom the pottah was granted, and to afford no ground for the presumption of the tenants holding previous to the date of that pottah. Nor did the word "nij-jote," as used in this pottah, mean lands cultivated by the cultivator himself, but lands held by the zemindars in their own possession or their own private lands. Hajee Shaikh Wajoodeen Hossein v. Madhoo Chowdry, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 404.

Where a pottah purports to convey so many beegahs of land "more or less" within certain boundaries, the test of what is really conveyed is not the area of the land but its boundaries. Sheeb Chunder Mahneeah v. Brojonath Aditya, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 301.

Where a pottah had no attesting witnesses and was not capable of direct proof, it was held to have been established by the fact of having come from proper custody, corroborated by the exact identity of the grantor's signature with his admitted signature on other documents.

A pottah which gave land for building purposes and recited that no abatement of rent was to be granted at any time or for any cause, and that no increase of jumma should ever be demanded, was held distinctly to provide that the land was granted at the rate then fixed for ever, even though no such words were used as "istemraree" or "Ba-furzundan." Binode Beharry Roy v. C. B. Masseyk, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 494.

19.—Lessor and Lessee.

A lessor cannot, after the expiration of the lessee's lease, appeal from the dismissal of the lessee's suit concerning a boundary dispute. The Commissioner of Soonderbunds v. Chunder Coomar Ghose, 3 W. R., 175.

A bonâ-fide lessee from a party actually in possession as zemindar is entitled to recover mesne profits for the unexpired period of his lease, on being evicted by the auction-purchaser in execution of a decree. Teknarain Singh v. Dewan Ameer Ali Khan, 3 W. R., 222.

Where the proprietor of resumed lakheraj land leases it for valuable consideration, and at a stipulated jumma, while the settlement proceedings are under reference to the higher revenue authorities for confirmation, he cannot afterwards turn round upon the lessee and plead that he had no power to grant a permanent lease, on the ground that the settlement with him was temporary, and not permanent. Ameer Aly v. Ameeroonissa Begum, 11 W. R., 11.

Lands forming part of the endowment of a temple were demised by the Collector at a svamibhogam rent of four annahs per cottah, the lessee paying the Government tirvai. The lessee entered, improved, and paid his rent for several years. Held, reversing the decree of the Principal Sudder Ameen, that the smallness of the rent showed that the lessee was merely a tenant-at-will, and the hákdar of the endowment, having regained possession, might oust him at his pleasure.

Regulation V of 1822, Section 8, refers only to zemindars and other proprietors of estates permanently settled under the Regulation of 1802. Nallatambi Pattar v. Chinnadeyvanayagam Pillai, 1 Mad. Rep., 109.

Where a lease is granted in perpetuity at a fixed rent, and the lessor reserves no reversionary interest in the land or in the trees growing on it, the lessees are entitled to the ownership of the trees. Sharoda Soondery Dabea v. Gour Singh and others, 10 W. R., 419.

A lessee who sues, alleging that there has been an interruption to his lease to cut or sell the trees on the land included therein, must base his right, first, upon its being a necessary incident of the lease by reason of the objects of the lease; or, secondly, under some positive law; or, thirdly, under some custom to be incorporated in the lease; or fourthly, under the express terms of the lease. Ruttonjee Eduljee Shet v. The Collector of Tanna and the Conservator of Forests, 10 W. R., P. C., 13.

To justify a holding over after expiry of lease, a direct consent on the part of the landlord is requisite. No implication of consent can or ought to be received when there has been every opportunity of consent in express terms, and particularly in the face of a special warning from the landlord that he should re-enter on the land when the term expired. When tenants have no right to hold over, their use and occupation of the land is a trespass, and they are liable not for rent as tenants, but for damages as trespassers. G. P. Mackintosh v. Gopee Mohun Mojoomdar, 4 W. R., 24.

Plaintiff let to defendant a quantity of land, of which he was not certain how much was in cultivation and how much was jungle, at a total jumma to be eventually settled on the footing of 12 annas per beegah culturable, and 10 annas per beegah jungle, on the number of beegahs of each sort which existed at the end of the year next preceding the date of the pottah, the calculation of the rent to be made permanently by effecting a measurement within six months, until which time defendant should pay a provisional jumma at 12 annas a beegah on a given number of beegahs, amounting to a specified sum. Plaintiff sues for arrears of rent, no measurement having taken place, though years have elapsed.

Held that until ascertainment by measurement of a settled jumma, the rent due under the terms of the pottah would be the provisional sum mentioned above; but if the delay in such ascertainment were due to default of plaintiff, defendant would be entitled to set up the state of things which he believed would be arrived at if measurement were effected. Bharuth Chunder Roy v. Bepin Beharee Chuckerbutty, 9 W. R., 495.

A. cannot be summarily evicted and deprived of his title under a mokurruree lease duly made in his favour, by reason of a previous arrangement between his lessor and B., which never went beyond the lessor's receipt of earnest-money from B., and of which A. had no notice.

Quære,—Whether B. can sue the lessor for damages? Mookto Ram Paul v Kalee Komul Roy and another, 6 W. R., 234.

Where a lessor, who had never been in possession, granted a pottah of lands to which his title was disputed, and the lessee was kept out of possession by the defendant who disputed lessor's title,—Held that the lessee could maintain his action for possession of the land, and need not make his lessor a co-plaintiff. Prankissen Dey v. Biswambhur Sen, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 207.

A suit for rent will not lie where the lessee has never obtained possession of the land leased to him. J. B. Bullen v. Lalit Jha, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 119.

A Collector may give a decree for arrears of rent against the real lessees in possession, although no previous realization of rent directly from them is established, and no written agreement is shown to have been executed by them in their own names, another party being the ostensible holder of the lease, and not denying liability. Judoonath Paul v. Prosunnonath Dutt and others, 9 W. R., 71.

The heir of a lessee is liable to the lessor for rent payable by virtue of a kubuleut, notwithstanding he is not in possession of the land. Tarineepersad Ghose v. Sreegopaul Paul Chowdhry, Marsh., 476.

The lessor is not bound to recognize the title of any one except the person with whom he deals, whatever that title may be as between the lessee and the members of his family. Upendra Mohun Tagore v. Thanda Dasi, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 349.

A zemindar, after he had granted a zur-i-peshgi lease, collected the rents from the ryots. Held, first, that the lessee was entitled to recover from the zemindar the amounts of rents so received in excess of the rent due under the lease, and next, that a suit to recover such excess was properly instituted before the Collector. Rampershaud Vogut v. Ramtohol Singh, Marsh., 655.

Where the proprietors of a mehal had agreed with an ijaradar that in the event of their granting a putnee to anybody he should have the refusal, and, notwithstanding their agreement, gave a putnee to another ijaradar,—Held that the latter, having been no party to the stipulation, was not bound thereby, and that the putnee granted to him cannot be set aside. Komul Lochun Doss v. Dwarka Nath Chowdhry, 10 W. R., 254.

A lessor who prevents ryots from paying rent to the lessee when the latter comes to take possession is liable for mesne profits, even though he may not himself collect the rents. Bhechumbur Singh v. Roy Chunder Ghose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 196.

Where a lease contains a condition whereby the lessor agrees not to put an end to the mokurruree of his lessee except on the occurrence of a fresh settlement on the part of Government, it does not follow that the lessor intends to constitute an hereditary lease if no Government settlement takes place. In such a case a lessor's right to re-enter arises on the death of the lessee; but if the representatives of the lessee to whom they have paid rent, the cause of action to a purchaser of the lessor's rights and interests arises on the refusal of the lessee's representatives to permit him to re-enter. Lakhraj Roy v. Kanhya Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 262.

In a suit by an ejected lessee to recover a year's balance of rent from his lessor, who had given a lease to another party and dispossessed plaintiff,—Held that by granting the later lease defendant had made himself responsible for any loss which might thereby be occasioned to plaintiff, even though he (the lessor) had not collected the rent himself. Gobind Chund Juttee v. Mun Mohun Jha, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 43.

Where a lessee of land under an izarah erected an indigo factory thereon, with the knowledge of and without any objection by the lessor, upon the determination of the izarah lease, and the delivery of possession to the lessor, the lessee was held entitled to remove the materials. Kinoo Singh Roy v. Nupeeroodeen Mahomed Chowdry, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 97.

Any leasehold estate, when not expressly limited to the life of the lessee, passes to his heirs in the same way as other property, and if the heirs take the estate of the deceased lessee they take it with all rights and responsibilities. Shaikh Danoollah v. Shaikh Amamtoollah, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 147.

Unless evidence to the contrary be forthcoming, a lessee of zemindaree rights must in this country be presumed to have all and the same powers in relation to the location or ejectment of ryots as are possessed by the zemindar. Suda Nund v. Dwarka Singh, 2 N. W. R., 194.

A plea that the defendant was deceived into taking a lease by the misrepresentation of the plaintiff cannot be pleaded as an answer to an action for rent.

Such a defence should be made the subject of a cross suit. Ishree Pershad Rae v. Beharee Lal, 2 N. W. R., 243.

Where a lessee whose lease has expired, and who is unwilling to give the increased rent demanded by the landlord, and retains possession in the hope of obtaining a new lease without such increase, parties entering upon the land as cultivators with the consent of the landlord are not called upon to show the ex-lessee their authority. M. H. Gale v. Maharanee Sreemutty, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 133.

A sub-lessee without title cannot plead any law of limitation against the landowner either himself or through his lessee. Mohurrum Shaikh v. Nowkurree Dass Mohuldar, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 357.

A landlord having obtained a decree declaring that certain homestead land was liable to assessment, the occupants, owing to certain criminal proceedings against them, abandoned the land, and the landlord leased it out to others, who held possession, paying rent for upwards of twelve years, after which they were ousted by the original occupants who claimed the land rent free. Held in a suit by the lessees that they were entitled to recover possession. Moneerooddeen Mojoomdar v. Parbutty Churn Ghose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 121.

A breach of any of the stipulations in a lease does not cancel the lease or give a right to eject, unless there has been an express provision to that effect in the lease. Augur Singh v. Mohinee Dutt Singh, 2 W. R., Act X R., 101.

Where an application for a lease for farming jungle lands was in its nature general, but the answer was specific and clear, and granted the lease on certain conditions, the answer determined the contract, and was the only contract between the parties.

The word "farmer," as used in Regulation XVII of 1827, is used, not as a cultivator of the ground, but as a farmer of public revenue, a person who would stand between the Government and the ryots as possessors of the ground. Held that, in a suit for the cancelment of a lease on account of a breach of its conditions, the breach complained of consisting in the non-payment of rent for a particular period specified in the lease, the lessee is entitled to avail himself of the proviso in Section 78, Act X of 1859, that section applying to all suits for the ejectment of a ryot, or for cancelment of lease for non-payment of rent. Jan Aly Chowdhry v. Nitye Nund Bose, 10 W. R., 12.

A decree for cancelment of a lease is virtually one for possession in supersession of that lease, and may be so executed by a Court under Act X of 1859 by which it has been passed. Mahomed Faez Chowdry v. Shib Doolaree Tewaree, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 103.

Where a tenant suing for a renewal of his lease proves right of occupancy, the Court should proceed to determine what rates of rent should be imposed, even should he fail to make good his claim to hold at fixed rates. Sheodie Mahometan v. Huree Kishen, 9 W. R., 81.

The proprietors of a certain holding having refused the terms of the Government, a farming settlement was made with the present defendant, who undertook to confirm and ratify all amulnamahs granted by the zemindars while the settlement proceedings had been pending. Plaintiff being a ryot without a right of occupancy, but one who had got an amulnamah, sued for a pottah at the rate fixed by the amulnamah. Held that the amulnamah formed the basis of a special contract between the parties, and took their case out of the purview of the Sections 5 and 8 of the Rent Law; and that by the terms of the amulnamah the defendant was bound to give plaintiff a pottah on fair and equitable rates ("upajukta"), which were to depend on the rates which he himself obtained from Government. Held that the onus of proving that the rate which he claimed was fair and equitable was upon the plaintiff. Kishen Pershad Singh v. Mohun Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 420.

20.—Rent.

Where a tenant pays money to his landlord on account of rent, without any specification whether the payment was for old or enhanced rent, the landlord is at liberty to credit the payment as he thinks fit. Ranee Shurno Moyee v. Kashee Kant Bhuttacharjee and others, 7 W. R., 511.

Under Regulation VII of 1790 a plaintiff could only sue for and recover the rent of the current year. No legal presumption arose from his doing so that the rent of prior years had been satisfied. Thakoor Mirtherjeet Singh v. Chokee Narain Singh, 2 W. R., 58.

A suit was brought in the Revenue Court to set aside an attachment for rent, on the ground that such attachment was for rent at a higher rate than was due. The landholder claimed the higher rate under an alleged assessment of a Butwarra Ameen. The Collector made a decree setting aside the attachment, on the ground that the landholder failed to prove that the higher amount was due.

Held that the landholder could not maintain a suit in the Civil Court to assess the land at the higher rate claimed for the year for which the attachment had issued, on the ground of prior service of notice of demand of the higher rate, under Regulation V of 1812, that question having been already adjudicated upon by a Court of competent jurisdiction. Mussamut Bibee Reazoonnissa Khanum v. Doyanauth Sha, Marsh., 638.

As a general rule, a landlord who has attached the lands of a tenant, and has collected the rents due by a sezawal, would not be entitled to claim from the tenant the difference between the collections made by the sezawal and the actual rents. Jhoomuck Chowdhry v. G. Anderson, 5 W. R., Act X R., 40.

Where a person has a right to make deductions of rent payable to the surburakar under his kubuleut on account of rent due from ryots or others, and pays his full rent without making any deduction, his not doing so gives him no right of action against the zemindar or his representatives. Chunder Seekur Roy and Mohesh Roy v. Gholam Shurreef, alias Loopan Meeah, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 146.

A payment on account of rent cannot be credited to previous arrears beyond the term of limitation. The payments in each year must be presumed to be for the current year, and surplus payments to be for the past, not subsequent years. Taramonee Dossee v. Kally Churn Surmah, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 14.

A general payment made in one year, without proof that it was in satisfaction of the rents of that year, may be applied in satisfaction of the arrears of the previous years. R. Ahmuty v. K. Brodie, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 15.

The payment of the entire rent of a subsequent year affords a presumption in favour of the payment of the rent for the previous year. R. Solano v. Doolhin Umrit Koer, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 65.

A payment for rent should be credited to the oldest rents first, and not to current rent, unless so specifically stated by the party making it. Ranee Surnomoye v. Singhroop Bibee, W. R., 1864, Act X. R., 133.

Where the principal subject of occupation is a building or buildings, when the rent is substantially the price of such occupation, the land on which the buildings stand being a merely subordinate matter, the rent cannot be truly described as the rent of land either kherajee or lakheraj. Mothoora Nath Koondoo v. Campbell, W., 15 S. W. R., C. R., 463.

Rent is not altered by being paid in a different coin, viz. in kuldar, instead of sicca rupees; and the apparent addition of one anna per rupee (the difference in value between the two kinds of rupees) is not a real addition to the rent, nor is it an extra cess of an arbitrary nature or an illegal character.

Where a landlord who may originally have had a right to collect a higher rent is for a long period of years content to accept a lower, it would be manifestly unjust to allow him to turn round upon the tenant at any time he pleases and demand the higher rent. Roocha Ram Misr v. Naga Dass, 2 N. W. R., 92.

The produce of the land is by law (Section 112, Act X of 1859) hypothecated for the rent payable in respect thereof, but not the land itself. Tirthanund Thakoor v. Paresman Jha, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 449.

Where the jummas of different tenures are distinct the tenures must be treated as distinct and the rent charged accordingly. Dabee Churn Dey v.

Sreeshteedhur Chuckerbutty, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 346.

(a) Rent Suits.

A zemindar may sue to convert rents paid in kind into rents paid in money. The fact of the ryot having paid in kind for a number of years is no bar to enhancement. Thakoor Pershad and others v. Nawab Syud Mahomed Bakur, 8 W. R., 170.

The proper course to be observed where, in answer to a claim for rent, a lakheraj title is pleaded. Bissessur Chuckerbutty and others v. Wooma Churn Roy, 7 W. R., 44.

In a suit to recover rent in a Revenue Court, under Regulation XVII of 1827, Section 31, Clause 3,—Held that the proper questions to determine were whether the defendant occupied the land as tenant of the plaintiff during the period alleged, and if so, what rent was due; and that a defendant so sued could not deprive the Court of jurisdiction by setting up a title in himself, nor did the suit by such defence become one "in which the right to possession of land is claimed" within the meaning of Section 1, Clause 1 of Act XVI of 1838. Bai Mahalakshmi v. Audhara Keshavram Narasiram, 2 Bom. Rep., 193.

A decree for rent under the old law was held to be a simple money decree, and as not burdening the tenure after it had bonâ fide passed by private purchase out of the hands of the debtor. Indur Chundra Doogur v. Ruttun Koomaree Bibee, 7 W. R., 376.

A suit for arrears of rent at a certain rate decreed in a former suit may be maintained without notice under Regulation V of 1812; the decree itself being held to be sufficient notice. Ramjeebun Bose v. Tripoora Dossee, W. R., F. B., 93.

A suit for rent against several parties is maintainable against such of them as are shown to be in possession as tenants, whether they are registered or not. Jerabutoonissa Khanum v. Ram Chunder Doss and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 36.

In a suit for rent, where the defendant admitted the plaintiff's right as landlord, and did not dispute the correctness of the rent, but pleaded payment, the non-registration of the kubuleut filed by the plaintiff was held to be no ground for dismissing the suit, which could have proceeded whether the kubuleut was or was not produced; the time for raising the objection as to non-registration being only when the kubuleut was tendered in evidence upon any disputed point. Syud Reza Aly v. Bhikun Khan, 7 W. R., 334.

A suit for rent from a party holding lands as zerat in his own possession is one for rent as between landlord and tenant, and cognizable under Act X of 1859. W. S. Crowdy v. Sree Misser and others, 12 W. R., 4.

In a suit brought by ryots to reverse summary awards for rent, the Court, instead of deciding the question of title between the co-defendants, should merely determine to whom the plaintiffs have paid rent in past years, and their liability for the present year, in accordance with their past payments and the possession of the property evidenced thereby, leaving the contending co-sharers to settle the question of title in a separate suit brought for that purpose. Modhoosoodun Acharj v. Kishore Hazrah, W. R., F. B., 36.

When a decree-holder obtains possession of an estate in execution he is not at liberty to sue the ryots for rents falling due before the date of his taking possession. His proper course is to sue the late wrongful possessor for mesne profits, including the rents. Umes Chandra Roy v. Shastidhar Mookerjee, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 99; 12 W. R., 35.

A suit for rent due from several ryots, on account of a holding which has been let out to them, cannot be properly and legally brought against one of them, but must embrace all. Roop Narain Singh v. Juggoo Singh, 10 W. R., 304.

In a suit by the Court of Wards, on the part of the Durbunga Rajah, for unpaid instalments of rent, where the agreement under which the defendant held his zemindary was that he should pay his Government revenue into the collectorate through the Rajah,—Held that the rule which prevailed in that part of the country amongst ordinary tenants of paying rent month by month was not applicable to defendant, and that the instalments of rent and interest thereon were to be calculated according to the Government rules for the payment of revenue. Gridharee Singh v. The Court of Wards, 10 W. R. 368.

In a suit for rent in which defendants, admitting their joint tenancy, set up that they had, as among themselves, made an allotment of the land in certain shares,—Held that as such partition was not shown to have been recognized by the plaintiff the plea could not avail. Bhola Nath Sircar v. Baharam Khan and others, 10 W. R., 392.

A talookdar in executing a decree for rent sold his ryot's right and interest in the tenure. He afterwards instituted a suit against the same ryot for arrears and ejectment. Held that the execution-purchaser should have been made a party to the latter suit. Prosono Moye Dossee v. Bhobo Tarinee Dossee, 10 W. R., 474.

Held (by Markby J.) that no one can be plaintiff in a suit for rent except the person who has the right to recover; the only effect of Section 69 being to enable the person who is employed in the collection of rents to sue as agent. Modhoosoodun Singh v. W. Moran and Co., 11 W. R., 43.

The plaintiffs' maâfeedars sued the defendants for rent due as cultivators of their puttee, but in the plaint referred to Clause 3, Section 1, Act XIV of 1863. Held that such reference, which was by mistake, should not have prevented the Court from trying the substantial cause of action, viz., the fact of the rent being due from the defendants as cultivators in the puttee. Mohun Lall and others v. Noor Khan and others, 4 Agra Rep., 218.

Where a third party is made a defendant under Section 77, Act X of 1859, the question for trial is the receipt and enjoyment of the rent up to the date of commencement of the suit, and not the title in the land. Mussamut Thakooroveen Bhogmanee Koonwar v. Syud Furzund Ali, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 20.

In a suit for arrears of rent the defendant is entitled to a deduction for lands washed away. J. Savi v. Obhoy Nath Bose, 2 W. R., Act X R., 28.

A claim to rent for certain land must not be dismissed merely because the defendant, by planting indigo, has obliterated the boundary-mark of that land. It must be ascertained who by previous enjoyment is entitled to receive the rents of the land, if the plaintiff is not so entitled. Brojonath Roy v. D. D. Gilmore, 2 W. R., Act X R., 48.

In a suit for rent, in which the rents decreed for previous years had still to be ascertained, when the decree was given the Judge should have postponed the decision till the Ameen had ascertained what was the proper rent of the lands for the previous years. Anund Moyee Chowdhrain v. Monee Kurnika Chowdhrain, 3 W. R., Act X R., 168.

Two daughters, as co-partners, were owners of certain property, each having an eight-anna share therein. On June 30th, 1868, they executed a lease of the property, in which it was provided that a monthly rent should be paid in separate payments to each of the two owners respectively, they giving separate receipts for the same. The tenant having failed to pay rent, one of the owners brought a suit for her share in her own name only, and obtained a decree. In execution of this decree she seized and sold property belonging to the tenant. The sale took place on the 12th of February, 1869. On the 15th of February the other owner brought an interpleader suit, the tenant having likewise failed to pay rent to her. She claimed to have what was due to her paid out of the proceeds realized by the sale under the decree. Held that she was not entitled to have it so paid. Held also, per Peacock, C. J.—The Statute 8 Anne, c. 14, does not apply to this country. Held that it would not at any rate apply to a cause in which a claimant seeks to enforce payment of her rent from another creditor for rent, even if it would where the claim was against an ordinary execution-creditor. S. M. Padamani Dasi v. S. M. Jagadamba Dasi, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 56.

A suit for rent brought while a suit for a kubuleut is pending should not be struck off, but kept in abeyance until the other is decided. Mahomed Aali Shikdar v. Sheikh Ali Hossein Chowdhry, 3 W. R., Act X R., 5.

A Collector is not competent in a decree for rent to make a special direction such as that realization shall be against the property of the judgment-debtor. Dabee Pershad Sing v. Syud Delawar Ali, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 312.

In a suit for arrears of rent under Act X of 1859, where defendant admitting plaintiff's interests in the land alleged that it was the ismalee property of himself and the plaintiff, the Revenue Court dismissed the suit on the ground that it had no jurisdiction. The Judge in appeal reversed the decision and gave plaintiff a decree. Held that even if the Judge had gone simply into the question of title and decided whether the estate was joint or separate, and on that decision based a decree, he would not have been wrong. Mohesh Dutt v. Beg Narain Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 82.

The assignee of a zemindar's right to receive rent has a right to sue in the Collector's Court, whether the assignment has been effected by the intervention of the Civil Court or by the private act of the zemindar. Reedoymonee Burmonee v. H. Sibbold, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 344.

A suit against a talookdar for arrears of rent at an enhanced rate would, under Act X of 1859, lie in a Revenue Court even though it were not brought for determination of the rate at which defendant should be required to give a kubuleut. Rowshun Bibee v. Chundermadhub Kur, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 177.

In a rent suit the Court ought in the first instance to examine the agents, and then to declare the issue between the parties and fix a day for hearing. Dinonath Mookerjee v. Debnath Mullick, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 429.

A party holding an assignment from the landlord to recover rents from C., a registered tenant, having sued both C. and D. as co-tenants of the tenure, the suit against D. was dismissed by the lower Courts. Held that as the assignment respected the rents of that tenure, and D. had admitted being in possession of the land, the suit ought to have been allowed to proceed against both. Dhoolee Chund v. Rajroop Kooer, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 107.

P. got a decree on a mortgage-bond in the terms of a compromise by C. and others to the effect that the amount due should be paid by instalments, the property mortgaged remaining hypothecated. Meantime one M. got a decree against C., and in execution sold part of the property, viz., a house, subject to the lien of P., bought it in herself and sold it again by private sale to plaintiff, who realized rent for some months. When M. was put in possession P. petitioned the Court, objecting, but being referred to a regular suit he executed his original decree, bringing the hypothecated property to sale, and bought it in himself, without however getting possession from the Court till many months later. Plaintiff now sues the tenant of the house in the Small Cause Court for rent, and P. intervenes as a party to the suit, claiming the rent which has fallen due from the date of his getting possession. Held that the plaintiff is not in a position to maintain the suit, his possession having been put an end to by P., whose lien on the property was anterior to the sale under which plaintiff purchased. Poorno Chunder Bose v. Nobin Chunder Ghose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 77.

In a suit by putneedars for rent where the defendants plead a lakheraj title set up long before the plaintiffs acquired their putnee, the issue to be tried is, not whether the lakheraj title is valid or not, but whether plaintiffs have at any time received rent for the lands in dispute. Purbooddeen Mullick v. Molaem Bibee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 149.

A party succeeding to the proprietary rights of a lessor and dispossessing the lessee cannot sue such lessee in the Collector's Court for rent due from him as tenant, unless the latter has previously attorned to him. Ram Lall Misser v. Chundrabulla Dabee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 228.

A suit by a sharer in a joint undivided estate for money due to him on account of his share of the rent of an under-tenure situate in such undivided estate, falls within the provisions of Section 108, Act X of 1859. Where the owner of an undivided estate lets his share to a tenant by giving a pottah and taking a kubuleut, a suit for the rent of such undivided share, treated as a separate and distinct under-tenure, may come under the provisions of Section 4, Act VIII (B. C.) of 1865. Dwarkanath Chuckerbutty v. Dhun Monee Chowdrain, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 524.

A suit for rent is not maintainable at the instance of one or more of several co-sharers, unless the latter have been accustomed to collect their rents separately. Sree Misser v. Crowder, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 243.

Where rents are not sued for within three years from the end of the year for which they are alleged to be due, the fact that damages were awarded against the plaintiff in a former suit for not giving receipts for that year will not create a cause of action. Huro Pershad Roy Chowdry v. Wooma Tara Debee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 194.

A suit for arrears of rent of a quantity of land alleged to have been held by defendant over and above the quantity covered by his pottah was held to be in substance a suit for rent at an enhanced rate, requiring the issue of a notice under Section 13, Act X of 1859. Thekmee Beldar v. Ramkessin Lall, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 71.

Unless the circumstances of a rent suit are on all fours with those of another, it is a serious error for a Court to refer to its judgment in one cause for the reasons of its decision in another case. Dhunraj Koonwar v. Ooggur Narain Koonwar, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 2.

The price for the use of land in its improved state is rent which can be sued for in the Collector's Court, whether the improvement consists in the clearance of jungle, draining, fencing, accessibility by means of roads made upon or leading to it, contrivances for irrigation, or buildings erected upon the land. Mothooranauth Koondoo v. W. Campbell, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 463.

In a suit for rent where the defendant held under a lease from a party who subsequently gave a lease to plaintiff which gave him the right to collect rents from the defendant in accordance with the terms of the former (the defendant's) lease,—Held that no attornment was necessary, and that the suit could be instituted in a Revenue Court under Act X. Sree Chund v. Budhoo Singh, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 301.

In a suit for rent where defendant denies the relationship of landlord and tenant as subsisting between himself and the plaintiff, and states that he paid his rent to an intervenor, it is not enough that the intervention is set aside; it still remains for the Court to investigate the question whether the defendant is a ryot of the plaintiff. Jagurdee v. Radha Kishore, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 259.

The Civil Court has jurisdiction in a suit for arrears of rent recoverable upon a liability arising out of matters not within the cognizance of a Revenue Court. Such a suit is not governed by the period of limitation specified in Act X of 1859. Prossono Coomar Paul Chowdry v. Muddur Mohun Paul Chowdry, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 390.

Where the contract between the parties to a rent suit is in no way disputed or denied, and the fact of certain lands having been taken at a certain rent is admitted, the only issue being whether the rent has been paid or not, the case may be tried notwithstanding that the kubuleut is inadmissible by reason of non-registration. Dinnonauth Mookerjee v. Debnauth Mookerjee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 429.

Held (by L. S. Jackson, J., whose opinion prevailed) that the provisions of Act X of 1859 do not apply to a suit for arrears of rent where the land is occupied for the purposes of building, and not agriculturally, or is not in the neighbourhood of lands occupied agriculturally.

Held (by Mitter, J.) that there is nothing in Act X of 1859 to justify any distinction between suits for arrears of rent on account of land used for agricultural purposes and suits for arrears on account of land used for other purposes. In the matter of Brohmo Moyee Bewah, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 252.

Where the kutkeenadar of an alleged share sued the kutkeenadar of the remaining portion for a proportion of rent, and defendant while admitting himself to be plaintiff's tenant disputed the extent of the alleged share,—Held that the question of the extent of the shares of the parties as co-kutkeenadar could only be decided by a Civil Court, which could give complete relief on the whole case with reference both to shares and rent. Verasut Hossein v. Jughdharee Sing, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 59.

L. having claimed certain lands as lessee from the zemindar, and A. having pleaded that he held them under a mourousee tenure from the same zemindar, the Court held that the two leases could co-exist, and that L. was entitled to recover actual possession and to pay to A., as an intermediate holder, the rent due to the zemindar. In execution of the decree, L. was put in possession of all the land except a portion covered by factory buildings in the possession of A., which buildings the Court held did not go with the land. Unable to get possession, L. brought a suit to recover rent for the land covered by the building. Held that no suit for rent could lie, A.'s representative being a trespasser, and his mere statement of willingness to pay rent being insufficient to constitute the relation of landlord and tenant. Lyons v. Betts, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 94.

In suits for arrears of rents of land, when the claim is under Rs. 500, a special appeal lies to the High Court, such claims not being generally cognizable by Courts of Small Causes.

For the purpose of recovering rent from a tenant the enrugsál year ends on the 31st of July. Ramchundra Rughunuth v. Abaji bin Rustya, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 12.

In a suit for rent where defendant pleads payment to a tehsildar appointed by plaintiff to collect the rents, the plea should be put in issue, and defendant should not be referred to a Civil Court. Darimbu Debia v. Nilmonee Singh Deo, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 266.

In a suit for rent in which defendant pleaded that during the period for which rent was claimed the tenants had been out of possession of the land, having been ousted by a third party to whom the zemindars (plaintiffs) had given a lease of the land. —Held that the zemindars were precluded from suing defendants for rent on account of such period, even though the latter had recovered a decree with wasilat for the period of dispossession. Kalumbinee Dossia v. Kasheenauth Biswas, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 338.

A Judge is not competent to hear a review in a case in which a special appeal has been admitted by the higher Court.

When a tenant is sued for arrears of rent, even though he should deposit the rent in Court during the pendency of the suit, he is still liable to have the decree passed against him, as the arrear was admittedly due when the suit was brought. Interest to date of deposit in Court and costs of suit being paid within fifteen days, execution would be avoided. Baboo Sheo Nath Singh v. Ram Thul Rae, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, 39.

Quære,—Whether the provisions of Section 7, Act VIII of 1859, are applicable to rent suits under Act X of 1859.

Where a former judgment decided that the plaintiff had no cause of action, it is clear that there was no cause of action tried and determined between the parties, and consequently Section 2, Act VIII of 1859, is not applicable. Ram Soondur Sein v. Krishno Chunder Goopto, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 380.

The question was for which party M. had received rent. The High Court, on the former occasion, said it was not sufficient for M. to say that he was plaintiff's agent, and directed the question to be determined upon the issue whether plaintiff was the landlord or not. Held that what the Court meant was not to order the Revenue Court to go into the question of title between the parties and determine it, which the Revenue Court would have no power to do, but to find whether M. had been acting as plaintiff's agent and receiving rent for him or not; and that as the Judge found that M. was the plaintiff's agent and received rent for him from defendant, this was sufficient to determine defendant's liability to pay his rent to plaintiff. Ramgutty Mundle v. Gourish Chunder Pauray, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 14.

Plaintiff sued for rent describing herself as holding a dur-mourosa jote, and the lower Appellate Court treated that description of her jote as misdescriptive, because the jumma-wasilbakee papers called her a mourosa-izardar, and other papers showed her to be a dur-mourosa talookdar. Held in special appeal that the misdescription, if there were any, was an utterly insufficient ground for throwing out plaintiff's claim. Bhoobun Moyee Dassee v. Russic Mundle, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 17.

In a suit for rent before the Moonsiff, special appellant petitioned and was irregularly admitted into the suit as intervenor, as if the suit were being tried under Act X of 1859 in a Revenue Court. Defendants having admitted their liability to plaintiff under a kubuleut set up by the latter, the suit was decreed in the lower Appellate Court, and intervenor now appeals, specially claiming to be treated as if he had petitioned and was made a party to the suit under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859. Held that as he made no such application he was not entitled to be so treated, and that his interests were not likely to be affected by the decree if he had abstained from intervention. Chunder Kalee Ghose v. Shibnauth Bhuttacharjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 176.

An allegation of wrongful ejectment of defendant by plaintiff is no answer to a suit for rent during the period of possession. Bhyrub Chunder Mojoomdar v. Huro Prossuno Bhuttacharjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 258.

In a suit for rent, the lessee pleaded dispossession; but not being able to show that his lessors had no title and that the person who ousted him had a title, and relying for that purpose upon the result of certain suits, one of which in no way affected the property in question, and the other in no way affected the title of his lessors, who were not parties to it, his defence was held to have wholly failed. Rung Lall Singh v. Lalla Roodur Persaud, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 386.

Where a decree of 1848 gave plaintiffs the right to assess and to receive the rents for each year according to the assessment made for that particular year, a notice under Section 13, Act X of 1859 was held not necessary when the rent found assessable for the years for which rent was claimed varied from what was found assessable in 1848. Salehoonissa Khatoon v. Mohesh Chunder Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 452.

Held that in this case the solenamah was a distinct transaction from the pottah, and that the plaintiff was entitled to bring separate suits for rent in respect of the tenures held under those documents respectively. Ooma Churn Chowdry v. Ram Kant Chowdry, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 488.

(b) Abatement of Rent.

A claim by defendant for abatement of rent under remission granted to plaintiff by Government may be tried in a suit for arrears. Boikunto Paraki v. Soorendronath Roy, 1 W. R., 84.

A putneedar or any other leaseholder can sue for abatement of rent under Section 23, Act X of 1859. Horokishen Banerjee v. Joykishen Mookerjee, 1 W. R., 299.

To sustain a suit for abatement of jumma in proportion to the area of lands now in his actual possession, the ryot must prove dispossession by the zemindar and not by a stranger. Moheshchunder Ghose v. Bowl Chunder Ghose, 1 W. R., 209.

The real meaning of Section 18, Act X of 1859, is that the grounds for which an abatement of rent may be claimed by a ryot must have resulted from causes beyond his control. Munsoor Ally v. R. Harvey and another, 11 W. R., 291.

Rent for a talook may be abated if a portion of the talook be washed away.

Independently of Section 18, Act X of 1859, a suit for abatement of rent will lie by a talookdar on the ground that part of the talook has been washed away.

A deduction may be made on such ground in a suit for arrears of rent.

In a suit for abatement of rent on the ground that part of the talook has been washed away by a river, measurement papers prepared by the revenue authorities in a case between Government and the talookdar, in respect of a share belonging to Government in the zemindary of the zemindar, are not admissible as evidence against the latter, they being res inter alios acta. In a suit for arrears of rent, decrees in summary suits against the defendant for rent for years subsequent to those in respect of which the rent is claimed, are no evidence of such rent being due; but such a decree is primâ-facie evidence in support of a claim for rent for the next ensuing year. Afsuroodeen v. Musst. Sharooshee Bulu Duba, Marsh., 558.

An abatement of rent by order of a Civil Court in consequence of diluvion does not prove alteration of the rate of rent, or affect a ryot's claim to the benefit of the presumption arising under Section 4, Act X, 1859. Musst. Reazoonissa v. Tookun Jha, 10 W. R., 246.

Even if a grantor can resile from his grant of abatement, he cannot do so without giving notice of his intention. Raja Enayet Hossein v. Beebee Mhooboonnissa, 9 W. R., 246.

A granted a putnee to B., to which a certain mehal appertained. The Government to which the mehal belonged, in reversion upon an ijara held by A., sold it to C. Held that B. was entitled to abatement of rent from A., and that a suit for abatement, under the circumstances, was cognisable by the Revenue Court.

Semble,—Where there is no specification in the original contract of the amount of rent payable for the portion of land for which abatement is claimed, such a sum ought to be deducted from the whole rent as would bear to that whole rent the same proportion as the annual value of the portion of the land which has disappeared bears to the annual value of the land originally leased. Brijanath Pal Chowdry v. Hiralal Pal, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 87; S. C., 10 W. R., 120.

A. obtained from B. a putnee lease whereby it was agreed that A. should prepare a hustabad (rent-roll); that if it should appear that there was any deficiency in the jumma stated in the pottah, the correct jumma should be ascertained as therein provided; and that the rent should be made up to A. by B., and B. should return a proportionate amount of the consideration-money. A. sued B. for an abatement of rent for a refund of rent paid in excess, and for a proportionate refund of the consideration-money. Held, the suit was not a suit for abatement of rent within Section 23 of Act X of 1859, and the Civil Court had jurisdiction to try the different questions together in the same suit. Rajah Nilmoni Singh v. Annundpersaud Mookerjea, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 93; S. C., 10 W. R., F. B., 41.

A putneedar can sue for abatement of rent under Act X of 1859. Prosunomoyee Dasee v. Soondur Coomaree Debia, 2 W. R., Act X R., 30.

A howaladar has a right to sue for abatement of rent. Komlakant Doss v. I. G. N. Pogose, 2 W. R., Act X R., 65.

To sustain a suit for abatement of jumma in proportion to the area of lands now in his actual possession, the ryot must prove dispossession by the zemindar, and not by a stranger. Mohesh Chunder Ghose v. Boul Chunder Ghose, 1 W. R., 209.

In a suit for arrears of rent, a claim for abatement may be made by way of set-off in respect of land taken up by Government for the purposes of a road. Deen Dyall Lall v. Mussamut Thukroo Koonwar, 6 W. R., Act X R., 24.

A suit for abatement of rent will not lie, unless the plaintiff admits that the relation of landlord and tenant exists between him and the person from whom the abatement is sought, as to the lands in respect of which it is sought. Obhoy Gobind Chowdhry v. T. J. Kenny, 8 W. R., 518.

A ryot can have no claim in law to hajuts (or remissions), which being acts of grace on the part of the landlord, rest solely on his discretion. Paneeollah Nashyo v. Nubodee Chunder Saha, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 270.

A landlord receiving remission from Government on account of damage done to his estate by a cyclone is not on that account bound to allow a remission to his under-tenants, unless he received the former on the understanding or agreement that he would allow it in turn. Goluck Chunder Mytee v. Parbutty Churn Dass, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 167.

There is no provision in the Rent Law prescribing that suits for enhancement or abatement shall not be brought within a certain period after the determination of a similar suit on the same grounds. And there is no provision throwing upon a plaintiff in a suit for abatement of rent the burden of proof that there has been some change in circumstances since a decision in a previous similar suit was passed. Cheda v. Nunhoo Beg, 2 N. W. R., 348.

Quære,—Whether the proprietor of a talook created before the Permanent Settlement can claim abatement of rent on the ground of diluvion. Ram Churn Bysack v. L. T. Lucas, 16 S. W. R., 279.

A claim for rent being a recurring cause of action, a tenant is entitled to set up against it for any particular year any right which he had to a deduction or abatement, notwithstanding that he has paid full rent for several previous years. When land is taken away for railway purposes, and compensation made, which is divided between the zemindar and those holding under him, any deduction of rent claimed from the zemindar must be reckoned with reference, not to the gross amount of compensation, but to the proportion which passed into his hands. Maharajah Dheraj Mahtab Chami Bahadoor v. Chittro Coomaree Bibee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 201.

Though a pottah provided for an abatement of defendant's rent if on measurement the land was found to be less than 145 beegahs, yet it was held that if defendant came to be in possession of that less quantity by his own default, and not that of the lessor, the mere fact of defendant having been in possession of less than 145 beegahs would not entitle him to an abatement. Seetanath Bose v. Shamchaund Mitter, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 418.

A ryot who has held his land for a few months, and paid no rent at all, cannot sue for an abatement of rent on the ground that the land, on measurement, is less than the quantity mentioned in his pottah. Brojonauth Koondoo Chowdry v. Unant Ram Dutt, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 449.

(c) Arrears of Rent.

A zemindar may bring a suit for arrears only against the tenant whose name is recorded in his sherista, and in execution of a decree obtained in such a suit the whole tenure may be sold, though others, not recognized by the zemindar as his tenants, may be interested in the lease. Huree Churn Bose v. Meharoonissa Bibee and others, 7 W. R., 318.

Where a party, after obtaining a decree establishing his title to land, sues for and gets a decree for a kubuleut against another who was holding the land adversely to him without any contract, express or implied, for the payment of rent, he cannot maintain a suit for arrears of rent for a period previous to the kubuleut, which cannot have retrospective effect. Jan Ali v. Gooroo Doss Roy and others, 8 W. R., 338.

Where a claim was made for arrears of rent, and the Court was satisfied that there had been a grant for the worship of an idol which had been duly carried out, and where the parties have had peaceable possession for sixty years, the Court will not interfere. Mussamut Chundrabally Debia v. Luckhee Debia Chowdhrain, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 141.

(d) Commutation of Rent.

Where a tenant applied for commutation of rents paid in kind, one of three lumberdars was held entitled to insist upon the adjudication on the amount of the rate as directed by law; and the consent of two other lumberdars to accept a lower rate of rent cannot debar this right. Roopa v. Sahib Singh, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 58.

A landlord sued his tenant, paying rent in kind, for the share of the crop due to him, or rent, or for its money-equivalent. Held that the prices at which the landlord was entitled to have the crop valued were those which prevailed at the time the crop was cut, and when it should have been made over to him. Luchmun Persaud v. Holas Mabtoen, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 27.

(e) Collection of Rent.

Surunjamee should be allowed upon the amount actually collected, and not upon the net proceeds coming to the zemindar. Erfoonissa Chowdhrain v. Mussamut Rukeeboonissa, 9 W. R., 457.

Held (by Markby, J.) that though it has been decided that a general authority to collect rents and to sue for them must be stamped, it has not yet been decided whether such authority must be in writing. Modhoosoodun Singh v. Wickham and others, 11 W. R., 43.

(f) Liability for Rent.

The purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree of the rights and interests of the former holders of a heritable and transferable tenure, is bound by their engagements with the zemindar, among others, for payment of rent. Notwithstanding the purchaser's priority of sale, the zemindar can sell the tenure for arrears of rent. Khoobaree Rai v. Roghoobur Rai, 2 W. R., 131.

A tenant paying rent to the superior landlord, after the grant of an intermediate lease, but without notice of it, is not liable to the intermediate lessee in respect of the same rent. Sheikh Attapyee Mowlee v. Sheikh Sukhuwut Ally and others, Marsh., 102; W. R., F. B., 1862, 30.

No subsequent interruption by A. in B.'s occupation and enjoyment of land would be an answer to A.'s claim for rent which had previously accrued. B.'s eviction by A. will not relieve him from liability for rent which accrued due prior to the eviction. Madhub Chunder Mozoomdar v. Sidhee Nuzeer Ali Khan, 8 W. R., 54.

The purchaser of a specific share of a talook, which with other talooks was held by the same jotedar, can be held liable only for the rent due upon the share purchased; and there can be no difficulty in determining the rent payable if each tenure has a separate jumma, and each shareholder holds a specific share. Khema Moyee, alias Khamessuree Debia v. Radha Pearee Debia Chowdhrain and others, 8 W. R., 469.

The appointment of a sezawal by the landlord absolves the lessee from liability for rent subsequent to such appointment and during the continuance of it. Jhoomuck Chowdhry v. George Anderson, 6 W. R., Act X R., 23.

In the absence of any covenant by the assignee of the lease of an indigo factory to take the liability for previous rents on himself, he is only liable for rent which accrues after the date of his assignment. Mussamut Phool Koonwar and others v. W. Chardon and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 89.

When lands are liable to be assessed with rent as bastoo, and when as oodbastoo lands. Prem Lall Chowdhry v. B. M. Brown and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 92.

No implication of a contract to pay rent to the zemindar on the part of the tenant can arise in a case in which the defendant has been paying rent to another zemindar than the one now suing for a kubuleut. Digambur Mitter v. Huropershad Roy Chowdhry and others, 7 W. R., 126.

The mere fact of a tenant relinquishing the land will not excuse him from payment of rent if he is otherwise liable, unless he makes some terms with his landlord.

A landlord, by taking rent from a party, and by suing him for arrears of his predecessor's rent, acknowledges him as a tenant, and cannot eject him, or enhance the rent, except according to law. Cazee Syud Mahomed Azmur and others v. Chundee Lall Pandey and others, 7 W. R., 250.

By partition a co-sharer's proprietary right to the land which has fallen in another puttee becomes extinguished, and he becomes a mere cultivator in respect to that land and liable to rent.

Held further that, though the rent was exigible, the claim for arrears of rent could not be decreed in the absence of express or implied contract for the same. Zalim Rai v. Doorga Rai, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 69.

Held that the plaintiff, not having been put into the possession of land purchased by him, and holding no contract, express or implied, from the holder of the land for payment of rent, was not competent to sue the defendant (occupant of the land) for rent thereof. Ram Dass Singh v. Ram Narain, 2 Agra Rep., R. C., 9.

As long as a ryot retains possession of any portion of his jote he is liable for the rent of the whole. Saroda Soondery Debee v. Hazee Mahomed Mundul, 5 W. R., Act X R., 78.

Where a co-sharer occupies more than his own share, or holds the whole estate by renting the land he occupies from one or more of his co-sharers, the liability of the cultivating shareholder to payment must, in the absence of usage, agreement, or evidence, be deemed single and entire. But if there is an agreement, express or implied, that the occupying shareholder shall pay separately to each of his co-proprietors a definite sum, such sum may be recovered by each co-proprietor by a separate rent suit. Kalee Pershad v. Sheikh Lutafut Hossein, 12 W. R., 418.

An arrear of rent is not due within the meaning of Section 32, Act X of 1859, until the rent itself has been determined. Comul Lochun Roy v. Moran and Company, 2 W. R., Act X R., 82.

A remission of rent by a naib who is shortly afterwards dismissed from office requires the sanction of the zemindar. Bhoobun Mohun, alias Prolad Sandyal v. Shabo Soondery Debia Chowdhrain, 8 W. R., 452.

A., the holder of an independent istemrarce tenure lying in B.'s zemindary, lets it to C., who under cover of his lease encroaches upon the zemindary lands. Held that there was no implied contract of tenancy between C. and B., and B. could not sue C. for rents on account of the excess lands.

Joyanarayan Singh v. Mati Lall Jha, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 21.

A landlord, one of several co-sharers, cannot sue a tenant of the joint estate for his separate share of the rent unless the tenant has paid or agreed to pay to him separately.

In decreeing enhanced rent it is necessary to specify distinctly on which of the grounds stated in the plaint enhancement is allowed.

To prove receipts it is not necessary to produce the writer of them. The ryot can prove his own receipts. Ganga Narayan Das v. Saroda Mohun Roy Chowdhry, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 230; 12 W. R., 30.

In the case of transfer of a mere ryot's jote, the person in possession is liable for the rent, whether he is registered or not. Gunga Ram Sirdar v. Biressur Banerjee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 32.

A landlord is entitled to assessment in respect of trees as being the produce of the soil, but not in respect of profits realized by the use of stall or huts erected by the tenant for the use of pilgrims frequenting a fair annually held on the land in honour of an idol which the defendant has there. Kewajah Chyemun Rajah v. Jan Ally Chowdhry, 1 W. R., 45.

A tenant was authorized by his landlord to pay a certain portion of his rent to T., a creditor of the landlord. T. afterwards obtained a decree against the tenant for the amount of rent he was required by his landlord to pay to him. The landlord brought a suit for the entire amount of the arrears. Held that he was entitled to recover only the surplus beyond the amount for which T. had obtained a decree, notwithstanding such decree was unsatisfied. Lalla Gour Narain v. Kurren Lall Thakoor, Marsh., 363.

Where a putneedar's rent is payable in monthly instalments, he agreeing to pay the revenue out of the rent and to file the Collector's receipts as payment, he is not entitled to deduct from an instalment of rent any portion of the Government revenue which may not be payable until after the instalment is due. He is bound to pay either in cash or partly in revenue receipts: failing to pay in both shapes, he may be sued for an arrear of rent. Radhamonee Chowdhrain v. James Gray, 12 W. R., 295.

An action for rent does not lie against a person said or shown to be in possession of a tenure which is written in the books of the zemindar in the name of a different person, unless there is a contract for rent, express or implied. Eshan Chunder Gopal v. Burno Moyee Dassee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 233.

By law a zemindar is not bound to recognize as his tenant one whose name has not been registered in his books; and when his rent becomes due and is not paid it is sufficient for him to bring his suit against the parties from whom he has hitherto received rent. Sadhun Chunder Bose v. Gooro Churn Bose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 99.

B. having covenanted to take from A. without enquiry 18 beegahs of land at a rent of R. 1 a beegah, with a stipulation that if on enquiry any excess land should be found he would pay the same rate of rent for such excess; or if the area should be found less than 18 beegahs, that he would receive a proportionate deduction from his rent; a measurement took place, and an excess was discovered. A. then sued B. for rent on the entire quantity of land. Held that B. was liable to pay rent for the excess at the rate of R. 1 a beegah, and that the tender of a pottah by A. to B. was not necessary. Radhika Prosunno Chunder v. Neha lee Churn Dey, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 410.

If no rent has ever been paid for land, this is primâ facie strong proof of a de facto exemption protected by limitation.

The party claiming the rent must satisfy the Court that the remedy is not affected by lapse of time, and that the land was held for some service due and rendered to the zemindar, or otherwise by the zemindar's permission. If the holding were merely permissive it could not prejudice the zemindar's right. Ali Bux v. Mussamut Roop Kooer, 2 N. W. R., 106.

No such relation as that of landlord and tenant exists between a mortgagor (after redemption) and the grantee of the mortgagee, and such mortgagor must establish his right to collect rent before he can sue to have the amount thereof ascertained. Adjoodhya Singh v. Girdharee, 2 N. W. R., 197.

Where a tenant holds over after the expiration of his lease, and no fresh arrangement is entered into, he is bound to pay the same rent as that which he had agreed to pay on entering into possession. Shib Sahae v. Syud Mukbool Akmed, 2 N. W. R., 204.

There is sufficient privity of estate between the purchaser of a rent-paying holding and the zemindar to entitle the latter to claim rent. Kooloo Misr v. Bhyro Kulwar, 2 N. W. R., 258.

Occupation by a trespasser does not create a claim to rent, though it may give grounds for an action for damages. Bichook Pandey v. Narain Datt, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1., p. 26.

A party stripped by a decree or order of proprietary interest in land does not by mere subsequent occupation of it become vested with the character of a tenant, and therefore he is not liable to distraint for rent. He must have become a tenant by agreement or act of law to render him liable for rent. Mukurdhooj Singh v. Ram Churn, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1., p. 14.

To establish a right to recover rent a zemindar must show that either by assessment in due course of law or by agreement the tenant is liable to pay it. Shaikh Gyasoodeen v. Shaikh Khoodabun, 1, 4 N. W. R., 87.

Where certain persons were in possession of lands by virtue of a decree of Court, their tenants, the appellants, cannot be called upon to pay rent to the respondent, to whom they had not attorned, but who subsequently obtained a decree for the lands in suit, so long as no decree of Court had declared the title of the respondent to be superior to that of the persons under whom the tenants, the appellants, held. Respondent's remedy in such case is an action against the persons who were wrongfully in possession for mesne profits, and not in a suit for rent against their tenants, who had in good faith dealt with the persons who were the ostensible proprietors in possession under a decree.

Lands may be cultivated by a mere trespasser, and in that case the cultivator would not be liable to a suit for rent, but to a suit for mesne profits.

Owners of land may take advances for the cultivation of indigo, and the persons by whom the advances were given may find it necessary to enter on the land and look after the cultivation and harvesting of the crop, but if they did so they could not be sued as tenants for rent.

To render a person liable to pay as a tenant it must be proved that he has by an express or implied agreement promised to pay rent, or that he has been assessed with rent in due course of law.

To hold a person bound by the acts of his agent, it must be shown that the agent acted within the scope of his authority. Munchur Dass v. Dun Dyal, 3 N. W. R., 179.

(g) Rate of Rent.

The assessment of revenue on resumed lakheraj land does not entitle the landlord to claim a re-adjustment of the rents of ryots holding at fixed rates from the Permanent Settlement. Coonwar Raj Koomar Roy v. Assa Bibee, 3 W. R., Act X R., 170.

Possession from the Permanent Settlement is not sufficient to prove that a uniform rate of rent has been paid from that date. Mussamut Mahmooda Bibee v. Haradhun Khuleepa, 5 W. R., Act X R., 12.

A ryot who brings jungle land into cultivation is liable, after a reasonable period, to pay the full pergunnah rates of cultivated land. A ryot who does more than bring uncultivated land into cultivation, i.e., converts, by means of special works and special labour, unculturable into culturable land, is entitled to hold at exceptionally low rates. Chowdhry Khan v. Gour Jana, 2 W. R., Act X R., 40.

A zemindar, by consenting to a subdivision of, addition to, or subtraction from the total holding of a ryot, does not destroy the continuity of the tenure in respect of the rate of rent, and the rent paid for each beegah of land. J. Hills v. Huro Lall Sein, 3 W. R., Act X R., 135.

A zemindar is entitled to as much rent for his tanks as is leviable on tanks in the neighbourhood, without reference to the rent which Government may take from ryots whose tanks it has resumed. Kurraly Churn Banerjee v. Modhoosoodun Patter, 3 W. R., Act X R., 146.

A landlord is only entitled to demand a fair and equitable rent, even though his tenant be not a ryot. Petumber Shaha v. Jebun Singh Burmonee, 2 W. R., Act X R., 6.

A ryot who holds over after the expiry of his lease, in spite of his landlord, is liable to pay at the rates current for the same kind of land in the village. George Tommy v. Sooba Kureem Lall, 2 W. R., Act X R., 73.

A fair and equitable rate of rent for tanks should be assessed independently of the acts of Government. Ram Churn Banerjee v. Kisto Deegar, 3 W. R., Act X R., 132.

A zemindar who allows a tenant to remain on his land without express contract can only demand a fair rate of rent, i.e., the full market rate. Moneerooddeen Merdha v. T. J. Kennie, 4 W. R., Act X R., 45.

If a ryot shows payment of rent for 1265 and 1266, proof of back rents being still unpaid devolves upon the landlord. Ranee Sooruth Soondery Dabee v. K. Brodie, 1 W. R., 274.

A decree in a suit for ejectment of a ryot for non-payment of rent was modified upon review, by reducing the amount of arrears awarded to the plaintiff.

Held that the amended decree was the final decree in the suit, and that the ryot was entitled under Section 58, Act X of 1859, to fifteen days from its date for payment of the arrears with costs and interest. Radhamohun Mundle v. Buckshee Begum, Marsh., 471.

If the Judge has to adjust rates of rent in a rent suit, he should adjust them so that the increased rent bears the same proportion to the old rent as the present value of the produce of the land bears to its former value. Skib Narain Ghose v. Kashee Pershad Mookerjee, 1 W. R., 226.

Where a higher rate was declared payable by a decree of a competent Court,—Held that the zemindar is entitled to recover the rent at the rate so fixed, although he may never have insisted upon the higher rent declared to be payable. Syud Muzzum Ali Khan and others v. Pirthee Singh, 4 Agra Rep., 263.

In a suit by the plaintiffs as inamdars to compel the defendants, occupiers of plaintiffs' land, to accept pottahs under Madras Act VIII of 1865, the defendants objected to the rates of rent claimed by the plaintiffs. There was no contract between the parties as to the rent to be paid, nor was there any assessment made under a survey made previous to the 1st January, 1859. Held that the proper rent to be paid by the defendants was to be determined according to the rates established or fixed for neighbouring lands of a similar kind. Mahasingavastha Aiya and others v. A. Gopaliyan and others; A. Gopaliyan and others v. Mahasingavastha Aiya and others, 5 Mad. Rep., 425.

A landlord is bound to prove that the rate of rent at which he claims a kubuleut is the rate that he has been in the habit of receiving from the tenant. Ram Jeehun Chuckerbutty v. Khoodeeram Chatterjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 388.

(h) Distraint.

A zemindar is not entitled to rent for a year in which he has illegally distrained and (to a great extent) destroyed the crops of the ryot. Ram Dyal Singh v. Luchmee Narain Singh, 1 W. R., 240.

The goods of third parties on the premises of the tenant are not distrainable for rent under provisions of Act VII of 1847. Dwarka Nauth Biswas v. Uddit Churn Auddy, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 361.

A landlord cannot distrain crops for arrears due, not from the tenant, but from another person not in possession, and who did not cultivate the crops. Mohinee Dossee v. Ram Coomar Kurmokar, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 77.

Certain putneedars who, in execution of a decree for khas possession, had been put in nominal possession of their lands, instead of ousting the ryots allowed them to cultivate, and when they had cultivated cut and carried away their crops. Held that the act of the putneedars was an abuse of the Law of Distraint, and rendered them liable for damages. Ador Mohun Chuckerbutty and another v. Thakoor Monee Dabee and others, 10 W. R., 70.

By Act X of 1859, Section 138, the Collector is required, in case of irregular distress for rent, to allow to the distrainer the amount of rent due; if, on the other hand, the distraint is adjudged to be vexatious or groundless, the Collector, besides directing the release of the distrained property, may award such damages in favour of the plaintiff as the circumstances of the case shall seem to require. Held that the award of the Collector, with respect to the amount of damages, is not final, but is subject to be reviewed by the Judge, in appeal. in cases where the damages exceed Rs. 100. Ramjoy Mundul v. Kally Mohun Roy Chowdhry, Marsh., 282.

Trees are not subject to distraint for arrears of rent under Act X of 1859.

The term "produce of land" referred to in that Act means that which can be gathered and stored; crops of the nature of cereal, or grass or fruit crops; it does not apply to the trees from which the crops, if fruit crops, are gathered. Sheo Pershad Tewary v. Musst. Moleema Bebee, 1, 3, N.W. R., 53.

21.—ENHANCEMENT.

A person not being an auction-purchaser for arrears of revenue cannot, even under the old law, demand proof of uniform payment of rent twelve years before the Permanent Settlement. Shookhoda Debia v. Bishambhur Shaha, 6 W. R., 46.

Where a landlord fails in his claim for enhanced rent he is entitled to recover the old rents. Shazada Mahomed Rohimooddeen v. Radha Mohun Mundul, 6 W. R., Act X R., 56.

While a suit for enhancement of rent is pending defendant is not liable for interest, inasmuch as his rent is undetermined; but after the rent is determined he is liable to interest for all arrears from, and for all instalments after, that date. Rajmohun Neogee and others v. Anund Chunder Chowdhry and others, 10 W. R., 166.

An intermediate holder's rent should not be enhanced so as to render his holding altogether void of all reasonable profit. Gouree Pershad Doss v. Ranee Shurno Moyee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 41.

A talookdar's rent cannot be enhanced to the same rate as that paid by cultivating ryots; the talookdar is entitled to some reasonable profits. Hurosoondery Chowdhrain and others v. Anund Mohun Ghose Chowdhry and others, 7 W. R., 459.

The mere fact of a plaintiff suing for enhancement proves tenant's right of occupancy, for a tenant-at-will may be ejected at once on refusing to pay such rent as the landlord demands. Mussamut Taramonee Dossee v. Birressur Mozoomdar, 1 W. R., 86.

A suit for a kubuleut at a given rent, where the rate claimed is found to be above what is fair and equitable, is a suit for enhancement to which the Full Bench Ruling, 10 S. W. R., p. 14, applies, even though the rent is asked only for excess land. Kunchun Dass Singh v. Tekait Sidh Nath Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 289.

The provisions of Act X of 1859 for enhancement of rent are applicable only where the occupant of the land has such a right to be there that the owner cannot turn him out. Chunder Coomar Banerjee v. Azeemooddeen, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 100.

In a suit for enhancement of rent on the ground that the rates at which defendant held were below the prevailing rate paid by the same class of ryots for adjacent lands of a similar description and with similar advantages, the evidence of three putwarees who put in their jummabundees showing the rates paid by almost all the ryots, i.e., the majority, was held sufficient to prove the prevailing rate. Prag Lall v. Brockman, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 346.

(b) Right to Enhance.

In a suit to recover khas possession of land, of which the plaintiff alleged he had been fraudulently dispossessed by the defendant, the defendant claimed to be entitled to the possession of the land under a deed of gift at a fixed rent. The Judge found upon the fact that the deed of gift was invalid; that the land was mâl; and that the defendant was entitled to retain the possession, and thereupon dismissed the suit. Held that the plaintiff was not precluded by the decision in this suit from afterwards maintaining a suit against the defendant to enhance the rent.

In a suit for the enhancement of rent, the Collector dismissed the suit. On appeal the Judge held that the rent was liable to enhancement, and remanded the case to the Collector to find what rate was equitable. Held that an appeal lay from the decision of the Judge, notwithstanding the remand to find the rates. Neelmoney Singh Deo v. Mussamut Shobhun Bibee, Marsh., 600.

A landowner is not estopped from enhancing rent by the circumstance that he has caused the tenure to be sold under a decree.

In a suit to enhance rents the Deputy Collector found that the annual revenue obtained by the ryots was Rs. 12,579, and that an increase in such rates was partly due to the exertion of the defendant in reclaiming some waste land, and he deducted Rs. 2,579 as the defendant's share, and awarded Rs. 10,000 as a fair and reasonable rate to be paid to the plaintiff. Held that there was no reason for impeaching his award of this rate. Ranee Surno Moye v. Adoito Churn Roy, Marsh., 605.

The mother of an infant shebait or trustee cannot sue to enhance the rent of land held under a mokurruree pottah granted by a former shebait, whose power to grant such a lease is disputed. Maharanee Shibessuree Debia v. Jumeer Biswas, 5 W. R., Act X R., 1.

Until a plaintiff shows that the defendant holds of him a rent-paying howala he cannot enhance the rent thereof. Anund Lall Roy Chowdhry v. Ramtonoo Doss, 3 W. R., Act X R., 150.

If a zemindar has come under any valid and binding engagement with the ryot to the effect that the rent shall not be enhanced during the term of the settlement, or during any other term, Act X of 1859 gives him no privilege to set aside that contract. Shib Singh and others v. Bhoop Singh, 2 Agra Rep., 303.

One of several joint proprietors of an estate may maintain a suit for enhancement of his share of the rent without a butwarra. Troglochtoran Chowdhry v. Moothoor Mohun Dey, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 41.

Before Act X of 1859 there was no law which prevented a zemindar from enhancing his rent, unless it were shown that the ryot held at fixed rates for twelve years before the Decennial Settlement. A holding for seven years was not sufficient, nor could the ryot rely on a pottah granted by the Collector as giving him a mokurruree tenure, when the Collector had no power to grant such pottah. Romesh Chunder Dutt v. Denobundoo Dey, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 58.

When an auction-purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue demands an enhancement, the presumption arising from a uniform payment holds good, and the tenant's protection is not swept away by the sale. Shudek Sircar v. Sreemutty Mohamaya Dabee and another, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 77.

The fact alone of variations in the amount of rent paid between one year and another does not necessarily establish a right in the plaintiff to enhance or affect the defendant's right to hold at a fixed rent. It is for the defendant to account for such variation. Huronath Roy v. Chittramoney Dossee, 3 W. R., Act X R., 122.

An action for enhancement of rent by a plaintiff will not lie against any but his own ryots. The absence of a plea to that effect will not sustain a special appeal if the Judge has found upon the fact. T. Bruce v. Doorgachurn Mitter, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 77.

A suit for enhancement is barred by proof of the existence of a tenure from the Decennial Settlement, unless plaintiff is an auction-purchaser, in which case he must show when he purchased before he can insist on proof of the tenure twelve years before that Settlement. Romesh Chunder Dutt v. Modhoosoodun Chuckerbutty, 5 W. R., 252.

A zemindar cannot be allowed to enhance the rent of a cultivator in violation of the express terms of the wajib-ool-urz. Nuttha Ram v. Sookh Ram and others, 3 Agra Rep., 90.

A zemindar on ousting his intermediate holders is entitled to collect from the intermediate holding tenants only the rents which were due, and cannot enhance those rents without proceeding in the regular way. Doyal Chand Mullick v. Prankisto Pal Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 102.

On a sale for arrears of revenue under Regulation XI of 1822, the right of enhancement, though not enforced by the original purchaser, may be revived by his successor, unless the tenant can show clearly that he is protected. Rajah Sutto Churn Ghosal v. Tarinee Churn Ghose, 3 W. R., 178.

A dur-ijaradar can enhance the rents of the estate of which he holds the sub-lease. Gungaram Bearer v. Ujoodhyaram Myte, 2 W. R., 158.

Held that the particular terms of the pottah did not preclude the zemindar from demanding fair and legal rent. Mussamut Alee-oon-nissa v. Nowhut Singh, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 54.

The mere division of a ryot's holding among his heirs (each one paying his share of the old rent separately) does not destroy the continuity of the old holding. The default of one shareholder will vitiate the tenure of all, and give the landlord a right of enhancement. J. Hills v. Besharuth Meer, 1 W. R., 10.

Where collection is jointly made by the lumberdars, they both ought to join in the application for issue of notice of enhancement. Ram Pershad v. Mahomed Hashim, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 249.

Held that the powers vested in the settlement officer under Section 8, Act XIV of 1863, are to be exercised where dispute arises between the persons mentioned in Section 9 of that enactment, but where the question is between a maafeedar and a ryot relating to the right of enhancement, the power to enhance, without notice of enhancement, is not conferred on the settlement officer by Act XIV of 1863. Hurkishan and others v. Mookund Eam, 2 Agra Rep., A C., 233.

A zemindar may sue to enhance punchukee lakheraj lands without first suing for their resumption. Madhub Chundra Janah and another v. Rajkissen Mookerjee, 7 W. R., 86.

Prior to Act X of 1859, a zemindar was not prevented (unless otherwise expressly restricted) from enhancing the rent of a tenant who could not prove payment of a fixed rent for twelve years before the Permanent Settlement. Kaleedhun Banerjee v. Romesh Chunder Dutt, 3 W. R., 172.

Where a pottah had been granted by a putneedar whose putnee had been created while the mehal was under temporary settlement, and who had to pay a higher rent to the zemindar when the latter obtained a permanent settlement from Government at a higher jumma, it was held that the fact of the putneedar having to pay a higher rent to the superior holder did not, under the circumstances, warrant his raising his lessee's rent.

Where a putneedar sued for enhancement of rent on the foregoing ground, he was held not to be entitled to a decree for enhancement of excess land in defendant's possession, or to treat him as a trespasser in respect of such excess. Binode Beharry Roy v. C. B. Masseyk, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 494.

The fact that at a distant time the ryot or his ancestors have by their own agency or at their own expense made wells or effected improvements, is not a legal bar to the landlord's right to enhance. Lalla Sheo Narain v. Oodhun Singh, 1, 11 N. W. R., 180.

Where a landlord provides facilities for irrigation, of which the tenants may without expense avail themselves, bringing the water to their holdings,—Quære whether after proper notice he would not be allowed to enhance the rent.

A tenant of unirrigated land, if the landlord make that land irrigable without cost to the tenant, must pay at the rates paid by other similar tenants for irrigable lands in the neighbourhood. Syud Ikram Ali v. Baboo Lall, 1, 11 N. W. R., 178.

A suit for enhancement was filed under Act X of 1859, in the Court of a Deputy-Collector. The issues were framed and the evidence recorded by an Assistant Collector, apparently not invested with the powers of a Deputy-Collector, who wrote a report recommending the mode in which the suit should be disposed of. It was then disposed of by another Deputy-Collector who was probably acting at the time as Collector. Held that this procedure by which the suit was heard by one officer and decided by another is illegal.

A claim for enhancement of rent should not be disposed of without determining the propriety of the enhanced rent with reference to the ground on which it is claimed. Hurdyal Oopadhya v. Mahomed Narain, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, 19.

Difference of opinion as to whether enhancement of rent can be had under Act X of 1859 on land situate in the middle of a town or bazaar and used entirely for building purposes, Glover, J., holding that it cannot, and Mitter, J., contra. Rance Doorga

Soondaree Dossia v. Bibee Oondadoonissa, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 151.

The rent of a joint undivided tenure cannot be enhanced on the strength of an ikrar executed by one of the co-parceners. Hamayetoollah Chowdry v. Nil Kant Mullick, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 139.

(c) Liability to Enhancement.

Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, refers solely to dependent talookdars, and cannot be applied so as to protect from enhancement a person whose tenure is terminable at the end of any year, or at the pleasure or caprice of his zemindar. Kaleedhun Banerjee v. Romesh Chunder Dutt, 3 W. R., 172.

The mere circumstance that the landlord has assigned to a creditor a certain amount of the rents for certain years extending beyond an existing lease, does not prevent him from enhancing the rent after the expiration of the term. Maharajah Essen Chunder Manick v. Seebjoy Thakoor, Marsh., 435.

A mourosee pottah, in which the rent is not fixed as invariable, does not protect the ryot from enhancement. Taruck Chunder Nundee v. Modhoosoodun Nundee, 5 W. R., Act X R., 80.

A lease granted for building purposes may protect the tenant from enhancement; but if granted by a person with a limited right in the estate, or by a life-tenant, it cannot relieve the tenant from a claim to enhancement made by a party succeeding to the life-tenant. Juggessuree Boistobee v. Rajendur Gangooly, 5 W. R., Act X R., 34.

If the tenant's expenditure has caused an increase in the productive power of the land, such expenditure once made cannot permanently bar enhancement of rent, but after the lapse of such a time as may be fairly estimated as sufficient to enable him to recover his outlay and a just share of profit in respect of it, his rent may be enhanced on any legal ground. Mujlis v. Moher and others, 3 Agra Rep., 223.

Land had been let under different pottahs to a man for building and horticultural purposes, to be enjoyed by him, his sons, his sons' sons, for ever at a rent mentioned in the pottahs. Held that the rent was not liable to enhancement. Kailas Chundra Roy and others v. Hiralal Seal and others, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 93; S. C., 10 W. R., 403.

A ryot is not liable to pay any higher rent than that which he has always paid, until the landlord sues him for enhancement, or can show that the defendant has agreed to pay a higher rent. Sheikh Sobhee v. Chummun Lall Chowdhry, 2 W. R., Act X R., 34.

A person by taking a perpetual pottah in 1237 at the same rate as the former holders, must be considered to have acquired a new tenure, and is not protected from enhancement on the ground that the former holders held at the present rate from twelve years before the Permanent Settlement. Ramchunder Dutt v. Romesh Chunder Dutt, 2 W. R., Act X R., 47.

Bastoo lands are not exempt from enhancement. T. J. Kenny v. Greedhur Manjee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 9.

The purchase of a tenure at a sale for arrears of rent gives the new tenant no right of exemption from enhancement. Ram Narain Chuckerbutty v. Banee Chunder Chatterjee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 95.

Where there is no joint lease, and the plaintiff's share is not disputed, a suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rent will lie. In such a case the suit must be for the enhancement of the rent of the whole of defendant's tenure, to enable the Courts to decide as to the proportion payable to plaintiff. Dookee Ram Sircar v. Gowhur Mundul, 10 W. R., 307.

A talook being once created at some former unknown period, not having a fluctuating rent, is not protected from enhancement under Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793. The holders not being common ryots, they were held entitled to a deduction for expenses of collection. Bama Soonduree Dossee v. Radhika Chowdhrain, 1 W. R., 339.

A ryot who pleads no grant, and admits that he is not a mokurruree ryot, and who is unable to prove his allegation of uniform payment of rent since 1190, is not protected from enhancement under the old law prior to Act X of 1859. Kishen Mohun Holdar v. Woomesh Chunder Dutt, 1 W. R., 350.

A dependent talookdar, whose tenure was in existence before the Permanent Settlement, is entitled to protection under Section 49, Regulation VIII of 1793, unless his zemindar can prove a title to enhance rent under Section 51 of that law. Radheeka Chowdrain v. Ram Mohun Ghose, 1 W. R., 367.

A howaladar who is so only in name, but is in reality a mere cultivating ryot, and tills with his own hands the land he holds, is not entitled to hold at a lower rate than his neighbours. Asmutoollah v. Kalee Pershad Doss Chowdhry, 3 W. R., Act X R., 11.

The words "such land continuing to be used for the purposes specified in the leases" in Clause 4, Section 26, Act I of 1845, do not restrain the effect of a lease for clearing land of jungle solely to such time as jungle remains to be cut on the land, but should be taken to mean that the lease will stand good as long as the land is kept clear of jungle, and not allowed to fall back into its old state. If a pottah gives the tenant power to extend his lease beyond the land originally made over to him under the pottah, and gives the same rent for the additional land as for the other land, such additional land is not assessable with the pergunnah rate of rent, but the pottah is good and binding even on an auction-purchaser as respects the whole of the land cultivated by the tenant. R. Watson and Co. v. Jhukroo Singh, 1 W. R., 195.

The date of the Permanent Settlement for the district of Jessore was April 11th, 1790. The variation of a few rupees between a ryot's admitted jumma and the jumma of his doul is not such a variation as to destroy the right of a fixed jumma. Huroo Nath Roy v. Ameer Biswas, 1 W. R., 231.

A ryot who takes a pottah or gives a kubuleut for his homestead is not entitled to the privileges granted to those who erect "dwelling-houses" on leased lands, and is not protected from enhancement. Nuffer Chundra Saha v. Gossain Jysingh Bharuttee, 3 W. R., Act X R., 144.

A purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree of the right and interest of a person in position of a ryot holding at a low and favourable rate (the privilege being personal to him and his family) is not entitled to exemption from enhancement. P. Flowest v. Kootoob Hossein and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 274.

Held that an ex-maâfeedar, whose land at the time of settlement was separately assessed, and the sum so assessed made payable through zemindar, cannot be treated as a mere ryot liable to enhancement. Kedar Pooree v. Kullan Khan, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 56.

Jungleboory tenants are liable to enhancement. Dhunput Singh v. Gooman Singh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 61.

No tenures are liable to enhancement of rent, by judicial proceedings, except the tenures of ryots having right of occupancy. Rance Surnoo Moye, v. Reverend C. Blumhardt, 9 W. R., 552.

When a tenant claims a mokurruree tenure under a judicial decree of 1792, if his title be established, the mere fact of his having been at some time forced to pay a rent larger than that due will not suffice to render him liable to enhanced rent for ever. Goluck Chunder Roy v. F. C. Sandes, 5 W. R., Act X R., 32.

A talook created before the accession of the British Government, held at an unvaried rent from before the Perpetual Settlement, is protected from enhancement by Section 15 of Act X of 1859. Gobind Chunder Dutt v. Hurronath Roy and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 52.

Held that the plaintiff, whose land at the time of the settlement was assessed with a proportionate Government demand, was not liable to enhancement by zemindars, who in their right were restricted to get a certain percentage only for risk and labour of collection by the order of settlement officer. Moosey Khutery v. Mahomed Tuqee, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 3.

A farmer is liable to give a kubuleut at enhanced rates when there is nothing in his pottah to show that his lease was taken for building purposes, or that the zemindar's right of enhancement was restricted. Sharoda Soonduree Chowdhraney v. J. Tissendie, 2 W. R., Act X R., 7.

The stipulation in a pottah, "after this in no manner shall enhancement be demanded," precludes enhancement during the existence of the pottah, notwithstanding in a preceding part of the pottah the words "year by year" are used (Bayley, J., dissentiente). Punchanun Bose v. Peary Mohun Deb, 2 W. R., 225.

Act X of 1859 does not affect or destroy a privilege of being protected from enhancement during the currency of settlement which admittedly existed before that enactment came into operation. Byj Nath v. Chutter Singh, 3 Agra Rep., 181.

Suit for enhancement (under the old law) of rent of a talook held to be a dependent talook within the meaning of Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, although not duly registered by the zemindar. Held that the defendant having made out a strong prima-facie case to prove that he and those through whom he claimed had held the talook at a fixed rent from a date more than twelve years prior to the Decennial Settlement, and the zemindar having relied on the weakness of the defence, and having failed to show that the rent had varied, the tenure was exempt from re-assessment. Mussamut Mohamoya Dossee v. Mussamut Doyamoye Dossee Chowdhrain, 7 W. R., 62.

An amulnamah, by which the defendant, for clearing and cultivating chur lands, was to pay no rent for the first three years, and then a low rate of rent gradually rising till it reached a certain rate, no period being fixed for the duration of such last mentioned rate, was held to be no bar to the plaintiff's right of enhancement. Poddomony Dossea v. Puramanund Sein and another, 7 W. R., 158.

Where tenants held for some twenty-five years upon a rent apparently much below that payable for lands of the same description in the neighbourhood, they were held not entitled at the end of that long period to allege the expenditure of their own capital and labour against the landlord's claim to a kubuleut at an enhanced rate. Prosono Coomar Paul Chowdhry v. Radha Nath Dey Chowdhry and others, 7 W. R., 97.

A ryot who was held liable, by a decree passed in 1855, to pay an enhanced rent, on the ground that he had not paid a uniform rate for twelve years before the Permanent Settlement, is not entitled, in consequence of the delay in the hearing of a portion of his claim, to ask for a modification of that decree, on the ground of an alteration in the law made subsequently by Act X of 1859, by which uniform payment from the settlement protects a ryot from enhancement. Modhoosoodun Koondoo v. Gopeekishen Gossain, 6 W. R., Act X R., 81.

A talook having a fluctuating rent is not protected from enhancement under Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793. The holders not being common ryots were held entitled to a deduction for expenses of collection. Bama Soondery Dassee v. Radhika Chowdhrain, 1 W. R., 339.

Ryots holding lands at fixed rates of rent which have not been changed from the time of the Permanent Settlement, are not liable to have their rents enhanced even at the suit of a purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue under Act I of 1845. Hurryhur Mookerjee v. Puddolochun Dey and others, 7 W. R., 176.

A suit under Act X of 1859 will not lie for arrears of rent at enhanced rates, in conformity with an unexecuted decree declaring the plaintiff's right to enhance passed before that Act. A. B. B. Mackintosh v. Adurmarnee Dossee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 87.

The words "tikka mohto" cannot be construed as conferring a permanent or mourosee lease at a fixed rate. Nuffur Chunder Shaha v. Gossain Joy Singh Bharattee, 3 W. R., Act X R., 144.

In a suit for arrears of rent at an enhanced rate, where a Judge finds that plaintiff is not entitled to the only relief asked for, he has no right to declare defendant's tenure liable to enhancement prospectively. Surubjeet Mundle v. Misslebach, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 148.

The rent of a tenure protected from enhancement under the provisions of Section 4, Act X of 1859, cannot be increased on the ground of excess land. De Courcy, R., v. Meghnath Jha, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 157.

A specific provision in the administration papers protecting the ryot from enhancement of rent during the term of the settlement will be enforced. Jhummun Shah v. Debee Dass, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 8.

Land held ancillary to the enjoyment of a house, as, for instance, a garden or compound, is not subject to enhancement of rent under the Rent Acts.

Acts X of 1859 and XIV of 1863 do not apply to land occupied by houses, but only to land held for agricultural purposes. Alfred Powell v. Wahid Khan, 1, 7 N. W. R., 133.

Lands used for other purposes than for purposes of agriculture and horticulture are not liable to enhancement under Act X of 1859, Section 17, or Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.), Section 18. Muddun Mohun Biswas v. W. Stalkart, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 441.

In order to maintain a suit for enhancement on the ground mentioned in Clause 3, Section 17, Act X of 1859, it is necessary to prove the existence of the alleged excess and the rate at which such excess land ought to be assessed. Nubo Kishore Mundle v. Fukeer Paramanick, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 558.

(d) Notice of Enhancement.

A notice of enhancement by a farmer as agent and on behalf of the zemindar is legal. Hem Chunder Chatterjee v. Pooran Chunder Roy, 3 W. R., Act X R., 160.

A suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rate, to take effect prospectively from the date of suit, may be instituted without any preliminary notice of enhancement, and at any time during the tenancy. T. Brae v. Kumul Saka, 4 W. R., Act X R., 5.

A suit for enhancement should be dismissed on failure to prove service of notice. Anund Moyee Chowdhrain v. Chunder Monee Dossia, 3 W. R., Act X R., 139; see also p. 140.

In order to obtain the benefit of Clause 4, Section 26, Act I of 1845 (protecting garden lands from enhancement), it is not sufficient that the notice of enhancement should describe the lands as garden lands, but there must be a clear finding that the lands have been held as such under bonâ-fide leases. Siddessuree Chowdhrain v. Kissoreekant Gossain, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 101.

Where a notice of enhancement treats the party served with it as a talookdar, the Court should not assess ryotwaree rates upon him. Munnekurnyka Chowdhry v. Anundmoyee Chowdhry, 10 W. R., 245.

Where a landlord in his notice of enhancement styles the ryot's land jotedaree land, and there is no question of the land being so, the mere use of the word "khamar" in some of the ryot's dakhilas cannot affect his status, or place him in a different position from what the landlord's own notice declares him to hold, so as to deprive him of the right of occupancy, or of exemption from enhancement under Section 6, Act X of 1859. Rajmohun Mitter and others v. Gooroo Churn Aych, 6 W. R., Act X R., 106.

In a suit for arrears of rent of a particular year, after notice of enhancement on specified grounds, plaintiff (if his title is established) can only have a decree for the arrears claimed, and on one or other of the grounds alleged. The Judge has no jurisdiction in appeal to declare his right to any enhanced rents for the future. Bhoobun Mohinee Dassee v. Kadarnath Bose, 12 W. R., 141.

When a zemindar has received rent for 22 years from the tenant in possession, notwithstanding that he is not registered in his sherista, it is upon such recognized tenant, and not upon any other party, that his notice of enhancement must be served. Noboo Coomar Ghose v. Kishen Chunder Banerjee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 112.

A notice of enhancement must be reasonably accurate and precise. A notice to pay a lump sum on the whole land in and out of defendant's possession is not sufficient. Tarachand Roy v. Keenaram Kurmokar, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 118.

A plaintiff is not to be prejudiced by reason of his plaint demanding less rent than that specified in his notice to enhance, when such notice has not been disputed until after action brought.

A plaintiff cannot recover higher rent than that demanded in the notice of enhancement. James Hills v. Panch Cowree Shaikh, 1 W. R., 3.

In a case of joint tenure not subdivided under any sanction from the superior landlord, notice of enhancement need not be served on all persons interested under an alleged subdivision. Mothooranath Chatterjea v. Khetternath Biswas, 2 W. R., Act X R., 92.

A zemindar is not bound by the ground of enhancement mentioned in his notice in the case of a tenant-at-will. Nor has the tenant any right to claim the prevailing rate, but is liable, after notice of enhancement, to the highest rack-rent. Koobir Sirdar v. Goluck Chander Chuckerbutty, 3 W. R., Act X R., 126.

A notice of enhancement should not be prospective, the principle being that the ryot should be prepared to meet the claim on grounds existing at the time the notice is received. Byjenauth Koonwar v. Saheb Koonwar, 12 W. R., 532.

In a suit to recover arrears of rent at enhanced rates, when the question of the liability of the tenure to enhancement has been put in issue and fully tried, a decree may be given declaring the tenure liable to enhancement, though notice to enhancement is not proved.

In a suit for enhancement, where the defence is that the land is lakheraj, the plaintiff should prove that the defendant has paid rent. If the land has been in fact held rent free, the validity or invalidity of the lakheraj tenure cannot be tried in such a suit. That question should be tried in a suit to resume or assess. Gomanee Kajee v. Huryhur Mookerjee, W. R., F. B., 115.

At the hearing of a suit brought to contest the right of the defendant to enhance plaintiff's rents, it appeared that the notice of enhancement was defective, no ground of enhancement being stated in it: but the plaintiff waived this objection, and the representatives of both parties asked for a decision on the merits. The Judge thereupon made a decree in favour of each party as to a portion of the lands. Held that the decree was valid. Gungadhur Sunnaputty v. Heeraloll Seal, Marsh., 60.

In a suit for enhancement of rent after notice, on the allegation that the defendant holds land in excess of the area admitted by him to be in his occupation, it must be shown that the notice stated that such excess has been proved by measurement. Kalee Kumary Dossee and others v. Shumbhoo Chunder Ghose and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 23.

In a former suit brought by a ryot against the holder under a temporary ijara extending down to 1271, a decree was passed maintaining the ijaradar's right to enhance. But notwithstanding this decree the ryot was by express agreement allowed, and in fact continued, to hold at the old rates. On the expiration of the ijara the zemindar entered upon the lands, and after collecting a part of the rents for 1272 gave the plaintiff a putnee of the estate from 1273, and an assignment of the right to collect the uncollected portion of the rents of 1273. The putneedar now sues to recover from the defendant the rent for the remainder of 1272 and for 1273, at the enhanced rates decreed to the ijaradar.

Held that neither the zemindar nor the putneedar could recover enhanced rents from the ryot without some notice. Bodnarain Singh v. Ruggo Lall Mundur, 7 W. R., 190.

In a suit for rent at an enhanced rate founded on notice, if the plaintiff fails to prove service of notice, instead of his obtaining a declaratory decree with reference to future years, his suit ought to be dismissed. Radhamonee Dossee v. Maharanee Shidessuree Debia, 6 W. R., Act X R., 25.

Per Norman, J.—Affirmance of the principle of the original judgment that the cause of action in a suit for enhancement of rent after notice does not accrue until after a decree declaring the right to enhance, notwithstanding a subsequent Full Bench ruling to the contrary. Madhub Chundra Ghosee v. Radhica Chowdhrain, 7 W. R., 405.

A suit for enhancement of rent after notice should not be dismissed merely because the landlord has made a mistake as to the exact area of the lands which his tenants hold. Woomanauth Roy v. Ashumpurree Benn, 12 W. R., 476.

Notice of enhancement, issued on the application of the person to whom the rent is payable, on account of any part of the land in respect of which the notice is served, is good for that part. Gubdoo Mull v. Hoolasea and Tej Singh, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 247.

Summary suits brought by a landlord demanding rent at the current rates are held to be sufficient notice of enhancement under Regulation V of 1812. George Tommy v. Sooba Kureem Lall, 2 W. R., Act X R., 73.

Notice of enhancement to a husband is not sufficient when his wife is the acknowledged tenant. Sreeram Ghose v. Molook Chand Deb, 4 W. R., Act X R., 3.

A suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rate to take effect prospectively from the date of suit may be instituted without any preliminary notice of enhancement, and at any time during the tenancy. T. Brae v. Kumul Shaha, 4 W. R., Act X R., 5.

In a suit brought by a zemindar for two years' rent on account of newly-formed land which had accreted to the defendant's old jote, but had since diluviated, wherein the Civil Court decreed the rent, allowing defendants to retain possession as tenants, —Held that no notice was necessary under Section 13, Act X of 1859, before rent could be demanded by the zemindar in the case. Watson and Co. v. Nilcant Sircar and others, 10 W. R., 331.

Where a notice of enhancement is served during the pendency of a suit in which the only decree which can be passed is one simply declaratory of the plaintiff's right to recover rent at an enhanced rate, and fixing the rate to which the rent is to be enhanced, the notice is inoperative, and will not enable the Court to give a decree in that suit for the payment of a sum by way of rent from the year subsequent to the service of the notice. Romanath Dutt and others v. Joy Kishen Mookerjee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 80.

The object of Section 13, Act X of 1859, is that a suit for enhancement should not be brought without previous due notice, and not that when a notice under that section has been once duly given, if the tenant does not immediately, on service of notice, give up the tenure, a suit for enhanced rents for the next and following years must be brought within the said year. Shahzada Mahomed Rohimoodeen v. Radha Mohun Mundul, 6 W. R., Act X R., 96.

A notice of enhancement of an intermediate tenure, specifying that the tenant holds more lands than he originally did, and that the productive powers of the land and the value of the produce have increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the tenant, is sufficient if the grounds are proved to exist, and if the rent claimed as fair and equitable is not more than is paid by the holders of similar tenures in the pergunnah or neighbourhood. Grish Chunder Ghose v. Ramtonoo Biswas, 12 W. R., 449.

The rent of a talookdar cannot be enhanced under a notice treating him as a ryot having a right of occupancy. Doyamoyee Chowdhrain v. Mohima Chunder Roy and others, 12 W. R., 137.

Where a notice of enhancement, though informal, was sufficient to inform the ryot of the landlord's intention to increase the rent to the rates paid for similar lands in places adjacent, and the notice was accepted by the ryot, and treated by him in the lower Court as a notice under Clause 1, Section 17, Act X of 1859, it was held that the informality could not be objected to for the first time in the High Court in special appeal. Kasheenath Deb v. Maharanee Shibessuree Debia and others, 8 W. R., 503.

A ryot is competent to object to the legality of a notice of enhancement even in a suit in which he is plaintiff. Lalla Singh v. Mussamut Bibee Reazoonissa, 8 W. R., 271.

A landlord serving notice of enhancement under Section 13, Act X of 1859, has no right to consolidate distinct and independent holdings, without the consent of the ryot. The ryot, on the other hand, is entitled to a notice or notices specifying the several holdings in his possession, the amount of enhanced rent he is liable to pay upon each, and the ground of such enhancement upon each instance. Beejoy Gobind Bural and others v. Jannokee Bromonya, 8 W. R., 72.

According to Section 13, Act X of 1859, a notice of enhancement must be served by the farmer, and not the zemindar, as the person to whom the rent is payable. Doorga Roy v. Shyam Jha, 8 W. R., 72.

The inaccuracy of a notice in consequence of its not specifying properly the grounds on which enhancement is claimed, is a substantial objection to the maintenance of a suit for enhanced rent under that notice.

A notice of enhancement to a neem-howaladar was held to be insufficient because, in stating that the rate sought to be enhanced was less than that paid for neighbouring lands, it left it uncertain whether the latter rate was paid by similar neem-howaladars or by ryots, Clause 1, Section 17, applying to ryots and not to middlemen. Kaleenauth Chowdhry v. Humee Bibee, 12 W. R., 506.

It is sufficient if a notice makes a ryot aware of the legal grounds on which enhancement is sought, although it is not in the exact words of the law. Radha Bullub Ghose v. Beharee Lall Mookerjee, 12 W. R., 537.

Following a previous decision of a Division Bench, it was held that a judgment passed against a ryot in a contested suit operates as a notice to him under Section 13, Act X of 1859, taking effect from the commencement of the year following that in which the decree was passed. Ramanath Dutt and others v. Joykissen Mookerjee, 11 W. R., 3.

A notice of enhancement can only have prospective effect. Luchmee Pershad v. Ramgolam Singh, 2 W. R., Act X R., 30.

A Deputy Collector has authority to issue a notice of enhancement under Section 13, Act X of 1859. Cazee Syed Nasir Ali v. Sheikh Neaz, 2 W. R., Act X R., 66.

Previous notice of enhancement is not necessary to maintain a suit for a kubuleut at enhanced rents. Mahomed Sechee v. Kunmur Ali, 2 W. R., Act X R., 66.

A suit for arrears of rent at enhanced rates cannot be maintained where the notice of enhancement has been served on parties other than the one known to the zemindar as the actual tenant from whom he had received rents, and to whom he had given receipts, even though the parties served with the notice are the representatives of the registered tenant. Huro Mohun Mookerjee v. Goluck Chunder Sirkar, 12 W. R., 265.

A notice of enhancement, according to the rate mentioned in an agreement, is necessary as to lands found in excess on measurement where no term is specified in the written agreement. Rajah Burodakant Roy Bahadoor v. Sib Sunkuree Dossee, 4 W. R., Act X R., 35.

A notice of enhancement, on the ground that the land will bear a higher rent, is a good and valid notice as against a tenant-at-will. Roghoobuns Tewaree v. Shib Dutt, 4 W. R., Act X R., 48.

When a Court dismisses a suit on a preliminary objection to the sufficiency of a notice of enhancement, it should not go on and decide also a question of title. Ram Chunder Chowdhry v. Hurrish Chunder Chowdhry, 5 W. R., Act X R., 14.

In the case of a tenant who has no right of occupancy, a landlord's notice of enhancement under Section 13 of Act X of 1859 is valid, if it specifies the rent to which the tenant will be subject for the ensuing year and the ground on which the enhancement is claimed, even if among the reasons assigned are some which will not bear examination. The only limit to the landlord's power of enhancement after notice is the fairness and reasonableness of the rent. Sreegopaul Mullick v. Dwarkanauth Sein, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 520.

Where a party who was not personally a cultivator of the land, but held a large jumma with a number of ryots below him, was treated in a notice of enhancement under Clause 17, Act X of 1859, as an ordinary ryot having a right of occupancy, it was held that the notice was not on that account illegal or informal. Kallee Prossono Ghose v. Hurrish Chunder Dutt, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 57.

Where a zemindar, after obtaining a decree declaring certain land to be invalid lakheraj appertaining to his zemindary, serves a notice upon the occupier to pay rent at the rate current in the neighbourhood, such notice does not make the claim one for arrears of rent at an enhanced rate, but is simply a requisition to come to terms. Deen Dyal Paramanick v. Maharajah Suttish Chunder Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 272.

A childless Hindu widow granted a pottah to defendant. On her death there was a dispute as to the heirship to her husband, and the right of plaintiff's vendor having been declared, the latter brought a suit againt defendant for a kubuleut at enhanced rates of rent. Defendant disputed the claim, setting up the title of the opposite party, but the suit was decreed to the extent of the rate of rent admitted by defendant. Subsequently plaintiff issued a notice of enhancement, and defendant not coming to terms, sued to set aside the pottah and obtain possession. Held that the decree obtained by plaintiff's vendor created a new contract between the parties under the kubuleut, by which defendant was entitled to hold at the rent admitted by him till plaintiff took further steps. And that plaintiff's vendor having conveyed his whole title to plaintiff, who then gave defendant distinct notice, plaintiff was entitled to succeed in the present suit. Case at 12 W. R., 299 distinguished. Nubo Kishen Mookerjee v. Kalachaund Mookerjee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 438.

Where an under-tenant holding or cultivating land under the conditions mentioned in Section 13, Act X of 1859, enters into no fresh engagement at the time of re-settlement, he has a right to receive a written notice before he can be called upon to pay enhanced rent, the provisions of that section qualifying those of Sections 7 and 9, Regulation VII of 1822. D'Silva, I. P. v. Rajcoomar Dutt, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 153.

Semble, (By Markby, J.)—That when a landlord gives notice of enhancement to a tenant on the first of the grounds stated in Section 17, Act X of 1859, he treats him as a ryot having a right of occupancy. Thakoor Dutt Singh v. Gopaul Singh, 14 S W. R., C. R., 4.

A person holding a tenure of an intermediate character is entitled to a notice under Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, before his rent can be enhanced. Rajah Nilmonee Singh v. Chunder Kant Banerjee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 251.

A suit to assess rent upon land paying no rent at all is not a suit for enhancement of rent. A zemindar who seeks to enhance the rent of a person holding an intermediate tenure, is bound to give a specific notice in which the ground of enhancement is clearly specified. Baroda Kant Roy Bahadoor v. Radha Churn Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 163.

Where a suit for enhancement of rent is dismissed on the ground that no notice was served, any decision in the Court's judgment as regards the mâl or lakheraj character of the land must be deemed to be mere obiter. Where it is found in such a suit that the notice did not state that the ryot pays less than ryots of the same class, the informality may be overlooked if there is evidence on the record of the rates of rent payable by such ryot; but if there is no evidence of that nature, the suit must be dismissed. Mothoornauth Sircar v. Nil Monee Deo, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 297.

Rent-Enhancement,—Act X of 1859, Section 17. What sufficient notice of ground. Kumar Paresh Narayan Roy v. Gaur Sundar Bhumik, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 159; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 391.

Notice of enhancement should distinctly set forth the grounds upon which enhancement of rent is sought.

Notice of enhancement to the effect "that as the rent of "the land" (in the occupation of the tenant) "is below the rate prevailing in the pergunnah and in adjacent places, and as the productive powers of the land and the value of the produce have increased, and as the patit lands have been cultivated, I am entitled to receive from you Rs. 794-5-7-11½ per annum," was held to be indefinite and uncertain; and therefore no suit thereon could lie for enhancement of rent. Gobind Kumar Chundry v. Huro Chundra Nag, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 61.

A suit for enhancement of rent cannot be supported without there has been a previous service of notice under Act X of 1859, Section 13. Akhay Sunkur Chuckerbutty v. Raja Indra Bhusun Deb Roy, 4 B. L. R., F. B. R., 58; and 12 S. W. R., F. B., 27.

Informality in a notice for enhancement of rent was not allowed to prevail in this case where the defect was held to have been made good by the evidence on the record, and where there could be no doubt that the tenant knew exactly the nature of the demand he had to meet, and where also the objection was a mere after-thought and not put forward until after the order of remand by the High Court. Wooma Churn Dutt v. Grish Chunder Bose, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 32.

Where a defendant has known perfectly well the grounds upon which enhancement of rent is demanded from him, a clerical omission which in no way prejudiced the defendant cannot operate to invalidate the notice of enhancement under Section 17, Act X of 1859. Ryesunnissa Begum v. Bydonauth Saha, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 354.

In enhancing rents on the first of the grounds specified in Section 17, Act X of 1859, not only must the amount of rent paid by neighbouring ryots be considered, but also the class of the ryots, and whether the lands in question are similar to the lands held by the neighbouring ryots and enjoying similar advantages.

In this case a notice based on that ground and specifying "that the rates paid are below those paid for similar lands in adjacent places" was held to be bad. Shib Narain Dutt v. Ekramonissa Begum, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 356.

Where a ryot well knew and pleaded to the grounds of enhancement, the mere omission of the words "same class of ryots" in the notice was held not fatal to the plaintiff's suit.

Nor was the omission of the words "otherwise than by the agency and at the expense of the ryot" considered material when the plaintiff distinctly stated in his plaint that the productive powers of the soil had increased, owing to the land having been irrigated from the plaintiff's khas tank. R. Watson & Co. v. Ram Dhun Ghose, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 496.

A landlord has never been able in this country to recover rents at enhanced rates for a past time, in respect of which he has given no antecedent notice; and, since the passing of Act X of 1859, Section 13 has made it necessary that the notice should bear sufficient ground of enhancement. Dinauth Doss v. Gugun Chunder Sen, 12 S. W. R., C. R., 274.

The object of the notice of enhancement is that the defendant may know what are the grounds on which the plaintiff seeks to enhance his rent, so that he may have an opportunity of coming forward to contest any of those grounds; and as the defendant's own answer in the case showed that he was fully aware of and came forward to contest the main ground on which the plaintiff sought to enhance his rent, the notice issued by plaintiff was held to be sufficient to meet the requirements of Section 17, Act X of 1859. Tirth Nund Thakur v. Mohur Mundle, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 278.

In a suit for a kubuleut at enhanced rates to correspond with the terms of a pottah which had been tendered at some date preceding the suit, where the lower Court decreed the plaintiff's appeal,—

Held that the decree was defective, inasmuch as it did not declare what the kubuleut was to which the plaintiff was entitled, and that the claim of the plaintiff could not succeed, inasmuch as it demanded higher rate for a period which had already elapsed when the suit was instituted; a right forbidden by Section 13, Act X of 1859, without giving such notice as therein prescribed, which notice the plaintiff had failed to give in this case. Zinnut Bibee v. Jaffur Ali, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 172.

A notice of enhancement of the rent of a talook on the simple ground of the rents having become less by degrees is not based on the "abatement" contemplated by Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, or any of the other grounds specified in that section. Nobb Kisto Mojoomdar v. Tara Monee, 12 W. R., 320.

Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793 (looked at with Sections 13 and 15, Act X of 1859), does not require any notice in the case of a dependent talookdar, preliminary to a claim for enhancement of rent; but in order to succeed in a suit under that section plaintiff must show that he is about to enhance on one of the three grounds therein mentioned. Tarinee Kant Lahooree v. Koonjo Behary Awustee, 12 W. R., 112.

A suit for enhancement should not be dismissed merely because the plaintiff has included in his notice of enhancement land belonging to the defendant's lakheraj holding. Chunder Coomer Roy v. Bholanath Sircar, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 110.

(e) Grounds of Enhancement.

Where the enhancement was claimed on the first of the grounds mentioned in Section 17, Act X of 1859, the decree should have been based exactly on that ground, and not on other arbitrary grounds. The holding of the ryot sought to be enhanced should be compared with ryots of the same class holding similar lands either in the same village or in adjacent villages. Bheem Sein v. Hur Gobind, 3 Agra Rep., R. A., 12.

In a lease of jungle-booree howla tenure, which provided that the lands covered by it should be held rent free for five years, and that after a low rate had been paid for one year the "poora dustoor" should be paid, the intention was construed to be that, inasmuch as the ryot was bringing those lands into cultivation for the first time, he should for a certain period either pay no rent or something less than customary rates. The landlord did not by this bind himself never to enhance the rate under certain circumstances. Held that if, when the under-tenants paid 1 rupee 4 annas to the hostadar, he paid 14 annas to the landlord, it was only fair that when they paid him 1 rupee 8 annas he should pay 1 rupee. Bhurut Chunder Aitch and another v. Gourmonee Dossee, 11 W. R., 31.

The occurrence of a catastrophe, such as an inundation, during the year succeeding a notice of enhancement, was held to be sufficient to render the demand of a higher rent unfair and inequitable. Bamasoonderee Dossee v. Kaloo Peadah, 10 W. R., 395.

A deduction of 15 per cent. from the gross rent is a fair and equitable mode of assessing the rent payable by an intermediate tenant in a suit for enhancement. Intermediate tenures should be assessed at a rate so as to allow the tenant a reasonable profit, and not at a rate at which actual cultivators are assessed. Rani Swarnamyi v. Gauri Prasad Dass, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 270.

In a suit for enhancement of rent of land originally leased for the purposes of a homestead, where defendant had erected shops, and made other improvements at a great outlay and considerable risk, as the river had encroached and was encroaching, a Judge was held not to have done wrong in allowing the tenant a reduction on account of the increase of value of the land induced by his energy. Nuffer Chunder Shah v. Gunga Dutt Bharutty, 11 W. R., 190.

In a suit for enhancement of rent on the ground that the value of the produce of the land has increased, the Court shall determine whether the rent is fair and equitable with reference to the increase in the value of the produce, and not merely decide that the old rent is fair and equitable because there has been an increase in the wages of labour and the necessaries of life. Savi v. Jetoo Meah, W. R., F. B., 59.

A casual increase in the fertility of the land is not a ground for permanent enhancement of rent. Cristo Mohun Puttur v. Hurree Sonkur Mookerjee, 7 W. R., 235.

A talookdar is liable to enhancement only to the extent of what other similar talookdaries in the neighbourhood pay for similar under-tenures with similar lands. Mohima Chundra Dey v. Gooroo Doss Sein, 7 W. R., 285.

In deciding a suit for a kubuleut at enhanced rate for five years, the probable result of an exceptional bad season should not be taken into consideration, but the average of the past five years.

Claims to enhancement on the basis of increased produce and increased value of produce are inconsistent and incompatible with one founded on an inequality between the rent paid by a tenant on the estate and paid by a tenant on a neighbouring estate. Shreesh Chundra Doss, agent on behalf of Soodhamonee Dosse v. Assimonissa and others, 7 W. R., 234.

The plaintiff claimed to enhance defendant's rent from Sicca Rs. 661 to Company's Rs. 7,528. No evidence was given as to the time at which the holding had commenced, or how long it had continued; but an attempt was made to prove a doul bundobust of 1803, which would have shown that the persons through whom the defendants claimed were then in occupation of the land at the same rent, but no legal evidence of the doul was given.

Held, per Peacock, C. J. (dissentiente Bayley, J., and Kemp, J.), that, independently of the doul, it might be presumed, from the great differences between the rent at which the lands were held and the present value of the lands, that the occupation at the low rent had been continued as of right, and not merely by the sufferance of the zemindar, and that such occupation at the same rent had existed twelve years before the date of Regulation VIII of 1793.

Per Bayley, J., that, independently of the doul, the facts did not satisfy such a presumption; but that if the doul were proved then it might be presumed that the occupation at the same rent had commenced twelve years before the date of the Regulation.

Per Kemp, J., that, even if the doul were proved the presumption would not arise. Mussamut Brojunggona Dassee v. Mussamut Debranee Dassee, Marsh., 424; S. C., W. R., F. B., 94.

In a suit for a kubuleut at enhanced rents, if the rents of the adjacent lands have been already adjusted and enhanced, the enhancement of the defendant's holding will depend on the rates paid by those adjacent lands, supposing them to be of the same kind, and not on any doctrine of proportion which will only apply when no adjustment has taken place. Azim Mullick v. Gunga Dhur Bancrjee, 5 W. R., Act X R., 58.

In a suit for enhancement the rent demanded must be proved to be fair and equitable, even if the tenant has no rights of occupancy. Jeeun Lall Jha v. Kaleenath Jha, 5 W. R., Act X R., 41.

The produce of a beegah of dhan in 1267 and 1268 should not be valued at the prices of 1269. Whether a ryot borrows his food or not, he cannot receive his wages out of the proceeds of crops before the crops are gathered. An allowance for a house cannot be made to a ryot in addition to a fair allowance for wages.

Loss on account of crops destroyed or injured cannot be taken into consideration twice over: (1st) in ascertaining the average of the quantities and prices, and (2nd) in making an allowance for risks based upon injuries done to the crops, of which the quantities and prices must have been taken into consideration in calculating the average. A landlord cannot be charged with a rate of interest or profit on capital far beyond the ordinary rate of interest or profit, and also with an allowance for insuring the return of the capital with such extraordinary rate of interest.

One rate of rent cannot be fixed for a ryot who spends his own capital, and another for a ryot who is compelled to borrow it. The rate of rent which the landlord has a right by law to demand does not depend upon the size of the holding or the circumstances of the ryot. What is a fair and equitable rent for one ryot for lands of a similar description and with similar advantages in the same neighbourhood, must also be fair and equitable for another, so far as the landlord is concerned. A ryot who, but for the Permanent Settlement, would have been entitled to no more than half of the gross proceeds of his land, is not over-assessed when he is allowed to retain at least five-sixths of the gross proceeds for his labour and profit on capital, and called upon to pay something less than the other one-sixth as rent to the zemindar.

A ryot having a mere right of occupancy, and not a right to hold at a fixed rate of rent, has not such an interest in the land as gives him a right to a share of the rent. He has simply a right to occupy the land in preference to any other tenant, so long as he pays a fair and equitable rent. A Judge cannot fix the term in suits by a landlord for rent or for kubuleuts, as can be done in a suit by a ryot having a right of occupancy for the delivery of a pottah. James Hills v. Ishore Ghose, W. R., F. B., 1863, 131.

A cultivator cannot claim altogether to be exempted from enhancement on account of the increase in the productive power of land which has been effected by a canal which was not made at his expense or labour, but he can fairly ask that the expenses, such as the cost of making ducts and the payment of canal rates, should be calculated and deducted from the total amount of increased value. Piran v. Ram Buksh, 2 Agra Rep., 346.

In a suit for enhancement, where not only the value of the produce has decreased, but the productive powers of the land have decreased, and the expenses of cultivation increased, the formula to be applied in determining the rent will be as follows: The average value of the produce before the decrease in the productive powers of the land will be to the average value of the present decreased produce, minus the increased cost of production, as the rent previously paid will be to that which the land ought now to pay. Showdamonee Dosse v. Shookul Mahomed, 7 W. R., 94.

A proprietor who has settled with Government under a jummabundee cannot sue for enhancement on the mere ground that the rate is below the prevailing rate, but must sue either on the ground of increase in the value of the produce or of an excess quantity of land. Sukhi Mani Holdar v. Gunga Gobind Mundle, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 126.

When a pottah contains no term, and does not provide against enhancement, and the tenant has not occupied for twelve years, if it is shown that the tenant has improved the land he will be entitled to a proportionate reduction in determining the rent he should pay. But if it is also shown that the value of land generally in the neighbourhood has increased irrespectively of the agency of the ryot, the landlord will be entitled to enhancement proportionate to that improvement. Mathura Mohun Saha v. Gyaram Haldar, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 128.

In fixing the rent to be paid for cultivated land originally held on a jungle-booree grant, the Court should ascertain the rate payable by the same class of ryots for lands of a similar description and with similar advantages. Deen Dyal Agustee v. R. Watson and Co., W. R., 1864, Act X R., 113.

When the purchaser of a moiety of an estate settled in perpetuity some years ago according to a jummabundee then made, does not sue directly to set aside the jummabundee of settlement, but many years after the settlement he sues to enhance the rents entered therein, to entitle him to succeed he must show that since the period of settlement circumstances have occurred which have tended to raise the value of the ryot's lands, and consequently to entitle him to an increased share of the surplus profits arising from the lands. Ram Lochun Paul v. Mussamut Brojo Mohinee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 118.

That the value of produce is said generally to have doubled or trebled is not a sufficient reason for doubling the rate of rent, except where new rates of rent are not to be found. The best mode of ascertaining a fair rate is by finding what rate is paid by similar ryots for similar lands. Amanoollah v. Ram Nidhee Ghose and others, 9 W. R., 392.

A plaintiff must be kept to the grounds of enhancement stated in his notice. Hurri Mohun Acharjee v. Okhoy Kumar Bose, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 14.

In a suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rent, where, in spite of the shortness or deficiency of the crops, their value, owing to the additional care and labour expended by the ryot, had increased considerably above that in former years, it was laid down that the Court must try and discover what the ryot was entitled to as a set-off against the increased value of the produce for the additional care and labour expended by him, and whether or not the zemindar was not entitled to some portion of the increased value of the produce in the shape of enhanced rent. Showdaminee Dossee v. Haran Chunder Surma and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 103.

In a suit for enhancement on the ground that the defendant pays a lower rent than that paid by neighbouring ryots of the same class for similar lands, the Judge, instead of decreeing what he considers a fair rate, should find specifically whether the rate claimed by the plaintiff is actually paid by the neighbouring ryots of the same class for similar lands, or what rate is so paid, and decide accordingly. Pelaram Kotal v. Nund Coomar Chuttoram, 6 W. R., Act X R., 45.

In a suit for enhancement on the ground of increase in the value of the produce, the rent will be raised in proportion to such increase only when it is proved to be steady and normal increase. Thakooranee Dosse v. Bishesur Mookerjee, 3 W. R., Act X R., 142.

In a suit for enhancement of the rent paid by shikmee talookdars, the plaintiff is bound to afford data (e.g., the rate paid by intermediate tenants of the same class) upon which the Court can come to a satisfactory conclusion as to what would be a fair and equitable rate to be paid by defendant, plaintiff being competent, under Section 10, Act VI of 1862, to measure the talook and ascertain the assets. Dabee Doss Neogee Chowdhry and others v. Gobind Mohun Ghose and others, 10 W. R., 213.

A middleman is liable to enhancement when the productive powers of his land have been increased otherwise than by the agency or expense of the ryot. Two-thirds was held to be a fair proportion of the surplus profits of the land to be awarded to the landlord. Jadub Chunder Halder v. Ishoree Lushkur, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 74.

When a defendant sets up a deed as exempting him from liability to pay a certain enhanced rent, he is not at liberty to fall back on his right to hold at fair and equitable rates when the Court finds his deed to be a fabrication. Gooroo Doss Ghose v. Sristee Dhur Dey, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 39.

The mode of calculating the increase in the value of produce according to the rule of proportion is by simply taking the former and present value of produce, and not by calculating former and present profits after deducting costs. Ram Taruck Ghose v. Biressur Banerjee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 32.

Nature of proof required to be given by the plaintiff in a suit for enhancement to enable him to start his case. Juggessuree Debia v. Gudadhur Banerjee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 21.

In a suit for enhancement of rent where the expenditure is stationary, and the value of the produce has increased, the proper rule is that the rate of rent to be paid shall bear to the old rate the same proportion as the present value of the produce bears to the old value. Doorganath Shah and others v. Kajim Fakir and others, 9 W. R., 348.

In respect to excess area it was held (Phear, J.) that plaintiff was entitled to a fair and equitable rate; (Bayley, J.) that excess land should, as a part of the same lease, be liable to the same terms as the other land originally given under it. Golam Ali v. Gopaul Lall Tagore, 9 W. R., 65.

The rule of proportion is not applicable where the rates between the present value of the produce of the soil and the former value at the time of the original taking cannot be ascertained, and where it is only necessary to see what is a fair and equitable rate by comparison with the rate paid by the neighbouring ryots for similar land. Jadub Chunder Holdar v. Etburry Lushkur, 3 W. R., Act X R., 160.

Held that a ryot is entitled to deduction of the actual amount paid by him in the shape of canal dues, and also other expenses which are occasioned by bringing the water into the land, together with interest on the capital employed in such expenses and payment of canal dues. Maheeput Singh v. Rajah Lok Indeer Singh, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 179.

Held that though the land may have been improved otherwise than by the exertions of the cultivator, yet the zemindar is not entitled to demand rent beyond what is fair and equitable for the same class of cultivators as the cultivator sought to be enhanced to pay for such improved lands. Jumna Pershad v. Bhowanee and others, 2 Agra Rep., R. A., 1.

In ascertaining the rate of enhancement the Court is not bound to calculate the exact value of the produce and the cost of production, but to estimate the average productive value and cost of production. Huro Mohun Mookerjee v. Thakoor Doss Mundul, 1 W. R., 112.

Where in places adjacent no land of similar description, with similar advantages to the land sought to be enhanced, is found to exist, it is not illegal to decree enhancement at the average of the rates paid for adjacent lands. Nubee Buksh v. Ram Suhai, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 57.

A landlord suing a ryot for a kubuleut is bound to make out the reasonableness of the rent which he demands, and à fortiori that the defendant is holding the particular land specified in his suit. Shib Chunder Bose v. Ram Chund Chund, 9 W. R., 521.

Held that the plea of increased expense on account of irrigation in a suit to contest enhancement cannot for the first time be admitted in special appeal. Held further, that where cultivators of similar stamp were not to be found in the village or its vicinity, plaintiff's rate may be compared with that of another class, making suitable allowance in consideration of the superiority of class attached to him. Kunchun Singh v. Sheoraj, agent of Chowdhry Jaychund, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 7.

A neem-ousut talookdar (whose tenure was created subsequent to the settlement with the ousut talookdar) cannot claim from a howladar holding under a pottah granted to him by Government a higher rent than the rate fixed by Government as the maximum rate after a progressive jumma. Bama Soonduree v. Sheeb Soonduree Dabea, 2 W. R., Act X R., 7.

A landlord is not entitled to enhancement on the ground of improvement of the ryot's tenure by the making of a bund, if he fails to prove that he erected the bund, or that the increased value of the land is owing to the bund. Huro Pershad Roy Chowdhry v. Wooma Tara Debia, 2 W. R., Act X R., 12.

If a ryot sets up a mokurruree pottah as an answer to a landlord's claim to enhance his rent, and fails to prove the pottah, or the pottah produced by him is held to be forged, the landlord is not necessarily entitled to enhance the rent to the full amount claimed, but only to a fair and equitable rate, having regard to the grounds of enhancement. Issur Chunder Doss v. Nittyanund Doss, 6 W. R., Act X R., 70.

In a suit for enhancement upon a specified ground, such ground is the sole point to be tried. If in such a suit the defendant does not ask for an abatement for diminished area the Court ought not to refer to it. It is not always requisite to produce a copy of a notice to enhance. Reazoonissa v. Oomun, 3 W. R., Act X R., 125.

In a suit for a kubuleut at enhanced rent, where the ground relied on is the prevailing rate paid by adjacent occupiers of similar land, such ground cannot be established by the probability or even the certainty that if the rents of the neighbouring occupants were re-adjusted they would come up to the rate claimed. Bridabun Dey v. Bisma Bibee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 117.

When application is made for enhancement of rent of a right-of-occupancy cultivator, care should be taken to compare his rent with that paid by cultivators of the same class in places adjacent, even if not in the same mouzah and cultivating under similar advantages in every way. Ismail Khan v. Bhaudoo, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 26.

Where it is found that the productive powers of a holding have been increased at the expense of the tenant, and it is not found that they have increased otherwise, no grounds of enhancement under Section 17 of Act X of 1859 are shown. Oimda v. Raheem Shere Khan, 3 N. W. R., 138.

In a suit for enhancement of rent on the ground that "the produce and productive powers of the land have increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot," the onus is upon the plaintiff to prove the grounds upon which he seeks enhancement.

In coming to a conclusion as to whether the produce or the productive powers of the land have increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot, the average of four or five years ought to be taken; the increase of an exceptional year should not be the guide. Rajkrishna Mookerjee v. Kalee Churun Dobain, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 122; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 109.

It is not a good ground of enhancement that the holder of a tenure may possibly, having regard to the quality of the land, be able to increase the profits which he derives from it. It must be shown that he is able to increase the profits. Dinonath Dass v. Gugun Chunder Sein, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 274.

In a suit for enhancement of rent upon different grounds, the fact that at the hearing the plaintiff relies on one of the grounds only, and that in the judgment of the first Court the whole case was rested on that ground only, is not a safe warrant for the inference that the other grounds were waived.

Although in a suit for enhancement the plaintiff should not be tied down too strictly to his statements, yet he must to some extent be limited to the case made in the plaint. Bonomalee Churn Mytee v. Shoroop Hootait, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 60.

(f) Procedure.

In a suit for enhancement of rent upon a certain area of land which plaintiff alleged to be mâl, defendant set up that a portion of that area was lakheraj and did not belong to plaintiff's zemindaree. Held that plaintiff was bound to prove that he had received rent for the disputed portion before he could obtain a decree for rent for such portion. Quære,—Is it sufficient that defendant's plea is a mere allegation of lakheraj, or must it be supported by primâ-facie evidence? Mun Mohun Dey v. Sreeram Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 285.

In a suit for enhancement against a ryot having a right of occupancy, if the notice served is found to be bad in law the Judge has no power under the Procedure Code to remand the case with a view to the ascertainment by local enquiry of the area of the land in dispute and the rates prevailing in its neighbourhood. Pran Huree Doss v. Parbutty Churn Mojoomdar, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 227.

Points out the procedure to be adopted by a Court in a suit for enhancement of rent, when the defendant pleads that he is a shamilat talookdar, that is to say, a talookdar protected under the provisions of Section 5, Regulation VIII of 1793. Sharoda Prosunno Mookerjee v. Bisseen Beharee Bose, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 71.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, when the defendant objected in his grounds of appeal that the rates of the village in which his land was situated were lower than the pergunnah rates,—Held that the Judge had no right to take the report of an Ameen who did not give credit to defendant's witnesses on account of something he heard in the neighbourhood, but that he ought himself to have examined those witnesses. James Tweedie v. Poono Chunder Gangoolee and others, 12 W. R., 138.

Where a ryot brings a suit to contest the right to enhancement under Section 13 of Act X of 1859, it is not necessary to plead in terms that he held at a fixed rate from before the Decennial Settlement. At the same time parties should use the exact terms of the pleas to assist which the presumption laid down in Section 4 of Act X of 1859 had been created. Nomutollah v. Gobind Chunder Dutt and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 2.

A ryot who contests his landlord's right to demand enhanced rent, but fails to prove his own right to exemption, may nevertheless ask the Court to fix the proper enhanced rent. Sheikh Golamee v. Imam Buksh, 2 W. R., Act X R., 91.

In a suit for arrears at an enhanced rate, the defendant having successfully pleaded a mokurruree pottah,—Held that the plaintiff could not in this suit obtain a decree for the arrears at the mokurruree rate, as the defendants had not admitted any arrears. Kashee Chunder Chowdhry v. Kartick Chunder Paul, 2 W. R., Act X R., 56.

The bringing of a suit by a landlord to recover arrears of rent at enhanced rates under Act X of 1859, cannot annul the former decree of a competent Court declaring the ryot's holding to be liable to enhancement, by entitling the ryot, on proof of payment of uniform rent for twenty years, to claim the benefit of the presumption under Section 4. Rakhal Doss Bose v. Sheikh Gholam Surwur, 2 W. R., Act X R., 69.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, where plaintiff's right to assess certain lands alleged to be in excess of ghatwalee lands held by defendants was disputed by the latter,—Held that as the right which plaintiff claimed had never been exercised up to the time of the suit, it should first be determined in a civil suit. Jugg Jeebun Lall v. Rughoonath Kopatte and another, 10 W. R., 383.

A suit for enhancement of rent of land situated in different jurisdictions cannot be entertained unless it is first determined, under Section 20, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), in which district or sub-district the greater portion of the lands lie. Such suit must be brought in the Court of the district in which the greater part of the lands is situate. Moheah Chunder Sircar and others v. Bholanath Raha Gomastah and others, 8 W. R., 506.

In a suit to recover a kubuleut at enhanced rates for excess lands, where defendant filed a pottah on which were endorsed the numbers of certain daghs of a measurement made by the zemindar, and composing a mokurruree tenure, and also pleaded that part of the excess land was lakheraj, it was held in regard to the land claimed as lakheraj, that plaintiff's remedy lay in a suit for resumption and assessment; and with regard to the land covered by the pottah that defendant was entitled to hold the whole of the lands comprised within the daghs, notwithstanding that a recent measurement showed a greater extent of area than had been formally ascertained. Modee Haddin Jowadrar v. F. Sandes, 12 W. R., 439.

In a suit for a kubuleut at enhanced rents, where the defence is that the tenure is kaemee, and not liable to enhancement, the Court ought to decide the question of liability before going into that of the rates. Ghyrullah Mundul v. Kishorenath Koondoo, 5 W. R., Act X R., 60.

The ryot's omission to object to the fairness of the rates when contesting notice of enhancement in a former suit does not preclude him from raising the objection in the present suit. Puddo Lochun Bhadooree v. Chundernath Roy, 5 W. R., Act X R., 51.

In a suit for enhancement the first Court deputed an Ameen to enquire into the rates, and on his report gave a decree to the plaintiff. The lower Appellate Court disallowed the Ameen's report, on the ground that by itself it was not good evidence of neighbouring rates, and, reversing the decision of the first Court, dismissed the suit for want of proof. Held on special appeal that the lower Appellate Court should have attached greater weight to the Ameen's report, or should have at least allowed the plaintiff an opportunity to adduce his proof of rates. Guddadhur Banerjee v. Nund Lal Biswas, 5 W. R., Act X R., 54.

In a suit to recover arrears of rent at enhanced rates, when the question of the liability of the tenure to enhancement has been put in issue and fully tried, a decree may be given declaring the tenure liable to enhancement, though notice of enhancement is not proved.

In a suit for enhancement, when the defence is that the land is lakheraj, the plaintiff should prove that the defendant has paid rent. If the land has been in fact held rent free, the validity or invalidity of the lakheraj tenure cannot be tried in such a suit; that question should be tried in a suit to resume or assess. Huryhur Mookerjee v. Goomunee Kazee, Marsh., 523.

In a suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rate of rent, if the defendant himself calls upon the Court to enter into a consideration of what rent less than that asked for is fair and equitable, he cannot afterwards complain that the Court was wrong in entering upon that enquiry. Umbika Churn Mundul v. Ramdhone Mohurrir, 11 W. R., 35.

In a suit for arrears of rent at enhanced rates after notice, in which defendants did not appear, but plaintiffs' witnesses deposed to the village being a ghatwallee one,—Held that plaintiff had called all the assessable lands mâl lands, and the case could not proceed in the form in which it was made. R. Watson and Co. v. Nidhoo Digwar, 10 W. R., 87.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, where defendants plead a mokurruree lease of a date subsequent to the Decennial Settlement, but filed no pottah, the existence of the tenure must be proved by evidence, dakhilas, or possession under colour of these for twenty years not entitling them to exemption. R. Watson and others v. Aunjunna Dossee and others, 10 W. R., 107.

Where a ryot relies on a mokurruree pottah as protection against enhancement, he is bound to prove his special title; mere possession and payment of rent for a number of years cannot bar a farmer's right to enhance where such a title is pleaded. Watson and Co. v. Sham Lall Pundah, 10 W. R., 73.

In a suit to contest a notice of enhancement, on the allegation of a holding under an istemraree pottah, if the plaintiff fails to prove such a holding, the Judge need not try whether the ground of enhancement existed, or whether the enhancement was fair. Gunga Persad Singh v. Ramloll Singh, W. R., F. B., 59.

The holder of a specific share in an estate not regularly partitioned may sue for enhancement of his share of the rent. A slight irregularity in the drawing up of a notice of enhancement cannot affect the plaintiff's right to a declaratory order reciting his right to enhance at some future time on service of a fresh notice. Ram Lochun Dutt v. Petumber Paul, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 111.

In a suit for enhancement, if the defendant relies not on the fact that he had held at an unvaried rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement, but upon a pottah granted long after that time, his own defence rebuts any presumption which might arise from a twenty years' uniform payment of rent. Ramkishen Sircar v. Meeah Deler Ali, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 36.

Where a suit for enhancement of rent is decided by a Deputy-Collector upon the issue whether notice has been served or not, without any question of the right to enhancement arising, the appeal lies to the Collector. Omrao Singh v. Toofanee Roy, 12 W. R., 446.

Where a suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rate of rent was dismissed on the ground that it was not for enhancement of plaintiff's share of the rent, but for a kubuleut at an enhanced rate for the rent of a specific portion of land, although plaintiff's agent in his examination deposed that the suit had reference not to a specific portion of land, but to a certain jumma,—Held that the Court below might permit plaintiff to amend or explain his plaint, or, if he had asked too much, might give him what he was entitled to under the law. Poorno Chunder Roy v. W. Stalkartt, 10 W. R., 362.

In order to bar enhancement of rent, proof of uniform payment must be shown, if not for every year in the twenty years, at least for the greater portion of that period, and for years in the earlier, as well as in the later, portion of the same. Surnomoyee Dassee v. Sham Mundul, 9 W. R., 270.

The objection that the documents relied on by the defendants in support of their mokurruree title contain no expressions importing the hereditary character of the alleged tenures, was held to be one not open to the plaintiff in a suit for enhancement, where the pleadings admitted the existence of the tenure and the lawful occupation of the defendant, and the only question was whether the tenures were held at a variable, or at a fixed and invariable rent. Even if the objection were open to the plaintiff, it was held that it could not prevail against the evidence which the record afforded that for upwards of a century the talooks in question had been treated as hereditary, and as such had descended from father to son, and been the subject of purchase. Gopal Lall Tagore v. Tilluck Chunder Rai, 3 W. R., P. C., 1.

All the pleas under which a ryot can resist a notice of enhancement ought to be considered in the suit he brings to resist the notice. Puddolochun Bhudoori v. Chunder Nauth Roy, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 171.

When a ryot sues to contest a notice of enhancement, although the onus is on the landlord to prove his grounds of enhancement, yet the Court, instead of giving the plaintiff a decree, merely upon an Ameen's report of the defendant having overstated the area held by the plaintiff, ought to find clearly how far the evidence afforded by the Ameen's report supported the defendant's special grounds. Dinnonath Bose Mullick v. Juggessur Mundul, 1 W. R., 155.

In a suit to recover arrears of rent at enhanced rates the onus of proving both the quantity and the rates is upon the plaintiff, and not upon the defendant; and when the rates are to be fixed by a Court of Justice the plaintiff is not entitled to interest and damages, on the ground that the defendant did not pay the enhanced rates demanded by the plaintiff. Golam Ali v. Gopal Lall Tagore, 1 W. R., 56.

In a suit for enhancement it is not necessary to make an alleged purchaser of a mokurruree tenure a formal defendant under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859, when the transfer is not proved. Kanchunissa Khatoon v. Khajah Abdool Gunnee, 1 W. R., 171.

A variation of rent from change of currency only is not a variation rebutting the presumption arising from uniform payment for more than twenty years. Ram Coomar Mookerjee v. Rugoonath Mundul, 1 W. R., 356. See also 1 W. R., p. 248.

In a suit for enhancement of rent which was dismissed in the lower Court, where the sole issue raised was the genuineness of a pottah pleaded by the defendant,—Held that an entirely new plea of misconstruction of the terms of the lease could not be admitted in special appeal, when the facts on which alone it could be supported had not been found in the lower Court. Satooram Mojoomdar and others v. Preonath Banerjee, 10 W. R., 424.

Held that a cultivator is not affected by a condition entered in the village administration paper, to which he was no party. Hakeem Syad Mehur Ali v. Kunhyee and another, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 13.

In a suit for arrears of rent at enhanced rates, if plaintiff asks for rates admitted by defendant he must abide by those intended to be admitted; and if he desire to take advantage of the finding of the lower Court he must submit to the whole finding taken altogether. Soorendronath Roy v. Bhyrub Mundle, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 462.

In a suit for enhancement for rent on the ground that defendant holds land in excess of what he pays rent for, it is plaintiff's duty to show that the lands in question are all included within the tenure of the defendant, but that the latter has been paying rent for a quantity less than the area of those lands. Shaikh Ahmed Hossein v. Mussamut Bundee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 91.

In a suit after notice for a kubuleut at enhanced rates, said to be those prevailing in the adjacent villages for similar lands held by the same class of ryots as defendant, the evidence of seven occupant ryots of the neighbourhood, though not a majority, was held to be legally sufficient to make a case which defendant was bound to rebut. Sarroop Manna v. Bonomally Churn Mytee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 240.

In a suit for arrears of rent at an enhanced rate, where defendants pleaded protection under a mokurruree pottah of old date, which had been lost long ago, and also pleaded the presumption arising from uniform payment for more than twenty years, —Held that the defendants' inability to adduce sufficient proof of that pottah was no reason why they should not be allowed an opportunity to prove the uniform payment pleaded. Nilmoney Singh Deo v. Anunt Ram Putnaik, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 393.

The plaint in a suit for enhancement is not a substitute sanctioned by law for the notice of intended enhancement required to be given by Section 13 of Act X of 1859. Sobha Mahton v. Paburoo, 2 N. W. R., 310.

In a suit for a kubuleut at enhanced rates after notice under Section 13, Act X of 1859, where the defendant stood by, and though raising a good many objections on other points raised no question as to rates, their conduct and pleadings were held to afford a fair presumption of admission of the plaintiff's claim as to the rates sued for. Thakoor Dutt Singh v. Gopal Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 4.

(g) Decree.

In a suit for enhancement the omission of the Ameen or Judge to appropriate to every portion of the land which varies in quality its own rent is no ground of special appeal. Gooroodoss Roy v. Hurronath Roy, W. R., 1864, 61.

In decreeing enhanced rent it is necessary to specify distinctly on which of the grounds stated in the plaint enhancement is allowed. Gunga Narayan Das v. Saroda Mohun Roy Chowdhry, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 230; S. C., 12 W. R., 30.

The liability of a tenure to enhancement of rent, when decided by a competent Court, is a res adjudicata. Sreedhessury Chowdhry v. Mudun Koowar Jha, 1 W. R., 128.

In a suit for enhancement the first Court dismissed the suit on the ground that the defendant had proved a uniform payment of rent, and that certain old pottahs adduced by him were genuine. The Judge in appeal held the pottahs to be forgeries, and reversed the decree, omitting to decide whether the defendant was protected from enhancement by his long holding at a uniform rate. Held that this adjudication was defective. Sreenath Doss Moonshee v. Shib Kristo Bose, 1 W. R., 159.

The question of the right to enhance having been decided in the plaintiff's favour in a former suit, must be considered as res adjudicata in this suit for enhanced rent. Bhuggobutty Debia v. Ram Kanaye Laha, 1 W. R., 167.

In a suit for enhancement, the Judge is not wrong in confining his judgment to the right to enhance, without decreeing the plaintiff's claim at the rate admitted by the defendant. Ram Kumar Mookerjee v. Rugoonath Mundul, 1 W. R., 356.

Held that the Judge's decision was defective, inasmuch as he had failed to adjudicate upon two important pleas, which impugned the lower Court's finding as to the mode of comparing similar and adjacent fields held by the same class of ryots on the ground that they also were served with notices of enhancement; and that the appellants, zemindars, have constructed wells and increased the capabilities of the soil. Shama Nund v. Ramanath Pandy, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 1.

In fixing the prevailing rate of rent of a talook, it is an error to strike an average between the statements of witnesses on opposite sides; the proper plan is to ascertain on which evidence reliance can be placed. Rowshun Bibee v. Chunder Madhub Kur, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 177.

A decree for enhancement of rent can have no retrospective effect. Chunder Mun Chowdry v. Sree Mun Chowdry, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 119.

In a suit for enhancement of rent after notice under Section 13, Act X of 1859 (such notice not treating the defendant as a ryot having a right of occupancy) if the defendant claims to be protected from enhancement otherwise than under Section 17, it is for him to prove, or at least to allege, that he has a right of occupancy, before an issue can be received under the section last mentioned. If a defendant in such a suit has no right of occupancy, and the Judge considers the rate claimed represents the fair value of the land, he should give the plaintiff a decree, notwithstanding a very large number of ancient ryots having right of occupancy at less rates. Duff, W. C. v. Sowdagur Sahoo Jotedur, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 255.

(h) Rulings under Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.).

A suit for enhancement of rent under Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.) will not lie in respect of lands occupied by buildings. A landlord who allows his lessee to invest capital in erecting buildings on lands let for cultivation, and raises no objection for a considerable number of years, will not be allowed to disturb the holding. The fact of buildings having been permitted without objection to stand on lands for a considerable number of years is primâ-facie proof that the land had been originally leased for building purposes. Braja Nath Kundee Chowdry v. A. Stewart, 8 B. L. R., Ap., 51 ; and 16 S. W. R., C. R., 216.

Section 29, Act VIII (B. C.) of 1869, does not apply to a suit for a fractional share of certain arrears of rent after determination of an issue as to the shares of the parties. Hurish Chunder Dutt v. Sreemutty Jugodumba Dassee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 61.

The words "District Judge," in Section 102, Act VIII (Bengal Code) of 1869, mean the Judge of the district, and not any subordinate Judge to whom the case may be transferred for disposal; and an appeal therefore lies under that section in a case tried by a subordinate Judge. It is not necessary to admit an intervenor in a rent suit under Act VIII (Bengal Code) of 1869, if his interest cannot be injured by a decree therein. Issur Chunder Sein v. Bipun Beharry Roy, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 132.

A suit under Section 30, Act VIII (B. C.) of 1869, against a gomashta to obtain accounts, after the agency has determined, must be brought within a year from such determination.

The proviso in that section refers to suits for money, and under that proviso, where a fraudulent account has been given in by the agent, concealing the fact of the receipt of certain moneys, the zemindar has one year from the discovery of the fraud to bring his suit for such money. Jan Ali Chowdry v. Ishan Chunder Sein, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 149.

A gomashta holding a written authority from his employer, and suing for rent in the name and on behalf of the latter, should be admitted as the recognized agent of such employer within the meaning of Section 13, Act VIII (B. C.) of 1869. Ram Lall Kurjurma v. Ram Tarun Koondoo, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 254.

A suit to make the defendant liable for compensation in the shape of rent for the land which he held in the name of his servant, is not a suit for rent under Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.), and is subject to the six years' limitation prescribed by Clause 16, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859. Mussamut Kishenbutty Misrain v. Mr. Roberts, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 287.

The subordinate Judge had before him the fact of a kubuleut having been given in the year 1200 at a certain rent, and being the Judge who had to decide upon the evidence in the case, and what inference was to be drawn from it, he said that it appeared to him that the tenure originated at that time, and that consequently the case did not come under the presumption (provided by Section 4, Act VIII of 1869, B. C.) of uniform rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement, so as to bring the ryot within Section 3, which entitles ryots holding at uniform rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement to receive pottahs at those rates. The High Court sitting in special appeal could not say that the Judge was wrong in law in coming to that conclusion. Mahomed Manoo Bhooyah v. Shaikh Mahomed Asanoollah Chowdry, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 349.

A special appeal was held to lie under Section 102, Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.), in a suit for rent below Rs. 100 in which the question of right to enhance had been determined. R. Watson and Co. v. Ram Dhun Ghose, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 495.

A suit can be brought under Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.) for arrears of rent due on account of land used for building purposes. Brojonath Koondoo Chowdry v. Gopeenath Shaha, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 183.

In this case the Judge wrongly dismissed plaintiff's suit, on the ground that no notice had been served on defendant, mistaking the nature of the suit, which was not one for enhancement, but to recover rent at rates previously settled, no notice being required in the latter case. But as the value of the suit was under Rs. 100 the High Court could not interfere, there being no appeal to it under Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.), Section 102. Goluck Chunder Dutt v. Meah Ruja Mijee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 119.

No appeal lies under Section 102, Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.), from the order of a District Judge on an application connected with the sale of a tenure in execution of a decree for arrears of rent below Rs. 100. Deb Coomaree Dassee v. Gungadhur Dutt, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 189.

Payment into Court by a judgment-debtor, within 15 days from the date of decree, of rent, interest, and costs, with a protest as to the sum improperly charged against him as interest, is a sufficient payment, under Section 52, Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.), to save him from liability to be ejected from his tenure. Shreesteedhur Dey v. Doorga Narain Naig, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 462.

D. C. S., the zemindar, brought a suit against B., a ryot, for recovery of arrears of rent, value below Rs. 100. B. set up in defence that the rent was not payable to D. C. S., but to N. C. A., the mokurrureedar. N. C. A., who claimed under a mokurruree title, and alleged that he was in the receipt of the rents from the ryot, was made a party under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859. The Moonsiff passed a decree in favour of the plaintiff. An appeal by N. C. A., which was heard and decided by the subordinate Judge, on reference by the District Judge, the decree of the first Court was reversed and the suit dismissed. On appeal to the High Court,—Held that N. C. A. was properly made a party defendant to the suit, and that he could prefer an appeal from the decree of the Court of first instance, and that the Court of Appeal could on his appeal set aside the whole decree.

A special appeal lay to the High Court; the words "District Judge," in Section 102 of Act VIII of 1869 (B. C.), do not include a subordinate Judge to whom, under Act XVI of 1868, or Act VI of 1871, the District Judge may make over appeals filed in his Court.

The only issue to be tried was whether the relation of landlord and tenant subsisted between D. C. S. and B. Dayal Chand Sahoy v. Nabin Chandra Adhikari, 8 B. L. R., 180; and 16 S. W. R., C. R., 235.

(j) Rulings under Madras Act VIII of 1865.

A suit to recover the value of goods distrained for rent under Madras Act VIII of 1865, and forcibly carried away from the person distraining, may be maintained in a Court of Small Causes under Section 27 of the Act. The suit may be brought either by the landlord or the person authorized to distrain. A petition and summons and order after hearing the parties and their evidence appear to be the fitting mode of exercising the jurisdiction. Vadamalai Thiruvana Tevar v. Caruppen Servai, 4 Mad. Rep., 401.

By Madras Act VIII of 1865, an appeal from the decree of the Collector lies to the Civil Court. The Civil Judge has no power to refer an appeal under the Act to a Principal Sudder Ameen for disposal. Olaga Sundaram Pillay v. Multian Chetty, 4 Mad. Rep., 227.

A suit brought by the plaintiff, a zemindar, to recover mesne profit from the defendant who held under the preceding zemindar, whose possession of the zemindary during the period included in the suit was declared to be wrongful, was dismissed by the Civil Judge on the ground that puttahs and muchilkas had not been exchanged between the plaintiff and defendant under Section 7, Madras Act VIII of 1865.

Held that the cause of action did not arise out of the relation of landlord and tenant, the ground of suit being that the defendants were wrongfully in the enjoyment of the villages as against the plaintiff, and liable to account for all the profits received during the period of such enjoyment.

Held, further, that the period of limitation applicable to such a claim is six years before suit. Rani Kattama Nachiar v. Subbarama Aiyan, 4 Mad. Rep., 302.

The definition of the word "landholders" in Madras Act VIII of 1865, Section 1, includes the poligar of an unsettled polliem. Such a landholder is therefore entitled to sue under the Act to compel the acceptance of puttahs by his tenants. Chanki Gounden v. Venkataramanjina, 5 Mad. Rep., 208.

In a suit before the Collector under Madras Act VIII of 1865, brought by a zemindar to compel his tenants, the defendants, to accept a puttah at enhanced rates of assessment, on the ground that he had at his own expense repaired a tank and rendered the land formerly cultivated as dry land capable of being cultivated as wet land,—Held that the plaintiff could not maintain the suit, inasmuch as he had not obtained the sanction of the Collector to raise the rent, and such a condition was a condition precedent to such a suit.

Semble,—That the right of the plaintiff to recover was dependent on the further condition that an additional revenue was levied on him consequent upon the improvement made. Kattasawmy v. Sandumada Naik, 5 Mad. Rep., 294.

A Collector has no power to set aside the decision of a Head Assistant Collector when the latter is exercising the powers conferred on a Collector by Madras Act VIII of 1865. Rajaram Lala v. Kulizappen, 5 Mad. Rep., 129.

A Civil Court, in hearing an appeal from the decision of a Collector under Madras Act VIII of 1865, must be guided by the Civil Procedure Code, and the judgment of the Civil Court may be reviewed under Section 376 of the Code. The order granting a review is final.

Semble,—The terms of Section 57 of Act VIII of 1865 are wide enough to justify a Collector in treating as ex parte a defendant not appearing on the day to which the hearing of the suit may have been adjourned under Section 66 of the Act. Subburamaniya Pillay v. Perumal Chetty, 4 Mad. Rep., 251.

Madras Act VIII of 1865, Section 6, imposes upon village kurnums the duty of signing and registering puttahs and moochilkas exchanged under the Act. Where such puttahs and moochilkas were not signed or registered by the kurnum,—

Held that a suit for rent may be maintained, founded upon the moochilka, the signature and registration by the kurnum not being intended to be a condition of the right to sue. Venkata Subba Ram v. Sesha Reddy, 4 Mad. Rep., 243.

A suit for rent is maintainable when a puttah in the form required by Section 4, Act VIII of 1865 (Madras), and such as the defendant was bound to accept, has been tendered to the defendant, although no attempt has been made by a summary suit before the Collector to enforce its acceptance.

Under Madras Act VIII of 1865 a landlord may compel a tenant to accept a puttah for palmyra trees. Multusamy Mudaby v. Sudagopa Gramaly, 4 Mad. Rep., 398.

Section 7 of Madras Act VIII of 1865 applies to cases where the landlord is the exclusive proprietor of both the mélwarum and the mirásiwarum, and the tenant has no saleable interest in the land. Ramasami Aien v. Manjeya Pillai, 6 Mad. Rep., 61.

Before a dispute regarding the rate of rent can be decided in a suit brought under Section 9 of Madras Act VIII of 1865, merely on the ground of what appears to be just, the Court must consider the reasonableness of the rate according to the local usage, and when such usage is not ascertainable, according to the rates for neighbouring lands of similar description and quality. Kristna Rán v. Máhadéva Mudali; Kristna Rán v. Nyniappa Mudali; Kristna Rán and another v. Solayappa Mudali; Kristna Rán and another v. Chinna Subbu Mudali; Kristna Rán and another v. Kristna Mudali, 6 Mad. Rep., 204.

The provision in Madras Act VIII of 1865, Section 2, Rul. 3,—"And when such usage is not clearly ascertainable, then according to the rates established or paid for neighbouring lands of similar description and quality,"—does not admit of rates of rent being determined on an average of varying rates paid for neighbouring lands; but it does not require, for determination of the proper rate of rent for particular lands, the existence of a fixed general rate of rent for neighbouring lands of similar description and quality. The words "according to the rates established or paid" import clearly the power to determine the rate of rent in accordance with either the general rate at which neighbouring lands of a similar kind are let, or where the rents of such lands vary, the rate at which rents had for any time been actually paid by some of the tenants of such lands. Máhá Singavastha Ayyar and another v. Agopálá Ayyan and twenty-one others, 6 Mad. Rep., 239.

A petition sent by post is not a substitute for the presentation of a plaint as required by Section 50 of Madras Act VIII of 1865. Moparti Pitchi Naida v. Vuppalee Kondamma, 6 Mad. Rep., 136.

Neither the Rent Recovery Act nor the Regulations operate to extend a tenancy beyond the period of its duration secured by the express or implied terms of the contract creating it. Chockalinga Pillai v. Vythealinga Pundara Sunnady, 6 Mad. Rep., 164.

Neither Regulation XXX of 1802 nor Madras Act VIII of 1865 operate to make a tenancy established by ordinary pattah and muchalka of a permanent nature, by attaching to it the condition that it should be indeterminable as long as the stipulated rent was paid. Foulkes Jessi v. S. Rajahrathna Mudali, 6 Mad. Rep., 175.

Suit brought by plaintiff, as receiver of the Tanjore Rajah's property, in April 1869, for rent for Faslis 1272, 73, 74, and 75. At the first hearing it was objected that the suit was barred as to the claim for Faslis 1272-74, by Section 1, Clause 8, of the Limitation Act. Against that it was urged that a suit had been pending for upwards of two years, and that time ought to be allowed under Section 14. The suit in question was brought in May, 1866, by one Surfogi, who had assumed the management of the property, for the same cause of action against the present first defendant, and dismissed in November, 1868, because the plaintiff had failed to produce any evidence. Before November, 1868, the title assumed by Surfogi was set aside by the High Court, the present plaintiff was appointed, and applied to the Court to make him a supplemental plaintiff, but his application was neglected. Held (affirming the judgment of the Civil Judge that the claim was barred) that it was quite open to the present plaintiff at his election either to affirm or disaffirm Surfogi's contract; and that, having elected to affirm it, he should have been admitted into the former suit, but that in the present action he is in this dilemma—coming in as successor to Surfogi and suing upon the obligation created by his contract, the plaintiff is barred by res judicata. Coming in paramount to him, and upon a discordant title, Surfogi's proceedings were no interruption to the period of limitation, because then Surfogi is not the person through whom he claims.

As to Fasli 1275, it was objected that pottahs and muchalkas were not exchanged as required by Act VIII of 1865, which came into force on 1st January, 1866. Held (reversing the decision of the Civil Judge) that Act VIII of 1865 was inapplicable to the case.

The general principle is that rights already acquired shall not be affected by the retro-action of a new law. Rules as to Procedure are not exception, but the question here was not one of processual but of material law. G. Lee Morris v. Sambamarthi Rayar, 6 Mad. Rep., 122.

Certain landholders applied to the Collector for warrants to be put into possession of lands under Section 41 of Madras Act VIII of 1865. The warrants were issued, but certain ryots appealed under Section 43 by presenting ordinary petitions. In disposing of these petitions, the Collector referred certain questions to arbitrators named by the parties, and then made an order in accordance with the award. The Civil Court heard an appeal from the order. Held that the Civil Court had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. Madai Thalavay Kummarasamy Mudhajur v. Nallakanun Tevan, 5 Mad. Rep., 289.

The continuing of offensive trades in premises already used is not an offence under Section 114 of Madras Act X of 1865. The section only applies to the fresh dedication of premises to certain offensive trades. 5 Mad. Rep., Rul. XVI.

22.—Rulings under Act X of 1859.

Act X of 1859 provides for two classes of ryots only, viz., those who have held and cultivated the land for a period of twelve years, and those who have held at fixed rates from the time of the Permanent Settlement; it makes no provision for ryots who have held since the time of the Permanent Settlement at varying rates. Denobundhoo Dey v. Ramdhone Roy, 9 W. R., 522.

Suits for rent under Act X of 1859 are not summary suits, but to all intents and purposes regular suits, only tried by Collectors. Nobo Tarince and others v. J. J. Gray, 11 W. R., 7.

A decision in an Act X case is binding on a Civil Court. Woomesh Chunder Sootee v. Ram Chunder Mowree, 4 W. R., Act X R., 40.

The procedure under Act X of 1859 does not provide for the entertainment of a second application to set aside an ex-parte decree after the first application has been dismissed for default. Suderooddeen v. Huronath Sein, 8 W. R., 87.

As a general rule, a suit cannot be brought in a Civil Court to enforce a decree of a Revenue Court under Act X of 1859. Such decrees can be enforced only by execution, and the limitation for proceedings to execute them is defined by Act X itself. Where a defendant agreed to pay the amount of a decree under Act X by two instalments, and the remedy provided for the enforcement of the contract in the event of the defendant making default was the execution of the decree, and not a suit in the Civil Court,—Held that a suit would not lie in the Small Cause Court to recover the amount of the second instalment. Aghore Chunder Mookerjee v. Woomasoondery Debia, 7 W. R., 216.

A claim for huq-i-zemindary is not cognizable under Act X of 1859. Jowahran Lall v. Sultan Ali, 12 W. R., 214.

Lands used for building purposes situated in a town are not liable to enhancement of rent under Act X of 1859. Kailas Chandra Sirdar v. Doorga Dass Turafdar, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 284.

The plaintiff filed a suit for rent at an enhanced rate under Act X of 1859. The Court of first instance dismissed the case on the ground that the defendants had shown that the tenure was not liable to enhancement. On appeal to the Judge, the plaintiff's suit was dismissed on the ground that he had not proved service of notice, but a declaratory decree was given that the tenure was liable to enhancement. Narakant Mozoomdar

v. Rajah Barodakant Roy Bahadoor, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 31.

The question of jurisdiction cannot be raised in appeal for the first time, unless it appear upon the face of the pleadings, or the admission of the parties, or upon the evidence, that the suit will not lie.

Bastu land (land used for sites of houses) situated in a town cannot form the subject of suits under Act X of 1859 for enhancement. Bastu land which is the site of a house occupied by a ryot engaged in cultivating the surrounding lands, does fall under the provision of Act X of 1859.

When it did not appear on the face of the pleadings, or on the evidence, under what kind of bastu the land in dispute fell, and no plea to the jurisdiction of the Court under Act X of 1859 had been taken in the Courts below, the High Court would not remand the case to enquire under which class of bastu land the subject-matter of the suit fell, nor entertain the point of jurisdiction in appeal. Naimudda Jowardar v. R. Scott Moncrieff, Agra Rep., A. C., 283.

A suit will not lie, under Act X of 1859, to recover rent wrongfully collected by a person not the agent of the landholder, and without his authority; but such suit must be brought in the Civil Court. Seetul Kristo Roy v. Gopeenath Shah and others, Marsh., 465.

The proceedings of a settlement officer under Section 3, Act XIV of 1863, are not judgments or orders appealable to the Judge, or specially to this Court under Act X of 1859. Ahmed Aly Khan v. Nubeea and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 239.

A plaintiff ousted by the real defendant is not barred from suing in the Civil Court, until the real defendant and the zemindar defendant settle any dispute between them by a suit under Act X of 1859. Tara Chand Dutt v. Oofunissa Bibee, 5 W. R., Act X R., 52.

A zemindar cannot sue to set aside a tenant's mokurruree lease when once that mokurruree (in a suit between them under Act X of 1859) has been upheld, and a claim for enhanced rent dismissed in consequence. But the zemindar can sue to eject a party holding on an alleged mokurruree whom he has never recognized as a tenant, but treated as a trespasser. Shah Unwar Ali v. Nund Kishore Pershad, 1 W. R., 222.

Suits under Act X of 1859 must be preferred in the revenue office of the district, or when a subdivision of the district has been placed under a Deputy Collector, in the revenue office of the subdivision in which the cause of action arose. The authority given to the Collector to withdraw any suit from any Deputy Collector and try it himself, or refer it to another Deputy Collector, does not cure the defect caused by the institution of the suit in a Court other than that of the subdivision in which the cause of action arose. Purna Chandra Chatterjee v. C. Macarthur, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 366; 12 W. R., 310.

A suit for ejectment does not lie under Act X of 1859, unless there has been an illegal ejectment by the party entitled to receive the rents, and not when the contention is between two rival ryots. Amjid Ali Khan v. Gholam Hyder Khan, 1 W. R., 313.

A suit to assess land and recover rents at an enhanced rate must be dismissed if not brought under some section of Act X of 1859. Sreedhur Jha v. Dabee Dutt, 9 W. R., 170.

Act X of 1859 is not applicable to a dispute between two ryots concerning the same land. It can only apply where the zemindar or his personal servants have taken some actual part in the dispossession. Modhoosoodun Chuckerbutty v. Nufur Bawal, 1 W. R., 196.

A suit by a zemindar against a putneedar for zemindary dâk charges, under Act VIII of 1862 (B. C.), for which the latter is liable under his kubuleut, is not cognizable under Act X of 1859. Ruttunmonee Dossee and others v. Jotendromohun Tagore, 6 W. R., Act X R., 31.

Act X of 1859 makes no provision for a case where, before the sale of the distrained property, because the defaulter paid the debt demanded by the landlord, the crops distrained and alleged by the plaintiff to be his were made over to the ryot, who, the plaintiff states, has misappropriated them. In such a case a suit for damages only can be brought in the Civil Court. Sheikh Goreeboollah v. Sheikh Syefoollah, 7 W. R., 41.

A suit for a kubuleut for the payments of the rents of a fishery is cognizable under Act X of 1859. Koylash Chunder Dey v. Joy Narain Jalooah and others, 7 W. R., 193.

An allegation of fraud made in a plaint, the plaintiff meaning thereby nothing more than that the defendant had obtained something to which, in the plaintiff's opinion, he was not entitled, does not give a Civil Court jurisdiction to interfere in a case under Act X of 1859. Juggobundhoo Samunt v. Gyanendur Nath and others, 8 W. R., 290.

Where house-rent includes the rent of the ground upon which the house stands, and the ground-rent can be separated from the other items forming the aggregate of the house-rent, the claim to the extent of the ground-rent may be cognizable by the Revenue Court under Act X of 1859. Ram Churn Singh Kettree v. Meadhun Durjee, 8 W. R., Act X R., 90.

Tenants, intermediate between proprietors and ryots, are subject to the jurisdiction of the Collector under Act X of 1859, which contemplates under-tenants as distinct from ryots, and contains provisions relating to both classes. Dhunput Singh v. Gooman Singh and others, 9 W. R., P. C., 3.

Act X of 1859 applies where rent is reserved in kind, just the same as in the case of suits for rent in money, but not where articles are to be delivered under a separate agreement unconnected with the question of rent. Bhubo Soondery Debia v. Nawab Syud Jynul Abdin, 8 W. R., Act X R., 393.

The jurisdiction of a Collector under Act X of 1859 is not affected by the nature of the defence set up.

Section 97, Act VIII of 1859, does not apply to suits under Act X of 1859. Doyal Chunder Ghose v. Dwarkanath Mitter, W. R., F. B., 1862, 47.

The incident of a deposit gives a tenant no right to institute a civil action to set aside a sale made in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859. Ram Coomar Haldar and others v. Brojo Coomar Chowdhry, 6 W. R., Act X. R., 85.

A. obtained a decree against B. for arrears of rent. C. was an under-tenant of B., under an ijara lease. In executing A.'s decree against B., the Collector sold the "rights and profits of the debts due for rent" from C. to B., for the years 1273-4-5. A.

became the purchaser in a suit brought by D., as assignee of A., of rents alleged to be due for the years 1273-4-5. Held that, for the purposes of Act X of 1859, rent is moveable property; and that the Collector, therefore, was competent to effect the sale to A. Mahes Chandra Chuttapadhya v. Guruprasud Roy, 5 B. L. R., 155; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 401.

Held, in a case under Act X of 1859, in which the plaintiff had appeared at the preliminary hearing when the issues were framed, and where he was not required to appear in person on the day of the trial, that the presence of the plaintiff's pleader and revenue agent was an appearance within the meaning of the law, having reference to Section 20, Act XX of 1865. Sonatan Dass v. Kaleepersaud Dass, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 146.

The purchaser of a decree under Act X of 1859 is entitled to ask the holder for a power of attorney to proceed with the execution. Brojo Coomar Mullick v. Mon Mohinee Debia, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 55.

There is no general provision in Act X of 1859 for a review of judgment, though in certain specified cases the Revenue Courts are authorized to order a re-hearing. Mahomed Suckee and others v. Musamut Ahmudee Begum, 3 N. W. R., 22.

Act X of 1859 is not in force in the Dehra Dhoon District.

The Dhoon forms part of "the territories not subject to the General Regulations." Dick v. Heseltine, 1 N. W. R., Par. 12, p. 196.

The object of Act X of 1859 was to re-enact the provisions of existing laws relative to the rights of ryots, and not in any way to destroy those rights. If, therefore, the plaintiff had a gorabundee tenure existing before the enactment of Act X (and it had been found that the plaintiff's gorabundee tenure had been recognized in a long series of decisions commencing from the year 1846), the enactment of that Act has in nowise deprived him of his rights in that tenure. Rajah Leelanund Singh v. Nirput Mahtoon, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 306.

The Judge is not competent, under Act X of 1859, to hear appeals from the decision of the Collector given in appeal. The decision of the late Sudder Court, dated 19th March, 1862, Ghous Buksh v. Kidha, overruled. Syud Abdool Ali v. Syud Moodud Ali, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, p. 8.

With reference to the provisions for appeals from decisions of Collectors and Deputy Collectors in Act X of 1859, it is not to be held that appeals from one and the same decision are meant to be carried to different Courts.

Whenever the question of title to an interest in land is involved, an appeal presented against any portion of the decree lies to the Judge. Ram Autar Singh v. Heeranum Pandey, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 39.

Where a tenant sues a landlord not only for possession but also for mesne profits, and makes other parties besides the landlord defendants, the suit cannot be brought under Act X of 1859. Nuffer Mytee v. Monchur Sirdar, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 334.

A suit on the ground of illegal ejectments effected by the zemindar, or by a servant acting under him, cannot be brought under Act X of 1859, when the defendant is the ijaradar entitled to the rents. Mussamut Gobind Monee v. Rajendro Kishore Chowdry, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 18.

The privilege of keeping the decree alive by bonâfide proceedings within three years before the date of the last application for execution, cannot be enjoyed by holders of decrees for sums below 500 rupees. Shaikh Hossein Ali, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 295.

There is no prohibition or rule of law forbidding the assignment of a decree under Act X of 1859, any more than another decree. Junmejoy Mookerjee, in the matter of, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 215.

This decision calls into question the doctrine laid down by a Division Bench at 147 of the Special Number of the Reporter, viz., that when a sale has taken place by order of the Collector in execution of a decree under Act X of 1859, a civil suit for the purpose of questioning the regularity and propriety of the proceeding is taken away, as well as anything in the shape of an appeal. Tekaet Bhoo Narain Deo v. The Court of Wards on behalf of Maharajah Ram Narain Deo, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 58.

The provision of Act X of 1859, which requires that every agreement as to division or distribution of rent should be in writing, applies only to division or distribution made after the Act came into operation. W. O. Allender, General Manager of the Land Mortgage Bank of India v. Dwarkanath Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 320.

Section 2.

A landlord cannot sue for cancelment of lease and ejectment under Section 2, Act X of 1859, after he has sued for and realized the arrears of rent due. Woomesh Chundra Chatterjee and others v. Sheikh Kumuroodeen Luskur, 7 W. R., 20.

Section 3.

In a suit brought by a ryot to obtain a pottah at a fixed rent, under Section 3 of Act X of 1859, on the ground that the lands have been held at a fixed rent which has not been changed from the time of the Permanent Settlement, if the plaintiff fail in proving such a holding, he is not entitled in that suit to have decree under Section 5 for a pottah at a fair and equitable rate. Doorga Mahtoun v. Kunhye Lall Agha, Marsh., 371.

When there has been a breach of contract to sow and cultivate indigo, both liquidated damages and the amount advanced to the cultivators cannot be recovered under Section 3, Act X of 1836. Meer Mahomed Kasem Chowdhry v. A. J. Forbes, 5 W. R., 277.

Section 4.

When in a suit for enhancement, a ryot or talookdar pleads possession for a long time and claims the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, that is tantamount to his having named the Permanent Settlement. Dhun Singh Roy v. Chunder Kant Mookerjee, 4 W. R., Act X R., 43.

To entitle a tenant to the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859, he must prove that he has paid a uniform fixed rent for the last twenty years. Mussamut Mahmooda Bebee, 5 W. R., Act X R., 12.

The fact of the zemindar who sues for enhancement having been an auction-purchaser at a sale for arrears of revenue does not deprive the ryot of his right of pleading the presumption of uniform payment from the Permanent Settlement under Section 4, Act X of 1859. Saduck Sircar v. Mohameya Debia, 5 W. R., Act X R., 16.

Twenty years' uniform payment of rent previous to suit must be proved by the ryot, and clearly found by the Court before the ryot can have the benefit of the presumption contemplated by Section 4, Act X of 1859. Pearee Mohun Mookerjee v. Bissumbhur Mookerjee, 5 W. R., Act X R., 70.

The fact of uniform payment of rent for 20 years, as required by Section 4, Act X of 1859, must be clearly proved, and not presumed from any evidence, however strong, before the presumption of having held at the same rate from the time of the Permanent Settlement can arise. Ram Kishore Mundul v. Chand Mundul, 5 W. R., Act X R., 84.

When a ryot has held at a fixed rent for 45 years, the absence of the specific allegation that he had held at a fixed rate from the time of the Permanent Settlement does not deprive him of the right to rely on Section 4, Act X of 1859, if he distinctly and in terms claims the benefit of that section. Gooroo Doss Mundul v. Sheikh Durbaree, 5 W. R., Act X R., 86.

The legal presumption arising under Section 4, Act X of 1859, from uniform payment of rent for 20 years, cannot be rebutted except by clear proof to the contrary. The same cannot be rebutted by a mere inference drawn from a particular fact, e. g., the omission of mention of the defendant's holding in certain jumma-wasil bakee papers from the office of the canoongoe, dated 1229. Ram Lochun Goopto v. Bama Soondery Debee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 95.

Section 4, Act X of 1859, has no application in a case in which the defendant pleads payment of a uniform rent of Rs. 67 for 20 years when it appears that the plaintiff obtained a decree for rent at Rs. 79 in April, 1861, since which time until the present suit was brought in July, 1865, no appeal was preferred from that decison, and no suit brought to contest its correctness, and where it appears that rent at Rs. 79 was, in fact, paid under that decree. Kodubooddeen Mundul and others v. Kisto Soondery Debea, 6 W. R., Act X R., 69.

In a suit for enhancement, before giving the defendant the benefit of the presumption in Section 4, Act X of 1859, it must be specifically and expressly determined that he has established payment at uniform rates for 20 years. Prem Sahoo and others v. Sheikh Nyamut Ali and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 89.

In a suit for enhancement, positive proof, and not a negative inference of a varied jumma after the Decennial Settlement, is requisite to rebut the presumption arising under Section 4, Act X of 1859.

A difference of currency is not a variation of rent rebutting the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859. Kattyani Debea v. Soonduree Debea, 2 W. R., Act X R., 60.

In the absence of documentary evidence to show that a pottah of 1239 was merely confirmatory of a previous holding, the possession of a ryot claiming under that pottah will commence from the date of his pottah, and he is not entitled to the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859. Sheikh Jainooddeen v. Purno Chunder Roy and others, 8 W. R., 129.

In a suit for enhancement brought by an auction-purchaser before Act X of 1859, the ryot cannot avail himself of the presumption arising under Section 4 of that Act from a uniform payment for 20 years, but must prove uniform payment for 12 years before the Decennial Settlement. Notwithstanding proof of such payment, he will still be liable to enhancement in respect of lands held by him in excess of the quantity mentioned in his lease. Showdominee Dossia v. Gooroo Pershad Dutt, 3 W. R., 14.

A nominal reduction in the jumma of one anna and three pies, and that too in the ryot's favour, is not a variation that deprives him of the benefit of the presumption created by Section 4, Act X of 1859.

The special plea of having held from before the Decennial Settlement is not indispensable to entitle the ryot to the benefit of the presumption. Ramrutno Sircar v. Chunder Mookhee Debia, 2 W. R., Act X R., 74.

A temporary arrangement among joint owners, by which one of their number holds a portion of the joint property on payment of a certain sum of money, does not convert the occupier into a ryot holding at a fixed rent, nor entitle him to the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859. Roghoobun Tewaree v. Bishen Dutt Dobey, 2 W. R., Act X R., 92.

Held by Bayley and Jackson, JJ., that in a suit for determination of rent, as well as a kubuleut, the tender of a pottah is not necessary; the order for the delivery of a pottah before the decree is given effect to being sufficient.

Held by Trevor and Jackson, JJ., that a bhowlee rent, varying yearly in amount with the varying amount of the gross produce of the land, though fixed as to the proportion it is to bear to such produce, is not a fixed unchangeable rent to which the presumption of law laid down by Section 4, Act X of 1859, is applicable. Mahomed Yacoob Hossein v. Sheikh Chowdhry Wahed Ali, 4 W. R., Act X R., 23.

If the holding at a uniform rent for twenty years is proved to the satisfaction of the Court, the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859 is established, whether the evidence be direct or indirect. Radhanath Sircar v. Binodee Paul, 3 W. R., Act X R., 151.

A defendant is not precluded from the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859, because he does not plead in words a tenure from the Decennial Settlement. Hem Chunder Chatterjee v. Poorno Chunder Roy, 3 W. R., Act X R., 162.

In the absence of express stipulation, or of a right such as is mentioned in Sections 3 and 4, Act X of 1859, all ryots having rights of occupancy are liable to have their rents enhanced, if such rents are below the rate payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description, and with similar advantages in the places adjacent. Puhlwan Thakoor v. Godooree Koonwar and others, W. R., F. B., 142.

A presumption of occupancy from the time of the Permanent Settlement, under Section 4, Act X of 1859, cannot be pleaded after the setting up of a mourosee pottah which has been found to be fictitious. Petumber Shaha v. Jebun Singh Burmonee, 2 W. R., Act X R., 6.

Section 4, Act X of 1859, makes no exception as to khamar lands. Ram Coomar Mookerjee v. Rugoonath Mundul, 1 W. R., 356.

In a suit for reversal of a notice of enhancement of rent the plaintiff endeavoured to show a holding at a fixed rate within Act X of 1859, Sections 3 and 4. Held that upon his failing to prove such a holding the defendant was entitled to have the suit dismissed, and was not bound to show his title to enhance. Gungapersaud Singh v. Ramloll Singh and others, Marsh., 185.

In a suit for enhancement, before giving a defendant the benefit of the presumption created by Section 4, Act X of 1859, there must be legal evidence of actual uniformity of rent for the whole of the twenty years immediately preceding the commencement of the suit. Rajnarain Roy Chowdhry v. Mrs. Olivia Atkins, 1 W. R., 45.

The consolidation of several holdings into one, or the omission of fractions by the settlement officer, cannot deprive a ryot of the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859. Lukhi Moni Haldar v. Gunga Gobind Mundle, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 126.

Proprietors paying rent for the right of occupancy are not "ryots" in the sense contemplated in Section 4, Act X of 1859. Mitter Jeet Singh and others v. W. Fitzpatrick and another, 11 W. R., 206.

Held by Kemp and Glover, JJ., that the production of a pottah is not necessary before a ryot can claim the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859.

Held by Trevor and Kemp, JJ., that the ryot is not precluded from the benefit of the said presumption, simply because he does not in terms claim to hold from the Permanent Settlement, if he uses words equivalent to that claim. Nyamutoollah v. Gobind Chunder Dutt, 4 W. R., Act X R., 25.

A bhachee rent, varying yearly in amount in a fixed proportion to the produce of the crop, is not a fixed unchangeable rent of the nature contemplated by Section 4 of Act X of 1859. Mullick Mahomed Jacoob Hossein v. Chowdry Waheyd Ally, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 29.

Section 4, Act X of 1859, does not require that in a suit for enhancement the ryot should specifically claim to hold from the time of the Permanent Settlement in order to obtain the benefit of the presumption enacted by that section. On proof of payment of a uniform rent for 20 years the presumption imperatively arises, unless the contrary be shown, that the rent has been unchanged from the time of the Permanent Settlement. Rakhal Doss Tewaree v. Kinooram Halder, 7 W. R., 242.

A variation of one anna is not sufficient to destroy the uniformity required by Section 4, Act X of 1859. Munsoor Ally and others v. Buno Singh and another, 7 W. R., 282.

The presumption of occupancy from the Permanent Settlement created by Section 4, Act X of 1859, is rebutted by the ryot relying upon a pottah granted after the Permanent Settlement. Rajah Monnohur Singh v. Watson and Co., W. R., F. B., 22.

When a ryot alleges that he has paid rent at a uniform rate for forty years, and claims the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859, it is not necessary, in order to entitle him to a decree, that he should expressly state that rent has been paid at the same rate from the time of the Permanent Settlement. Poolin Behary Sen and others v. Nemaye Chand, 7 W. R., 472.

In a suit for rent under a lease of eight annas of a certain bill and of fourteen beegahs of land, by which the lessee reserved a yearly rent of Rs. 200 for the land, and the right of levying a yearly tax on the parties who were employed in quarrying the stone,—Held that this was not a suit cognizable by the Revenue Courts under Act X of 1859. Khalut Chunder Ghose v. William Minto, considered and approved; Shalgoam v. Mussamut Kubooim, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 61.

In a suit for enhancement of rent where the defendant set up a pottah alleged to have been granted in 1212 at a certain yearly rent, and asserted that he had been in possession for fifty-seven years at that rent, it appeared that the alleged pottah was not genuine. Held that the defendant could not rely on his occupation at the smaller rent for a period exceeding twenty years before the commencement of the suit, as an answer under Act X of 1859, Section 4, which provides that, "where there has been payment of rent for such period, it shall be presumed that the land has been held at that rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement;" for the presumption in such a case is excluded by the assertion of the defendant of the grant of pottah at a subsequent date. Watson and others v. Choto Kooree Mundle, Marsh., 68.

A plea of holding "for a long time from olden date from before" is not inconsistent with a holding from the time of the Decennial Settlement so as to deprive the defendant of the benefit of the presumption created by Section 4, Act X of 1859, which does not require a specific plea that the tenure was held at a fixed rent at the Permanent Settlement, but only proof of payment for twenty years at a fixed rate in order to raise the legal presumption. Munmohun Ghose v. Hosrut Sirdar, 2 W. R., Act X R., 39.

The consolidation of several tenures into one cannot deprive a ryot of the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859. The fact of uniform rent having been continuously paid for a long time entitles a ryot to the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859, although he may not have stated in so many words that the tenure existed from the Decennial Settlement.

In cases of saleable tenures the period of possession by the ryot's vendor is included in the twenty years mentioned in Section 4, Act X of 1859. Kazee Khoda Newaz v. Nubo Kishore Raj, 5 W. R., Act X R., 53.

The discovery among title-deeds of an ancient pottah dated 1167, of the genuineness of which the ryot could have no means of judging, is no bar to prevent him from claiming the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859. Huronath Roy v. Kumola Kant Chuckerbutty, 5 W. R., Act X R., 56.

The plaintiff was the auction-purchaser at a sale of land made prior to the passing of Act X of 1859. In 1253 he dispossessed a tenant who had been in occupation of the land for twenty-seven years at a uniform rent. In 1260 the tenant was restored to the land under a decree, finding that he held a mokurruree tenure. Afterwards, and before the plaintiff had received any rent, he brought a suit against the tenant for enhancement of rent. Held that the enactment in Section 4 of Act X of 1859 that, when it shall be proved that the rent at which land has been held by a ryot in the said provinces has not been changed for a period of twenty years before the commencement of the suit, it shall be presumed that the land has been held at that rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement, unless the contrary be shown, did not apply to deprive the plaintiff of the right to enhance, since there had not been a holding for twenty years before the commencement of the suit within the meaning of the section; and the plaintiff under the law in force before the passing of Act X of 1859 was as an auction-purchaser not bound by the rent, unless the mokurruree tenure was created twelve years before the date of the Permanent Settlement. A special appeal will not lie upon a question of jurisdiction depending upon a question of facts which had not been determined by the lower Court, or admitted by both parties. Quære, —Whether, if the fact appears, special appeal will lie, unless the error in procedure has affected the merits. See Act VIII of 1859, Section 372. Poolin Behary Sen v. Lutuffinessa Bibee, Marsh., 107; and see W. R., F. B., 31 and 91, and also 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 10.

In a suit for enhancement, when the ryot dates his holding from a certain date, and cannot carry it back by presumption to the time of the Permanent Settlement, he is not entitled to the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of of 1859. Beer Kishore Lall v. Kunbooly Lall, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 109.

Section 4, Act X of 1859, does not require that in a suit for enhancement the ryot should specifically claim to hold from the time of the Permanent Settlement, in order to obtain the benefit of the presumption enacted by that section. Jugmohun Doss v. Poorno Chunder Roy, 3 W. R., Act X R., 133.

If a tenant has held land at a uniform rate for generations, and the pottah given to him subsequently does not fix a rent different from that previously paid, but merely asserts the rent he is to pay during the term of the pottah, he is entitled to the benefit of the presumption contained in Section 4, Act X of 1859, if it be found that his rent has not been changed for twenty years.

Held also that the entry in the jummabundee alone (though material evidence) is not sufficient to justify a decree for higher rent, if it be shown that the rent actually paid and received by the landlord or his agent for years was less than that therein stated. Mowlas Koonwar v. Moonshee Shiva Sahai, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 65.

A diminution in the jumma caused by the alienation of part of a ryot's jote does not prove change of the rate of rent, nor deprive the ryot of the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859. Kenaram Mullick v. Ramcoomar Mookerjee, 2 W. R., Act X. R., 17.

The presumption allowed by Section 4, Act X of 1859, of holding certain orchard land at a uniform rent since the Permanent Settlement, was held not to be removed by defendant's statement that the orchard was planted more than forty years ago; and it was for plaintiffs to prove it to have been made since the Permanent Settlement. Soodishtee Lall Chowdhry and others v. Nuthoo Lall Chowdhry and others, 8 W. R., 487.

The presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859, of holding at a uniform rate from the Permanent Settlement need not be specifically pleaded, but (unless rebutted) arises as a matter of course on proof of uniform payment for twenty years. Moneekurnicka Chowdhrain v. Anund Moyee Chowdhrain, 8 W. R., 6.

The fact of a ryot having relied upon a mokurruree tenure cannot prevent his falling back on the presumption arising under Section 4 of Act X of 1859. Chamarnee Bibee v. Ayenoollah Sirdar, 9 W. R., 451.

In order to prove the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859, it is not necessary for the ryot to show how he obtained possession of the tenure. A plea of twenty years' uniform payment is sufficient.

The variation of a few annas in the dakhilas, when not proved to be a variation in the annual rents, is not sufficient to deprive the ryot of the benefit of the presumption. Tara Soondery Burmonya v. Shibessur Chatterjee, 6 W. R., Act X R., 51.

It is not absolutely necessary that a ryot who seeks the benefit of the presumption raised by Section 4, Act X of 1859, should state explicitly that he has held at a uniform rent. Proof of uniform payment of rent for more than twenty years is sufficient. Sham Lall Ghose v. Muddun Gopaul Ghose, alias Makhum Lall Ghose, and another, 6 W. R., Act X R., 37.

In a suit for enhancement, if the defendant pleads pottahs which are not inconsistent with the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859, and proves twenty years' uniform payment of rent, the presumption will arise unless the opposite party prove a variance in the pottahs. Koroona Moyee Dossee v. Shib Chunder Deb, 6 W. R., Act X R., 50.

Uniformity in the amount actually paid is not required to raise the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859, but uniformity in the rate agreed upon, either expressly or impliedly, between the parties to be paid. W. Moran and Co. v. Anund Chunder Mozoomdar, 6 W. R., Act X R., 35.

The presumption sanctioned by Section 4, Act X of 1859, only applies to a case in which existing circumstances are stated to have been continued from the Decennial Settlement, and proof of such continuance for more than twenty years is given. Ram Coomar Mookerjee v. Raghub Mundul, 2 W. R., Act X R., 2.

Proof of uniform payment of rent up to the date of suit is not absolutely necessary to entitle a ryot to the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859, in a case when the landlord has refused to take rent for a few years before suit. Gyaram Dutt v. Gooroochurn Chatterjea, 2 W. R., Act X R., 59.

The question whether a party who has propounded a forged pottah could have the benefit of the presumption arising from paying a fixed rent for twenty years, was held not to rise in a suit brought before Act X of 1859 came into operation, Section 4 applying only to suits commenced under the provision of that Act. Gopal Chunder Roy v. Gooroo Doss Roy, 7 W. R., 135.

In order to bring himself within Sections 3 and 4, Act X of 1859, a ryot need only show that the particular land which is the subject of suit, not the whole tenure of which it may once have formed a part, has been held at an unchanged rent since the Permanent Settlement. It is not necessary that the land should have remained a separate holding. Kaseenath Nusker v. Bama Soondery Dossia and others, 10 W. R., 429.

In a suit for enhancement of rent when defendant claimed the benefit of the presumption arising under Section 4, Act X of 1859, it was held that his sworn declaration that the rent had not varied for more than twenty years, corroborated by the records of the Collectorate, which showed that the rent was the same as it had been more than thirty years ago, was sufficient to warrant the presumption, seeing that plaintiff had failed to show any intermediate variation. Raj Doollab v. Mohessur Bhutt and others, 10 W. R., 364.

Held (by Jackson, J., whose opinion prevailed) that where a ryot in his answer to a suit for enhancement pleads possession for a very long time, and expressly claims the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859, it is tantamount to his naming the Permanent Settlement, but where the defendant's allegation, whether oral or written, suggests a commencement of a holding at a much later period, and his evidence is of the same character, then the presumption claimed will not arise from the proof of twenty years' occupation at a rate unchanged.

Held (by Mitter, J.) that where a ryot's answer distinctly states that the tenure and the provisions of Section 4 and the rulings of the High Court under that section are expressly set up as a bar to the enhancement sought for by the plaintiff, it would be inconsistent with the entire contest for him to say that his tenure had come into existence at a time subsequent to the date of the Permanent Settlement: he cannot be held to have intended to say this by using the words "long before twenty years." Hurruck Singh and others v. Tolsee Ram Sahoo, 11 W. R., 84.

In a suit for arrears of rent at an enhanced rate, where defendant claimed the presumption arising under Section 4, Act X of 1859, it was held that the question to be decided was not whether defendant's tenancy was a continuation of former holdings or a new creation out of other holdings, but whether the rent had been changed or not for a period of twenty years before the suit.

Held also that the principle laid down in a former decision, viz., that consolidation of jummas into one tenure does not deprive the ryot of the benefit of the presumption arising where the rent has not been changed, applies equally to jummas derived in part or in whole, with the consent of the landlord, and subsequently consolidated. Rajkishore Mookerjee v. Hureehur Mookerjee, 10 W. R., 117.

Where a defendant who claims to have held lands for more than 100 years is able to prove that the rent has not changed for twenty years, he is entitled to the presumption allowed by Section 4, Act X of 1859. Luchmeeput Singh v. Rungulbee Kullyan Doss, 9 W. R., 147.

The presumption arising under Section 4, Act X of 1859, is not necessarily restricted to proceedings under that Act; but even if it did not apply to suits other than those under Act X a Court would not do wrong to follow the rule laid down in Section 4 in determining for what length of time payment of a fixed rent should be made in order to warrant the presumption of its having been made since the Permanent Settlement. Dukhina Mohun Roy v. Kureemoollah, mookhtear, 12 W. R., 243.

A defendant who rested his defence in a suit for enhancement upon a pottah, which he set up as entitling him to hold free from enhancement under Section 4, Act X of 1859, cannot plead that the tenure is protected from enhancement by reason of payment of rent at a uniform rate for 20 years.

Where the ground of enhancement was that defendant paid rent below the prevailing rate for land of similar description and with similar advantages in the places adjacent, and the plaintiff failed to prove the existence of any such ground, the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree at the rates which the defendant's lands would bear, as Act X of 1859 does not authorize enhancement of the rent of a ryot to the rates which the lands will bear. Jaun Ali v. Jan Ali, 9 W. R., 149.

In a suit for enhancement of rent the ryot pleaded that he had held certain lands from generation to generation at a uniform rate; that he was therefore entitled to claim the presumption arising under Section 4, Act X of 1859, that he should be allowed to date his claim from the date of the Permanent Settlement.

Held that he was entitled to such presumption, on showing that he had paid rent at a uniform rate for a period of 20 years previous to the suit. Mitrajit Singh v. Tundan Singh, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 88; S. C., 12 W. R., 14.

A tenant is not entitled to the presumption, under Section 4 of Act X of 1859, of having held his tenure at a uniform jumma from the Permanent Settlement, when it appears from his pleadings that his holding first began under a pottah at a period subsequent to the Permanent Settlement, and he does not allege that he held the land previous to his obtaining the pottah. Kunda Misser v. Ganesh Singh, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 120; and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 193.

Semble,—A tenant who has paid at the same bhaoti rate, i.e., in kind, for a period of twenty years, is entitled to the presumption of Section 4, Act X of 1859, and to exemption from enhancement under Section 3. Ram Dayal Singh v. Baboo Lutchim Narayan, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 25; and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 388.

Section 5.

If a Collector finds an agent unable to answer questions which he thinks necessary, and determines that the appearance ought to be by the party himself, and if the party fails to appear, the case comes under Section 5, Act X of 1859, and no appeal lies from the Collector's judgment in such a case. Seetab Chand Naha v. Masoom Ali Chowdry, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 411.

Section 6.

Defendant had occupied the land upon which his huts were standing for some thirty years, and he put up a wall round the land some ten or twelve years ago. Held that the permissive occupancy of land under such circumstances could not give defendant a right to retain possession of it when the landlord desired to put an end to the tenancy, or entitle him to compensation; Section 6, Act X of 1859, having no bearing upon the case. Addoyto Churn Dey v. Peter Doss, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 383.

The presumption under Section 6, Act X of 1859, cannot be established by imperfect and unproved evidence. Sreenath Bose v. Poglian Mollah, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 374.

Dakhilas are not the only evidence to prove a right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859.

Per Mitter, J.—The expiration of the lease of the ijaradar under whom the ryot's possession under a jotedaree right commenced cannot affect the application of that section.

A tacit understanding that the ijaradar should give up possession on the expiry of his lease is not an express stipulation within the meaning of Section 7.

Quære,—Whether such an understanding between the zemindar's predecessors and the ijaradar can affect the ryot. Golan Panja and others v. Hurrish Chunder Ghose, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 552.

In a suit to recover possession of debutter land where plaintiff relied upon a mourosee pottah which had been granted by or with the permission of a poojaree no longer in office, the principal defendant claiming under a lease from the existing poojaree, —Held that plaintiff could not succeed in the absence of evidence of a right of occupancy, under Section 6, Act X of 1859, and his title was bad as based upon a grant from a person who had only a limited or temporary interest in the land. Gooroo Pershad Roy v. Ram Lochun Pauray, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 241.

Section 6 of Act X of 1859 applies to land "held" as well as to land "cultivated," and although a tenant may not have personally cultivated, but may have made over the land to another to cultivate (assuming that by custom he has such power), he still may gain a right of occupancy if he continues to be recognized by the zemindar as the holder of the land. Butabee Begum v. Khoosal, 2 N. W. R., 24.

Land held as a grove upon the terms which have been heretofore customary in this country is not subject to the provisions of Section 6 of Act X of 1859. By an occupancy thereof for twelve years no right of occupancy can accrue. The provisions of Section 6 of Act X of 1859 were intended to apply to kashtkari lands. Pirtum Koormy v. Bhikuree, 2 N. W. R., 364.

Holdings which have commenced or continued under a mortgagee in possession are not within any exception to the general rule contained in Section 6 of Act X of 1859, that a ryot who has held or cultivated a holding for twelve years is entitled to a right of occupancy therein. Heeroo v. Dhoree, 2 N. W. R., 129.

The purchaser of a transferable tenure, under which the rent cannot be enhanced, is entitled to the benefit of it, although he may not have occupied for 12 years, or acquired a right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859. Fisher v. Nundoo Coomer Mundle, Marsh., 625.

Section 6, Act X of 1859, is retrospective. A suit to enhance the rate of rent after notice is the proper mode of suing for enhancement of rent. But the same matter may be determined in a suit for a kubuleut. A suit for a kubuleut may be brought without notice of enhancement (Peacock, C. J., and Norman, J., dissenting). But in such a suit brought without notice the kubuleut cannot be decreed, except to commence with the year following that in which the decree is given.

By Peacock, C. J.—A suit for kubuleut may be maintained without tendering a pottah. (Norman, and Phear, JJ., dissenting).

By Peacock. C. J., and Norman, Kemp, Shumboonath Pundit, and Campbell. JJ.—In a suit for a kubuleut at an enhanced rent the plaintiff is restricted to the grounds mentioned in Section 17.

By the majority of the Court.—In a suit to enhance the rate of rent of a ryot having a right of occupancy under Section 6, the sole ground of enhancement being an increase in the value of the produce, the words "fair and equitable" in Section 5 mean, not the rate obtainable by open competition, but the prevailing rate payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description and with similar advantages in the places adjacent. If the customary rate of the neighbourhood had not been adjusted, with reference to the increased value of the produce, then the rate of rent to be paid should bear to the old rate the same proportion as the present value of the produce bears to the old value, except in special cases, when this rule may be departed from. Thakooranee Dasee v. Bisheshur Mookerjee, 3 W. R., Act X R., 29.

The mere fact of a party sub-letting does not make him a middleman excluded from the privileges of Section 6, Act X of 1859. The real question for trial is whether he was or was not a ryot, or one who held land under cultivation by himself or others who took for him under his supervision as a superior cultivator; or whether he was a middleman because he really did not cultivate in the sense of Section 6, but was a general leaseholder or a speculator in land rent. Ram Mungul Ghose v. Lukheenarain Shaha, 1 W. R., 71.

In a suit for enhancement of rent it was held that the provisions of Section 6, Act X of 1859, do not apply to the case of a ryot not having a right of occupancy; and in fixing a fair and equitable rate for such a ryot Courts are not restricted to the grounds laid down in Section 17. Pitambar Kurmokur v. Ramtunoo Roy, 10 W. R., 123.

Unless the case be one which comes within the provisions of Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1859, an action for ejectment is not barred in the Civil Court under Act VIII of 1859, nor is the Civil Court in such a case precluded from determining the question of a right of occupancy pleaded by the defendants.

Under Section 6, Act X of 1859, it is only when occupancy is inherited that the occupancy of the predecessor is considered as the occupancy of the tenant in possession; and unless the tenant hold a transferable tenure, the sale by him of his jote to another party, without the consent of his landlord, does not transfer to the purchaser any right of occupancy which the latter may have possessed, or enable the present occupant to plead that the period of his own possession, joined to that of the former tenant, gives him a presumptive right of occupancy.

Watson and Co. v. Ranee Shurut Soonderee Debee, 7 W. R., 395.

Section 6, Act X of 1859, does not exclude from the acquisition of the right of occupancy persons holding from ryots, but only persons holding from ryots who themselves have no more than a right of occupancy. Act X was not intended to apply to any land except land of which the main object was cultivation. Ramdhun Khan v. Haradhun Poramanick, 12 W. R., 404.

The right of occupancy given in Section 6, Act X of 1859, is a right to occupy and hold the land. When a ryot leaves his home he ceases to be a khodkast ryot; and if he refuses to come back and cultivate the land when called upon, the zemindar is at liberty to settle the land with others. Haro Dass and another v. Gobind Bhuttacharjee, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 123.

Persons who are not shown to have held possession of lands of which they complain they have been illegally dispossessed, as ryots, or in any other sense than as middlemen receiving rents from the actual cultivators, do not come under Section 6, Act X of 1859, and cannot acquire any rights of occupancy. Gopee Mohun Roy v. Sibchunder Sen, 1 W. R., 68.

A holding for twelve years under one of several proprietors gives a right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859, provided the tenant has paid the rent, which payment he may, in the absence of fraud, make to any one of the co-proprietors whom he chooses. Mooktakeshee Dossee and others v. Koylas Chundra Mittra, 7 W. R., 493.

A cultivator of nij jote land may acquire a right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859, when it had not been let under a lease for a term of years, or year by year. Gaurhari Singh v. Behari Raut, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 138.

The benefits of Section 6 of Act X of 1859 are not restricted to those who with their own hands till the soil, but apply to those who are actual cultivators in the sense of deriving their profits from the produce directly. Kaleechurn Singh v. Ameerooddeen, 9 W. R., 579.

Section 6 of Act X of 1859 does not convert a non-transferable jote into a transferable one, because a ryot who has held it for twelve years has thereby acquired a right of occupancy. Ajoodhya Pershad v. Mussamut Emam Bandee, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 192; S. C., 7 W. R., 528.

The occupation intended to be protected by Section 6, Act X of 1859, is occupation of land subject to agricultural or horticultural cultivation, and used for purposes incidental thereto, and does not include occupation, the main object of which is the dwelling-house itself, and where the cultivation of the soil, if any there be, is entirely subordinate thereto. Kalee Kishen Biswas v. Sreemutty Jankee and others, 8 W. R., 250.

A plaintiff claiming to be reinstated in the occupation of lands under Section 6, Act X of 1859, and desirous of joining others with the zemindar in order to obtain his remedy against them jointly, must bring his suit in the Civil Court. Sree Kant Chowdhry v. Keetaboodeen Sirdar and others, 10 W. R., 49.

Section 7.

A ryot with a right of occupancy, though holding under a temporary pottah for a term of years, cannot be ejected by his landlord, unless the latter can prove a stipulation under Section 7, Act X of 1859. Sheeb Dyal Paulect v. Dwarkanath Sookul, 2 W. R., Act X R., 54.

There is nothing in the mere fact of a tenant having been in possession for over 12 years under a series of pottahs, each for a fixed term, which gives him a right of occupancy. Damonulla Sirdar v. Mamudi Nashis, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 178.

Section 7, Act VIII of 1859 (providing against an endless multiplicity of suits) is applicable to suits for rent under Act X of 1859. Ranee Bhabosoonduree v. Bhugwan Chunder Mozoodar, W. R., Act X R., 88.

Section 9.

A proprietor of an estate is not barred from measurement by the fact of its being leased to a third party; nor is a proprietor bound, under Section 9, Act X of 1859, to show that he is in actual receipt of the rents at the time when he applies to measure the land. Ranee Kristo Mutee Dabea v. Ram Nidhee Sircar, 9 W. R., 331.

Where a party pays into the Collectorate, under the provisions of Section 9, Act X of 1859, arrears of revenue due by a defaulting proprietor of an estate, his suit to recover the amount paid is not inadmissible merely because there exists no priority between plaintiff and defendant. Woomamoyee Burmonea and others v. J. Hills, 11 W. R., 377.

Proof of uniform payment of rent for twenty years by ryots pleading possession from the Decennial Settlement will, unless rebutted by the landlord, entitle them to the presumption under Section 9, Act X of 1859, and save their holdings from enhancement. But proof of uniform payment by ryots pleading possession for fifty or sixty years will entitle them to nothing but a right of occupancy. Ramnarain Singh v. Horonath Roy, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 86.

A landlord is not entitled, under Act X of 1859, Section 9, to require his tenant to give him a kubuleut unless the tenant holds under a pottah, or the landlord has tendered a pottah. Gobinlall Seal v. Kinoo Kyal, Marsh., 400.

Section 9, Act X of 1859, does not require that a pottah should be tendered before a suit for a kubuleut can lie, but merely that the condition on which it is to be decreed is that a pottah shall be given in exchange. Govind Chunder Addy v. Mussamut Anloo Beebee, 1 W. R., 49.

Section 10.

Where money is actually paid as rent and the necessary receipt is withheld, the case is not one of injuria sine damno, but one in which the law (Section 10, Act X of 1859) gives the Court discretion to award any sum as damages not exceeding double the amount for which the receipt is withheld. Joheerooddeen Mahomed v. Dabee Pershad Singh, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 391.

A challan bearing a mublukbundi or total in figures, and some mark, not a signature, of the tehsilder, is not a "receipt" within the meaning of Section 10, Act X of 1859. An award of damages by a lower Appellate Court under this Section, though excessive, if it is within the legal limit, cannot be interfered with in special appeal as an error of law. Joheerooddeen Mahomed v. Dabee Pershad Singh, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 22.

Damages decreed under Section 10, Act X of 1859, against a landlord for giving his tenant (the plaintiff) a receipt which did not specify the payment of rent. The landlord admitted the receipt of the money, but was unable to prove his allegation that it was paid not as rent, but partly as a deposit, and partly as a nuzzur. Teelok Chunder Sircar v. Kumola Kant Mitter, 1 W. R., 318.

Under Section 10, Act X of 1859, the power of a Judge to award damages for receipts withheld as discretionary only as to the amount to be awarded. The tenant being entitled by law to double the amount paid as rent, the Judge cannot refuse him costs on the ground that he had demanded double what was due to him. Zoomeeroodunnissa Khanum v. C. J. Phillipi, 1 W. R., 290.

Contemporaneously with the execution of a pottah it was verbally agreed that the tenant should supply the zemindar with a certain quantity of rice, and that a deduction should be made from the rent reserved in respect thereby. The zemindar took proceedings against the tenant under Regulation VIII of 1819, for the recovery of the entire amount of rent, notwithstanding the tenant had supplied the rice and was entitled to the deduction. The tenant, without contesting his liability, or demanding an investigation as to the amount due, paid the entire amount. Held that this was not "an exaction from the ryot of a sum in excess of the rent specified in the pottah" within the meaning of Section 10, Act X of 1859, and that a suit was not maintainable in respect of it under Act X. Chundermonee Chowdrain v. Debendernauth Roy Chowdry, Marsh., 420.

Section 13.

Under Section 13, Act X of 1859, a ryot served with a notice of enhancement, which is silent about the ground of enhancement, is not liable to pay the higher rent. Lalla Singh v. Mussamut Bibee Reazoonissa, 8 W. R., 271.

Where a notice under Section 13, Act X of 1859, clearly recognized defendants as talookdars, and at the same time sought to enhance rent under Section 17, it was held (following a decision of the Privy Council) that a suit for enhancement would not lie, as Section 17 did not apply to intermediate holders, but only to ryots having rights of occupancy. Badroonissa Chowdhrain and another v. Chunder Coomar Dutt, 10 W. R., 455.

Section 13, Act X of 1859, only gives a right to sue for enhanced rent on due notice, and not the right to sue for title to enhance. Issur Chunder Ghosal v. Shuhodeb Pandey, 3 W. R., Act X R., 25.

A notice of enhancement under Section 13, Act X of 1859, is not required to state that it is for the ensuing year. Gudadhur Banerjee v. Nund Lal Biswas, 3 W. R., Act X R., 145.

The service of a defective notice of enhancement (i.e., one not containing the reasons assigned in Section 13 or 17, Act X of 1859) is tantamount to non-service. Rajkishen Roy v. Prankishen Roy, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 89.

The fact that a mokurrureedar has for any reason agreed to pay an enhanced rent to one shareholder, does not entitle another shareholder to demand enhanced rent, except according to Section 13, Act X of 1859. Salgram Opadhya v. Maharajah Moheshur Bux Singh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 94.

No notice is required under Section 13, Act X of 1859, to set aside an alleged right to a quit-rent tenure in a suit for declaration of title. Ghunskym Chobey v. Kasheenath Shanteekaree, 3 W. R., Act X R, 4.

The condition and rights of ryots, whose tenures have commenced since the Permanent Settlement, depend not on status, but on contract and on laws and regulations specially enacted. In 1793 the zemindars were declared to be the proprietors of the lands. From 1793 to 1812 they were prevented from granting pottahs or leases to ryots for more than ten years, and could not therefore have created ryots with hereditary rights of property in the soil. After Regulation V of 1812 they could grant leases at any rate and for any term. By the retrospective effect of Section 2, Regulation VIII of 1819, leases in perpetuity or for terms granted prior to 1812 were rendered valid.

In this case it was admitted that the value of the produce had increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot, and that the notice required by Section 13, Act X of 1859, had been served before the end of Chyte in the year preceding that for which enhancement was claimed. Upon being served with that notice the defendant had a right to quit according to Section 19. The Statute of Limitation does not give him a right of occupancy under Section 6 by holding for twelve years. But for Act X of 1859, therefore, the defendant (assuming that he was not holding for a fixed term, and that his tenancy commenced since the Permanent Settlement) would have been liable to have his tenancy determined, and to be turned out of possession at the end of 1267, if he and his landlord could not agree as to the rent to be paid for the future. But it being admitted that he had a right of occupancy under Act X of 1859, he was entitled to hold at a fair and equitable rate. What is fair and equitable depends on the value of the produce and cost of production.

After the Permanent Settlement, and before Act X of 1859, a right of occupancy was not acquired by a ryot merely by holding or cultivating land for a period of 12 years. When that Act created the right, Section 5 declared that ryots having rights of occupancy should be entitled to hold at fair and equitable rates, thus leaving it to the Court to determine in every case of dispute what is a fair and equitable rate. To be fair and equitable it must be so as regards both parties.

When there is no contract, and the Statute of Limitation does not apply, the ryot cannot, by occupying and cultivating, become the proprietor of the soil; neither can he, by occupying with the consent of the zemindar, and paying rent for the land to him, become entitled to the proprietorship of the soil, even though he should acquire a right of occupancy by virtue of Act X of 1859.

The objection that this Court on special appeal had decided a matter of fact in this case was held not tenable, inasmuch as the Judge below had found the facts specially, and his finding was in the nature of a special verdict. If therefore in fixing the rent he had improperly deducted certain items from the value of the gross produce of the land, this Court had the power on special appeal to disallow those items. Issur Ghose v. James Hills, W. R., F. B., 1864, 148.

According to Section 13, Act X of 1859, a notice of enhancement must be served by the farmer, and not the zemindar as the person to whom "the rent is payable," notwithstanding an agreement between the zemindar and the farmer, by which the zemindar reserved to himself the right of serving notices of enhancement. Binodee Lall Ghose v. Mackenzie, 3 W. R., Act X R., 157.

Where notice of enhancement of rent has been served, under Section 13, Act X of 1859, upon a ryot who has no right of occupancy, and whose rent has not been fixed by agreement with his landlord, such ryot cannot maintain a suit to set aside the notice of enhancement. His remedy in case the rent is excessive is under Section 14. Sheikh Moheen v. Sheikh Ruheemotoollah, Marsh., 341.

A notice of enhancement of rent under Section 13 of Act X of 1859, signed by the naib of the landlord, is valid, without evidence that he was specially authorized to sign the notice. Degumbur Mitter v. Gobindo Chunder Halder, Marsh., 354.

According to Section 13, Act X of 1859, a notice of enhancement must be served, not upon the under-tenant or ryot or his agent, but personally upon the under-tenant or ryot himself, in or before the month of Cheytra. If it cannot be so personally served, it must be affixed at his usual place of residence in the district in which the land is situated, or if he have no such place of residence, at the mâl kutcherry, &c. Chunder Mony Dossee v. Dhuronee Dhur Lahoory and others, 7 W. R., 2.

A notice of enhancement under the second clause of Section 17, Act X of 1859, is defective if it omits to state that the value of the produce or the productive powers of the land have been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot himself. Syud Soojaat Ali v. Huree Thakoor, 6 W. R., Act X R., 44.

By Section 10, Act XIV of 1863, the necessity for the issue of notice of enhancement required by Section 13, Act X of 1859, is dispensed with in cases which are preferred to the settlement officer under Sections 8 and 10 of that enactment, but the section provides that the statement of claim shall set forth the grounds on which such enhancement is claimed. Held that the grounds to be stated should be one or more of the grounds which are mentioned in Section 17 of Act X of 1859, and that such grounds should be stated with as much distinctness as is required in the notice of enhancement served under the provisions of Act X of 1859. Dewan Peetumber Rai v. Bahadoor Khan and others, 2 Agra Rep., 185.

An indigo factory is a "conspicuous place" within the meaning of Section 13, Act X of 1859, where a notice of enhancement may be fixed. A notice of enhancement served under the provisions of Section 13, Act X of 1859, is not informal because it does not bear the signature of the landlord or his agent. Huronath Roy v. Mirnomoyee Dabee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 56.

Section 13 does not apply to farmers holding on after the expiry of their lease. Nathooram Shaha v. Doorga Manjee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 92.

Under Sections 13 to 16 of Act X of 1859 the rent of a tenant who is a middleman may be enhanced on notice on the same grounds (except as provided in those sections) on which he was liable to enhancement prior to the passing of that Act. Grish Chunder Ghose v. Ramtonoo Biswas, 12 W. R., 449.

A notice under Section 13, Act X of 1859, for enhancement of rent upon land held by a ryot in excess of the land for which he pays rent to the zemindar must state the quantity of land so held in excess. The mere statement of "excess land" is not a sufficient compliance with the provisions of the law.

A plaintiff cannot take advantage of a statement made by a defendant which at most amounts to a piece of evidence, and not to an admission, but which is found to be untrue, unless it be shown that the status of the plaintiff had been affected, or that he had been misled by such statement. Grish Chandra Ghose v. Issar Chandra Mookerjee, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 337.

Section 13, Act X of 1859 (requiring previous service of notice) has no application to a case in which there is an express written engagement between the parties providing for the payment of rent at a specified rate from a specified point of time. Bhyrub Chunder Mojoomdar v. Huro Prosunno Bhuttacharjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 258.

Whether land is held under an ootbundee tenure or not, the tenant is entitled to notice under Section 13, Act X of 1859, before the rate at which he pays can be enhanced. Dwarkanath Mikree v. Noboo Sirdar, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 193.

Section 14.

A suit under Section 14, Act X of 1859, to contest a notice of enhancement, is cognizable by the Revenue Courts, anything in Clause 3, Section 23, notwithstanding. Soroop Chunder Paul v. Durup de Dombal, 1 W. R., 72.

In a suit by a tenant under Section 14, Act X of 1859, to contest the landlord's right of enhancement, the question of rates may be decided, whether at the instance of the tenant or landlord. Gora Chand v. Gudadhur Chatterjee and others, 7 W. R., 470.

Section 14 does not apply to the case of a purchaser of a putnee talook at a sale under Regulation VIII of 1819, unless the jumma is shown to be a mesne incumbrance which came into existence subsequently to the creation of the putnee. Hurromohun Mookerjee v. Brojokishore Roy, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 103.

Section 15

In determining whether a party is entitled to the benefit of the presumption under Section 15, Act X of 1859, or not, the question to be tried is not whether the rent has been paid at a uniform rate, but whether it has not been changed within twenty years prior to the institution of the suit. Ahmed Ali v. Golam Gafar, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 40; 11 W. R., 432.

A talookdar who has paid unchanged rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement, is protected from enhancement under Section 15, Act X of 1859, notwithstanding the zemindar's right to enhance under a decree passed before that Act, in pursuance of which decree no steps were taken before the passing of the Act to vary the rent of the talook.

In a suit to enhance, a decree cannot be given for rent at the ordinary rate. Huronath Roy and others v. Gobind Chunder Dutt, 6 W. R., Act X R., 2.

Moostagirs are protected from enhancement, not as ryots, but as intermediate tenants, under Sections 15 and 16, Act X of 1859. Dhunput Singh v. Gooman Singh, W. R., Act X R., 1864, 61.

In a suit for arrears of rent at enhanced rates, where defendant pleads the provisions of Sections 15 and 16, Act X of 1859, if it is found that the tenure has been held at a uniform rent from the time of the Permanent Settlement, the plaintiff has no right to enhance the rent, even though the land in possession of defendant may be in excess of that covered by the original tenure. If, on the other hand, the excess land was not included in the original tenure, but obtained subsequently without the consent of the plaintiff, the possession of the defendant must be considered adverse, and the suit must fail for want of privity. Indro Bhoosun Deb v. Goluck Chuckerbutty, 12 W. R., 350.

A putneedar is protected from enhancement under Section 15, Act X of 1859, notwithstanding the zemindar's right to enhance under a decree passed before that Act, by which decree the zemindar was declared entitled to enhance, but which decree he had rendered inoperative by his omission to take any effectual steps before that Act to vary the rent of the talook since the Decennial Settlement. Gobind Chunder Dutt v. Huronath Roy, 5 W. R., Act X R., 10.

Section 16.

In a suit for enhancement the presumption under Section 16, Act X of 1859, established by twenty years' holding at a uniform rate, cannot be rebutted by the fact that the plaintiff did not obtain direct possession of the estate for many years, and was for other reasons prevented from suing, but the onus is on the plaintiff to prove that the present rent has been varied or fixed at a period subsequent to the Decennial Settlement. Dhun Singh v. Chundar Kant Mookerjee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 25.

In a suit for enhancement the burden of proof that a tenure is protected under Section 16, Act X of 1859, is on the defendant, and it is only for the plaintiff to rebut any presumption which the defendant may make out under that section. Nobokristo Mojoomdar v. Tara Monee, 12 W. R., 320.

Section 16, Act X of 1859, does not limit the inference of the presumption of payment from before the Decennial Settlement only to the best evidence adducible to establish the fact of uniform payment for twenty years. Huronath Roy Chowdhry v. Bibee Khojeshtah Khatoon, 3 W. R., Act X R., 13.

Section 16, Act X of 1859, does not require proof of actual payment of one rate of rent for twenty years, but that the rent has remained unchanged for that period. Catherine Foschola v. Hurrochunder Bose, 8 W. R., 284.

In a civil suit by a zemindar to get possession of a holding on the ground that defendant, who paid a varying rent, refused to come to terms with his landlord, and claimed to hold from before the Decennial Settlement at a fixed quit-rent, it was held that the question between the parties was for the Revenue Courts, under Section 16, Act X of 1859, and that the presumption arising from the payment of a uniform rent cannot be applied by the Civil Courts, which have no jurisdiction in such cases. Nilmoney Singh v. Ramessur Dobey and others, 9 W. R., 605.

The provisions of Sections 15 and 16 of Act X of 1859 apply to the whole of the provinces of Bengal, Behar, Orissa, and Benares, and not only to such of the districts in those provinces to which the Permanent Settlement has been extended. Surborakari tenures in Cuttack are permanent, hereditary, and transferable. Saddanundo Maita v. Nowrattam Maiti, 8 B. L. R., 280, and 16 S. W. R., C. R., 289.

Section 17.

With reference to the first ground specified in Section 17, Act X of 1859, it is not sufficient to find that the enhanced rent claimed is the same as that in an adjoining village, but it is also necessary to enquire whether that rent is paid by the same class of ryots, or whether the land is of a similar description, or whether it possesses similar advantages. Nobocoomar Biswas v. Thomas Owen, 7 W. R., 148.

Section 17 does not say that in every case the rate of rent may be raised to the prevailing rate, but only that the rent shall not be raised except on some one of the grounds specified. That section must always be read with reference to the general provision of Section 5, that the rent of a ryot having a right of occupancy shall not be more than is fair and equitable; and in considering what is fair and equitable, the ryot should not be called upon to pay to the landlord, under the name of rent, what is in fact, not rent but the produce of his own labour and capital sunk in the land. Noor Mahomed Mundul v. Hurriprosonno Roy, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 75.

By serving a notice on defendant under the terms of Section 17, Act X of 1859, plaintiff was held to have treated defendant as a ryot having a right of occupancy, and to be debarred from suing him for enhancement of rent as an under-tenant or middleman. Chundernauth Ghose v. Shootooram Mojoomdar, 12 W. R., 343.

When a zemindar sued a ryot for enhancement of rent on the ground that he was holding more land than he paid for, the land in excess not being included in any pottah which had been granted to the ryot, but being within his "jote,"—Held that the zemindar could properly sue for enhancement of rent under Act X of 1859, Section 17, Clause 3, and the Court would grant such relief, notwithstanding that the plaint also asked that execution of a kubuleut might be ordered after determining the rate of rent. Mooktakesi Debee Chowdrain v. Sajed Sheikh and another, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 5.

Where a plaintiff sues, not under Section 8, but under Section 17, Act X of 1859, he is bound to prove the alleged rate he claims. On his failure to do so the Judge is not obliged to order the Ameen who measured the lands to fix the rates. Khola Mundul and another v. Peroo Sircar and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 18.

Section 17, Act X of 1859, applies only to ryots, not to zemindars having a tenure of a talooki character. E. O. Panioty v. Juggut Chunder Dutt, 9 W. R., 379.

By the words "increase of productive powers" in Section 17, Act X of 1859, the Legislature did not mean capacity for realizing a higher rent for building or other purposes, but an increase of the productive powers of the land itself. Bisseshur Chuckerbutty and others v. Woomachurn Roy, 9 W. R., 122.

The words "same class" in Section 17, Act X of, 1859, refer to the division of ryots into two classes, viz., those having, and those not having, rights of occupancy.

The words "prevailing rate" in Section 17 mean the rate generally prevalent, or the rate paid by the majority of the ryots in the neighbourhood. Shadhoo Singh v. Ramanoograha Lall, 9 W. R., 83.

Section 17, Act X of 1859, does not mean that the rent of every under-tenant to whom notice is given may be enhanced, but only that, in those cases in which his rent can be enhanced, it is not to be enhanced unless notice is given. Kaleenath Chowdhry v. Humee Bibee, 12 W. R., 1864, 506.

Lands in excess of the area recorded in a mokurruree pottah containing no boundaries are liable to assessment under Section 17, Act X of 1859. Bipro Doss Dey v. Mussamut Sakermonee Dossee, W. R., 1864, Act X. R., 38.

Where a tenant holds excess lands for which no rent has hitherto been paid, the zemindar may treat him either as a trespasser or a tenant. In the latter case a suit will not lie for enhancement, but only for a kubuleut and for a determination of the rate at which the same should be delivered.

A ryot is entitled to no deduction under Section 17, Act X of 1859, for the expenses which he has incurred in cultivating excess lands for which he has paid no rent. He is a mere squatter, and that section refers only to tenants with a right of occupancy. M. A. David v. Ram Dhun Chatterjee, 6 W. R., Act X. R., 97.

There is nothing in Section 17, Act X of 1859, which provides that if one of the grounds specified in the notice of enhancement be not proved, there shall be no decree for enhancement on account of any other ground which is proved. Ram Kant Chuckerbutty v. Rajah Mohesh Chunder Singh and others, 7 W. R., 172.

A notice of enhancement does not come within Section 17, Act X of 1859, where the ground alleged for the claim of higher rent is merely that the productive powers of the land have increased, or that the rent paid is below the prevailing rate paid by neighbouring ryots. Ram Surun Singh and others v. Khogan Dobey, 11 W. R., 15.

In a suit for arrears of rent at an enhanced rate after notice, in which the only ground of enhancement specified was that plaintiff was entitled to enhancement at the pergunnah rates by virtue of a decision between himself and the defendant, dated May, 1855, --Held that as defendant was admitted to be a ryot having a right of occupancy, he was clearly entitled to the protection of Section 17, Act X of 1859; and that the notice was not of itself a notice within the meaning of Clause 1 of that section, "pergunnah rates" not being necessarily the prevailing rates. Kallee Chunder Chowdhry v. Ruttun Gopal Bhadooree and others, 11 W. R., 571.

Where a landlord treats ryots as having a right of occupancy subject to enhancement under Section 17 of Act X of 1859, he must, before he can enhance, show that some of the conditions of Section 17, Act X of 1859, exist. W. Fitzpatrick and P. T. Onraet v. Seeta Roy, 1 Ind Jur., N. S., 170.

In a suit for enhancement of rent, on the ground specified in Section 17 of Act X of 1859, that "the value of the produce, or the productive powers of the land, have been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the ryot," the amount of the increased rent is not to be ascertained by establishing a proportion between the former rent and the old produce; but the absolute increased value of the produce being ascertained, the enhanced rent is to be arrived at by considering what part of such increased value ought to be apportioned to the tenant, as the produce of his capital and labour, and what part of it is rent, that is, as it has been defined, "that portion of the value of the whole produce which remains to the owner of the land after all the outgoings belonging to the cultivation of whatever kind have been paid, including the profits of the capital employed, estimated according to the usual and ordinary rate of agricultural capital at the time being." Rent cannot be enhanced beyond the rate demanded in the plaint, and it can be enhanced only in respect of such part of the land as has increased in value.

In a special appeal, as well as in a regular appeal, it is competent for the respondent to show that points decided against him ought to have been decided in his favour. As in an appeal in a suit for enhancement of rent, where the tenant is appellant, and seeks to reduce the amount, the respondent may show, on other points of law, that it ought to have been enhanced beyond that which the decree gave him. Hills and others v. Ishore Ghose, Marsh., 151; S. C., W. R., F. B., 1862, 48.

A claim to enhancement of rent on the basis of increased produce, and one on that of increased value of produce, are not inconsistent and incompatible; and if they were so they would not, by being advanced together, cancel each other, and thus neutralize plaintiff's claim to the benefit of Clause 2, Section 17, Act X of 1859.

Where a tenant is found to be holding a greater quantity of land than that for which rent has been paid by him, and the excess land lies within the land originally leased to him, the landlord is entitled to enhanced rent under Clause 3, Section 17, Act X of 1859. Gopeenath Mookerjee v. Ranhury Mundul, 9 W. R., 476.

It is not sufficient for a notice of enhancement of rent to allege generally the grounds of enhancement mentioned in Section 17, Act X of 1859. It should set forth specific and tangible grounds of enhancement applicable to the particular case. Dwarka Nath Chowdhry v. Beejoy Gobind Bural and others, 10 W. R., 323.

Where a lower Court was required, by a conditional order of remand in a rent case, to go in the usual way into a claim for enhancement, the usual way was held to include an enquiry into the service of the preliminary notice under Section 17, Act X of 1859.

The decree of a Civil Court passed many years previously, fixing the rate of rent in regard to a 10-annas, share of a putnee, was held not to bind the ryot's successor as to the rent claimed from him in a suit for enhancement by the putneedar of the 6-annas share. Moodhoo Soodun Chowdhry and another v. Beharee Lall Mookerjee, 11 W. R., 323.

A notice in a suit for enhancement under Section 17, Act X of 1859, should be distinct and intelligible as to the grounds upon which enhancement is sought. A rise in the value of the lands, owing to a considerable portion of the town in which the lands are situated having been swept away by a river, is not such an increase in the productive powers of the land as is contemplated by Clause 17 of Section 17 of Act X. Khondkar Abdoor Ruhman and others v. Woomachurn Roy and others, 8 W. R., 330.

In a suit for enhancement under Clause 3, Section 17, Act X of 1859, on the ground that defendant held lands in excess of that originally granted to him, the mere fact that defendant held for 20 years at an unvarying rent does not excuse him from payment of rent on any land in excess of his jote, unless under special circumstances. Bibee Reazoonissa v. Sheikh Dad Ali, 8 W. R., 326.

A dependent talookdar's rent is not liable to enhancement, unless it can be shown to have changed since the Perpetual Settlement, and he must be proceeded against under Section 15 (not 17) of Act X of 1859. Nubokissor Bose v. Pandul Sircar and others, 8 W. R., 312.

In a suit under Clause 1, Section 17, Act X of 1859, to enhance rents, on the ground that the rates are below the prevailing rates payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description, and with similar advantages in the places adjacent, the question whether and to what extent the rents ought to be enhanced is to be determined by a comparison of the rents actually paid by similar adjoining lands, and without reference to the value of the produce.

In a suit for enhancement of rent upon the above grounds, the Judge exempted from any enhancement a tank and garden, on the ground that the tank had been dry for public use, and that the garden had been rendered productive by the exertion of the tenants. Held that neither reason was any ground of exemption from enhancement. Sreeram Chatterjee v. Luckhun Majilla, Marsh., 379.

Where a ryot, who had taken a clearing lease for certain jungles at a russuddee jumma rising by degrees to 10 annas, which had been reached and had been paid for some time, was sued for enhancement of rent, it was held that the mere fact of the ryot's produce having largely increased in value, and of his rent being materially below that paid for similar lands in the neighbourhood, were not sufficient grounds for enhancement of rent under Section 17, Act X of 1859.

It is essential to a right to enhance, under Clause 1, Section 17, that the higher rates in the neighbourhood should be paid by the same class of ryots, and by ryots with similar advantages. Purmanund Sein v. Puddomonee Dossee, 9 W. R., 349.

That a tenant is holding at a rent lower than surrounding rates is not a sufficient ground to be specified in a notice of enhancement; the words "surrounding rates" being not tantamount to the ground of enhancement indicated in Section 17, Act X of 1859. Boydonath v. Ramjoy Dey, 9 W. R., 292.

Where the enhancement was claimed on the first of the grounds mentioned in Section 17, Act X of 1859, the decree should have been based exactly on that ground, and not on other arbitrary grounds. The holding of the ryot sought to be enhanced should be compared with ryots of the same class holding similar lands either in the same village or in adjacent villages. Bheem Sein v. Hur Gobind, 3 Agra Rep., R. A., 12.

Held, in accordance with former decisions, that comparison under Clause 1, Section 17, must be made with ryots of the same caste. Bainee Pershad v. Mahomed Ukber Hossein, 3 Agra Rep., R. A., 3.

The lower Courts having failed to recognize the important distinction between ryots having rights of occupancy and other ryots, in case of enhancement under Clause 1, Section 17, Act X of 1859, their judgment was defective. Luchmun v. Jogul Kishore, 3 Agra Rep., 99.

The increase in the "value of the produce" which is to form a ground for enhancement of rent under Section 17 of Act X of 1859, means an increase in its natural and usual value in ordinary years. The accidental and exceptional high prices of a particular year, in consequence of drought and scarcity, cannot be treated as a measure by which rent is to be adjusted. A tenant takes land, not with reference to the exceptional high prices of a past year, but with reference to the prices he may reasonably expect to realize for the crops which he will raise in succeeding years. Bhagruth Doss and others v. Mahasoop Roy and another, 6 W. R., Act X R., 34.

In determining the enhanced rent which a ryot is liable to pay under Section 17, Act X of 1859, a Court cannot legally include putwareean and other abwabs paid by ryots in the neighbouring lands. Surmah Chowdhry v. Sreenund Singh, 12 W. R., 29.

In an appeal from a decree for enhancement of rent, where the lower Court found that the defendant had failed to give evidence of non-liability,—Held that it should have enquired whether the rates assessed by the first Court were proper and such as plaintiff would be entitled to have under Section 17, Act X of 1859. Rungomoney Dossee v. W. Campbell, 12 W. R., 111.

Under Clause 1, Section 17, Act X of 1859, the enhancement of rent is not restricted to the rates of the pergunnah or of the village, but is to be according to the rates prevailing in the places adjacent. Syud Sudurooddeen Mutwalee v. Ghetoo Pulee, 5 W. R., Act X R., 70.

Where enhancement of rent is sought on the ground "that the rate of rent payable by such ryot is below the prevailing rate payable by the same class of ryots for land of a similar description, and with similar advantages in the places adjacent," the question of enhancement is to be determined by reference to such state of affairs as is provided for by Act X of 1859, Section 17, and cannot be decided merely on the ground that, although the value of the land has increased, there has also been an increase in the rate of wages, and in the price of provisions consumed by the ryots. Savi v. Jeetoo Meeah, Marsh., 186.

In a suit for enhancement on one of the grounds set forth in Section 17, Act X of 1859, the notice under Section 13 can be served on a ryot with rights of occupancy; but in a case of a dependent talookdar the plaintiff must proceed under Section 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, and not on the grounds laid down in Section 17, Act X of 1859. The defendant's talook in this case being a shikmee one, the suit under Section 17 was informal, and was accordingly dismissed. Brojo Soondur Mitter Mozoomdar v. Kalee Kishore Chowdhry and others, 8 W. R., 496.

The grounds of enhancement stated in Section 51 of Regulation VIII of 1793, and not those in Section 17 of Act X of 1859, are applicable to dependent talookdars. Huronath Roy v. Bindoo Bashinee Debia, 3 W. R., Act X R., 26.

Section 17, Act X of 1859, is applicable to cases where the land was undoubtedly included in the original tenure, but it has been found in a fresh measurement that there was some mistake in the former measurement, and that a greater amount of rent ought to be paid, not in respect of any fresh land but in respect of land which was included in the original tenure. Prankissen Bagchee v. Mannachina Dassee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 33.

Section 18.

Sections 17 and 18 were passed for the benefit of the ryot, and not for the protection of the zemindar.

Section 18 was intended to give the ryot a right to abatement in certain cases, but not to protect the zemindar from liability to make abatement in any other case.

In a suit for abatement of rent on the ground that the jumma payable to Government had been reduced upon condition that the rents of the ryot should be reduced in a like proportion,—Held that the right to abatement applies only to the case of rents of which the amount had been fixed before the jumma was reduced by Government, and not to rents fixed by pottahs or kubuleuts entered into subsequently. Sukhawatoollah and others v. Puthoo Goldar, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 7.

Section 18, Act X of 1859, is not applicable to a case in which a plaintiff putneedar sues for an abatement of rent, on the ground of fraud caused by the concealment from him of the existence of an intermediate tenure created by the zemindar. Clause 3, Section 28 of that Act, is wide enough to admit of such a suit being tried by the Revenue Courts. Shokoor Ali v. Umola Ahalya and others, 8 W. R., 504.

Section 19.

A joint notice of enhancement was served upon several ryots, whose jummas were in fact separate, but which for a great many years, in suits and other proceedings, had been mutually treated as joint. Held that the ryots ought not to be allowed, in a suit for an excessive demand of rent, to object that they were entitled to separate notices, but that they were entitled to the benefit of some of the holdings being separate for the purpose of surrendering some, and retaining others, of such separate holdings under Section 19 of Act X of 1859.

An increase in the productive power of the land, occasioned by an embankment, constructed at the expense of Government, for excluding the sea from flooding the land, is a ground of enhancement, under Section 17 of Act X of 1859.

An under-tenant or ryot is not bound by a measurement under Act X of 1859, Section 261, made in his absence, unless he has received notice. Jadub Chunder Halder v. Etwaree Sirkar, Marsh., 498.

Held that the provisions of Section 19, Act X of 1859, are not applicable to a lessee who has contracted for a definite specified interest in the land, and that the contract or lease must regulate the whole relationship between the lessor and lessee, not only in regard to the time of commencement and continuance, but also in regard to the termination of the holding. Baboo Dwarka Doss v. Gukul Doss, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 22.

Section 19, Act X of 1859, does not imperatively require an application for service of notice of relinquishment of land by a ryot to be made to the Collector. The non-service of notice by the Collector cannot affect the rights of the tenant, if he can prove that, previous to his application to the Collector, he had given actual notice direct to the landlord himself or to his authorized agent. The application to the Collector is not bad because it was not made in the month of Chyet preceding. James Erskine v. Ram Coomar Roy and others, 8 W. R., 221.

A perpetual contract by a lessee for his heirs, reciting that they shall never relinquish the jote, cannot operate against Section 19, Act X of 1859, which says that any ryot may relinquish his jote, if he does so in a legal manner. Gopal Pal Chowdhry v. Tarinee Pershad Ghose, 9 W. R., 89.

When a landlord served a notice on an ootbundee ryot that unless he paid at an enhanced rent for the ensuing year he was to quit the land, and the ryot thereupon intimated to the landlord's agent his intention to relinquish the land,—Held that that there was a sufficient compliance with Section 19, Act X of 1859. T. J. Kenny v. Issur Chunder Poddar, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 9.

A ryot who has taken a lease in writing for a fixed term cannot, under Section 19, Act X of 1859, throw it up during its currency. Kashee Singh v. P. Onraet and T. Grant, 5 W. R., Act X R., 81.

Section 20.

By a deed between A. and B., B. purchased from A. a fractional share of a pergunnah, the Government revenue payable on which was Rs. 43-12; and it was stipulated that B. was to apply to the Collector for mutation; and that until the mutation was completed he should pay the above quota of the Government revenue through A.; and that after the mutation the relation between A. and B. should be an independent one. Held that the relation of landlord and tenant was not created by the deed, and consequently that Section 20 of Act X of 1859 did not apply to entitle A. to interest upon the recovery of a quota of revenue payable by B. under the deed. Goluck Chunder Roy and others v. Juggernauth Roy Chowdhry, Marsh., 146, and W. R., F. B., 47.

The word "liable" in Section 20, Act X of 1859, leaves it in the discretion of a Court to grant interest or not. Kasheenath Roy Chowdhry v. Mynuddeen Chowdhry, 1 W. R., 154.

A cause of action accruing against an agent for money received and accounts kept, falling within the class mentioned in Section 20, Act X of 1859, survives the death of the agent. R. T. Hills v. Shokhee Monee Dossee and others, 10 W. R., 59.

Section 20, Act X of 1859, refers to the established usage in the pergunnah, and not to the established usage between the parties. Chytunno Chunder Roy v. Kedarnauth Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 99.

Held by Norman, J., that a Deputy Collector's decree for rent cancelling a mokurruree tenure, with reference to Section 22, Act X of 1859, as not creating a permanent or transferable interest, though erroneous, cannot be treated as a nullity or as passed without jurisdiction. The tenure, however, is not cancelled as long as the decree is not executed. Lalla Sham Soondur v. Sooraj Lall, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 441.

The right to cancel a lease for non-payment of rent by a leaseholder not having a permanent or transferable interest in the land being given by Section 22, Act X of 1859, need not be provided for in the lease. Kadir Cazee v. Mohadebee Dossia, 6 W. R., Act X R., 47.

Where a decree under Sections 22 and 78, Act X of 1859, for the ejectment of a ryot from three plots of land was executed against two of the plots, —Held that the pottah was not in force as regards the third plot also. Kalee Churn Banerjee v. Mahomed Hashem and others, 7 W. R., 8.

With reference to Sections 22 and 78 of Act X of 1859, a decree for an unconditional re-entry cannot be given against a farmer. Buksh Ali v. Ramtonoo Gun, 6 W. R., Act X R., 64.

Clause 1, Section 4, Regulation XI of 1825, and Section 22, Act X of 1859, will not allow a suit for the assessment of lands accreted to a zimma tenure; and holders like the zemindar, in a case of this nature, are not liable under Section 15, Act X of 1859, for additional rent for chur land, until they are shown by the zemindar to be holders of tenures subsequent to the Decennial Settlement not having a fixed jumma, and then only liable for the talookdaree rates paid by others of the same class for similar lands. E. O. Panioty v. Juggut Chunder Dutt, 9 W. R., 379.

Section 23.

A suit by a ryot for the recovery of the value of his property illegally distrained as the property of another ryot, is one falling under Section 23, Act X of 1859, and cannot be brought in the Civil Court. Ram Bhisto Acharjee v. Chyet Lall Tewarry, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 451.

A suit by a zemindar against a putneedar or ijaradar for rent is cognizable in a Collector's Court under Section 23, Act X of 1859, although there may be houses on the land described. Mothoora Nath Koondoo v. W. Campbell, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 463.

A suit by a zemindar to try the question of the mokurruree title of two of his tenants who had recovered possession under Section 23, Act X of 1859, after he had ousted them, is cognizable in the Civil Court. Lalla Gokool Pershad v. Rajah Rajendur Kishnore Singh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 4.

A suit for dispossession between two ryots with which the zemindar has nothing to do, except as a witness on one side, is cognizable, not by the Collector under Section 23, Act X of 1859, but by the Civil Court. Radhanath Mozoomdar v. Purikhit Budrik, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 60; Kally Doss Banerjee v. Bonomalee Doss, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 61.

The mere incidental and descriptive mention of such tenures as howala and neem-howala does not oust the jurisdiction of the Civil Court in cases of trespass and the like, nor does it vest the jurisdiction in the Revenue Courts under Section 23, Act X of 1859. Silvestre Barairo v. F. H. Pellew, 5 W. R., Act X R., 82.

Under Section 23, Act X of 1859, a landlord's right to eject a ryot can be enforced only through the Revenue Court; and the refusal of those Courts to aid the landlord, even if erroneous, does not give jurisdiction to the Civil Courts. Chunder Shekur Deb v. Peary Chand Mitter, 11 W. R., 147.

Money advanced to a naib for the construction of a bund, or for the payment of the salaries of tehsildars and peadahs, comes within the terms of Section 23, Act X of 1859, with regard to the management of land, and a suit by a manager of an estate to recover such advance is cognizable by a Revenue Court. Ram Dyal Banerjee v. The Court of Wards, 12 W. R., 269.

The Revenue Court has not cognizance under Act X of 1859, Section 23, of a suit to set aside a kubuleut on the ground that it is a forgery. Shah Mahamood Luskkur v. Pahur Khan, Marsh., 496.

The jurisdiction of the Collector, under Section 23 of Act X of 1859, to entertain a suit to recover the possession of land from which the plaintiff alleges that the defendant, the person entitled to receive the rent, has ejected him, is not affected by the defendant setting up in answer that he had purchased the tenure from the plaintiff.

Section 97 of Act VIII of 1859, enacting that if the plaintiff withdraw from the suit, without permission of the Court, "he shall be precluded from bringing a fresh suit for the same matter," does not apply to suits instituted under Act X of 1859. Doyal Chunder Ghose and others v. Dwarkanath Misser and others, Marsh., 148.

A suit for enforcing an alleged right to erect golahs at certain ghats, and to collect duties from persons using them, is not a suit "on account of any right of pasturage, forest right, fisheries, or the like," within Section 23 of Act X of 1859, and the Collector has no jurisdiction to entertain it. Furlong v. Johurree Loll, Marsh., 194.

All suits which are specially provided for by Act X of 1859, and which arise out of the exercise of the power of distraint, or out of any acts done under colour of the exercise of the said power, are within the provisions of Section 23 of that Act. Joyloll Sheikh v. Brojonath Pal Chowdhry, 9 W. R., 162.

In a suit for declaration of title to land from which a ryot has been ejected at the suit of his zemindar by the order of a Collector under Section 23, Act X of 1859, and wherein the genuineness of the pottah upon which the suit is brought is at issue, the order of the Collector cannot be pleaded in bar. Bhairo Singh v. Uditraran Singh, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 139.

An appeal lies to the Judge from a decision of a Collector in a suit under Clause 1, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Rajoo Naik v. Mohunt Kosalee Ram Doss, 1 W. R., 210.

Suits may be brought, under Clause 1, Section 23, Act X of 1859, against parties other than mere ryots in the ordinary sense of that term. R. Watson and Co. v. Koer Narain Singh Bhooya, 5 W. R., Act X R., 19.

A suit to set aside a decree passed by a Deputy-Collector for executing a kubuleut in favour of the defendant, and for a declaration that the land in suit pertains to the talook of a third party, is not cognizable by the Civil Court. By Clause 1, Section 23, Act X of 1859, the exclusive cognizance of suits by a zemindar against his ryot to obtain a kubuleut is reserved to the Court of the Collector. Sonaton Roy and another v. Annund Coomar Mookerjee and others, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 31.

Held by the majority of the High Court (Norman, J., dissenting) that a suit for a kubuleut under Clause 1, Section 23, Act X of 1859, will lie, without previous notice, under Section 13; the Chief Justice being of opinion, however (concurred in by Norman, J.), that in this case that question did not arise, inasmuch as, as against the plaintiff, the defendant was a mere trespasser and not a tenant, and that therefore the plaintiff could not sue him to obtain a kubuleut under Act X of 1859. Ram Kanth Chowdhry v. Bhoobun Mohun Biswas, W. R., F. B., 183.

The relation of landlord and tenant is not to be presumed to subsist between the proprietor of land and any person occupying that land, so as to give the proprietor a right under Clause 1, Section 23, Act X of 1859, to sue for a kubuleut. Poorno Doss v. Ocjoodhia Proshad, 3 W. R., Act X R., 16.

Held that the defendants, whose proprietary title at the time of settlement was recognized in the land then covered with trees, were not liable to assessment by zemindars, under the provisions of Clause 1, Section 23, Act X of 1859, on account of the trees having since disappeared and the land having been brought into cultivation. Jadoo Rai v. Syud Mahomed Taquee, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 24.

Held that a suit by plaintiff, a co-parcener in the land in question against another co-parcener, holding as his seer land, to assess the same, was not one cognizable by the Revenue Court, under Clause 1, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Jodha Singh v. Oomaid Singh, 2 Agra Rep., Rev. 5.

Clause 1, Section 23, Act X of 1859, contemplates suits for delivery of pottahs by ryots in possession only. Bharut Chunder Sein v. Oseemooddeen, 6 W. R., Act X R., 56.

Where a zemindar had obtained an ex-parte decree declaring certain lands to be his mâl lands, it was held that his only remedy was to have the rates at which he was authorized under Section 10, Regulation XIX of 1793, to collect the rents determined and to obtain a kubuleut, and his only course was to sue in the Collector's Court, under Clause 1, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Rohinee Nundun Gossamee v. Rutencepur Koondoo, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 345.

Clause 2, Section 23, Act X of 1859, relating to the illegal exaction of rent, is not limited to suits at the instance of the ryot, but applies to any under-tenant. Gopul Paul Chowdry v. Grish Chunder Pandey, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 269.

A suit for abatement of jumma and refund of excess rents paid on account of diluviated lands is cognizable before the Collector under Clause 3, Section 23, Act X of 1859. G. R. Barry v. Abdool Ali, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 64.

A Civil Court has no jurisdiction to try a suit for abatement of rent by a putneedar. Such a suit must be brought under Clause 3, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Man Gurobinee Dossea v. Khetturchunder Ghose, 2 W. R., Act X R., 47.

In a suit for damages by a lessee, where the plaint shows a distinct prayer for abatement of rent, and also sets forth as the main ground of the suit a fraudulent breach of contract by misrepresentation and refusal of deduction and refund stipulated for, so much of the claim as refers to abatement is, by Clause 3, Section 23, Act X of 1859, beyond the jurisdiction of the Civil Court; but the rest of the suit is properly cognizable by such Court. Nilmoney Singh and others v. Issur Chunder Ghossal, 9 W. R., 92.

Clause 3 of Section 23 of Act X of 1859, gives the Revenue Courts the adjudicature of complaints of excessive demands of rent, and the Courts are not deprived of jurisdiction in such cases because incidentally they may have to determine as to the genuine character of a kubuleut. Kashee Ram v. Gunga Pershad, 2 N. W. R., 304.

A Judge has jurisdiction to try an appeal in a suit for arrears of rent under Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859, where plaintiff also sued for ejectment under Clause 5 of the same section. Kishen Chunder Gooptee v. Dewan Ali, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 165.

A suit for a share of rent against a tenant and co-lessors is not cognizable by the Collector as a suit for rent within the meaning of Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Lalla Isree Pershad v. Stuart, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 28.

A suit for arrears due under an assignment of rent is a suit to recover arrears of rent, and as such is only cognizable under Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859, by the Revenue Courts. Kishen Coomar Mitter v. Mohesh Chunder Banerjee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 3.

The class of cases made cognizable by a Collector under Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859, is described in terms wide enough to extend his jurisdiction in suits for rent to cases of tenancies not strictly agriculturable, provided the subject of the lease is land, and the rent issues out of the land, and is due on account of and for the use of the land, whatever may be the purpose for which the surface of the land is used. R. Watson & Co. v. Gobind Chunder Mozoomdar, W. R., 1861, Act X R., 46.

A suit for arrears of rent of a hâk is cognizable by the Collector under Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Gaetree Dabea v. Thakoor Doss, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 78.

A suit for rent is cognizable only by the Collector, under Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859, whether it be based upon a kubuleut or agreement, or neither. Dhunput Singh v. M. Mills, 7 W. R., 473.

A suit for arrears of rent, under Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859, may be entertained by the Collector both against the lessee who was made originally liable, and against the surety who would be liable on the default of the lessee. Bhoobun Mohun, alias Prolad Sandyal v. Bhubo Soondery Debia Chowdhrain, 8 W. R., 452.

A suit for arrears of rent due on account of an indigo factory is not a suit for arrears of rent due on account of land within Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Such a suit therefore must be brought in the Civil Court, and not in a Revenue Court. Oddit Chunder Paul and others v. Komola Kant Paul and others, Marsh., 401.

A suit for rent against two persons, one as the benamee and the other as the actual farmer, is cognizable by the Revenue Court, under Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859. In such a suit the plaintiff can only obtain a decree against one or other, not both of the defendants. Heeralall Buckshee v. Rajkishore Mozoomdar, W. R., F. B., 1862, 58.

A suit to recover rent on lease of toll arising from a canal or river navigation is not cognizable under Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859. H. W. Garland v. Rai Mohun Hazrah, 1 W. R., 15.

A suit for half the price of trees cut down by the tenant, and claimed by the landlord by right of usage, is not cognizable under Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859, but in the Civil Court. Tohul Roy v. Moonshee Mahadeo Dutt, W. R., 1864, 327.

A suit lies under Clause 4, Section 23, in respect of a joint liability for kists accruing due after the purchase, either from the date of the sale or from the date of the confirmation of the sale. Sreeram Biswas v. Juggernath Doss Mohunt, 5 W. R., Act X R., 45.

Suits for the rents of fisheries are provided for by Clause 4, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Allum Chunder Shaha v. Bhurut Baboo, 5 W. R., Act X R., 92.

A person having a right to sue for possession and wasilat is not obliged to divide his causes of action, so as to bring one suit for possession under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, in the Collector's Court, and another for wasilat in the Civil Court, but may bring one suit for both in the Civil Court. Ramlachun Doss v. Mungul Sheikh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 3.

The disturbing or dispossessing the cultivators is tantamount to ejecting and disturbing in the receipt of rent the farmer to whom they pay rent, for which a suit will lie under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Lungut Mahtoon v. Rameshur Roy, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 54.

Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, which restricts to the Collector's Court all suits to recover the occupancy of land from which a ryot has been dispossessed by the person entitled to receive rent for the same, is applicable equally to cases in which the tenant words his suit as for confirmation of possession, and brings the suit against the person entitled to receive rents in order to settle the question of right to possession. Gooroo Churn Coomar v. Khetter Mohun Roy, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 79.

To bring a case of ejectment within the jurisdiction of the Collector's Court, under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, there must have been some direct act on the part of the person entitled to receive the rent towards ejecting the tenants, either personally or by his servants, or by joining with those who actually ejected them. Joykissen Mookerjee v. Mudoosoodun Kulliah, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 90.

Where a zemindar sold a mourosee tenure for arrears of rent, and purchased it himself, and then evicted the dur-mouroseedar, and made a fresh settlement for the tenure with a third party,—Held that a suit for ejectment by the dur-mouroseedar against the zemindar was cognizable under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Wooma Sunkory v. Syad Ally Ashruff, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 96.

A suit for possession by an ejected tenant may be brought against a person whose title as adverse holder accrued before the institution of the suit. Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, does not apply to such a case. Ruttun Monee Debia v. Dhurmomyee Dossee, 2 W. R., Act X R., 9.

An ejectment, though carried out with the assistance and enforced by the orders of the Magistrate is still an ejectment by the landlord, and is illegal if the tenant be entitled to retain possession; and whether the ejectment is from the whole tenure or only a portion of it the suit is only cognizable by the Revenue Courts under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Bhugeeruth Chunder Doss v. Kashee Preah, 1 W. R., 269.

A suit for possession brought in reality by one lessee against the other lessee as co-parceners in collusion with the zemindar, and not against the zemindar as landlord, is rightly brought in the Civil Court, and not before the Collector under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Shumboonath Shaha v. Ram Sundar Sircar, 2 W. R., Act X R., 105.

A Collector has no jurisdiction in a suit for ejectment brought by a lakherajdar under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Gooroo Pershad Roy v. Nimaye Chand Pulshain, 3 W. R., Act X R., 5.

Clause 6, Section 23 of Act X of 1859, applies only to cases where the ejectment complained of is effected solely by the person to whom the plaintiff's rent is payable. If a third person acts jointly with the person entitled to receive the rent, in ousting the tenant, the tenant has a joint cause of action against both the wrong-doers. Luckhee Prea Dabea v. Juggodumba Dabea, 3 W. R., Act X R., 8.

A suit for possession by a purchaser from a tenant whose right to sell is questioned by the zemindar is cognizable only in the Civil Court, and not under Clause 6, Section 23 of Act X of 1859. Kanaye Mollah v. Debnath Roy, 3 W. R., Act X R., 161.

Neither Clause 6, Section 23, nor Section 25 of Act X of 1859, applies to a suit for recovery of possession on expiry of assignment of land assigned over for a term of years as security for a loan and as the means for its repayment. Such a suit is cognizable only by the Civil Court. Khettur Mohun Paul v. Ram Coomar Paul, 5 W. R., Act X R., 2.

The ownership of a zemindary having changed hands under a decree, a ryot with a right of occupancy brought a suit in a Revenue Court on the ground of illegal dispossession by the new zemindars. Held that the suit was maintainable under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Sheo Prokush Misser v. Fukeer Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 20.

A suit brought under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, to recover possession of land where, although the servants of the zemindar were made nominal defendants, the real defendants were parties who were not shown to have been in receipt of the rent, and who set up an entirely different and independent right, was held not to be cognizable by the Collector, but by the Civil Court. Ram Dehul Pandey v. Kasha Ruwat, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 232.

Plaintiff sued to recover possession of land from which he stated he had been illegally ejected. He had never been in possession of the land, which he claimed under a document alleged to be a valid pottah. Held that this was matter for a civil suit in the ordinary Courts, and not one cognizable by the Collector under Clause 6, Section 23 of Act X of 1859. Jodoo Nath Ghose v. Ranee Sookmoye Dossee, 1 W. R., 201.

A suit by a ryot (against a zemindar and other persons who colluded with the zemindar in dispossessing the ryot) to recover possession of the land from all these persons, and also to recover mesne profits from the time during which he was dispossessed, is not cognizable by the Collector under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Ram Gopal Mozoomdar v. F. J. Saunders, 1 W. R., 139.

A suit for the declaration of the right of the plaintiff to a share in the produce of certain trees, on the allegation that these trees were planted by a person whose rights had passed to the plaintiff by a bill of sale, is cognizable by the Civil Courts, and does not come within the meaning of Clause 6, Section 23 of Act X of 1859. Sheikh Ramzan Ali v. Syud Anwar Ali, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 19.

A party aggrieved by an order of a Deputy Collector passed under Section 25, Act X of 1859, may sue under Clause 6, Section 23, whether he was illegally ejected directly by the landlord, or indirectly by him through the Deputy Collector. Golam Koodsee Chowdhry v. Kishoree Bewah, 5 W. R., Act X R., 46.

If a tenant has the right to the possession he may sue under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, although he may not have a right of occupancy under Section 6 of the Act. Watson and Co. v. Dwarkanauth Sircar, Marsh., 415.

The Civil Courts have no jurisdiction in cases of ejectment between landlords and tenants, whether under colour of an Act IV award or otherwise. All such cases must be brought under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Muthooranauth Koond v. Sameeruddee Mollah, 1 W. R.. 42.

An ejectment, though carried out with the assistance and enforced by the orders of the Magistrate, is still an ejectment by the landlord, and is illegal if the tenant be entitled to retain possession. Whether the ejectment is from the whole tenure, or only a portion of it, the suit is only cognizable by the Revenue Courts under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Bhugeeruth Chunder Doss v. Kashee Preah, 1 W. R., 269.

A plaint was held to disclose no cause of action under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, because the plaintiffs were neither farmers nor tenants, but persons holding over after the expiry of their lease, and consequently mere trespassers. Uma Kishoree Dassi v. Huro Gobind Shaha, 5 W. R., Act X R., 95.

A purchaser of an under-tenure at a sale in execution of a decree, who has never been able to obtain any substantive or real possession, and whose title, as well as that of the person whose rights he purchased, is contested, cannot sue to recover the land under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, but must proceed by suit in the Civil Court to prove his title in the ordinary way. Rajah Anundnath Roy Bahadoor v. Junmeyjoy Biswas, 8 W. R., 240.

A suit for recovery of possession of land, in which the plaintiff's title is put in issue and tried, does not fall within the words of Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, and is cognizable by the Civil Courts. Lalljee Sahoo and others v. Bhugwan Doss, 8 W. R., Act X R., 337.

In a suit brought under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, setting forth that plaintiff had been ousted from his homestead, and his crops had been plundered by his lessors in concert with their co-trespassers whom they had located on the lands, it was held that the suit was substantially against the tenants in possession, their lessors having been joined in the suit, and that the Collector had no jurisdiction. Mahomed Jakhee v. Goopee Roy and others, 10 W. R., 5.

A., after the grant of a putnee talook to B., fraudulently granted a pottah of the same land to his own daughter, and by means thereof she intervened in a suit by B. against a ryot for rent, and prevented B. from recovering in the suit. Held that this was evidence to support a suit by B. against A. under Act X of 1859, Section 23, Clause 6, for illegally ejecting him from the tenure, and that the Collector finding that the pottah was a mere device had jurisdiction, notwithstanding the daughter was joined as a defendant in the suit. Hurree Dyal Chuku v. Birjussurree Dossee and others, Marsh., 604.

Where plaintiffs alleged themselves to be tenants with rights of occupancy, and as such not liable to ejectment by defendant, the owner of the land, under a religious grant as alleged by them (plaintiffs), —Held that the suit was exclusively cognizable by the Revenue Court, under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Sewak Ramand and others v. Ram Bhawan Ojha, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 212.

Held that a suit by a cultivator for maintenance of possession in his holding from which he was not actually ejected by cancelment of the order of Revenue Court, under Section 25, Act X of 1859, was cognizable in the Civil Court, not being one of the description defined in Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Dowlat Rai and others v. Gya Misser, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 95.

Held that to give the Revenue Court jurisdiction under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, there must have been possession and ejectment, and that the mere granting of a lease and refusal to give possession under it does not constitute such possession and ouster as contemplated by that clause. Ahmed Khan v. Mussamut Goomanee Begum, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 181.

Where a cultivator having rights of occupancy has been illegally ejected under the form of proceedings taken by the Collector under Section 25,—Held that the remedy for such cultivator is by suit in the Collector's Court for restoration of possession under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859; while the zemindar may sue for the ejectment of the ryot in the Civil Court. Sewa Ram v. Mussamut Ruhsee, 4 Agra Rep., 53.

A decision in a suit to recover occupation where the plaintiff is found to have been illegally ejected under Act X of 1859, Section 23, Clause 6, does not bar a regular suit for possession by the defendant in the former suit grounding his claim on title, and in which the question of title is to be tried. Soorjee Kanto Roy v. Forlong, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 382, and 6 S. W. R., Act X R. 44.

Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, applies to the case of the illegal ejectment of a putneedar by the zemindar. Thakoor Doss Mozoomdar v. Radha Soonderee Dossee, 2 W. R., Act X R., 3.

A shikmee talookdar may sue under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, to recover possession. Raj Chunder Surma Gossain v. Ali Newaz Khan, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 133.

Clause 6 of Section 23 of Act X of 1859 does not take from the Civil Court the power to try the question of title, but refers only to possessory actions against the person entitled to receive rent. Gooroodoss Roy and others v. Ramnarain Mitter and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 112; 7 W. R., 186.

To maintain a suit under Clause 6, Section 23 of Act X of 1859, the plaintiff must show some right to be restored to his tenure. It is not to be assumed that he was in lawful possession and therefore entitled to be restored to possession, because he was ejected without an application to the Collector under Section 25. A zemindar is not bound to proceed under Section 25 unless he finds legal impediments to his resuming his possession. Rughoonundun Singh v. Gopal Singh, 1 W. R., 191.

Held that Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, which refers to suits to recover occupancy in any land, farm, or tenure, from which a ryot, farmer, or tenant has been illegally ejected by a person entitled to receive the rent, does not apply to a suit brought by a zemindar against a maâfeedar to establish his right as such, and to recover possession and malikana allowance secured to him at the time of settlement, and that such suit was cognizable by the Civil Court. Mussamut Radha Moonee v. Kishna, 3 Agra Rep., 188.

Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, refers to suits by a tenant against his landlord, and not to suits by a tenant against a third party between whom and the tenant the relation of landlord and tenant does not exist. Seraj Mundul and others v. Bistoo Chundra Roy and others, 7 W. R., 459.

A person calling himself a ryot has not a right to recover possession under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, merely because the landlord turned him out of his own authority, and without applying for the Collector's assistance under Section 25 of Act X of 1859.

In a suit under Clause 6 it is necessary to determine the question whether the plaintiff has been illegally ejected. This involves the question whether the tenancy was at an end or not when the ejectment took place; if it was at an end the plaintiff must fail.

If a landlord ejects a ryot of his own authority without the intervention of a Court of law or the Collector, the case will fall within Section 15 of Act XIV of 1859, and if the ryot sue him in the Civil Court within six months, he will be entitled to recover possession without reference to the title of the landlord to eject him. Jonardun Acharjee v. Haradhun Acharjee, 9 W. R., 513.

Every suit to cancel a lease on account of a breach of any conditions thereof must be brought before the Collector under Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Ramchunder Dutt v. Din Doyal Poramanick, 2 W. R., Act X. R., 16.

A suit by a putneedar to recover khas possession of land against a tenant who has sold his rights and interests to a third party is cognizable only by a Revenue Court under Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Kedar Monee Dossee v. Chunder Koomar Roy, 2 W. R., Act X R., 75.

A suit to set aside a lease as null and void does not fall within the provisions of Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1869, but is cognizable by a Civil Court, even though plaintiff mentions that a balance of rent is due by defendant. Tajeh Mahomed Purdhan v. Jogendro Deb Roykut, 8 W. R., Act X. R., 368.

In a suit for arrears of rent, where a claim to eject the defendant under the powers provided by Clause 5, Section 23, is inserted in the plaint, but is not made the subject of an issue, or is not adjudicated upon, the insertion of such claim does not shift the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal. Shoudaminee Dossee v. Ram Chand Baido and others, 10 W. R., 38.

The dismissal of a previous suit brought by plaintiff for ejectment of defendant, his cultivator, on account of breach of contract under Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1859, as being barred by limitation, does not operate as a bar to a suit for removal and possession of certain trees, and avoidance of sale-deed executed by cultivator, which is of a different nature from the one dismissed, and does not come within the suits defined in Section 23, Act X of 1859, and therefore was not cognizable by the Revenue Court. Jogul Kishore v. Chutter Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 27.

A Collector's decision is not final under Clauses 2, 4, and 7 of Section 23, and under Section 24 of Act X of 1859, if to the cause of action, under one of those clauses or sections, there be joined a separate cause of action under Clause 5 or under any other section of the Act. Nimaye Churn Mytee v. Nursing Purdhan, 9 W. R., 534.

A suit against a ryot who sets up title as tenant to a hostile zemindar, against both of whom (as defendants) the plaintiff established his title to the land of which he sued to recover possession, is not a case that falls under Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Fakeer Rohoman v. Bhabosoondery Dabea, 1 W. R., 232.

A suit for possession against an occupant by transfer, whom the landlord does not recognize as his tenant, is not cognizable in a Revenue Court under Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Mussamut Taramonee Dossee v. Birressur Mozoomdar, 1 W. R., 86.

In a suit under Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1859, the question of illegal ejectment is the only question for adjudication. The onus in such a case is upon the plaintiff. Asgur v. Goluck Chunder Chowdhry, 8 W. R., 383.

In the absence of any condition declaring that a mortgage of a tenant's interest shall render him liable to ejectment, the landlord cannot maintain a suit in the Revenue Court to eject the tenant under the provisions of Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1859, though he may maintain a suit in the Civil Court to set aside the mortgage, and to oust the mortgagee if he has taken possession; and may also obtain an injunction restraining the tenant from mortgaging if he can establish his claim to it. Imam Buksh and others v. Syud Hoob Ali and others, 4 Agra Rep., R. A., 8.

A suit by a proprietor for possession and ejectment of lessee, on the allegation that, by cancelment of lease, the lessee, after having resigned his lease, has forcibly taken possession of the demised property, was not one cognizable by the Revenue Court under Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1859, being not a suit to eject any ryot or to cancel any lease, &c., as provided in the said clause and section. Kafaetoollah Khan v. Futteh Ali, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 28.

A suit by A. to set aside an alleged collusive decree for rent obtained by B. against C., under which decree A. was ejected from his lands and his crops were seized, is properly brought in the Civil Court as raising a question of title. Such a case is distinguishable from a case of illegal distraint by a landlord, provided for by Clause 7, Section 23, Act X of 1859. Goopenath Dutt v. Preonath Sircar, 6 W. R., Act X R., 7.

Section 24.

In a suit by two shareholders to recover certain accounts and papers alleged to have been kept by their agents, it was held that a zemindar has a right, under Section 24, Act X of 1859, to institute such a suit, and that right is not taken away by the fact of his being one of several shareholders. Puddo Monee Dossee v. Banee Kant Ghose, 9 W. R., 344.

The words "management of land" in Section 24 are not confined to the local agents or gomastahs whose duty it is to make arrangements for the cultivation of waste or unoccupied lands in their villages, but may be extended to agents who are employed in giving leases, and against whom a suit is cognizable in the Collector's Court under that section. Lalla Jebun Lall v. Tekait Pokheerun Singh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 99.

A suit under Act X of 1859, Section 24, is not maintainable, unless the defendant was an agent or servant employed in the management of lands or collection of rents. Held therefore that the Collector had not jurisdiction in a suit for papers in the possession of Sudder Amlahs employed in keeping the books of the office, and in performing the other duties incidental to the office of Sudder Amlahs and not Mofussil Amlahs. Rajah Mohindronarain Singh v. Lalla Ruttun and others, Marsh., 289.

Suits under Section 24 of Act X can only be brought by zemindars or persons in receipt of the rent against agents employed by them. The section does not apply to cases in which prior questions of title are involved. Dullcel Mahomed v. Mohima Chunder Ghose, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 78.

Section 24, Act X of 1859, does not apply to suits against agents involving pure questions of title, e.g., when plaintiff never received rent or was acknowledged by defendant as entitled to it, and defendant never was employed by him or acted as his agent. Jumeer Mundul Gomashtah v. Mohima Chunder Ghose, 5 W. R., Act X R., 15.

A suit against an agent for accounts and papers under Section 24, Act X of 1859, will not lie when the defendant was not employed by the plaintiff, and the plaintiff never was in receipt of the rent. Dubel Mahomed Gomashtah v. Mohima Chunder Ghose, 5 W. R., Act X R., 36.

When two landholders jointly appoint an agent for the collection of rents of their joint property, they can sue him separately under Section 24, Act X of 1859, provided the one who does not sue is made a defendant. Pudda Monee Dossee v. Bistno Chundra Biswas and others, 10 W. R., 495.

In taking an account under Section 24 of Act X of 1859, an agent is bound to account for all moneys received by him on account of his principal, but he may render such account either by showing that they were paid to the principal, or for his benefit and by his authority. As a general rule an agent or collector cannot discharge himself of moneys for which he is liable to account, by proving payments or advances to third parties, unless he can show that such payments or advances were made by the express authority of the principal, or with his knowledge and consent. G. L. Fagan and others v. Chunder Kant Banerjee, 7 W. R., 452.

A suit for moneys received and not accounted for during the agency of the defendant, is cognizable only in the Revenue Court under Section 24, Act X of 1859, notwithstanding that the agency may have been determined prior to the institution of the suit.

An arbitration award cannot change the nature of the claim and convert it into a simple debt cognizable by the Civil Courts. Shoshee Mohun Shaha v. Aheer Sircah, 5 W. R., Act X R., 13.

When a tenant sues to recover possession from the party to whom he pays rent, he is bound to sue in the Revenue Court under Section 24, Act X of 1859. The Civil Court has no jurisdiction in such a case under Section 15, Act XIV of 1859. Hosseinee Khanum v. Rubbia Khanum, 5 W. R., Act X R., 14.

According to Section 24, Act X of 1859, the Civil Court has no jurisdiction to try a suit by a zemindar against an agent and his sureties for money received by the agent in collection of the rents of the zemindary. Syud Woozeer Ali v. Doorga Churn Roy, 5 W. R., Act X R., 79.

A suit for the value of rice received as rent by an agent will lie in the Revenue Court under Section 24, Act X of 1859. Koylash Chunder Ghose v. Jonmajouya Shyam, 7 W. R., 415.

An assignee of a landlord can sue a gomastah employed by the latter for the recovery of moneys received by the gomastah in the course of his employment under Section 24 of Act X of 1859. Lalmohun Singh v. Trailakhanath Ghose, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 17, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 456.

Under Section 24, Act X of 1859, an agent cannot be called upon to account for matters other than rents, or what represents rents collected by him in the course of his employment. Nobinchunder Roy v. Gooro Gobind Surma, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 447.

A sum of money (bhikya) by ryots to the zemindar under compromise instead of on suits for enhancement comes within the category of rents, and a suit by a zemindar against a gomastah to recover such moneys comes within the purview of Section 24, Act X of 1859. Bholanath Mookerjee v. Brijomohun Ghose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 351.

Section 25.

A suit to recover possession by a tenant with a right of occupancy, illegally ejected by his zemindar, whether with or without the assistance of the Collector, under Section 25, Act X of 1859, is cognizable only in the Collector's Court under Clause 6, Section 23.

Where such a suit is brought in the Civil Court, the Judge on appeal should have refused to exercise jurisdiction in the matter, instead of going into the merits when he thought that he had no jurisdiction. Ram Bhujun Bhukut v. Ketaye Ram Chowdhry and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 21.

An appeal from the order of a Deputy-Collector, under Section 25, Act X of 1859, lies to the Commissioner and not to the Judge, and the Deputy-Collector on the application preferred under that section ought not to have determined the question of the validity of a contested pottah. Thakoor Dass v. Phoolay, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 182.

A zemindar cannot eject a ryot having a right of occupancy by giving a pottah to another party. In any case under Section 25, Act X of 1859, the zemindar must proceed to the ejectment by due process of law, and not proprio motu. Sheikh Khossal v. Sheikh Shukhowda, 1 W. R., 119.

A plaintiff who had obtained a decree for ejectment under Section 25, Act X of 1859, and did not execute that decree for some months after, is not entitled to a decree in a suit subsequently brought for damages, in respect of the same lands, for the period included between date of the institution of the ejectment suit and the execution of the decree in that suit, the occupation of the defendants being the occupation of tenants-at-will, and not of trespassers. Aymel Islam v. Jardine, Skinner, and Co., 8 W. R., 501.

Section 25, Act X of 1859, does not give an exclusive jurisdiction to the Collector. Hurro Chunder Nundy v. J. Savi, 1 W. R., 142.

Section 25, Act X of 1859, does not prevent a suit being brought in the Civil Court for possession with mesne profits. Roy Oodit Narain Singh v. Ram Sarun Roy, 1 W. R., 221.

An ejectment by a zemindar without application made to the Collector under Section 25, Act X of 1859, is not necessarily an illegal ejectment. The illegality of the ejectment must be established by evidence. Sheo Ruttun Singh v. Phool Koomaree, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 68.

The proviso in Section 25 of Act X of 1859 is limited to applications for ejectment "on the determination of a lease."

A breach of a stipulation in a lease does not cancel the lease or give a right to eject, unless there is an agreement to that effect. Augur Singh v. Mohinee Dutt Singh, 2 W. R., Act X R., 101.

No appeal lies to the Judge of the Zillah Court from a decision of the Collector under Section 25, Act X of 1859.

Delay in preferring an appeal should be explained.

The High Court, under its general power of superintendence, set aside an order of a lower Appellate Court admitting an appeal filed beyond time, on the ground that the lower Appellate Court had no jurisdiction to entertain an appeal passed by the Collector under Section 25, Act X of 1859. Amra Nashya v. Gogun Shootur, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 35; 11 W. R., 130.

A tenant in possession after expiry of his lease can only be ejected by due course of law (Section 25, Act X of 1859); and if illegally dispossessed he is entitled, under Section 15, Act XIV of 1859, to sue and recover possession, notwithstanding a pottah set up by defendant. Safaoll Khan and another v. Woopean Khan and another, 9 W. R., 123.

Section 25, Act X of 1859, does not preclude a zemindar or other person in receipt of the rent of land from suing in the Civil Court for the ejectment of a tenant after the expiration of his lease, instead of applying to the Collector for assistance. Muddun Mohun Roy v. Gourmonee Goopto, W. R., F. B., 126.

An application under Section 25, Act X of 1859, is not equivalent to the institution of a suit; and whether the Collector accedes to or refuses it, he in no sense adjudicates between the parties. Huree Nath Doss v. Tara Chand Sircar and another, 10 W. R., 295.

Section 25 does not apply to a case in which the plaintiff admits that the defendant has a pottah, but questions the authority of the Naib who granted it. The appeal in such a case lies to the Judge and not to the Commissioner. Joy Kishen Mookerjee v. Ramdhun Roy, 2 W. R., Act X R., 16.

An order passed by the Collector under Section 25, Act X of 1859, has not the force and effect of a Civil Court's decree, and is not binding as against an intervenor in a suit under that Act. Janaye Sirdar v. Dwarkanath Roy, 12 W. R., 322.

Held that the words of Section 25, Act X of 1859, imply that a suit by a zemindar to recover a rent reserved on land which has been let out on a zur-i-peshgee lease should be brought in a Civil Court. Sheo Gholam Singh v. Roy Dinkur Dyal, 12 W. R., Act X R., 215.

Where a party is restored to possession under Section 15, Act XIV of 1859, the opposite party is not deprived of the right to institute proceedings under Section 25, Act X of 1859, and an appeal against an order under this section lies to the Commissioner. Shib Doss Tribedee v. Pearee Soonduree Chowdrain, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 417.

A zemindar is not bound to proceed under Section 25 of Act X of 1859, or to bring a suit for plaintiff's ouster. Section 25 of Act X of 1859 enables a zemindar to apply to the Collector for aid in the ouster of a tenant, but does not make it "incumbent" on him to do so. Where the right to re-enter accrued to defendant at the end of the preceding agricultural year, the ouster of plaintiff in November was not illegal. Girwar v. Syad Nyaz Ali, 2 N. W. R., 306.

Section 27.

Under Section 27, Act X of 1859, no division of tenure or distribution of rent is valid or binding, without the consent in writing of the landlord. Upendra Mohun Tagore v. Thanda Dasi, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 349; 12 W. R., 263.

Two purchasers of holdings in the defendant's zemindary at a sale for arrears of revenue applied to the Collector to have the transfer registered in the zemindar's sherista, under Act X of 1859, Section 27. Their application was refused, and then they brought a suit in the Civil Court to set aside the Collector's order and register their names.

Held that proceedings authorized to be taken in the Collector's Court, under Section 27, Act X of 1859, are not proceedings in a suit, and consequently such proceedings are no bar to a suit in the Civil Court, under Section 2, Act VIII of 1859. Chanda Narayan Ghose v. Kasinath Roy Chowdhry, 4 B. L. R., F. B., 43; S. C., 12 W. R., F. B., 30.

The purchaser of the rights and interests of a cultivator is not bound under Section 27 to notify his purchase to the zemindar. Maharajah Sutteeschunder Roy Bahadoor v. Muddoosoodun Paul Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 91.

A suit will not lie in the Civil Court to set aside an order by a Collector, made under Section 27, Act X of 1859, for the registration of the names of the defendants as shikmee talookdars in the plaintiff's sherista. Moonshee Mahomed Noor Buksh v. Mohun Chunder Poddar and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 67.

The right given by Section 27 of Act X of 1859 to the transferee of a permanent transferable interest in land to have his name registered in the sherista of the zemindar, in the place of that of his vendor, is a right of a civil nature; and therefore the Civil Courts have cognizance of all suits necessary for the purpose of enforcing such right. The jurisdiction of the Collector is not exclusive, but concurrent. Madhub Chunder Pal v. A. Hills, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 175; 10 W. R., 197.

Section 28.

The jurisdiction of the Civil Court to try a resumption suit brought by a zemindar, when the defendant pleads a lakheraj title from before 1790, is not affected by Section 28, Act X of 1859. Sonaton Ghose v. Moulvie Abdool Furar, 2 W. R., 91.

An application under Section 28, Act X, 1859, to dispossess the defendant from certain lands which he held rent free, on the ground that they were part of the plaintiff's estate, and had paid rent subsequent to the Decennial Settlement, was held to raise no cause of action within that section. But as the plaint was received, and the issue under Section 28 raised, the Courts had jurisdiction to try and decide the case. Reazoonnissa v. Motee Singh, 12 W. R., 135.

Suit for assessment on a ryot alleged to hold land within the plaintiff's brimotur estate. Held that, as the ryot claimed no lakheraj holding, no suit under Section 28, Act X of 1859, could lie; and that the only questions for decision were whether the defendant was ryot of the plaintiff, and if so, what rate of rent the plaintiff was entitled to obtain from him. Modhoosoodun Moitre v. Chunder Churn Bhudro, 1 W. R., 360.

An application to the Collector under Section 28, Act X of 1859, is a suit, and an appeal lies to the Zillah Judge, and not to the Revenue Commissioner. So held per Peacock, C. J., Bayley, J., and Jackson, J.; dissentientibus Trevor, J., and Raikes, J. Bissumber Misser v. Gunput Misser, Marsh., 350, and W. R., F. B., 90.

In a suit by a zemindar to assess or resume land alleged to be invalid lakheraj, under Section 28 of Act X of 1859, a Collector has no jurisdiction to try whether a title under a grant made prior to the 1st of December, 1790, is valid or not. Mooroobhee Sahoo v. Latoo Coomar, W. R., F. B., 70.

The proceeding prescribed by Section 28, Act X of 1859, is to be regarded as a suit, and is subject to the provisions respecting appeals to which other suits under the Act are subject. Chowdra Jey Chund v. Kadhoree, 2 N. W. R., 244.

When a suit under Section 28 of Act X of 1859 has been determined by a Collector having jurisdiction to try it, it is subject to an appeal to the Judge, but cannot be contested in a separate suit. Thakoree v. Dhuleep Singh, 2 N. W. R., 261.

A zemindar's suit, under Section 28, Act X of 1859, to resume and assess an invalid lakheraj having been dismissed on the ground that the ryot's holding was of date prior to 1790, it is not competent to the Court, in a subsequent suit under Section 30, Regulation II of 1819, to try the issue whether the holding is of date before or after 1790, but the Court should take for granted, as judicially settled, that the tenure is of date prior to 1790. A zemindar not being an auction-purchaser, the defendant's possession from 1790 bars his claim by limitation. Kalee Pershad Haldar v. Sreemutty Soobhogea Debia, 1 W. R., 218.

The limitation prescribed by Section 28, Act X of 1859, applies only to suits brought under that section.

A suit brought under Section 10, Regulation XIX of 1793, to assess or resume invalid lakheraj created subsequent to December 1st, 1790, is exempt from limitation. In such latter case the onus is on the plaintiff to show that the grant was subsequent to December 1st, 1790. Sonaton Ghose v. Abdool Turab, 2 W. R., 205.

Section 30.

Where a tenant was restored to his holding by a decree to set aside the auction sale of his right,—Held that the cause of action for the tenant to sue under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, arose on the zemindar's refusal to admit him into possession of his holding; and a suit brought within one year from the date of such refusal, which was practically an illegal ejectment by zemindar, would not be barred under Section 30 of that enactment. Luchmun Singh v. Mahomed Hossein, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 42.

The Zillah Judge reversed a decree in the plaintiff's favour on the ground that the suit was barred by the period of limitation prescribed by Section 30 of Act X of 1859; subsequently to this decree Act LIII of 1860 came into operation, which by Sections 1 and 30 provides that suits for causes of actions which had accrued before the 1st of August, 1859, may be instituted within two years from that day; and by Section 2 that suits or appeals dismissed on the ground that they had not been commenced within the period prescribed by the Act of 1859 may be revived. The Zillah Judge rejected an application under the Act of 1860 to revive the suit. Held that this was not an application for a "review of judgment" within Section 378 of Act VIII of 1859, as to which the order of the Court is final; but being for the revival of a suit under the provisions of the latter law, his order was the subject of an appeal. Bungseedhur Mundle v. Puddolochun Roy and others, Marsh., 38.

Held that a suit to eject a cultivator for a breach of contract by planting a bagh must be brought within one year under Section 30 of Act X of 1859, from the date of the first accruing of the cause of action. Ruhmut-ool-lah v. Tuffuzzool Hossein, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 67.

Section 30, and not Section 33, Act X of 1859, is applicable to the case of sureties of a deceased agent, against whom a claim is made for moneys appropriated by him, and the cause of action accrues from the time when the plaintiff had means of knowing what was the amount due to him from the deceased agent, i.e., from the date on which his accounts were put in by his sureties, and not from the date of his death. Sreemutty Puree Soondery Debia v. Bholanath Roodro and others, 8 W. R., 159.

Held that the limitation of one year under Section 30, Act X of 1859, in a suit by a landlord to eject a cultivator for sinking a well, should be computed from the date when the building of the well has assumed such a form that there can be no doubt of the purpose for which it was intended. Heera Kooree v. Syud Noor Ali, 4 Agra Rep., R. A., 1.

A landlord having obtained a decree for enhancement against his tenant, sued him for arrears of rent. Held (with reference to Sections 30 and 32 of Act X of 1859) that the suit might be brought within one year from the date of the final decree fixing the rent in the suit for enhancement, or within three years from the end of the month of Jeyet of the Fusly or Willayuttee year for which such rent is claimed. Joymonee Dassee v. Hurronath Roy, 2 W. R., Act X R., 51.

The limitation prescribed by Section 30, Act X of 1859, applies only to suits instituted under that Act. Surbeshur Dey and others v. Fukeer Mahomed Sircar, 7 W. R., 243.

In 1857 the plaintiff gave a lease of a garden to defendant, who agreed to plant, within five years from the date thereof, 2,000 betel-nut trees. The defendant failed to do so. In 1867 the plaintiff brought the present suit for ejectment, on account of the breach of the contract entered into by the defendant. Held that, by Section 30, Act X of 1859, the suit was barred by limitation. Kali Kamal Mazumdar v. Shib Suhai Sukul, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 47.

An appeal lies under Section 30, Act X of 1859, whenever there is a difference of opinion between the Judge and the Assessors whether the Assessors agree with each other or not.

Semble,—In cases under that Act the evidence should be recorded by the Judge according to the provisions of Section 172, Act VIII of 1859. William Heysham v. Bholanath Mullick, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 221.

Section 32.

Under Section 32, Act X of 1859, the rent of any portion of one year (1273) is recoverable at any time up to the last day of the third year (1276) after its close. Bykunt Ram Roy v. Mussamut Shurfoonissa Begum, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 523.

Under Section 32, Act X of 1859, an appeal relating to the valuation of a claim can be entertained by the High Court. Basoohend Furush v. Huree Pandey, 11 W. R., 479.

Section 32, Act X of 1859, does not authorize the recovery of only 3 years' rent, but requires suits for the recovery of rents to be instituted within 3 years from the end of the Bengalee or Fuslee year, as the case may be. Gossain Umur Narain Poorec v. Arurut Lall, alias Baboo Jan, 7 W. R., 301.

The words in Act X of 1859, Section 32, limiting suits for arrears of rent due at the passing of the Act, to a period of "three years after the passing of the Act," refer to the date when the Act passed, and not to the subsequent date fixed for its coming into operation. Peary Mohun Dass v. McArthur, Marsh., 637, and Watson & Co. v. Rutnokant Roy, W. R., 1864, Act X, Rul. 19.

The words "passing of this Act" in Section 32, Act X of 1859, refer to April, 1859, the date on which the Act received the Governor-General's assent. For all rents then due, suit should be brought within three years from that date, or before April 29th, 1862. Moran v. Bindoobashinee Debea, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 5.

In a suit governed by the limitation prescribed by Section 32, Act X of 1859, a plaintiff is entitled to no diminution of time on account of the period during which the suit was pending in a Court without jurisdiction, as provided by Section 14, Act XIV of 1859. Juggurnath Roy Chowdhry v. Raj Chunder Roy, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 120.

The three years' limitation provided by Section 32, Act X of 1859, is in general terms, and does not admit of any exceptions, e.g., the pendency of a suit for enhancement for 1265 will not save limitation in respect to the rent for 1266. Nobokanth Dey v. Rajah Borodakanth Roy Bahadoor, 1 W. R., 100.

Act X of 1859 recognizes no deduction whatsoever in computing the three years' limitation prescribed by Section 32. Dakhina Dabea v. Romeshchunder Dutt, 1 W. R., 142.

Where a ryot's suit contesting a notice of enhancement was dismissed, and the dismissal confirmed in special appeal in the month of May, the landlord's suit brought in December of the same year, for rent at an enhanced rate, according to notice, was held to be barred by Section 32, Act X of 1859. Huree Kishore Ghose v. Komodinee Kant Banerjee, 10 W. R., 41.

The dismissal of a former suit to contest a notice of enhancement, on the ground of protection as a mokurrureedar holding under a pottah, is a sufficient confirmation of the enhancement to take the present suit for arrears of rent at the enhanced rate out of the operation of the proviso in Section 32, Act X of 1859. Puddo Lochun Bhadooree v. Chundernath Roy, 5 W. R., Act X R., 51.

The limitation of six months prescribed by Section 6, Act VI of 1862 (B. C.), applies to deposits made after rents have become due, and does not interfere with the limitation for suits for enhanced rent, as prescribed by Section 32, Act X of 1859. Taramonee Koonwaree v. Jeebun Mundar and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 98.

When a suit was brought within three years from the passing of Act X of 1859, for arrears of rent of 1266 to 1269, and three months of 1269,—Held that the suit was not barred by limitation under Section 32, and that the claim for the arrears of 1266 which were not due till 1267 was in time, though that was a period preceding the passing of the Act. Ranee Mashishuree Dossee v. Ram Sagur Singh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 69.

Section 33.

In a suit by the manager of a factory to recover from a surety certain sums collected as rent by a deceased putwaree, in which suit the defendant pleaded limitation,—Held that plaintiff was not entitled to reckon the year which the law gave him to bring the suit from the date on which he acquired from the surety information of the state of his accounts. If a person's ignorance of the state of his accounts is owing to his own negligence, he can claim no benefit under Section 33, Act X of 1859. William Biddell v. Chutterdharee Lall and others, 12 W. R., 116.

In a suit against an agent under Section 33, Act X of 1859, where fraud is alleged, before applying the limitation prescribed by that section, the plaintiff should have an opportunity of proving that by the fraud of the defendant he was kept from a knowledge of his rights. Ram Kant Chowdhry v. Brojo Mohun Mozoomdar, 6 W. R., Act X R., 20.

In a suit for the recovery of money in the hands of an agent, the limitation prescribed by Section 33, Act X of 1859, counts from the date of the suspension of the agent. Radhika Pershad Chatterjee v. Ramdhun Pooroheet, 6 W. R., Act X R., 27.

Section 33, Act X of 1859, gives the benefit of the extended period of limitation to a man who shows reasonable diligence, and not to one who having the means of knowledge carelessly neglects to investigate the accounts. Dhanput Singh v. Rhamun Mundul, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 269.

A suit under Act H of 1859 against the surety of an agent employed in the collection of rents, for losses occasioned by the embezzlement of his principal, is not governed by the period of limitation prescribed by Section 33 of the Act, but by that prescribed by Section 30, namely, "one year from the date of the accruing of the cause of action." Beelasmonee and others v. Nusseeboolam, Marsh., 410.

By Section 33 of Act X of 1859, "suits for the recovery of money in the hands of an agent, or for the delivery of accounts or papers by an agent, may be brought at any time during the agency, or within one year after the determination of the agency of such agent." Held, where an agent was dismissed, and after such dismissal rendered an account showing a balance due to the landholder, that a suit for such money might be maintained notwithstanding the lapse of more than a year from the dismissal of the agent before the suit was commenced, because a cause of action arose out of the admitted balance of account.

Semble,—That a suit may be maintained upon such account stated, in which the period of limitation would be regulated, not by Act X of 1859, but by Act XIV of 1859.

Semble,—If the account so rendered were fraudulent, then the latter clause of the 33rd Section of Act X of 1859, that "if any fraudulent account shall have been rendered by the agent the suit may be brought within one year from the time when the fraud shall have been first known to such person," would apply to extend the time. Chowdhry Chatterpaul Singh v. Foujdar Roy, Marsh., 405.

If a principal suspends an agent, the agency must be held to have been determined within the meaning of Section 33, Act X of 1859. Muddun Mohun Roy v. Gopee Mohun Roy, W. R., Act X R., 8.

The receipt by a decree-holder of a portion of the surplus sale proceeds lying in deposit in the Collector's Court, without opposition on the part of the judgment-debtor, is not such a receipt as is contemplated by Section 33. Mohabeer Pershad Singh v. The Collector of Tirhoot, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 433.

Section 54.

A suit for arrears of rent was dismissed by the Deputy Collector for default under Section 54, Act X of 1859. Thereupon a fresh suit was brought by the same plaintiff for the recovery of the said arrears, and a decree was obtained. On appeal the Judge reversed the decision of the Deputy Collector, and dismissed the suit. The plaintiff then applied, under Section 58, Act X of 1859, for revival of the former suit, but the Deputy Collector rejected the application. On appeal the Judge held that the suit might be revived, and remanded the case for trial.

The High Court, under its general power of superintendence, set aside the order of the Judge, as passed without jurisdiction, holding that although the Deputy Collector had formerly struck off the case under Section 54, yet it was in fact an order under Section 55; and therefore under Section 58, Act X of 1859, no appeal lay to the Judge. Mir Habib Sobhan v. Mahendro Nath Roy, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 32; 11 W. R., 129.

The first Court having struck a case off its file under Section 54, Act X of 1859, on the alleged ground that there was no appearance on the part of the plaintiff or defendant, the lower Appellate Court considered an appeal barred by Section 58.

Held that Section 54 was erroneously cited by the first Court, whose view of the case, as well as the order it passed, would be covered by Section 68; and that as the contention was that no default had been committed, but that plaintiff had appeared by his constituted agent, an appeal lay from the order of the first Court, which the lower Appellate Court had jurisdiction to entertain. Kalee Chunder Chowdhry v. Kristo Chunder Biswas and others, 12 W. R., C. R., 169.

Section 54 precludes plaintiff from again instituting a suit struck off under that section, if barred by limitation. Okoor Chunder Mitter v. Bhagirath Saha, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 123.

Section 54, Act X of 1859, does not apply to a case in which (both parties being present) the Court held that, in the absence of documentary evidence, the plaintiff's claim must be dismissed. The decision being a dismissal of the suit after adjudication of the merits, the matter must be considered res adjudicata. Mohanund Chowdhry v. H. A. Eglinton, 1 W. R., 343.

Section 58.

On an application under Section 58, Act X of 1859, for the revival of a suit decreed ex-parte, a Deputy Collector acts contrary to law if he cancels the original decree before the defendant has satisfied him that there are good and sufficient reasons for granting the application. Dunkoo Dutt v. Goluck Mohun Chowdhry, 2 W. R., Act X R., 77.

The revival of a suit under Section 58, Act X of 1859, does not re-open the case as regards all the defendants, but only as regards the party who has applied to have his particular case revived and heard on the merits. Brojonath Surma Chuckerbutty and another v. Anund Moyee Debia Chowdhrain, 7 W. R., 237.

On application by a defendant for the review of an ex-parte judgment by a Deputy Collector on the ground of non-service of notice, the suit was ordered to be replaced on the file, and a notice was issued to the plaintiff that a day had been fixed for the re-hearing of the case, and intimating that if he had any objections he might make them on that day. The plaintiff appeared on the day fixed, but failed to show that the notice had been served on the defendant.

Held that the admission of the review was not a contravention of Section 58, Act X of 1859. Ali Azim v. Rammanick Roy, 12 W. R., 195.

The order of a Collector, complying with an application made more than 15 days after any process for enforcing the judgment has been executed, for the revival of an ex-parte decree, is not final under Section 58, Act X of 1859, because it is null and void for want of jurisdiction. Kanye Doss v. Nobin Chunder Chowdhry and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 54.

A Judge has no authority to order a Deputy Collector to determine whether there are sufficient grounds for admitting to a re-hearing a case which has been decreed by the Appellate Court. Section 58, Act X of 1859, applies to Courts of first instance, not to Appellate Courts. Sreenath Dutt and others v. Ramgopal Chatterjee and others, 11 W. R., 108.

A Collector does not act without jurisdiction in reviving, under Section 58, Act X of 1859, an ex-parte decree passed by a Deputy Collector upon an application made within fifteen days from the sale in execution of that decree. Jotendro Mohun Tagore v. Kinkuree Debee, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 57.

Held that there is no appeal from a judgment or order of the Revenue Court against a plaintiff by default for non-appearance, such being the express provisions of Section 58, Act X of 1859. Bluck Rai v. Ajoodhya Rai and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 160.

Section 58, Act X of 1859, does not extend to take away the right of appeal in a case where the defendant, having once appeared, is absent on the day of trial. R. Watson and others v. Porandhon Tehsildar, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 18.

A Deputy Collector has no right to entertain a petition for review of judgment under Section 58, Act X of 1859, after his decree has been modified by the Judge in appeal. Soobul Chunder Gooho v. Tumeesoodeen Chowdry, 14 S. W. R., C. R.. 414.

Section 64.

The right of appeal is not lost to a plaintiff whose suit is dismissed for default by reason of non-appearance as a witness, or when the appellant wants to prove that he should not have been summoned at all.

The prohibition under Section 64, Act X of 1859, against appeals from decision of dismissal for default applies only to cases of dismissal before the settlement of issues.

When a defendant does not allege the plaintiff's knowledge as to the amount of deductions claimed by the defendant, and the plaintiff sufficiently admits the class and description of the deductions, the plaintiff need not be summoned under Section 64, Act X of 1859, but the onus is on the defendant to prove the amount. Lekhraj Roy v. W. Buckland, 5 W. R., Act X R., 65.

When the agent of a plaintiff is unable to give sufficient evidence the Court should, under Section 64, Act X of 1859, require the attendance of the principal, and not dismiss the suit by a reference to Section 35, which refers to an earlier stage, and has nothing to do with a case after it has once proceeded to a hearing. Baboo Lekhraj Roy v. W. H. Buckland, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 51.

Section 69.

A newly-appointed tehsildar stands in the same position in respect to arrears of rent which accrued during the time of his predecessor as in respect to rents accruing during his own time, and may take advantage of Section 69, Act X of 1859, in respect of one as well as the other.

Held (by Markby, J.) that no one can be plaintiff in a suit for rent except the person who has the right to recover; the only effect of Section 69 being to enable the person who is employed in the collection of rents to sue as agent.

Held also (by Markby, J.) that though it has been decided that a general authority to collect rents and to sue for them must be stamped, it has not yet been decided whether such authority must be in writing. Madhoosoodun Singh v. William Moran and Co., 11 W. R., 43.

Section 71.

The property in suit had been sub-let to defendant on the stipulation that if the rent was in arrear for three kists, the lease would be liable to cancelment. Plaintiff sued to eject the lessee, on the allegation that the lease was forfeited. Held that as the only ground given for cancelment was non-payment of arrears of rent, the case fell under Section 71, Act X of 1859; and as the amount due had been paid into Court, defendant was entitled to the protection afforded by the latter portion of that section. Kumola Sahuy v. Ram Ruttun Neogy, 11 W. R., 201.

Section 77.

The intervention contemplated by Section 77, Act X of 1859, is not that of a party claiming to be the tenant, but that of a party who claims the right to receive the rent. Rajkristo Bhuttacharjee v. Nobin Chung and another, 10 W. R., 23.

Section 77, Act X of 1859, does not allow an intervenor to set up an allegation of receipt of rent against a recent declaration of title. Umbica Churn Nag v. Mussamut Shibosoondery Dabea, 10 W. R., 320.

Suit for possession of meheteran lands purchased by the plaintiff, in execution of a decree against certain ghatwals, and from which he had been illegally ejected by the ghatwals, after having been formally put into possession of the same. Held that the Government could not, as an intervenor in such a suit, and in special appeal, ask the Court to determine whether the sale was illegal or collusive as between the plaintiff and the zemindar. The Government v. Khetoo Dutt and another, 6 W. R., 169.

An intervenor under Section 77, Act X of 1859, is bound to prove not only actual receipt of rent, but receipt in good faith; where he admits his signature to a farming lease purporting to have been granted by him, but pleads that in granting it he was deceived, he is bound to prove this special plea of fraud. Bhyrub Chunder Chund v. Sheikh Khulul and others, 8 W. R., 493.

Section 77, Act X of 1859, provides for intervention only by one who claims the right to receive the rents, not by one who merely contends that they had been assigned to him under a special agreement. Gridharee Singh v. M. Collis, 8 W. R., 497.

The procedure of the Revenue Courts does not admit of third parties being introduced into the record, excepting under the circumstances prescribed by Section 77, Act X of 1859. Doorga Narain Roy Chowdhry v. Kishen Mohun Doss and others, 10 W. R., 54.

The only point at issue in a proceeding before the Collector under Section 77, Act X of 1859, is whether the intervenor has actually and in good faith received and enjoyed the rents of the lands in suit before and up to the time of the commencement of the suit, without reference to either registration or title. G. R. Barry v. Dwarkanath Biswas, 1 W. R., 113.

An intervenor, under Section 77, Act X of 1859, must not only show that he received rent, but that his receipt was bonâ fide. Woomesh Chunder Dutt v. Bhogoban Chunder Roy, 9 W. R., 305.

When an intervenor in a suit to recover rent is made a party at the request of the plaintiff, the latter cannot afterwards, by special appeal, get rid of the effect of his own act. Sham Chund Ghose Mundul v. Dayamoyee Mundulnee, 9 W. R., 338.

An attachment having been made in execution of a decree for rent, an intervenor claimed the land as mortgaged to himself, but his application was rejected, and he was directed by the Collector to bring his objection, if he had any, under Section 269, Act VIII of 1859.

Held that he was not bound to do so, and his omission did not bar his right to bring a suit to establish the validity of the mortgages under which he claimed, provided it was brought within the period permitted by Act XIV of 1859. Deen Dyal Burmo Doss v. Poran Doss, 9 W. R., 474.

In a suit by a tenant to recover possession of a tenure from which he had been illegally ejected by the person entitled to receive rents for the same, it was held that a third party who intervened on the ground of being in possession of the land in question was not entitled to be heard; Act X of 1859 containing no provision (except in the case provided for in Section 77) by which the Court of a Collector is enabled to bring in as parties to the suit persons other than plaintiff and defendant. Leelachul Mundul v. Soondery Bewa, 9 W. R., 519.

Where an intervenor claimed a portion of the subject-matter of the suit, it was held that it would be most inconvenient and contrary to all principle if every person claiming a title adverse to those set up by the plaintiff and defendant in the suit should intervene and be introduced into the suit, so that as soon as the plaintiff's title is determined against him the intervenor might take up the case as a fresh claimant. Joy Gobind Doss v. Gour Persaud Shaha and others, 7 W. R., 201.

A butwarra award is no absolute proof of title, and no estoppel in the way of an intervenor who can prove that he has received and enjoyed the rents claimed from a date subsequent to the butwarra. Sreenath Ghossal v. Joy Narain Kavar, 3 W. R., Act X R., 11.

An intervention by a lessee is not the intervention contemplated by Section 77, Act X of 1859. Goordyal Paureh v. Hurdyal Doss, 3 W. R., Act X R., 16.

An under-tenant may sue to recover his under-tenure sold by his zemindar for arrears of rent. He may also prefer his claim in the Civil Court, although he did not previously intervene in the Collector's Court, under Section 106, Act X of 1859. Mooktokashee Dassia v. Brojander Coomar Roy, 3 W. R., Act X R., 156.

Suit for enhancement of rent on certain howala tenures in which third parties intervened as auction-purchasers and as tenants in possession. Held that there is nothing in Act X of 1859 restricting the right of third parties to intervene, until a tenure is put up for sale; but that when it appears that their rights and interests will be affected by the Collector's decision, they are entitled to assert those rights before that decision is given.

Held also that the landlord was not bound to serve notice of enhancement on the intervenors, unless on proof of his recognition of them as his tenants, and that registration and receipt of rent are not the only proof of such recognition; but that possession for 14 years, under a public transfer, and the payment of rent to the landlord's co-sharer, are indisputable evidence of the intervenors' right to be the tenants. Issur Chunder Bhuttacharjee v. Bhyrub Chunder Shaha, 3 W. R., Act X R., 166.

The defendant applied for the revival of a suit decreed ex parte, and notice was served on the plaintiff to appear. On the day appointed neither party appeared, and the Deputy-Collector, refusing to enter into the claim of an intervenor, struck off the case, and declared the original decree cancelled. Held that he was right in not going into the claim of an intervenor at that stage, but wrong in cancelling the original decree. Dunkoo Dutt v. Goluck Mohun Chowdhry, 2 W. R., Act X R., 77.

Section 77, Act X of 1859, does not permit a stranger to intervene; the intervenor must claim for himself by some title, direct or derivative, that which the plaintiff is seeking. Mohesh Chunder Sircar v. Augumunissa Beebee, 4 W. R., Act X R., 29.

Third parties may intervene in a suit for rent otherwise than under Section 77, when their rights and interests are manifestly put in jeopardy. Ram Jebun Chowdhry v. Peary Lall Mundle, 4 W R., Act X R., 30.

In a suit for rent in which a claimant intervenes, under Section 77, Act X of 1859, the mere failure of the intervenor to establish his claim does not entitle the plaintiff to a decree. Nawab Nazim of Bengal v. Ruddo Lochun Mundul, 5 W. R., Act X R., 26.

An intervenor, under Section 77, Act X of 1859, who has never been in receipt of rent prior to the commencement of the suit, has no locus standi in Court. Showdaminee Dossee v. Ram Roodro Gangooly and others, 8 W. R., 367.

In a suit for arrears of rent at enhanced rate, defendant pleaded that he had sold the holding to a third party, who thereupon asked to be added as a defendant. Held that such intervenor could not be made a party to the suit. Kalinath Roy v. Iswar Chunder Ghosal, 2 B. L. R., F. B., 89.

In a suit for rent in which the ryot admits tenancy, but a third person intervenes, the only question to be tried as between the plaintiff and the intervenor is who has been in the enjoyment of rent before and up to the time of suit. If the intervenor does not show that he is in the enjoyment of the rent, and if there has been no legal determination of the plaintiff's lease, the intervenor should be directed to establish her title in a separate suit. Nundokishore Chuckerbutty v. Aleemuddee Putwaree, 1 W. R., 289.

A ryot's admitted payment of rent to an intervenor in a suit brought against the ryot is not sufficient evidence to impugn the Judge's finding that the intervenor has given no proof of receipt and enjoyment by him of the rent claimed. Rajah Enaet Hossein v. Rajah Syud Ahmed Rezah, 1 W. R., 292.

An intervention by a minor, and not through his guardian or some friend, is not allowable. Bama Soonduree Dabee v. Greesh Chunder Banerjee, 4 W. R., 106.

In a suit for rent, if a third party intervene under Act X of 1859, Section 77, and the Court find that he, and not the plaintiff in the suit, is entitled to the rent, the proper course is to dismiss the suit, notwithstanding the intervenor admits that he is liable to pay rent to the plaintiff. Kally Churn Dey v. Tarra Chund Byragee, Marsh., 258.

It is not sufficient for an intervenor, under Section 77, Act X of 1859, to prove mere receipt of rents; he must also prove enjoyment thereof. Doyal Kishen Deb v. Kallee Nath Kur, 10 W. R., 67.

In a suit for rent of lands held by defendants as tenants in plaintiff's zemindary, in which it was pleaded that the rent was not due solely to plaintiff, as a moiety was payable to a third party who had given defendants a farm of her share,—Held that such party could not be allowed to appear as an intervenor in the case, as she had made over to the defendants her right to collect the rents. Watson and Co. v. Nilcant Sircar and another, 10 W. R., 331.

Persons not likely to be affected by the result of a suit have no right to intervene and to be made parties to the suit. Ahmed Hossein v. Mussamut Khodeja and others, 10 W. R., 368.

In a suit for a kubuleut on account of lands which were found to belong to plaintiff's talook, and of which plaintiff was in possession, a Judge was held not to have been wrong in refusing to infer, from the mere fact of an intervenor's having come in and taken the rents, that he had taken them in good faith. Hurrish Chunder Roy v. Radha Kishore Talookdar, 11 W. R., 371.

In a suit by a dur-mokurrureedar against ryots for some portion of the rent of one year (1273) and the full rent of the next year (1274), the defendants contested the claim for the year 1274, on the ground that the rights of the mokurrureedar having been sold in execution under Act VIII (B. C.) of 1865, the right of the dur-mokurrureedar had been extinguished by operation of Section 16, and that they had paid the rents for that year to one D., who intervened and was made a party.

Held that the issues to be framed would be in the first instance between the plaintiff and the intervenor, whether the one or the other had been in the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent before and up to the time of the commencement of the suit. Wooma Soondery Dossee v. Beerbul Mundul and others, 11 W. R., 560.

Section 77, Act X of 1859, prescribes a limitation of one year from the date of the Collector's decision. That being so, it is not necessary to look to any other law of limitation. Besides, Act XIV of 1859 (Clause 5, Section 1 of which was relied on by the defendant) does not contemplate decisions before Collectors. Nutto Nushyo v. Soodh Bewa, 1 W. R., 131.

The limitation prescribed by Sections 77 and 140 of Act X of 1859 does not apply to a suit brought in the Civil Court for confirmation of possession of certain lands which formed the subject of a previous suit before the Collector, in which the same plaintiffs (after redeeming certain paddy crops on the same land in their occupation, distrained for alleged arrears of rent) unsuccessfully sued to establish that no rent was due from them, and that the land in question was their own rent-free land. Sheikh Khairoollah v. Rajkishen Mookerjee, 2 W. R., Act X R., 95.

A., having a certificate under Act XX of 1841 (to collect debts due to the estate of his uncle), sued two of the tenants of the landed property belonging to the estate, and his claim was dismissed under Section 77, Act X of 1859. More than a year after this decision, under Section 77, A. brought a suit for possession of the whole estate. Held that his subsequent claim was not barred by the limitation of one year mentioned in Section 77, but only his right to demand the particular amount of rent for which his claim against the two tenants was dismissed under that section. Chunder Sheeker Roy v. Nobin Soonder Roy, 2 W. R., 197.

The time allowed to contest a decision under Section 77, Act X of 1859, is one year from the date of the Collector's decision, and not from that of the Judge, although the Collector's decision may have been favourable and the Judge's adverse to the plaintiff. Neemye Joogy v. Afsurooddeen Mahomed Chowdhry, 3 W. R., Act X R., 155.

The limitation to a suit in the Civil Court to try a question of title after a decision by the revenue authorities, under Section 77, Act X of 1859, counts from the date of the decision of the Collector in appeal. Sreemutty Janokee v. Tahbun Singh, 4 W. R., Act X R., 21.

In computing the period of limitation prescribed by Section 77, Act X of 1859, the date of the decision must be excluded. Radha Monee Chowdhrinee v. Baungshee Mohun Doss, 4 W. R., Act X R., 30.

A person whose right to rent has been refused under Section 77, Act X of 1859, is not bound to sue on his general title within one year. Shatto Ram Mozoomdar v. Anund Chunder Chatterjea, 5 W. R., Act X R., 87.

Section 77 does not bar a suit by a plaintiff who has been shown not to have been in the actual receipt and enjoyment of rent. A suit for recovery of possession founded upon title may be brought by a person against whom a decision of the Revenue Court has been passed under the above section, subject to the ordinary Law of Limitation. Baro Bebee v. Mahomed Ali Kazi, 5 W. R., Act X R., 92.

When a suit is brought in a Civil Court (under Section 77, Act X of 1859) to establish a title against which an adverse decision has been passed on appeal from an order of a Collector or Deputy Collector, the period of limitation for the suit in the Civil Court runs from the date of the decision on the appeal, and not from the original order of the Collector or Deputy Collector. Denonath Bose v. Kally Coomar Roy, 5 W. R., Act X R., 23.

The limitation prescribed by the proviso to Section 77, Act X of 1859, is applicable only to suits by persons having the legal right or title to the rent which formed the subject of the suit in the Revenue Court, to establish their title to such rent. It was not the object of that section to prevent the party who has the right to the land from bringing his action to try his title to the land within twelve years from the date of dispossession. Hurronath Roy and others v. Sreesteedhur Doss, 7 W. R., 153.

When the object of a suit is directly to set aside an order passed under Section 77, Act X of 1859, the limitation of one year applies; but when a party sues on a general right to real property twelve years' limitation applies. Prosunno Monee v. Ram Komul Sein and others, 8 W. R., 294.

When a Deputy Collector in trying a claim under Section 77, Act X of 1859, in a suit for rent below Rs. 100, goes beyond the scope of the law, and instead of merely deciding who is in the bonâ-fide receipt of the rent, goes also into questions of title and decides the right to receive rent as between the plaintiff and intervenor, the appeal lies to the Judge, and not to the Collector. In such a case the Judge is bound to determine the case finally, if the evidence on record is sufficient, and not to remand it to the Deputy Collector for trial of the right issue. Punchanun Koonwar v. Luckhee Prea Debia, 3 W. R., Act X R., 154.

In a suit for rent below Rs. 100, where a third party intervenes, under Section 77, Act X of 1859, if the Deputy Collector decides on the title of the parties, and not on their receipt of rent, the appeal will lie to the Judge, and the Judge is competent to determine the whole case, including the question of the receipt of rent, notwithstanding that the law bars an appeal to the Judge on that point. Bibee Jameerun v. Bhichuk Thakoor, 3 W. R., Act X R., 27.

A decree of the High Court deciding that a party who has obtained a kubuleut from a farmer can sue the farmer on the contract made by him, and that a third party cannot claim in such a case, does not affect the jurisdiction of the Revenue Courts to enquire and decree who is actually and bonâ fide in receipt of the rent and entitled to a decree under Section 77, Act X of 1859.

Whatever may be the legal title to the property, the decision under Section 77 must be in favour of the person who is in actual and bonâ-fide receipt of the rent. The Nawab Nazim of Bengal v. Mehdee Ali, 5 W. R., Act X R., 25.

Section 77, Act X of 1859, does not apply to a suit for rent below Rs. 100, where the ryot and the intervenors deny the title of the plaintiff and his vendor. In such a case the appeal lies from the Deputy Collector to the Judge, and not to the Collector.

Quære,—Whether, even if the appeal lay to the Collector, the defendant, after having appealed to the Judge, could appeal specially to the High Court against the decision of the Judge, on the ground that the Judge had no jurisdiction. Gour Doss Byragee v. Juggernath Roy Chowdhry, 7 W. R., 25.

A jotedar or ryot having a right of occupancy, evicted by the judgment of a Collector in favour of the person entitled to receive rent from him, upon an intervention by such person under Section 77 of Act X of 1859, may, under the latter clause of that section, sue in the Civil Court to establish his title to be restored to possession. Taranath Bhuttacharjee v. Obhoy Churn Haldar and others, 7 W. R., 471.

Where a Deputy Collector rejects an application from a third party to intervene under Section 77, Act X of 1859, a Judge has no jurisdiction on that party's appeal to remand the case to the Deputy Collector for re-trial, with directions to make the intervenor a party. Khondkar Kefaetoollah v. Mahomed Kaleel, 9 W. R., 345.

In a suit for arrears of rent, in which an intervenor opposed plaintiff's claim, and the Deputy Collector, collaterally and incidentally to guiding his mind to a conclusion on the issue which arises under Section 77, Act X of 1859, thinks proper to enquire into and state his opinion as on matters of title between the plaintiff and the intervenor, he cannot be said, in the sense of Section 153, to determine a question of title between the parties by his judgment. Drobo Moyee Dabee v. Bipin Mundul and another, 10 W. R., 6.

The only question which an intervenor, under Section 77, Act X of 1859, is entitled to raise, either before the Collector or in appeal, is one relating to the fact of previous receipt and enjoyment of rent. The legal title, if any, of the losing party is saved for determination in the Civil Court. Markoond Mytee v. Ununt Mohapattur and others, 12 W. R., 157.

A. and B., putneedars, each held a moiety of an estate. C., a ryot, paying rent to both, sold his tenure to D., who also obtained a farming lease of B.'s share in the putnee. A. sued C. for the whole rent of the estate. Held that D. was entitled as B.'s lessor to be made a party to the suit under Section 77 of Act X of 1859. Juramat Mandu v. Nilkunt Sircâr; Manoharn Dasi v. Nilkunt Sircar, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 74; 10 W. R., 110.

Plaintiff sued for rent of land alleged to be a 3 annas 15 gundahs share held by him on a defined right. Defendant admitted the claim. An intervenor appeared, alleging that the land was situate in the 7-annas share of the talook, and that he had purchased 3 annas 15 gundahs of this share, for which a decree had been given to him, and that he held it as a joint co-parcener.

Held that as the decree did not state patently the subject-matter to be that of this suit, the principle laid down in the case of Syud Ahmed Reza (1 Wyman's Journal, 49) did not apply, and that as it did not clearly adjudicate against the plaintiff's right, the principle laid down in the case of Mussamut Tarinee (1 W. R., 331) had no bearing. Accordingly the intervenor was bound to show actual and bonâ-fide receipt of rent as required by Section 77, Act X of 1859. Gugun Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Sheikh Ajmul Aly, 11 W. R., 91.

In a suit for arrears of rent the defendant set up in defence that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist, as the tenure of the plaintiff's superior landlord had been sold for arrears of rent; and that under Section 16, Act VIII of 1865, the plaintiff's tenure had lapsed, and that he had paid rent to the purchaser of the rights of the superior landlord. Under Section 77, Act X of 1859, the purchaser intervened.

Held that the issue to be tried in the case was "the actual and bona-fide receipt of rent by the intervenor up to the time of the suit."

The meaning of the words "the receipt and enjoyment of the rent before and up to the time of the commencement of the suit" (Section 77, Act X of 1859) explained.

Held that the sale of a tenure, under Section 16, Act VIII of 1865, does not ipso facto annul all incumbrances, but certain incumbrances are recognized by this section to survive such sale. Mussamut Umasundari Dasi v. Birbul Mandal, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 183; 11 W. R., 563.

A suit is not maintainable under Act X of 1859, to recover a sum due under a decree for rent obtained under Regulation VII of 1799, and remaining unsatisfied after sale of the tenure. Maharajah Deeraj Mohatabchund v. Dinno Nauth Roy and others, Marsh., 340.

In a suit for rent claimed to be due to the plaintiff by inheritance from his wife S. B., the defendant pleaded that one M. H. was heir to S. B.; and that since her death he had paid rents to him. M. H. intervened, and pleaded that he had succeeded S. B., and was entitled to the rents. Held that as between the plaintiff and the third party the Judge was bound, under Act X of 1859, Section 77, to enquire into "the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by such third person," and to decide the suit according to the result of such enquiry, and that he could not therefore simply dismiss the suit on the mere ground that the plaintiff had failed in establishing his claim. Mirzah Thad Ali v. Mirzah Hingun, Marsh., 50.

Suit against a ryot by the tenant of an ijaradar, whose rights had lapsed, and who had been ejected by due course of law. Held that in such a case neither the plaintiff nor the ijaradar could be considered, under Section 77, Act X of 1859, to have been bonâ fide in the receipt and enjoyment of the rents. Ram Narain Singh v. Hurreeprea Chowdhrain, 2 W. R., Act X R., 67.

Where a suit by the purchaser of an alleged lakheraj tenure for rent from his under-tenant was thrown out by the intervention of the superior landlord, under Section 77, Act X of 1859,—Held that all the plaintiff had to do in a regular suit brought by him in consequence, was to prove that he was entitled to the rent from the under-tenant. It was not necessary for him to prove that his land was valid lakheraj. Raj Chunder Ghose v. Joy Chunder Dutt, 12 W. R., 197.

A Judge has not jurisdiction in an appeal from the decision of a Deputy Collector under Section 77, Act X of 1859, in a suit for rent below Rs. 100, involving no question of title. Poddomonee Dassee v. Krishnendro Roy Chowdhry, W. R., Act X R., 94.

When a third party intervenes in a suit for rent according to Section 77, Act X of 1859, the onus of proving actual receipt and enjoyment of rent is on the intervenor and not on the landlord. Kishen Chunder Doss v. Buratee Sheikh, 2 W. R., Act X R., 36.

An appeal lies to the Judge in a suit for rent below Rs. 100, in which a third party intervenes under Section 77, Act X of 1859, if the Deputy Collector does not confine his enquiries to the mere fact of the receipt and enjoyment of rent, but enters upon the consideration of and decides various questions of title. Moha Moya Chowdhrain v. Ramnath Chowdhry and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 1.

In a suit for recovery of arrears of rent a third party intervened, claiming a share of the rent, alleging that he had acquired a right under a decree of the Civil Court. A predecessor of the intervenor had been in possession of a share of the property; and after her death, which took place four years ago, no rent had been actually received and enjoyed by the intervenor.

Held that under Section 77, Act X of 1859, the claim of the intervenor could not be entertained; and that under this section the Court has no jurisdiction to decide the question of title. Modhoosoodun Bagchi v. Rajah Mohes Chundra Singh, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 202; 12 W. R., 62.

Rent paid to a third party, at the instance of the landlord, is not recoverable by the landlord a second time. Section 77, Act X of 1859, does not apply. J. Smith v. Sheo Persad Singh, 1 W. R., 254.

Where, in a suit for rent instituted under Act X of 1859, a third person to whom the defendant has in good faith paid the rents up to the commencement of the suit intervenes, under Section 77, the suit ought to be dismissed, notwithstanding the existence of an ikrar, by which the defendant agreed to pay the rents to the plaintiff. If the plaintiff is entitled to the rents he must establish such title in the Civil Court. Prollad Singh and others v. Dhuroop Singh, Marsh., 365.

Where tenants who are sued for rent plead payment to third parties who had always theretofore made collections, it is incumbent on the Revenue Court to proceed under Section 77, Act X of 1859, making such third parties parties to the suit, and determining whether rent has been paid in good faith to such third parties. Jawahir and others v. Mussamut Lado and others, 4 Agra Rep., 302.

When a plaintiff and the zemindar claim rent for the same land from the same tenant, the case comes under Section 77; and the point to be decided is, who was in bonâ-fide receipt and enjoyment of the rent up to the commencement of the suit.

In a case under Section 77, Act X of 1859, when the Deputy Collector wrongly goes into and decides questions of title which do not arise on the pleadings the appeal lies to the Judge. Syud Jeshan Hossein v. Narain Doss, 5 W. R., Act X R., 56.

The fact of an intervention under Section 77, Act X of 1859, having been disallowed in a former suit cannot exclude the party from intervening in a subsequent suit, if he can show that he had been in the bonâ-fide enjoyment of the rent previous to the institution of the suit. Bhairo v. Sheikh Uzirali, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 373.

Section 77, Act X of 1859, refers to cases in which two parties claim to receive the rent from the same ryot, not to cases in which the intervenor claims the rent from a ryot other than the ryot sued by the plaintiff. Dhurm Lall Chowdhry v. Shumbhoo Chowdhry, 12 W. R., 81.

Where parties have conflicting interests, Section 77, Act X of 1859, does not allow the title to receive rents to be tried in a rent suit, but reserves such questions to be determined in a regular suit. Ram Chunder Banerjee v. Sheikh Ekramollah, 12 W. R., 153.

A mere order of dismissal for default of prosecution is not a decision within the meaning of the provision of Section 77, Act X of 1859. Sheikh Mouzzum Ally v. Sheo Lall Jha, 4 W. R., Act X R., 45.

No appeal lies from an order refusing to make an intervenor, under Section 77, Act X of 1859, a defendant in a rent suit. Ajmeet Pattuck v. Ram Lugun Ajhee, 12 W. R., 355.

In a suit to obtain a kubuleut the defendant admitted the plaintiff's title. A third party intervened (under Section 77, Act X of 1859), alleging that he was in the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent.

Held that the onus was upon the intervenor to prove that he was bonâ fide in actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent, and not on the plaintiff to prove his possession. Sheikh Baharulla v. Sheikh Magan, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 61.

Section 77 of Act X of 1859 does not bar a right of appeal to the Judge in a suit for a kubuleut. Golab Bebee v. Ruhmutoollah Manee, 1 W. R., 33.

An intervenor under Section 77, Act X of 1859, has a right of appeal to the Judge in a suit for rent under Rs. 100 in which a question of title was determined by the Deputy Collector. Chunder Kant Sircar v. Beerbul Puramanick, 5 W. R., Act X R., 70.

In a suit for arrears of rent where plaintiff alleged himself to be proprietor of an 8-annas share, and a third party intervened, claiming to have been in possession and enjoyment of the rents of 4 annas out of the 8 annas, the Judge, in appeal, finding that neither plaintiff nor intervenor had been in possession and enjoyment of the 4 annas of the rent in dispute, dismissed plaintiff's suit.

Held that the Judge, having found against the intervenor as between him and the plaintiff, was bound, under Section 77, Act X of 1859, to decree for the plaintiff. Phoolabutty Kooer v. Gossain Luchmun Doss and another, 10 W. R., 81.

The words "the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent" in the second part of Section 77, Act X of 1859, cannot mean the actual receipt irrespectively of the question of bona fides alluded to in the first part of the section. Hurronath Roy v. Prannath Roy, 7 W. R., 85.

In a suit for rent where the defendant pleads payment of rent to a third party as rightful heir and as in possession, and the third party intervenes and pleads to the same effect,—Held that, according to Section 77, Act X of 1859, the question of the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent by the third party should alone be enquired into, and the suit decided according to the result of such enquiry. Mirzah Zahid Ali v. Mirza Henjun, W. R., F. B., 14.

No appeal lies to the Judge from a decision passed under Section 77 of Act X of 1859 in a suit for rent less than Rs. 100. Syed Hameedooddeen v. Syed Moulvie Razeooddeen Ahmed, 3 W. R., Act X R., 21.

A party who may fail in a case under Section 77 to show enjoyment and receipt of rent at the time of suit, may still have a good right and title to possession, capable of being duly declared by an independent action in a Civil Court for declaration of title and possession.

Under Section 77, Act X of 1859, limitation bars a civil action not brought within a year to set aside a decision under that section on a suit within the competency of a Revenue Court to decide; but it does not apply to suits which are alone cognizable by the Civil Court. Kishen Coomar Shaha v. Jeebun Singh, 5 W. R., Act X R., 85.

Section 77, Act X of 1859, does not apply to a suit for rent below Rs. 100, where the plaintiff's right to receive the rent is not disputed merely on the ground that the intervenors had actually and in good faith received and enjoyed such rent before and up to the time of the commencement of the suit, but where the ryot and the intervenors denied the title of the plaintiff and his vendor, and the ryot denied that he gave the kubuleut upon which the plaintiff was suing. Gourdass Byragee v. Juggernath Roy Chowdhry, 7 W. R., 25.

Act X of 1859 does not provide for an intervention by a third party under any other circumstances than those contemplated in Section 77, i.e., only where the title to receive the rent is disputed. Jogender Chunder Ghose v. Lukhee Ureea Dassee, 8 W. R., 78.

When the right to receive the rent is not disputed in a suit between the landlord and the tenant, the event upon which Section 77 gives a third party the right to intervene does not arise. Syed Mehdee Ali Khan v. Doorga Dass Shidanto, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 72.

According to Section 77, Act X of 1859, in a suit for rent in which a third party intervenes, the only question for decision is whether the plaintiff or the intervenor is in the actual receipt and enjoyment of the rent. Bebee Noor Jahan v. Mutty Lall Sahoo, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 73.

Where an intervenor in a rent suit applies to be made a party under Section 77 of Act X of 1859, distinctly relying upon that section, it must be inferred that his case is that he has been in receipt and enjoyment of the rent before and up to the time of the commencement of the suit, and his petition should not be rejected because it does not contain the words "that he claimed to occupy and receive the rent." Lachmi Narayan Puri v. Pukruj Singh, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 16.

In a suit against ryots for arrears of rent of certain lands the appellant intervened, seeking to be added as a party under Section 77 of Act X of 1859, on the ground that his title to the lands in question had been declared by the decree of a Civil Court. Held (reversing the decision of the Collector) that the Deputy-Collector was right in limiting his enquiry to the question whether the lands in dispute were covered by the decree. Bir Chandra Juburaj v. Madhut Kaibartu, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 160.

Though the decision of a Deputy-Collector cannot under Section 77 determine a question of title, yet if no suit to determine the question of title be instituted in the Civil Court within a year, the decision of the Revenue Courts is not final beyond the extent of the rents sued for. Sreemutty Jonokee v. Tukbun Singh, 4 W. R., Act X R., 21.

Section 77 is applicable to decide who last received rents, and not when there is a conflict of title. Mushentoollah v. Nassim Nusio, 4 W. R., Act X R., 35.

In a suit to set aside as spurious a hibbanamah by which property otherwise the property of plaintiff would become the property of another,—Held that as there was no question of recovery of rent or mesne profits or anything else which could bring the case under Section 77, Act X of 1859, no plea of limitation either special or general could be taken. Aratoonissa v. Akram Ali, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 454.

In deciding a case under Section 77 of Act X of 1859 a Deputy-Collector determined a question relating to an interest in land as between parties having conflicting claims thereto.

Held (Turner, J., doubting) that an appeal lay under Section 153 of Act X of 1859 to the Zillah Judge. Shunkur Lall v. Nunney, 1, 7 N. W. R., 130.

The specific object of Section 77 of Act X of 1859 is to protect tenants from the expense and hardship of being impleaded in suits where the real issue is a question between rival claimants of the proprietary right.

The circumstance of a Court having jurisdiction to entertain a suit or an appeal does not give it jurisdiction to try and to determine in such suit or appeal a question which it is not competent to try at all. Brooke v. Surubjeet, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 30.

Section 78.

In calculating the fifteen days allowed for payment of arrears of rent by Section 78 of Act X of 1859, the day on which the decree was passed should be excluded from the computation. Sheopalaul Singh v. Nabee Ashruf Khan, 3 N. W. R., 342.

It is not necessary to declare in a decree given under Section 78 of Act X of 1859 that fifteen days' time should be allowed to the tenant. But the decree must specify the amount of the arrear, and payment of this, with costs and interest as decreed, within fifteen days, ipso facto stays execution. Seetul Singh v. Thakoor Tewary, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, p. 31.

The provisions of the last clause of Section 78, Act X of 1859, apply to every suit in which ejectment of a ryot is sought on the ground that he has failed to pay rent. Mahomed Hossein Khan v. Khusroo Fakeer, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 44.

Where a plaintiff sued for arrears of rent, praying that if they were not paid defendant should be ejected, and the Deputy-Collector gave him a decree setting forth that the prayer was a proceeding under Section 78, Act X of 1859, and ordering that there should be such a proceeding to execute, the order was held to be an order for ejectment. Shaik Gunnee Mahomed v. Bahooroollah, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 240.

Where a judgment-debtor fails to invoke the protection of Section 78, Act X of 1859, against a decree-holder, he cannot afterwards in special appeal claim the fifteen days' time allowed under that section. Choonee Mundur v. Chunder Lall Dass, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 178.

Section 78 of Act X of 1859 contains a positive direction of law by which the Revenue Courts are required, in all suits for ejectment for non-payment of rent, clearly to specify in the decree the amount of rent default in payment of which has conferred a right of re-entry on the landlord, and to stay execution of their decrees if the amount found due, with interest and costs, be paid into Court within the time therein specified.

This overrides all private agreement to the contrary, or rather renders their enforcement by suit in the Revenue Court impossible. Lulloo Singh v. Thakoor Pershad, 2 N. W. R., 249.

A decree under Section 78 of Act X of 1859 not specifying the amount of the arrears of rent will be set aside. Shah Ali Hossein v. Nandar Khan, 2 N. W. R., 62.

Plaintiff sued defendant under Clause 5, Section 23, Act X of 1859, for direct or khas possession of a farm (for which the latter had paid a bonus), stating that the contract between them was that, on default in payment of the farming rent as per kistbundee, a suit was to be instituted for the arrears, and in execution of the decree the lease was to be forfeited, and the plaintiff, the lessor, entitled to enter upon khas possession, unless the amount was paid within 15 days. It was further urged that defendants, the lessees, had defaulted; that plaintiff had obtained decrees; and that defendants, having failed to pay within 15 days, had violated the lease, and were liable to be ejected. Held that the terms of the contract were in strict accordance with the provisions of Section 78, Act X of 1859, and that plaintiff ought to have brought his suit under that section, and obtained a decree for ejectment. From the date of such decree, specifying the amount of arrear, the lessors would have 15 days for payment. Kashee Nath Roy Chowdhry and others v. Sabitree Soonderee Dossia and others, 10 W. R., 156.

Under Section 78, Act X of 1859, a decree for ejectment must be conditional on the defendant not paying the decreed rent within 15 days. Lauder v. Benode Lal Ghose, 6 W. R., Act X R., 37.

Where a se-putneedar, under Section 78, Act X of 1859, dispossessed his ijaradar under a decree for arrears of rent, previous possession by a durijaradar, claiming under the defaulting ijaradar, was held to be no bar to the claim of the se-putneedar to obtain rents or kubuleuts direct from the cultivators of the lands of his se-putnee. Aghore Chunder Mookerjee v. Nund Moochee and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 51.

After execution has once been taken out against a ryot, under Section 78, Act X of 1859, a Collector has no power to review his judgment, or put the ryot back into possession of his land. Ram Jeebun Doss and another v. Doyallee Dossee, 11 W. R., 246.

Where a Deputy Collector, who had decreed a suit for ejectment on proof of arrears due, held afterwards in execution that as the arrear had been paid up within 15 days, the tenant could not be ejected in accordance with Section 78, Act X of 1859, his order in execution was declared to be ultra vires and illegal. Deen Dyal Poramanic v. Ramcoomar Chowdhry and others, 10 W. R., 345.

The latter part of Act X of 1859, Section 78, which enacts that "in all cases of suits for the ejectment of a ryot, or cancelment of a lease, the decree shall specify the amount of arrears; and if such amount, together with interest and cost of suit, be paid into Court within fifteen days from the date of the decree, execution shall be stayed," applies not only to suits for ejectment of the ryot, or cancelment of the lease, on account of the non-payment of arrears of rent, but to all suits for eject-ment brought by the lessor on account of a breach of the conditions of his lease by the defendant. Fitzpatrick v. Gowan, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 420; S. C., 6 W. R., Act X R., 64.

Where in a suit for the rent of the current year and for ejectment under Section 78, Act X of 1859, supported by a previous unsatisfied decree, a decree was passed for the rent of the current year without including the amount claimed under the previous unsatisfied decree, and the plaintiff neither applied to the lower Court to amend its decree nor appealed against that part of it,—Held that the defendant, having paid the amount of arrear specified in the decree had saved himself from ejectment. R. Savi v. Mohesh Chunder Bose, W. R., Act X R. (1864), 29.

A tenant who has not wilfully broken any of the essential stipulations of his covenant, or has not injured his lessor's property, may be entitled to the benefit of Section 78, Act X of 1859, and allowed to bar forfeiture of his tenure by paying in the amount of arrears decreed against him within 15 days of the date of the decree. Dulli Chand and others v. Meher Chand Sahoo and others, 8 W. R., 138.

Section 78, Act X of 1859, applies equally whether the ryot's liability to be ejected arises under Section 21 of that Act, or under special stipulation in the contract between him and his landlord. Sheikh Mahomed Hossein and another v. Boodhun Singh, alias Roopnarain Singh, 7 W. R., 374.

Execution may be stayed on a decree for arrears of rent by payment of the amount, under Section 78, Act X of 1859, by a purchaser from the tenant of his interest in the terms. Sarodapersad Roy Chowdhry v. Nobinchunder Dutt, Marsh., 417.

Section 78 of Act X of 1859 authorizes the joinder of a claim for rent in an ejectment for non-payment of rent. Held that the section does not empower a landlord to eject his tenant for non-payment of rent due in the middle of the Bengalee year, but that an ejectment for such defendant is maintainable only for arrears due at the end of the year under Section 21. Sadi v. Chaund Sickdar, Marsh., 348.

In a suit under Act X of 1859, Section 78, for ejectment against A., on the ground of non-payment of rent, B. has no right to intervene and be made a defendant on the allegation that he is really tenant of the land in question. Mills v. Sheikh Shalim, Marsh., 374.

An eviction by the Collector in consequence of a suit brought by the zemindar under Section 82, Act X of 1859, if it be proved to have been fraudulent and collusive, is illegal and remediable under that Act. Amrit Lall Banerjee v. Bhoobun Mohinee Dassee and others, 7 W. R., 24.

Section 92.

A rule having been issued calling on a judgment-debtor to show cause why an order of the Collector in appeal, reversing an order made by a Deputy Collector in execution, should not be set aside, the rule was discharged with costs, inasmuch as although the Collector had no jurisdiction to make the order which he made, the Deputy Collector's order was wrong, being a violation of the provisions of Section 92 of Act X of 1859, and could not be upheld. Tarachaund Mundle v. Bhyrub Chunder Chuckerbutty, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 551.

The meaning of Section 92, Act X of 1859, is that no execution shall issue upon a decree, unless a proper application for execution be made within three years from the date of decree. Heralall Seal and others v. Pooran Matteah and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 84.

Under Section 92 of Act X of 1859 no process of execution for a sum not exceeding Rs. 500 can issue after the lapse of three years from the date of judgment. Prosunno Coomar Surma Chowdhry v. Ram Mohun Sircar, 3 W. R., Act X R., 131; Chooramun Singh v. Chotoorsal Singh, 4 W. R., Act X R., 27.

An application for the execution of a decree under Act X of 1859 cannot be complied with under Section 92 after the expiry of three years from the date of the decree, on the ground of intermediate applications and proceedings in execution. Bimola Debia Chowdhrain v. Nilkunt Sein, 3 W. R., Act X R., 157.

Sections 103—110.

Sections 103 of Act X and 209 of Act VIII of 1859 give no authority to a Judge to receive an appeal from an order passed by a Collector in execution of a decree under Act X. Chunder Koomar Roy v. H. Mackenzie, 3 W. R., Act X R., 10.

A person making voluntary payments in his own name to stay a sale in execution of a decree against others cannot sue under Section 102 or 103 of Act X of 1859 for the recovery of the money so paid by him. Mirza Hahim Abdool Wahab v. G. Drummond, 2 W. R., Act X R., 48.

Section 104, Act X of 1859, does not enact that the decree-holder is to pay damages whenever it may be found that there has been an irregularity in publishing the sale processes, wholly irrespective of the question whether such irregularity was caused by his acts or omissions. Ramchunder Surma v. Rajah Kallychurn Singh and others, 7 W. R., 307.

In a sale for arrears of rent under Section 105, Act X of 1859 (not affected by Section 16; Act VIII of 1865, B. C.), the sale is not free of encumbrances created by the defaulter before the sale, unless the right of selling or bringing to sale the tenure for an arrear of rent has been especially reserved by stipulation in the engagements interchanged on the creation of the tenure. Shahabooddeen v. Futteh Ali and another, 7 W. R., 260.

Where a decree-holder was only a sharer in a joint undivided estate, and the property sold was a share in a gantee tenure, the sale did not take place under Section 105, Act X of 1859, but under Section 108, under which latter section only the rights and interests of a defaulter can pass. Meertoonjoy Chowdhry v. Khettur Nath Roy, 5 W. R., Act X R., 71.

No appeal lies from an order under Section 105, Act X of 1859, directing the sale of the judgment-debtor's tenure in execution of a decree for rent. Bhagiruttee Dassee v. Ranee Surnomoye, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 131.

In sales under Section 105, Act X of 1859, the tenure itself is held free of all encumbrances, whereas in sales under Section 110 only the rights and interests of the defaulter are sold. Ramjeebun

Chowdhry v. Peary Lall Mundle, 4 W. R., Act X R., 30.

The right to make payments to preserve an interest, and to recover the sums paid, is not given in the case of gantee jummas and other transferable tenures sold for arrears of rent under Section 105, Act X of 1859; when such payments are neither expressly nor impliedly authorized, they must be regarded as voluntary payments, for the recovery of which no action will lie. Sreenath Haldar v. Ram Soondur Chuckerbutty, 4 W. R., S. C. C. Ref., 4.

The Full Bench Ruling that a sale for arrears of rent, under Section 105, Act X of 1859, is not free of encumbrances created by the defaulter before the sale, unless the right of selling has been finally reserved, does not apply to a case where the tenure itself was not sold. Doorga Soondery Debee v. Dinobundhoo Kyburto Doss and others, 8 W. R., 475.

In sales under Section 105, the tenure itself is held free of all encumbrances, whereas in sales under Section 110 only the rights and interests of the defaulter are sold. Ramjeebun Chowdhry v. Pearyloll Mundul, 4 W. R., Act X R., 30.

When the tenure of a tenant admittedly in possession is sold under Section 105, Act X of 1859, he has no right to sue for the reversal of the sale; but when a party alleges that he is the tenant, and that the person against whom the Act X suit was brought was not the tenant in possession, he has a right to bring his action in the Civil Court to set aside the sale alleged to have been procured by fraud, or to restrain the defendants from availing themselves of rights acquired by such sale. Gungadass Dutt v. Ramnarain Ghose and others, 7 W. R., 183.

Under Section 105, Act X of 1859, an under-tenure may be sold in execution of decree, provided there be an arrear of rent adjudged. Maharajah Sutteeschunder Roy Bahadoor v. Modhoosoodun Paul Chowdhry, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 91.

A sale of an under-tenure for arrears of rent under Section 105 of Act X of 1859,—Held that a sale is free from encumbrances only where a right of sale for arrears of rent has been specially reserved in the engagements interchanged on the creation of the tenure. Section 16 of Act VIII of 1865 of the Bengal Council applies only to purchasers of under-tenures sold under that Act. Shahabooddeen v. Futteh Ali and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 135.

A zemindar who has obtained a decree against a registered tenant for arrears of rent is fully justified in proceeding to sale under Section 105 of Act X of 1859, notwithstanding the tenure was purchased subsequently to the date of the above decree at a sale in execution of a decree of the Civil Court. Mussamut Sufuroonissa v. Saru Dhoopee, 8 W. R., 384.

A. let an under-tenure to B., which under-tenure was sold for arrears of rent under Section 105, Act X of 1859, and bought in by A. On proceeding to take possession A. found that C. had trespassed upon the under-tenure during B.'s tenure, and had held possession for more than twelve years. A. sued to recover possession of the under-tenure, and it was held by the Senior Judge of the Division Bench (Bayley, J.) that A.'s cause of action was the act of dispossession by C., and that the suit was barred, more than twelve years having elapsed; and that A.'s right to sue was not affected by the fact that B.'s tenure was still running. The Junior Judge (Phear, J.) held that the suit was not barred; that the cause of action to A. accrued when he obtained back the property at the auction sale; and that during the period of encroachment the cause of action did not arise to B., and pass from B. to A. during the time the putnee lasted, the putnee entirely disappearing in the superior title of zemindar vendee. Held by the Appellate Court, in confirmation of the view of Phear, J., that the cause of action to A., who was a purchaser of an estate free from incumbrances against C., who was a trespasser, and had encroached on B., the defaulter, must be taken to accrue at the same time as his, A.'s, right to turn out under-tenants of the defaulter —viz., from the time of the purchase of the tenure of the defaulter; and the fact that A. was both talookdar and purchaser did not prevent him from exercising the same rights as any other purchaser would be entitled to. Woomesh Chundra Goopto v. Rajnarain Roy, 10 W. R., 15.

A Civil Court has jurisdiction to entertain a suit by a tenant to recover possession of a tenure from an auction-purchaser at a sale for arrears of rent, under Section 105 of Act X of 1859, although there is no allegation of fraud, the tenant not having been a party to the decree for arrears of rent.

In a sale under Section 105, Act X of 1859, only the judgment-debtor's property can pass. A zemindar is bound to sue the actual tenant when known to him, though the tenant's name has not been registered in his sherista. There can be a legal and valid recognition by a landlord of the vendee of a saleable under-tenure as tenant, notwithstanding that no mutation of names has taken place in his books. Meah Jan Munshi v. Kurruna Mayi Debi, 8 B. L. R., 1.

In executing a decree for arrears of rent a Court, under Section 105, Act X of 1859, has power only to seize and sell that which at the time is the property of the judgment-debtor. Where therefore a decree was obtained against persons who were originally part proprietors of the land, but who at the time of the decree and subsequent sale had ceased to have any interest therein, the purchaser at the sale in execution of such decree took nothing. Dowlut Gazee Chowdry v. Moonshee Munwar, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 341.

A person who did not appear as a third party in a rent suit is not debarred from all remedy under Section 106, Act X of 1859, if he has been really wronged. Fukeer Chund Aych v. Rokeemunissa, 5 W. R., Act X R., 50.

Sections 106 and 107, Act X of 1859, apply only to cases in which the existence of the under-tenure and the decree-holder's right as landlord are admitted, not where they are denied and an adverse proprietary title is set up by the claimant as owner of the land.

The remedy open to the owner of the land in such a case is under Section 77 before the decree is made, but after he allows it to be made he cannot have it set aside in execution. Golam Chunder Dey v. Nuddiar Chand Adhakara, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 1.

Where an under-tenure was sold in execution for arrears of rent due in respect of such under-tenure, and A. did not before the sale appear, under Section 106 of Act X of 1859, to urge his claim before the Collector,—Held that A.'s right to bring an action in the Civil Court to set aside the sale was not affected by the provisions of Section 107. Gungadhur Dutt v. Ram Narain Ghose, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 111.

In the sale of a putnee tenure for arrears of rent, effected under Section 108, Act X of 1859, the tenure passes free of incumbrances, or not, according as it would have passed had the sale been effected under the provisions of any law in force at the time of passing of Act X. Brindabun Chunder Chowdhry and others v. Brindabun Chunder Sircar Chowdhry and others, 8 W. R., 507.

The owner of an under-tenure may sue in the Civil Court for a declaration that the sale of his under-tenure under Act X of 1859 was illegal and void under Section 108 of that Act, and that he is entitled to possession of the land in suit notwithstanding such illegal sale. Shuroop Chunder Bhuttacharjee v. Kasheeshuree Dossia and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 55.

When a purchaser of a house sold under Section 110, Act X of 1859, is referred by a Collector to a regular suit to obtain possession, and the value of the property exceeds Rs. 100, the appeal from the Collector's order lies to the Judge. R. Solano v. Bulbhudhur Singh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 51.

A suit to set aside a sale in execution of a Civil Court's decree of a saleable under-tenure other than that from which the arrears of the rent were due, is not barred by Section 151, Act X of 1859. The provisions of Section 110, Act X of 1859, are applicable in such a case; and a party whose objection under Section 111 is overruled has a right to bring a suit in the Civil Court. Juggessur Suhye v. Gopal Lall and another, 11 W. R., p. 260.

Section 110, Act X of 1859, does not apply to the procedure by which parties obtain a remedy for an improper sale, and has no reference to Section 256, Act VIII of 1859. Anund Mohun Surmah v. Grija Kant Lahoory, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 222.

Sections 140--163.

The word "Collector," as used in the proviso of Section 140, Act X of 1859, must be taken to mean the Collector or Deputy-Collector who makes the final decision, from which the limitation of one year for suing in the Civil Court to establish title will begun to run. Gooroodoss Gangooly v. Gobind Chunder Bhooya and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 102.

No appeal lies to the Judge from the decision of a Deputy-Collector in a suit brought to contest the right to distrain for arrears of rent property valued below Rs. 100, in which a third party intervened under Section 140, Act X of 1859, and claimed the right to distrain, on the ground that he had been actually and in good faith in the receipt and enjoyment of the rent of the land up to the time of the commencement of the suit, and in which any remarks which the Deputy-Collector may have made on the evidence of title which one of the parties chose to lay before him, are in no sense whatever a determination of a question of title. Shadhoo Churn Burah Surburakar v. Brojo Satra and others, 7 W. R., 108.

When a zemindar distrains the crop of a piece of land, and two different parties each claim to be the tenant of it, neither of them is barred by the limitation laid down in Section 140, Act X of 1859, which only applies to the case of two rival zemindars claiming the rent of the same piece of land. Prankissen Roy v. Kistomonee Debea, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 70.

When a suit has been brought under Section 142, Act X of 1859, on account of property damaged or destroyed by neglect of a distrainer, the Court is not competent to award damages for vexatious distraint. Such damages are properly awarded by the Collector under Section 138, in a suit to contest the distrainer's demand. Nonkoo Ram v. Woojogur Roy, 5 W. R., Act X R., 68.

The Sections of Act X of 1859 (Sections 139, 142, and 143) which relate to distraint, and the power to distrain, discussed. Joyloll Sheikh v. Brojonath Pal Chowdhry, 9 W. R., 162.

Certain sub-lessees sued in the Collector's Court the zemindar and others employed by him for the value of crops seized and carried away, under a certificate, as was alleged by the defendants, granted to them by the Collector, but which they failed to produce. The Collector gave plaintiff a decree, which was upheld by the Judge. The defendants appealed only on the point of jurisdiction.

Held that the suit was properly brought in the Collector's Court; that Sections 142 and 143 of Act X of 1859 applied to the case. Section 143 contemplates not only the case of a person who professes to follow the provisions of the law, though he has no power to distrain; but also the case of a person who, under colour of the Act, does distrain, but does not do so according to the provisions of the Act. Such persons are considered by that section as trespassers, and are liable to the penalty of trespass, in addition to damages which may be awarded against them by the Revenue Court. Radha Mohan Naskar v. Jadunath Dass, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 261.

A suit for recovery of damages, by reason of wrongful distraint, is not cognizable by the Civil Court, but is cognizable by the Collector under Section 143, Act X of 1859. Ram Chundra Chowdhry v. Subal Patro, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 74; 11 W. R., 539.

Section 143 will not apply when a distrainer acts without the authority of the superior holder. Sheikh Roushun v. Bholanath Doss, 5 W. R., Act X R., 67.

A. distrained the paddy of B., alleging that it belonged to C., who was A.'s ryot. It was found that there was no relation of landlord and tenant between A. and B., and that C. was acting in collusion with A. B. attempted, under Section 139, Act X of 1859, to get possession of the distrained paddy from D. and E., to whose custody it had been made over under Section 118 of Act X of 1859, but was unsuccessful. B. now sues A., C., D., and E. for damages in the Small Cause Court.

Held that this suit is one falling either under Section 139 or Section 143 of Act X of 1859, and comes under Section 23 of that Act, and is not cognizable in a Small Cause Court, but only by a Revenue Court. Joy Lall Sheikh v. Brojonath Paul Chowdhry, 9 W. R., 162.

Where a distrainer acts without the authority of the superior holder, Section 143, Act X of 1859, will not apply, but the acts of the distrainer are those of a trespasser, for which he may be sued for damages in the Civil Court. Nor will Act X apply in a case where the distrainer is the agent of a person between whom and the defaulting tenant the relation of landlord and tenant does not subsist. Sheikh Roushun v. Bholanath Dass, 5 W. R., Act X R., 67.

In order to maintain a suit under Section 143, Act X of 1859, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant in making the distress was acting not only without right, but without anything to justify him in supposing that he had a right to distrain—a mere trespasser without any reasonable foundation for the claim set up. Raye Kumal Dossee v. Jhoroo Mollah, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 543.

A complaint under Section 145 of Act X of 1859 is not a suit, and does not fall within the description of the suit in which, under Section 160, an appeal is given to the Zillah Judge. Amanutullah, in the matter of the petition of, 6 B. L. R., 569, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 136.

The time limited by Act X of 1859, Section 144, for suing in respect of distraints for rent, "namely three months from the date of the occurrence of the cause of action," is to be reckoned, in the case of a suit for a wrongful distress afterwards abandoned, from the abandonment of the distress, and not merely from the date of the original seizure. Thukree Roy v. Heeramun Singh, Marsh., 470.

Section 151, Act X of 1859, bars a regular suit by a judgment-debtor to set aside a sale in execution of a decree for arrears of rent. No appeal lies from an order of a Collector passed after decree and relating to the execution thereof. Ruttunmonee Dassee v. Kallekishen Chuckerbutty, W. R., F. B., 147.

A suit by an unregistered holder will lie in a Civil Court to set aside the sale of a tenure sold in execution of a decree for rent under Act X of 1859, after the money due upon the decree was deposited, Section 151 of that Act notwithstanding. Sheikh Afzul Ali v. Lalla Gurnarain and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 59.

According to Section 152, Act X of 1859, the appeal from an order of a Deputy Collector must be presented within 15 days. The Collector has no power to extend the time for appeal, as provided by Section 333, Act VIII of 1859. Kalee Kishore Paul v. Monee Ram Singh, 5 W. R., Act X R., 46.

The proper construction of the word "revision" in Section 151 is not review, but such revision as the Board of Revenue and Commissioners as superior officers exercise over the proceedings of the Collectors and Deputy Collectors, or the High Court over the lower Courts under Section 404 and 405, Criminal Procedure Code. Radha Pershad Singh v. Sansur Roy, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 27.

In a suit for arrears of rent a question arose respecting the right to convert a money rent into a rent payable in kind. Held that such a suit is one in which a question of the right to vary the rent of tenant is to be determined in the sense of Section 153 of Act X of 1859, and as such, if heard by the Deputy Collector, is appealable to the Zillah Judge, and not to the Collector. Elahee Buksh v. Syud Jaffur Aly, 1, 5 N. W. R., 109.

No appeal is given by Section 153, Act X of 1859 in a case in which a landlord sues a person as tenant who repudiates the tenancy without denying the landlord's title. Eshan Chunder Ghossal v. Burno Moyee Dassee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 233.

The words "otherwise vary" in Section 153, Act X of 1859, are meant to include abatement claimable by the ryot; and this reservation is made in respect of questions of right to vary the rent, whether raised by the landlord or by the tenant. Anund Chunder Deghee v. Nubocoomar Chatterjee, 8 W. R., 192.

In a suit for arrears of rent, and for ejectment and damages, in which the agent of the plaintiff amplified the claim by stating specifically that the suit for ejectment was brought under Section 78 of Act X of 1859, and no question was raised as to jurisdiction by the defendants, who lost the case,—Held that the suit involved a claim under Section 78, and that an appeal would lie under Section 153. Trilochun Chunder Roy v. Kemul Manjhee, 12 W. R., 213.

Section 153 does not apply merely to questions of proprietary title and interest in land accruing from that title, but applies also to conflicting claims of ryots, e.g., as to which of two ryots is the cultivator or has jotedaree right. Juggeshur Bhuttacharjee v. Juggobundo Nundee, 3 W. R., Act X R., 14.

Sections 153 and 160 do not apply so as to affect the right of appeal to the Judge in a suit for a kubuleut under Clause 1, Section 23. Bamasoonduree Debia v. Grishchunder Banerjee, 3 W. R., Act X R., 138, and Sheikh Ali Buksh v. Rubjee Mundul, 4 W. R., Act X R., 32.

When a se-putneedar sues a ryot for rent, and the dur-putneedar intervenes, alleging that he only is entitled to collect the rent, the decision will be on a question of right to land between parties having conflicting claims thereto; and consequently, under Section 153, Act X of 1859, an appeal will lie to the Judge. Ramjeebun Chowdhry v. Peary Lall Mundle, 4 W. R., Act X R., 30.

Held that where a proprietary title is pleaded in respect to land whereof rent is claimed, it can be adjudicated upon by the revenue authorities, who, so far from being prevented by law from taking cognizance of such pleas are competent to dispose of all such pleas when raised in bar of a claim for rent, as is evident from Section 153, Act X of 1859. Kashee Ram v. Mendee Singh, 2 Agra Rep., R. A., 8.

Held that the Judge has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from a decision passed by the Collector in regular appeal.

Held, further, that the Collector had no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the decision of the Deputy-Collector, in reference to the provisions of Section 153, Act X of 1859. The High Court has, under Section 35, Act XXIII of 1861, power to cancel such decisions as are passed without jurisdiction. Mohesh Pandey v. Baldut Pandey, 4 Agra Rep., R. A., 11.

An appeal lies under Section 155, Act X of 1859, to a Collector from the decision of a Deputy-Collector under Clause 4, Section 23. G. R. Barry v. Dwarkanath Biswas, 3 W. R., Act X R., 4.

In a suit for ejectment, whether under Clause 5, Section 23, or under Section 78 of Act X of 1859, an appeal lies to the Judge under Section 160. Kaleebur Opadyah v. Aynoodeen Mundul, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 83.

Under Section 161, Act X of 1859, when read together with Section 333 of Act VIII, it is in the discretion of a Judge to allow an appellant a deduction for the time during which the appeal was before a Court without jurisdiction.

In computing the period of limitation as to suits under Act X of 1859, no deduction is allowed for pendency of suit in a Court without jurisdiction. Modhoosoodun Mojoomdar v. Brojonath Koond Chowdhry, 5 W. R., Act X R., 44.

The words "revenue office of the district or subdivision," used in Section 162 of Act X of 1859, as the place where a suit for rent is to be instituted, mean, not the office where the revenue is paid, but the office of the revenue officer of the district or subdivision where the greater part of the lands, in respect of which the rent is claimed, is situate. Kazee Abdool Huq v. Azeemoonnissa, 3 W. R., Act X R., 12.

A suit for enhancement is liable to be dismissed if brought in Jessore in respect of lands situated in Fureedpore. Under Section 163, Act X of 1859, a Collector cannot issue a notice of enhancement in respect of lands not situate within his jurisdiction. Mothoora Nath Koondoo v. R. C. Bell, 2 W. R., Act X R., 71.

1.—RIGHTS OF CO-SHARERS.

Where at the time of settlement it was arranged that one co-sharer should make the collections and other co-sharers should receive money allowance, and such arrangement was to last for the term of settlement only,—Held that after the expiry of the settlement such co-sharers were, if the revenue authorities thought fit, entitled to be allowed to engage for their shares. Koonwer Singh v. Shib Dyal and others, 3 Agra Rep., 297.

If by arrangement the shares of certain co-sharers are left in the possession of other co-sharers during the period of the current settlement, the fact that the former have not received profits for 12 years during which the settlement continues is not sufficient to debar them from asserting their claim when the settlement expires. Toolseeram and others v. Nahur Singh and others, 3 Agra Rep., 271.

The Government revenue payable by each co-sharer's portion of a mehal held by several persons may not be separate and specifically defined, yet one co-sharer may be entitled to recover from the others an ascertainable portion of the total jumma which he was obliged to pay to Government for the whole mehal. Bhoop Narain Sahoo v. Meer Mahomed Hossein, 4 W. R., 60.

If a co-sharer pays the Government revenue in respect of another share, and sues and obtains a decree against one of several persons interested in that share, and sells the share in execution of that decree, the interests of the other persons not sued are not affected by a decree to which they were not parties, or by a sale which did not profess to bind their interests. Sath Buthee Dossee v. Mutthungeenee Dossee, 2 W. R., 38.

When co-sharers who have paid their share of revenue assessments are made defendants in a suit for contribution, together with other co-sharers, whose proportion was paid by the plaintiff, the defendants who have paid are entitled to their costs of appearing, &c., notwithstanding that the plaintiff may have made no claim against them, but has joined them merely for the sake of conformity. Golam Ahmed Shah v. Behary Lall, Marsh., 239.

If one of two or more joint partners refuses to sue jointly with his co-sharers he may be made a defendant; and when once all concerned on both sides are parties to the suit the Court has power to do full justice between them. Juggodumba Dossee v. Haran Chunder Dutt and others, 10 W. R., 101.

Long possession under an authentic pottah from one sharer, without interference or disturbance from the others, legally warrants the inference that the grantor had authority to bind his co-sharers. A. Hills v. Aradhun Mundul, 10 W. R., 389.

The Court laid down what was considered a fair principle in assessing a co-sharer's share of the Government revenue paid for the whole estate to save it from sale. Juggobundoo Roy v. Fyz Buksh Chowdhry, 8 W. R., 166.

The purchaser of a fractional part of an entire estate, subject to a charge, is liable singly to satisfy that charge out of the portion of the property in his possession. Prosonno Coomar Mozoomdar v. The Rev. B. F. X. Barbosa, 6 W. R., 253.

Plaintiffs sued all their co-sharers, several of whom absented and allowed judgment to go by default. Held that the question for the Court to try was whether the plaintiffs had proved their title to the shares they claimed, and not as to the share of one of the defendant co-sharers as between him and the remaining co-sharers, several of whom did not prefer any claim at all. Chowdhry Kumaloodeen Jha and others v. Sreekishen Thacoor and others, 6 W. R., 94.

When a plaintiff claims over-payments from his co-sharers, and they plead other payments by themselves, the Court ought to go into the whole account between the parties, strike a balance, and decree accordingly. Gooradharee Singh v. Honooman Singh, W. R., 1864, 93.

The legal position of co-sharers in an estate occupying separate portions in it is that each possesses and holds, in respect of his several right, to enjoy that which is his own.

If one holds a portion larger than his share the inequality may be rectified by a partition, or if a dispute arise on a division of the annual profits it may be adjusted in a suit for an account, but such a suit is not cognizable under Act X of 1859. Kalee Persaud v. Shah Lutafut Hossein, 12 W. R., 418.

A co-sharer can only sue such persons in the Revenue Court, under Clause 2, Section 1, Act XIV of 1863, as are appointed or entitled by custom to make the collections of rent on behalf of the proprietary body of the estate or any part thereof, and who are bound to pay the revenue and village expenses, and to account to co-parceners for receipts and expenditure as their representatives. Sree Kishen and others v. Eshree Purtaub Rai and others, 2 Agra Rep., 299.

Section 23, Act X of 1859, is not applicable to a suit in which the plaintiff claims as entitled to a moiety of the rent of certain land in the possession of his co-sharer. Mittunlal Sahoo v. Sheikh Nadun, 1 W. R., 53.

An owner of a fractional share of an undivided estate, as to whose share there is no doubt, can sue for his share of the rents. Mohammed Singh v. Mussamut Mughy Chowdhrain, 1 W. R., 253.

Until a partition takes place a co-proprietor of a talook is entitled to partake in the joint possession of all the land which was held khas by the co-sharers, or which would be now so held by them if they had not granted a lease. Bromo Moyee Debia v. Raj Chunder Roy, 5 W. R., Mis., 15.

Where a village was in arrear through the deficiency of a former lumberdar, and the plaintiff, having purchased at auction the share of the lumberdar, and not his right and liabilities, had to pay the revenue to save the estate,—Held that the plaintiff has a right to call upon his co-sharers to contribute their quota of Government revenue, the co-sharers' remedy being against the defaulting lumberdar. Fuzul Ali and others v. Jumna Doss and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 229.

A. sued B. for possession of certain land on which B. had erected a building, on the allegation that it belonged jointly to them, as well as for removal of the building from the land. It was found, as a fact, that the land was held jointly by A. and B.

Held that B. had no right to do anything which altered the condition of the joint property without the consent of his co-sharer, and it was rightly ordered that B. should remove the building from the land. Guru Dass Dhar v. Bijaya Gobinda Bural, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 108; 10 W. R., 171.

Payment to one of several joint proprietors is a payment to all. Oodit Narain Singh v. H. Hudson, 2 W. R., Act X R., 15.

A temporary arrangement among joint owners by which one of their number is allowed to hold a portion of the joint property on payment of a certain sum of money, does not convert the occupier into a ryot holding at a fixed rent, or entitle him to the benefit of the presumption under Section 4, Act X of 1859. Roghoobun Tewaree v. Bishen Dutt Dobey, 2 W. R., Act X R., 92.

From the mere fact of an old factory being allowed to remain joint at the time when the rest of the joint property was partitioned, it is not to be inferred that the shareholders agreed to continue to work that old factory, or that they agreed never to raise any new factories. Mussamut Rambuddun Koer v. Gopal Singh, 8 W. R., 86.

A shareholder in a joint family house has an absolute right to the extent of allowing him to partition off his own specific share in every single part of the premises. Isshan Chunder Banerjee and others v. Nund Coomar Banerjee and others, 8 W. R., 239.

The fact of joint property standing on the Collector's register in the name of the elder brother is no slur on the younger, and no ground for a suit on the part of the latter for declaration of title. Gopee Lall v. Mohunt Bhugwan Doss and others, 12 W. R., 7.

Although in the case of joint family property, it may not be necessary for the lender of money upon zur-i-peshgee, or for the purchaser of an estate which is actually sold, to see to the application of the purchase-money, it is necessary for him to make due enquiry as to the necessity to borrow or sell. Mussamut Nowruttun Cooer v. Gouree Dutt Singh and others, 6 W. R., 193.

Where a joint family property was sold in order to raise money to redeem other property which had been mortgaged, and was about to be foreclosed, and there was nothing to show that the transaction was not for the benefit of the family, the sale was declared to be good and it was held that as a large sum was due on the mortgage, the purchaser was not bound to enquire into the original necessity for giving the mortgage.

The rule that only so much of the property should be sold as will meet the necessity does not apply to cases where the excess is small, or where the money really required cannot otherwise be raised. Luchmeedur Singh v. Ekbal Ali and others, 8 W. R., 75.

In a sale of the rights and interests of one member in a joint family property, the purchaser obtains no more than that member's share in the property. Sreepershad Surmah Bhuttacharjee v. Shuroopa Dossia and others, 9 W. R., 452.

Held by the majority of the Court (Jackson, J., dissenting) that the existence of joint family property being admitted, the presumption was that all acquired property belonged to the family, and that the onus was on the defendant in this case, who set up a plea of self-acquisition, to prove that the joint estate was so small that, after providing for the maintenance of the family, nothing remained to form a fund for the purchase of other properties for the benefit of the joint family. Tarachurn Mookerjee v. Joy Narain Mookerjee, 8 W. R., 226.

Where rent, whether payable in money or in kind, to one person or several, is rendered under an entire contract or obligation, it is not competent for one of several co-sharers to bring a suit to enhance his portion of such rent.

The fact of the claimant making the other co-sharers parties, defendants, in the suit cannot alter his rights, and there being a common interest in all the co-sharers one of the number cannot proceed as if his rights were separate and distinct. Mahomed Said-ood-deen v. Mahomed Hossein, 2 N. W. R., 438.

Where land is held jointly and there is no partition, one part-owner cannot insist on the ejectment of a person who has been holding under the other part-owner for 16 or 17 years. Bissessur Kurmoker v. Juggobundoo Kurmoker, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 183.

Although one co-sharer cannot eject a tenant from a holding in an undivided estate in which the tenants are tenants of the whole body of co-sharers, yet a co-sharer is entitled to sue to set aside an alienation made by a tenant to a stranger without consent of the zemindars. Sobha Ram v. Gunga Pershad, 2 N. W. R., 260.

In a suit to recover a share of a holding, the whole of which had been sold in execution of a decree for arrears of rent, the plaintiff who claimed to hold a divided portion of the tenure was held bound to prove either that such division had been recognized and ratified by the zemindar or that the latter received rent from him, i.e., he would have to prove his status as tenant in respect of the share in question. Hurhur Singh v. Mussamut Ooma Kooer, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 93.

A co-sharer in landed property has no right to do anything which alters the condition of the joint-property without the consent of the other co-sharers.

To build a factory on such property only upon a title derived from one co-sharer without the consent of the others, involves an infringement of the rights of those co-sharers, and this infringement involves an injury. F. H. Holloway v. Mahomed Ali, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 140.

A tenant's liability to pay his jumma to the party entitled cannot be split up without his consent, so as to make him liable to pay fractional portions of rent to different sharers in the zemindary. Indromoney Burmonee v. Suroop Chunder Paul, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 395.

Possession of ancestral property is good evidence of title against a co-sharer if shown to be exclusive, and to be inconsistent with the co-sharers having any right in the portion claimed. Tekait Hurro Narain Singh v. Beycunt Narain Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 51.

Where members of a joint family reside on different portions of the family property, one taking charge of one shop and another of another, one member cannot be allowed to set up the law of limitation and exclude his brother from participation of profits. Sookh Lall Bhoojwalla v. Goolzar Bhoojwalla, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 228.

Where a sharer in an undivided talook, after obtaining a decree for money due to him on account of his share of the rent, brings to sale a portion of the tenure corresponding with the share of the rent for which he obtained a decree, the sale has no further effect than any other sale in which the rights of the judgment-debtor are sold. Nund Lall Roy v. Gooroo Churn Bose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 6.

Where the rents of a share with certain specified boundaries have been assigned by one shareholder absolutely, by an arrangement (e.g., partition) between that shareholder and his co-sharers, without the assent of the assignee, can the rights of the assignee to collect rents under the assignment be in any way affected? Bhoobun Moye Dassee v. Ruffick Mundul, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 17.

A suit for rent by the 15 annas 6 pie shareholders was held to be maintainable where there is no dispute as to the extent of plaintiffs' share, but they set forth distinctly in their plaint the extent of their shares and that of their co-sharer, where the co-sharer was made a defendant and no objection made by him as to the extent of their respective shares, nor did the ryot defendant contend in his written statement that the plaintiffs' share was not what it was said to be, namely, 15 annas and 6 pies, and where there was a clear finding by the first Court that the 6-pie shareholder had collected and enjoyed the rents of his share separately, and that the ryot defendant had paid the rents separately for this 6-pie share. Tulchoonissa Khatoon v. Monesde Chunder Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 452.

A single co-sharer cannot sue for his share of the rent, much less for enhanced rent. Bhyrub Mundle and others v. Gogaram Banerjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 401.

A landlord, one of several co-sharers, cannot sue a tenant of the joint estate for his separate share of the rents, unless the tenant has paid or agreed to pay to him separately. Consequently a suit for enhancement by such co-sharer will not lie. Haradhun Gossama and others v. Ram Newaz Missry, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 414.

Although one co-sharer cannot give a good lease of the whole 16 annas of property which belongs to himself and his co-sharers, yet one co-sharer may give a lease of his own share which would be binding against himself at least. Ram Debul Lall v. Mitterjeet Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 420.

A joint tenant is not entitled to khas possession of any portion of a joint and undivided property without a butwarrah. Huree Dyal Gooho Mojoomdar v. Gobind Chunder Pal, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 387.

Held that the right of the plaintiff as a joint owner of the land in dispute could not be questioned unless it could be shown that he was barred from enforcing that right by the Law of Limitation, or by any right of easement which the defendants enjoyed; and that the defendants, as joint proprietors with the plaintiff, could not by the use of the land with the tacit assent of the plaintiff create a right contrary to his interest, nor would their use of it before they became co-proprietors operate to create any such right.

In giving the plaintiff a decree for partition the Court declined to make any decree permitting him to build a house upon his own land, but left him to do what he pleased with his own land provided he did not interfere with the legal rights of others. Jahanoby Deo Narain Singh v. Umbica Pershad Narain Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 74.

A co-parcener in respect of ijmalee land is entitled to the use of every part thereof; and if by erecting a building he takes possession of more land than he would be entitled to on a partition, the proper remedy is to sue for a division of the land, and not for a demolition of the building. Dwarkanauth Bhooeah v. Gopeenauth Bhooeah, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 10.

The order of a Commissioner requiring proprietors having separate jummas to pay for the convenience of the Collector their shares of revenue through one of their number, cannot override their legal right of separate proprietorship allowed under the Settlement Law and preserved by express record, or transform such right into a joint tenancy. Ram Gobind Roy v. Syud Kushuffudozee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 141.

A Collector's declaration of the title of a party to an entire share of an estate and his action in dividing the share for such party, are an injury to and a slur upon another party claiming a fraction of the share, and give him a sufficient cause of action. Sheo Pershad Sookool v. Shunkur Sahoy, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 190.

A sharer in a joint estate not partitioned, although he may collect separately his share of rent, cannot enhance the rent without the concurrence of his co-parceners.

The report of an Ameen under Section 73, Act X of 1859, is receivable as evidence, and a decision can be legally based upon it. Sujam Kooer v. Heithoo, 1, 11 N. W. R., 165.

The consent of all the sharers to a joint holding being necessary to give validity to any agreement regarding the same, certain sharers in a joint holding cannot by the device of deducting from their claim a portion of the holding representing the share of some of their co-sharers, non-consenting parties to an agreement, sue to enforce such agreement, all the sharers having an undivided share in every biswa of the joint holding. Shibba and others v. Ram Lal and others, 3 N. W. R., 216.

The defendant was in possession of land under a pottah granted by the ijaradars of the proprietors, and thereon commenced to build a house and plant a garden. The plaintiff, who had bought the right, title, and interest of one of the proprietors sued to restrain him. He did not allege any injury. Held that such suit would not lie. Srichand v. Nim Chand Sahee, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 25; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 337.

Several persons jointly held lands which were not divided by metes and bounds but in specified shares. One of the shareholders leased out his share or interest in the lands. The lessee sowed indigo in the joint lands. The other shareholders brought a suit to restrain the lessee of their co-sharer from growing indigo on the land. Held that a co-sharer cannot use ijmalee lands so as to alter the condition of the property as regards the other shareholders without their consent, that indigo as a crop being valueless for purposes of distraint, the lessee must be restrained from growing it without the consent of all the proprietors. L. G. Crowder v. Bhukdhari Singh, 8 B. L. R., Ap., 45; 16 S. W. R., C. R., 41.

Where persons jointly interested in an estate arranged that the rents should be received by an agent, and they themselves sometimes collected direct from the tenants, such collection being treated as a receipt by the agent or by some one on his behalf, and not as a collection antagonistic to the rights of the other joint tenants, the Law of Limitation is no bar to taking the back accounts.

Where one tenant in common receives rents and then relinquishes his interest in the estate to another that other is not answerable to the third tenant in common for any claim he may have against the first for having received more than his share. Rani Khajurinissa v. Rajah Enayet Hossein, 8 B. L. R., 93, and 16 S. W. R., P. C., 1.

The question was referred to a Full Bench "whether a suit by the owner of a fractional share of an undivided estate for a kabuliat will lie." Norman, J., was of opinion that as a general rule the holder of a tenure cannot be sued by owners of fractional shares in the superior tenure for separate kabuliats according to the proportions to which they allege themselves to be entitled in the superior tenure. A tenure is an entire thing, and cannot be subdivided against the will of the tenant. Loch, Bayley, Macpherson, and Mitter, JJ., did not answer the question, on the ground that it did not arise in the suit. Judar Chandra Dugar v. Bindabun Bihara, 8 B. L. R., 251, and 15 S. W. R., F. B., 21.

A., B., C., D., and E. were joint lessees without specification of shares under Government of a certain mehal. The estate was sold for arrears of revenue. A., B., C., D., and E. each brought a suit separately to set aside the sale. Held that as the estate was single and indivisible, and the cause of action and relief sought in each case was the same, the claim of the lessees could not be split into five distinct suits. Biswanath Bhuttacharjee v. The Collector of Mymensing, 7 B. L. R., Ap., 42.

A sharer of an undivided talook may be entitled to recover his share of the rent due from the talook generally, but it does not follow that he is entitled to recover from the jotedar of a particular jote in the talook unless there is an agreement to that effect. Shama Soonduree Debia v. Kristo Chunder Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 316.

If one co-proprietor chooses to accept the service of his tenants instead of rent or to remit the rent, another co-proprietor is not affected as regards his share of the profits of the land. Rajah Syad Ahmed Rezza v. Rajah Enaet Hossein, 1 W. R., 330.

A shareholder voluntarily coming forward and paying an arrear of revenue due by a defaulting co-shareholder who has a separate account, before the share of such defaulter has been put up for sale under the provisions of Section 13, Act XI of 1859, cannot claim to be reimbursed by such defaulter, nor is the defaulter under any legal obligation to repay the amount advanced. Kishen Chunder Ghose and another v. Mudden Mohun Mojoomdar, 7 W. R., 365.

2.—Liabilities of Co-sharers.

The co-sharers in a house who continued to occupy the whole house to the exclusion of one co-sharer after notice that he would charge them rent for his share of the house, were declared just as liable to pay rent to the co-sharer as they would be for rents of any other species of property. Chunderkant Roy and others v. Gopeemee Debia and others, 6 W. R., 17.

In a suit against co-tenants to recover rent paid by plaintiff on their behalf, a joint decree declaring the defendants collectively liable ought not to be passed. The Court should determine what portion of the whole rent ought to be repaid by each one of the defendants, and whether each defendant is under any liability to pay the plaintiff at all. Krist Monee Debia v. Buroda Dossia Chowdrain, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 143.

Where a co-sharer occupies a larger portion than his own share, or the whole estate, by renting the land he occupies from one or more of his co-sharers, he may be sued for the rent under Act X of 1859 by the person or persons with whom he engaged. Kalee Pershad v. Shah Lutafut Hossein, 12 W. R., 418.

A suit by one of two shareholders to recover certain accounts and papers alleged to have been kept by her agents stands upon different grounds from a suit by one of several joint landowners suing separately for his rent. Puddomonee Dossee v. Banee Kant Ghose, 9 W. R., 344.

The portion of an estate for which a separate account is opened under Sections 10 and 11 of Act XI of 1859, and the portion from which it is separated, are equally "shares" within the meaning of Section 10. The latter (though it may for convenience' sake be termed the parent estate) cannot be considered an entire estate within the meaning of Section 37, but is still a share and liable to all the incidents of a share. Monohur Mookerjee v. Huromohun Mookerjee, 1 W. R., 27.

A suit will lie for the separate possession of a share of an estate in proportion to the plaintiff's share. Goloke Chunder Chuckerbutty, 1 W. R., 164.

The mere division of a ryot's holding among his heirs (each one paying his share of the old rent separately) does not destroy the continuity of the old holding. The default of one shareholder will vitiate the tenure of all, and give the landlord a right of enhancement. J. Hills v. Beshanath Meer, 1 W. R., 10.

A co-sharer who cannot prove that he holds in his own right (by purchase of the proprietary right of the other co-sharers) a portion of a joint estate occupied exclusively by him, can only hold the same as a tenant liable to pay rent for it to the proprietors jointly. Gooroo Prosunno Roy v. Gobind Pershad Doss, 1 W. R., 34.

A co-sharer sued for a kubuleut after determination of rent. It was proved that a custom existed by which each co-sharer had his own tenants; but as there was no proof that the defendants ever paid rent to the plaintiff, it was held that a tenancy had not been established, and that the case was therefore not cognizable under Act X of 1859. Joynath Nag v. Gobind Pershad Doss, 1 W. R., 42.

The acts of the majority of sharers are not binding on the other sharers as to their own share of the property. Kartick Sirdar v. Neeranjun Juleea, 4 W. R., 106.

Shareholders whose shares are clearly ascertained may sue for their respective shares of the rent payable to them without waiting for the other parties entitled to rent joining the suit, or without adding them as parties. Umrit Chowdhry v. Syud Hyder Ali, W, R., 1864, Act X R., 63.

3.—Wajib-ul-urz.

Where the lumberdar had clearly admitted in the wajib-ul-urz that there were shareholders paying the Government revenue through him, who cultivated seer land, although at the time he, the lumberdar, had sole right to the profit and loss,—Held that the claim of the shareholders to definition of their shares was not lost. Mehtab Singh v. Purma and others, 3 Agra Rep., 241.

Where it was stipulated in the wajib-ul-urz that trees could only be planted by cultivators on the common land, with the consent of the proprietors, —Held that one out of several co-proprietors (unless he was properly authorized to manage the joint estate) was not competent to give an ijazutnamah to a cultivator to plant a bagh, and could not by his single consent dispense with the performance of a condition of which the other sharers have a right to call for the fulfilment. If such an ijazutnamah was given without their consent express or implied they have a right to have it set aside. Ghazeeoodeen Hyder v. Bhoolun and another, 2 Agra Rep., 344.

Held that mere recognition of right to resume contained in the wajib-ul-urz, where the grant existed many years previous to the date of that document, does not re-grant to a maâfedar so as to give plaintiff a new starting-point from which his right to resume should date. Dayum Khan v. Tunsookh Rai, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 189.

Held that an entry in the wajib-ul-urz is only good for what it may be worth as evidence, and cannot be held to be like a judgment or to require to be set aside by a regular suit subject to a limitation calculated from the date of the instrument. Bhohla Singh v. Bulraj Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 233.

Held that the original proprietors are not bound by a condition in the wajib-ul-urz which has been signed and attested by a third party then in possession, not as authorized agent on behalf of the proprietors, but as a mortgagee. Subsequent acquiescence by the mortgagor or his representative might be only an acquiescence in the mortgagee's act to the extent and in the qualified way in which his consent was given. Bhageeruth and others v. Moheem and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 129.

LEGAL SECRETARIAT LIBRARY

A co-sharer is not bound by the terms of a wajib-ul-urz to which he was no party, merely because it was consented to by the majority of sharers, unless he consented to it through some representatives impliedly, or unless it was consented to by the person under whom he now holds. A co-sharer claiming re-partition of his share is not entitled to mesne profits unless so provided by the wajib-ul-urz. Chunder Singh and others v. Mussamut Nirto and others, 4 Agra Rep., A. C., 11.

Where the terms of the wajib-ul-urz recognize the right of each sharer to sell without the consent of the others, but limit that right so far as to give preference or right of refusal to the co-sharers, the sale to a stranger can only be good and valid on proof of offer being made and refused by the co-sharers. Permeshree Doss v. Raikoondun Singh and others, 4 Agra Rep., A. C., 3.

Held that a provision in the wajib-ul-urz securing a right of pre-emption to the sharers in cases of sale or mortgage was not applicable to transfer by lease, which was not such an alienation as was contemplated by the terms of the wajib-ul-urz, viz., alienation or transfer of proprietary right. Raj Manik Chand v. Rai Bishesher Buksh Singh and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 99.

Held that the conditions of the wajib-ul-urz do in no way confer on any person under disability a right of alienation which he does not otherwise enjoy. Radhey Pandey v. Munsaram and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 85.

A wajib-ul-urz is not a mere contract, it is a record of rights made by a public servant; and therefore, without attestation or execution by the proprietors of the mouzah, it is entitled to weight as evidence of village custom. Dobee Dut and others v. Sheikh Enait Ali, 2 N. W. R., 395.

Held that conditions with respect to rent in a wajib-ul-urz are generally intended to have effect only during the period of the settlement being made at the date of such wajib-ul-urz. Buichoo Ram v. Dowlut Ram, 2 N. W. R., 8.

Where a wajib-ul-urz was destroyed in the mutiny, and the plaintiff tendered in evidence a book obtained from the tehseel office, which purported to contain a copy of such wajib-ul-urz and of the signatures of the persons signing the original, and the name of the official in whose presence the instrument was executed, and the Court below was satisfied that there was no reason to doubt its being a genuine copy,—Held that such copy was evidence, not of a contemplated wajib-ul-urz, but of one which had been executed and completed. Dabee Dutt v. Shaik Enait Ali, 2 N. W. R., 395.

Where the terms of a wajib-ul-urz are that the property before sale to a stranger must be offered to the co-sharers, such offer must be made to each and every one of such co-sharers. Dowlut and others v. Netram and others, 3 N. W. R., 42.

The mere signature by an agent of a wajib-ul-urz from which the record of an important interest in property was omitted, cannot be construed as a waiver of such right or claim. Still less can the imperfection or inaccuracy of settlement proceedings operate to extinguish or disallow existing rights. Musst. Imambundee v. Bhugaran Dass, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 41.

4.—PARTITION.

The proprietors of a certain lot having obtained a separation of their shares under Section 11 of Act XI of 1859, there remained one share (comprising one village and one-third of three other villages) which was sold for arrears of revenue, and purchased by W. Of this share W. sold one village to P., who agreed to pay a certain sum as his share of the Government jumma, and then applied to the Collector to open a separate account at the rate which had been agreed upon. The shareholders having objected, the Collector referred the parties to the Civil Court under Section 12. P. then brought a suit in the Civil Court for a separate account. Held that there was no legal objection to plaintiff's having his separate share opened at the rate he mentioned, even if the jumma on the share which remained in W.'s possession was excessive; for if the whole estate were put up to sale for arrears on account of that remaining share, the other shareholders could always protect themselves by paying the sum due. Poorno Chunder Banerjee v. Ram Kanye Ghose, 12 W. R., 242.

Co-parceners may on partition retain possession severally of such joint lands as they may have taken separate possession of, with the consent of at least a majority of the co-parceners. Sreenath Dutt v. Nandkishore Doss, 5 W. R., 208.

In effecting a partition account must be taken of any joint property in possession of any sharer; and before transfer of share provision should be made for the protection of other sharers from an undue liability on account of debts. Mirza Ally Hossein v. Mirza Ally Hossein, alias Chotey Mirza, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 96.

Where a person obtained a decree from the Civil Court, declaring his right to certain shares in the village, and directing a partition, but did not execute his decree within the prescribed period of limitation,—Held that he was not entitled to partition under Section 47, Act XIX of 1863. Kishen Singh v. Dabeer Singh, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 272.

The allotment of land to defendant by partition extinguished plaintiff's right altogether; his subsequent possession was either that of a trespasser or a tenant-at-will; his dispossession was not illegal, and he had no legal right of suit for recovery of possession. Mussamut Nowab Begum v. Rustum Khan, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 149.

Where a co-sharer in a joint undivided estate sued to have his rights ascertained, and partition made in respect of an orchard which formed part of the joint estate,—Held that the Civil Court was not entitled to decree partition or give possession of a separate share in the orchard, and there is no law which entitles a shareholder to obtain partition of a portion of an undivided estate against the will of the other co-sharers. Millhoo Lall v. Golam Nuseer-ood-deen and others, 4 Agra Rep., 276.

Where plaintiff sued for certain land in dispute as his own, and the lower Court found that it was his share, and that defendant held his separately, no further formal partition was held to be necessary. Modhoosoodun Chatterjee v. Juddooputty Chuckerbutty, 9 W. R., 115.

There is no statutory bar against a ryot's right to partition as between himself and his co-parcener where he does not ask for such a distribution of the putnee rent as would bind the zemindar, or limit the latter's right over the whole tenure as a joint one. Gouree Sunkur Roy v. Anund Mohun Moitro and others, 9 W. R., 487.

Butwarra proceedings under Section 20, Regulation XIX of 1814, are only final as to lands which are the subject of partition. Baboo Hurree Mohun Thakoor v. David Andrews, W. R., 1864, 30.

The purchaser of a specific portion of the land of an estate separately registered with a separate jumma under Section 11, Act XI of 1859, is not entitled to claim a butwarra of the whole estate, and to obtain a share of the whole land proportioned to the amount of the sudder jumma paid by him. Fukeer Chunder Shaha v. Nobodeep Chunder Shaha, W. R., 1864, 59.

A butwarra does not extinguish rights of tenants; and the mere circumstance that one of the proprietors of the estate was himself the tenant does not destroy his tenant right, because another of the proprietors has had the land allotted as part of his share of the divided estate. Nuthoo Lall Chowdhry v. Saadat Lall, W. R., 1864, 271.

A private partition, though not sanctioned by official authority, will, if full and final as among the parties to it, have the same effect as the most formal partition on the right of pre-emption. Gopal Sahi v. Ojoodhea Pershad, 2 W. R., 47.

A suit which is in the nature of a partition suit cannot be properly dealt with unless all who are admittedly shareholders in the joint property are before the Court. Pahaladh Singh v. Mussamut Luchmunbutty, 12 W. R., 256.

A deed of partition between two brothers based on a compromise of suit, ratified by a decree of the Sudder Court, and putting an end to litigation previously entered into by their father, cannot be set aside without strict proof of haste and precipitancy of the settlement, inequality, restraint, coercion, or fraud. Maharajah Hetnarain Singh v. Modnerain Singh, 3 W. R., P. C., 51.

Where a partition of an estate under Regulation XIX of 1814 has been carried out, and confirmed by the revenue authorities, it seems that one shareholder cannot maintain a suit in the Civil Court to have it declared that he is entitled to a share larger than he claimed in the partition proceedings. Ramsahaya Singh and others v. Syud Muzhur Aly and others, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 40.

When an estate was divided by private agreement more than 50 years ago, and the division was subsequently maintained in a judicial decision, since which the co-sharers have for many years exercised rights of ownership independently of each other, a butwarra of the whole estate cannot now be demanded, even though a regular separation of one share has been intermediately obtained by a suit in a Civil Court. Permessur Dutt Sahee v. Andh Sahajeé, 5 W. R., 40.

Before a purchaser in execution of a share of a specific mehal in an estate is entitled to a butwarra of his purchase, its nature and extent must be clearly defined in the Civil Courts. Nilmonee Doss Chund v. Sreekant Doss Chund, 5 W. R., 49.

In a suit for contribution of Government revenue the previous paid and recognized quotas must be taken as the proper data for distribution until a regular butwarra is made and sanctioned under Regulation XIX of 1814. Poornochunder Gangooly v. Kishen Chunder Ghose, 5 W. R., 112.

When an estate is held in separate possession, a butwarra of the whole, for the purpose of apportioning land according to the jummas of the shareholders, who had severally entered into engagements with the Government, cannot be insisted upon by one of the proprietors under Section 30, Regulation XIX of 1814. Bujrungee Lall v. Syud Velaet Hossein Khan, 5 W. R., 186.

When a purchaser from one of several shareholders of a joint property sues for the share of his vendor, but, for the sake of valuing the case, represents that his claim is for that quantity of land which, by a division of it, would fall to his share, and obtains a decree, the decree is only for joint possession. Muknoo Jan Bibee v. Gholam Ruhman Mollah, 5 W. R., 187.

The mere fact of one of several co-sharers alienating his share of the property is no proof of separation in estate. Treelochun Roy v. Rajkishen Roy, 5 W. R., 214.

A butwarra is necessary before separate possession can be held in a joint property. Modoosoodun Mookerjee v. J. Beckwith, 1 W. R., 206.

A butwarra by revenue authorities under Regulation XIX of 1814 is final. Sheikh Zaker Ali Chowdhry v. Jugdessuree, widow of Nynsook Mundul, 1 W. R., 323.

A butwarra is only conclusive between the shareholders themselves, but not between them and other parties holding under-tenures at the time. Womesh Chunder Mojoomdar v. Dwarkanath Roy, 4 W. R., 80.

Butwarra papers are only evidence of the proportionate assessment of Government revenue payable by proprietors after partition, not evidence binding ryots as to what holdings are theirs, or what their arrears, rates, or periods of occupancy. Drobo Moyee Gosmanee v. Dhurmo Doss Koondoo, 10 W. R., 197.

The Civil Court decreed partition (butwarra) of an estate upon a suit brought by some of the co-sharers in the estate, and ordered the plaintiffs to pay the costs of the partition. The Collector, however, called upon the defendants, the other co-sharers, to pay a portion of the fees to the Ameen who effected the partition, namely, in proportion to the shares allotted to them by the decree; and in default of payment of the whole of such portion he sold the defendants' shares in the estate. Held that the Collector acted ultra vires, and a suit was maintainable in a Civil Court to set aside the sale and for recovery of the property. Baij Nath Sahu and others v. Lalla Sital Prasad and others, 2 B. L. R., F. B., 1; S. C., 10 W. R., F. B., 66.

The decision of a Collector under the butwarra law, dividing a zemindaree, and finding that rent was payable by an occupier of part of the land after a particular rate, is not an award binding upon such occupier, he being no party to the proceedings; he may therefore contest the amount of such rate in a suit subsequently brought for enhancement of rent, and is not bound to appeal under Act XIII of 1848 from the decision of the Collector, that Act having no application to such a case. Greedharee Singh v. Pultoo Roy, Marsh., 37.

A butwarra award is no absolute proof of title, and no estoppel in the way of an intervenor who can prove that he has received and enjoyed the rents claimed from a date subsequent to the butwarra. Sreenath Ghossal v. Joynarain Kavar, 3 W. R., Act X R., 11.

In a suit by the purchaser of one estate to recover certain lands alleged to belong to his estate, which the defendants held as a part of another estate, the plaintiff needlessly prayed that a certain order passed in the cause of the butwarra of the defendant's estate should be set aside. As the defendant failed to show that the Collector, in laying down the boundaries of the estate then under butwarra, was proceeding under Regulation VII of 1822,—Held that the map made by him in carrying out the butwarra of another estate was not an award binding on the defendant, and that the case therefore was not barred by limitation under Clause 6, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859. Rughoobur Singh and others v. Hurree Pershad and others, 6 W. R., 75.

Defendant having obtained from the Collector an order for a butwarra of his share in a mouzah in the vicinity of plaintiff's estate, the latter, after applying in vain to the revenue authorities for a declaration that his own estate (Sheopore) had nothing to do with defendant's mouzah, which was found to be recorded on the towji with an alias of Sheopore, brought a civil suit for a declaration of his own right to Sheopore. Held that as the two estates were separately recorded in the towji with distinct areas and sudder jummas, and as plaintiff's ownership of Sheopore was not disputed, and there was no allegation of his lands being incorporated by the partition in the defendant's estate, plaintiff had no cause of action. Foolbashee Kowar v. Arzun Sahoo, 12 W. R., 134.

The dispossession of a party from land assigned to him under a legal butwarra, though a wrongful act, is no ground for a suit for restoration to the old state of things as they existed before the butwarra was made. Hurro Persaud Roy v. Mohunt Ram Churn Singh, 6 W. R., 314.

A suit for contribution for the fees of an Ameen who was deputed to make a butwarra will lie against another proprietor of the estate who joined with the plaintiff in applying for the butwarra, and is not affected by the fact that the butwarra was, for certain reasons, not carried out. The Collector having called upon the proprietors to pay the fees of the Ameen, the plaintiff's payment of the whole amount was not a voluntary payment, as the Collector could have sold the whole estate to realize the fees. Such suit is governed by Act XI of 1838. Greesh Chunder Lahoory v. Asudoonissa Bebee, 8 W. R., 333.

Lands held in joint possession, each proprietor receiving his proportion of the rent according to his interest in the land, cannot be divided under the butwarra laws. Doorga Kant Lahoory v. Radha Mohun Gooho Neogy and others, 7 W. R., 51.

In a suit brought by a son against his father to compel a division of moveable and immoveable property inherited by the latter from his paternal cousin,—Held that as regards the jewels of which plaintiff required an account the plaintiff had no right of complaint, although his father, the defendant, had made an unjust and partial distribution of them. Held also that the suit to enforce a division of the immoveable property could not be maintained inasmuch as neither the plaintiff nor the defendant acquired any right of such property by birth. Rayadur Nallatambi Chetti v. Rayadur Mokunda Chetti, 3 Mad. Rep., O. J., 455.

According to Regulation XV of 1816 of the Madras Code, in a suit for possession of joint family property, in which the title of the plaintiff depended on the fact of a division having taken place in the family, a distinct averment of division must be made in the cause, and a direction given by the Court for the production of evidence in proof of such an averment. Gooroo Swamy Perria Woodia Taver v. Bany Anga Mootoo Natchiar, 6 W. R., P. C., 50.

Courts in their judgments should bear in mind the very distinct character of the several kinds of partition, and until it has been ascertained with what description of partition they have to deal the question of the sufficiency of the sanction or confirmation given to it cannot be determined.

In certain cases the Commissioners' sanction is required, in others that of the Collector.

There are partitions known as imperfect partitions depending upon the conduct of the parties, and effected from first to last only with their consent. Mirza Muhumdu Beg v. Meer Hossein Ali, 2 N. W. R., 26.

Act XIX of 1863 contains no provision for the judicial decision by the Collector of objections raising questions of title arising after the partition-order in the course of partition. Chowdhry Zalim Salingh and others v. Seetloo, 2 N. W. R., 404.

A suit to set aside a mokurruree lease granted by a co-sharer was held to be premature as having been brought before completion of a butwarra, which was in course of being effected, the plaintiff having no locus standi to bring a suit in respect of a mokurruree by which he might never be injuriously affected. Bhekdharee Singh v. Kishen Pershad Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 106.

Parties holding separate portions of an estate according to private arrangement previously made, are not in a condition to apply to the Collector for butwarra when unable afterwards to agree among themselves. Ajoodhya Pershad v. Kristo Dyal, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 165.

A Collector's butwarra proceedings, though final for the purpose of fixing the proportionate area and assessment, are not to preclude parties from coming into Court for enforcement of their civil right under Section 1, Act VIII of 1859. Koonj Beharee Singh v. Neervo Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 291.

Where parties by agreement in a butwarra restricted their rights by the condition that one of their number was to have full use of the water in a reservoir, the others were held not to be at liberty to set up, even on their own lands, an embankment round the reservoir so as to diminish materially the flow of water into it. Gour Sahoy Singh v. Sheo Sahoy Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 94.

In a suit for rent of a share alleged by plaintiff to have fallen to him consequent on a butwarra effected by the Collector under Regulation XIX, 1814, the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit because plaintiff could not file any jumma-wasilbakee or any kubuleut either before or after the butwarra. Held in special appeal that, before dismissing the suit, the lower Appellate Court was bound to put the intervenor to the proof that the land appertained to the share which he got from his vendor, who obtained it by inheritance from one of the shareholders, and to have noticed plaintiff's evidence that the share fell to him under the butwarra, and the defendant had paid rent to the shareholders before the butwarra; it being no defence to the intervenor that he was not invited to attend the butwarra. Hur Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Meer Mukram Ali, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 143.

Though a partition of a lakheraj tenure cannot be effected under the provisions of Regulation XIX of 1814, yet a Civil Court in effecting such a partition may well be guided by the rules laid down in that Regulation so far as they are applicable. Janika Bibee v. Luchmun Pershad, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 137.

To constitute property separate property, it is not necessary that a division should be made by a revenue officer, nor is it necessary that the estate itself should be partitioned in accordance with a private agreement of the co-sharers by metes and bounds. It is sufficient that the co-sharers hold recognized shares, the profits of which shares they severally enjoy and appropriate. Mussamut Jemee and another v. Mussamut Dhurum Kooer, 3 N. W. R., 108.

When by a specific arrangement the sharers in an undivided mehal had divided the cultivated land, assigning definite portions to the shareholders severally; the rents of which they would be entitled to receive from the cultivators cultivating such plots respectively,—Held that such sharers stand to such cultivators in the relation of landlord and tenant, and are competent alone to bring suits against their cultivators. Jankee Dass v. Syud Mahomed, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, p. 16.

Where a zemindar himself put up a tenure for sale in separate lots, and took rents from two of the purchasers separately, it was held that no written consent was necessary in order to his being bound to recognize the partition. Nubo Kishen Mookerjee v. Sreeram Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 255.

Where the Collector directs that a separate account should be opened with the co-sharer of an estate on his application, and his share is found not to be such as he states it to be, the co-sharers are at liberty to bring a suit in the Civil Court to establish the extent of their shares, in the event of the Collector under the butwarra law rejecting their application for a division of their specific shares. Khedoo Thakoor v. Bhugwat Lall, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 9.

In a suit for declaration of title in which plaintiff also claimed an allotment of his share which had been refused him by the Collector in a butwarra then in progress,—Held that as it was found that plaintiff's title was established he was also entitled, under Section 5, Regulation XIX of 1814, to a precept to the Collector directing him to award to the plaintiff a share corresponding with that title. Dewan Abdool Reza v. Jebunnissa Bibee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 34.

In a suit for a butwarra on the allegation that defendant had encroached upon certain ijmalee lands, the latter urged that the said lands were not ijmalee but the self-acquired lands of his (defendant's) son, who ought to be made a party. Held on review of a previous decision that as the son's interest was not adverse both to himself and defendant, unless the point raised was cleared up the butwarra could not stand, and the son must therefore be made a party under Section 73, Act VIII of 1859. Joy Kissen Mookerjee v. Raj Kissen Mookerjee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 101.

Where a butwarra is effected under Regulation XIX of 1814, the fact that certain bits of land, either through omission, neglect, or for convenience, have in making the partition been left in joint occupation, does not give the proprietor of one estate any interest in the other, even in the case of a family place of worship. Shaikh Bundey Hossein v. Lalla Puriag Dutt, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 110.

A butwarra proceeding under Regulation XIX of 1814 may be final for fiscal purposes, but it cannot take away the right of suit conferred by Act VIII of 1859. Sheo Pershad Sookool v. Shunkur Sahoy, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 190.

There is nothing in the law which makes the order of a Collector in a butwarra proceeding final as regards questions of title. Ooday Singh v. Paluck Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 271.

Section 20, Regulation XIX of 1814, which says, "the determination of the Board of Revenue or Board of Commissioners on the paper of partition shall be final," refers to those questions only which can be legally determined by the revenue authorities, and will not prevent a regular suit being instituted to establish a right and title to the land which a party has lost by a butwarra, notwithstanding that the plaintiff may have failed to make his objection before the Collector within fifteen days, as required by Clause 2, Section 4, Regulation XIX of 1814. There is nothing in the butwarra law or in any other regulation to prevent the Civil Court from entertaining a suit for the declaration of the plaintiff's right to a larger share than that recorded in his name in the paper of partition.

An objection urged by the respondents, for the first time, in special appeal, that inasmuch as it was the plaintiff's own fault that he did not appear before the Collector and make his objection in time, his suit, which is one merely for declaration of title, and therefore is in the discretion vested in the Court by the 15th Section of Act VIII of 1859, ought not to be entertained, was not allowed.

Where a butwarra had been made, and the plaintiff had had a specific share allotted to him, but which share was less than his proper share in the estate, and the plaintiff brought his suit against the co-sharers generally, without specifying in whose share the quantity he had lost was included, held the Court could in such suit declare the plaintiff's title to the same, treating him as a shareholder to that extent only in the patti in which it may have been included. Spencer v. Puhul Chowdry; Spencer v. Sheikh Kadir Buksh, 6 B. L. R., 658, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 471.

When in the preparation of a butwarra under Regulation XIX of 1854 it is ascertained that the parties are at variance on a question of title, the Collector's proper course is to stay proceedings until all such questions are decided by a competent Court, the revenue authorities not having authority under the law to decide them finally. Maddun Mo- hun v. Kartick Nath Pandey, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 335.

Plaintiffs sued their co-heirs to recover huq-ela-gaun,—that is, the half share of the produce of trees planted on a portion of the land by their ancestor before his death,—on the ground that although by a butwarra entered into by the heirs the trees fell to the share of the defendants, plaintiffs were entitled as succeeding to the ryotee rights of the person who planted them.

Held that as the ancestor was the only proprietor his heirs were co-proprietors, and the butwarra was a division of the proprietary right, and that no ryotee right existed. Mussamut Ameerun and another v. Mussamut Sunjeeda and another, 11 W. R., 226.

The cause of action against a co-sharer for partition first arises when he gets possession of the whole property under a survey award. Kally Chunder Chowdhry v. Rajah Jogendro Narain Roy, W. R., 1864, 323.

On 12th June, 1867, some of the proprietors of an estate applied to the Collector for a partition under Regulation XIX of 1814. On the same day the Collector issued a notice to all the shareholders, including the plaintiffs in this suit, calling upon them to come in within one month and show such cause, and offer such objections, &c., as they should think fit. It did not appear that the plaintiffs did come in or did anything upon this. Similar applications were made by other shareholders. On the 19th August, 1867, the Collector drew out a tabular statement, purporting to be in pursuance of Section 4, Regulation XIX of 1814. In it was a column giving the shares into which the expenses of the partition were to be divided. On the same day a notice was issued to the proprietors, ordering them to pay their respective quotas of the expenses accordingly. It was said by the defendants that the apportionment was confirmed by the Commissioner on the 20th January, 1868. On the 6th March, 1868, it was ordered by the Collector that a proclamation should be issued in accordance with paragraph 4 of Section 5 of Act XI of 1859, directing the plaintiffs, as defaulters in two sums of Rs. 252-3-2 and 9-9-6, to pay the Government revenue. On the 28th March such proclamation was issued accordingly. Subsequently one of the plaintiffs came in, and offered to pay all that was then due and outstanding. His application was rejected, and on the same day, the 8th April, the sale proceeded, and the whole interest of the plaintiffs was sold for Rs. 16,900. The plaintiffs appealed to the Commissioner, but their appeal was dismissed. The plaintiffs therefore brought a suit against the purchasers and the Collector for the recovery of the property and for cancelment of the sale.

Held that the sale was void. There was no arrear of Government revenue justifying a sale under Acts XI of 1838 and XI of 1859, Section 5. There could be no arrear until demand after sanction by the Board of Revenue and by the Lieutenant-Governor of the estimate of expenses prepared by the Collector, and fixed by the Commissioner. The Board must give its sanction in each case, and the defendants failed to show that it had done so. But even if the Commissioner had power finally to determine the amount and date of payment, it was not shown that he had done so, or supposing that he had, that any fresh demand had been made upon the parties liable.

Per Bayley, J.—The completion of the partition is not necessary under Act XI of 1838 before the amount of unpaid expenses can become an arrear realizable by sale.

Semble,— The Government need not give its sanction in each case, but a "general" sanction will be sufficient. Hur Gopal Dass v. Ram Golam Sahi, 5 B. L. R., 135; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 381.

The purchaser of a share in an undivided lakheraj estate can sue his co-parceners for a partition of his share, and the Civil Court has jurisdiction to carry out the partition. Fattch Bahadur v. Janki Bibi, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 55; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 74.

A., one of the shareholders of a talook, consisting of several mouzas, mortgaged his share in one of the mouzas named Kishoopore to B. Upon a partition being made under Regulation XIX of 1814, the mouza Kishoopore was allotted to C. and D., co-parceners in the talook, and other mouzas were allotted to A. In a suit by C. against B. for obtaining possession of his share in Kishoopore,—Held that there was no cause of action. That upon a partition of a joint property a co-parcener is bound by the incumbrances created by another co-parcener in respect of a portion of the property, if such portion be allotted to him upon a partition between the co-parceners. Baboo Nishan Singh v. Baboo Jugdeo Singh, 4 B. L. R., Ap., 97.

A joint and undivided estate having been subjected to private partition, four beegahs which were in the portion held by A. were granted by him in mokurruree. Subsequently, on the application of the parties, the Collector made a regular partition, by which two beegahs of the mokurruree land were allotted to the other sharers, who refused to recognize the grantee's mokurruree rights for that portion of the land, contending that as under the private partition all the four beegahs were in the share of the grantor the loss of rent should be on him, and that the Collector's butwarra could not transfer two beegahs with the mokurruree or smaller rental to the other sharers.

Held that the grantor's mokurruree title could not be got rid of by the butwarra, and that he was entitled to recognition by the other sharers. Sheikh Ahmedoollah v. Shah Ashruff Hossein, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 447.

Where two or more proprietors of a joint estate held in common tenancy, desirous of having separate possession of their respective shares, apply each and all to have that estate divided in exactly the same proportionate shares, and no other sharers oppose the butwarra, the Collector may at once comply with the application, and if no objection is raised when the parties have opportunity of raising objection, the shares cannot again be reunited by a suit in a Civil Court. But if the Collector has judicial notice of a dispute with regard to a share, it is questionable whether he has jurisdiction to make a partition of that share. In any suit, however, to do away the partition as regards that share the Collector must be made a party. Joymonee Debea v Imam Buksh Talookdar, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 471.

5.—Contribution.

A co-sharer in an estate paying revenue to Government, who has paid the revenue due upon the whole estate, cannot sue his co-sharers for contribution as on an implied contract in a Small Cause Court under Act XI of 1865, Section 6.

The duty of contributing is caused, not by any convention or agreement between the shareholders, but arises from principles of equity. Rambux Chatterjee and another v. Madhoo Soodun Chowdhry and another, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 155; 7 W. R., 377.

A co-owner is liable to contribute to the payment of all sums necessarily expended by another co-owner in maintaining the common property. But he cannot be called upon to contribute in respect of money expended on improvements to which he has not assented. Syud Mahomed Khan v. Nawab Shaista Khan, 2 N. W. R., 248.

In execution of a decree for an enhanced rent against the holders of a jote jumma, the landlord put up for sale, and caused to be sold, a talook which was also the joint property of the same parties. One of these parties accordingly sued others of them, on the allegation that his share of the property sold exceeded the lands occupied by him in the jote jumma, and asked the Court to give him a joint and several decree against all the defendants for the entire amount of the difference.

Held that plaintiff could not be entitled to such a decree, but should have asked that the defendants might be directed to contribute to him in proportion to their respective shares, if his complaint was well founded. But as defendants alleged that, although plaintiff held that small quantity, it was compensated for in other ways, it was for plaintiff to show that he did not derive from, or by virtue of his share in, the jote jumma a profit or interest equivalent to the interest he held in it. Annoda Pershad Acharjee and others v. Surbosoonderee Dabea and others, 11 W. R., 453.

When one person jointly interested with others in land is compelled to pay Government revenue in excess of his proper share, each co-sharer is bound to refund so much as he ought himself to have paid, and this objection is to be enforced by a suit against all the co-sharers in which the amount of their several liabilities is to be declared by the Court. Khema Debia and others v. Kumolakant Bukshee and others, 10 W. R., 10.

In a suit by one shareholder against his co-shareholders, for contribution in respect of Government revenue paid for the estate, it is not necessary for plaintiff to prove that he paid the whole amount of the revenue; it is sufficient for him to prove that he has paid more than his share, and that his co-sharers have paid less than theirs. Hemanginee Dossea v. Ram Nidhee Koondoo and another, 10 W. R., 158.

A decree-holder for arrears of rent against three persons jointly placed certain sums of money in Court to the credit of one of them, viz., the plaintiff, who, in her capacity of guardian of her son, had a cross-decree against him, and afterwards he withdrew those sums in execution of the joint-decree. Thereupon the plaintiff sued the other two joint-debtors for contribution, as he had repaid to her minor son the sum of money so taken away. Held that the payment by the plaintiff to her minor son was a voluntary payment, and was not therefore such a payment as entitled her to sue her joint-debtors for contribution. Rajlakhi Debi v. Taramonee Chowdhrain and another, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 281; S. C., 11 W. R., 218.

When parties are bound by a joint liability, and one of them discharges the whole debt due to the creditor, he may bring an action against his co-debtors for a contribution by each of them for his share of the sum due to the original creditor. The plaintiff in such a case can only sue each of the co-debtors for his share of the amount paid, and a decree should not be given jointly and severally, but severally against each of the defendants for the contribution due by each. H. A. Eglinton v. Koylashnath Mozoomdar, W. R., 1864, 303.

In a suit for contribution on account of Government revenue, which was decreed by the first Court but dismissed by the lower Appellate Court, because the plaint did not specify the shares of the different shareholders,—Held that the lower Appellate Court was bound to adjudicate upon the evidence. Bhono Bibee v. Pallan Gazee and others, 11 W. R., 131.

In a suit for contribution, a decree cannot and ought not to pass jointly against all the defaulters. The decree should specify the particular sums to be paid by each person. Shaikh Otioollah v. Mussamut Aseerun and others, 7 W. R., 194.

In a suit to recover as contribution a sum paid by plaintiff on account of arrears due on a farming lease, the test of plaintiff's title to recover was held to be whether there was any legal necessity arising to him from reasonable probability of any injury resulting to him in case he did not make the payment. Kistokisore Poddar v. Koylash Chunder Mookerjee, 12 W. R., 128.

In decreeing a suit for contribution against co-sharers liable for separate and defined jummas, it is the duty of a Court to apportion the separate liabilities. Nobin Mohul Ghossal v. Gopal Chunder Mookerjee, 11 W. R., 538.

In a suit to recover contribution on the allegation that plaintiff and defendant were joint-tenants, and that there was an arrear of rent due from them, for which the zemindar was about to sue when the plaintiff paid it, together with several other cesses and expenses, it was held that as there had been no demand upon the defendant, nor any suit nor other effectual proceeding for the recovery of the rent, the payment by the plaintiff was voluntary and officious, and that as the demand with which plaintiff complied was an excessive demand, his compliance with it would not bind the defendant to pay the amount of contribution sued for. Luckhee Kant Doss v. Shibchunder Chuckerbutty, 12 W. R., 462.

A payment made by a judgment-debtor to the assignee of a decree-holder was held to be a voluntary payment, which could not defeat the rights of the decree-holder. Kanoongoe Backteshur v. Rajah Chunder Seekhur, W. R., 1864, Mis., 8.

Plaintiff purchased a jote jumma at a sale in execution of a decree against defendant. After it came into plaintiff's possession the putneedar under whom the jote was held obtained a decree against the defendant for arrears of rent which had become due before the above purchase, and attached the tenure with a view to selling it under an order passed by the Collector. At this stage plaintiff, to save the tenure from sale, paid the amount of the decree against the defendant.

Held that the payment was a voluntary one, made without legal necessity, and was not recoverable by suit against the defendant. Ram Buksh Chutlangea and another v. Hridoy Monee Debia, 10 W. R., 446.

Plaintiff's ancestor had purchased in execution the right, title, and interest of R., one of the defendants. Antecedently to that sale the right, title, and interest of R., and those of two others, had been attached in execution of a decree against D. (the uncle of R. and father of the two others), and a sale having been ordered after purchase by plaintiff's ancestor, the latter, whose objections did not avail, finally prevented the sale by paying in the amount due. Held that as R. was not legally bound to pay the amount due under the decree against D., and the payment was in every sense voluntary, plaintiff could not recover from her and the sons of D. The Collector of Shahabad v. Ram Buddun Singh and others, 10 W. R., 400.

A. was in possession of certain lands in lieu of dower. B. put up to sale, in execution of a decree against C. (A.'s husband), C.'s rights and interests in those lands. A., under protest, deposited in Court the amount claimed, in order to stop the sale, and consented that it should be paid over to B. until the rights of the parties could be settled in a regular suit. A. then sued B. for a refund of the money on the ground that at the time of B.'s attaching the property his decree against C. had been already satisfied. The Zillah Court gave a decree for A. upon the merits. The High Court on appeal held that the payment into Court was a voluntary payment, and therefore A. had no right of action against B. Held (reversing the decision of the High Court) that the payment was not a voluntary payment. Decree of the lower Court affirmed. Fatim Khatun and another v. Mahomed Jan Chowdry and another, 1 B. L. R., P. C., 21; 10 W. R., P. C., 29.

Held that plaintiff, who held partly as zemindar and partly as dur-putneedar, was entitled to look to his co-sharers in the zemindaree for contribution of Government revenue paid by him to save the entire estate from sale, and that the fact of his being a sharer in the dur-putnee could not bind him to recover his over-payments from the putneedars. Radha Madhub Dutt v. Ram Runjun Chuckerbutty, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 461.

The land of a jote jumma belonging to plaintiff and one P. having been attached in satisfaction of a joint decree for arrears of rent, plaintiff deposited the entire amount of the decree. He then sued M., who had obtained D's share of the jote, for contribution on the ground that M. was in use and occupation. Held that the case against M. was not met by the plea that he was not a party to the suit in which the decree was obtained. Gudadhur Chowdry v. Shama Churn Mitter, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 8.

Any debtor paying more than his share is entitled to sue his co-debtors for contribution whether a release has been granted or not. Sheo Churn Lall v. Ram Surun Sahoo, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 49.

Parties are liable for contribution according to their respective interests in a property, and not simply per capitâ. Shaikh Murdan Ali v. Shaikh Tufuzzul Hossein, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 78.

6.—Trespass.

Where the defendants without leave quarried on the land of the plaintiff and removed a large quantity of stone therefrom, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover by way of damages the value of the stone after it was quarried, and that the defendants were not entitled to a deduction therefrom of the cost they had incurred in quarrying the stone. Dájibá Anandráv v. The B. B. and C. I. Railway Company, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 235.

In a suit to compel the filling up of a pyne which ran over plaintiff's land and conveyed water to defendant's estate, when defendant denied having done anything beyond his own rights or anything which was injurious to the plaintiff, plaintiff obtained a decree. Held that before giving judgment for plaintiff the Court ought to have shown in what manner his right had been infringed, and then to have given a definite decree as to what defendant was bound to do. Nund Kishore Singh v. Lalla Burgun Lall, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 154.

The Collector of Bombay bonâ fide believing that certain land upon which a quarry had been opened by the plaintiff was Government waste land, by his servants forcibly stopped the quarrying operations of the plaintiff "for the purpose (the Collector stated in his evidence) of preserving the land for Government, as land from which revenue might in future be collected."

In an action for trespass brought against him by the plaintiff, it was held that the act of the Collector was not "a matter concerning revenue" within the meaning of Section 25 of Act IX of 1850, and that the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court was therefore not included. Held also upon the facts stated in the case that the possession of the plaintiff of the land in question was sufficient to entitle him to maintain an action of trespass against the Collector.

The Revenue Court, under Section 2 of Regulation XIX of 1827, has not exclusive jurisdiction over the Collector of Bombay for all acts done by him in his official capacity.

Semble,—Section 1 of Act VII of 1836 was retrospective only in its operation, and is now obsolete. Náráyan Krishna Land v. Gerard Norman, 5 Bom. Rep., O. C., 1.

7.—Lands taken for Public Purposes.

Where lands are taken compulsorily, the principle upon which the amount of compensation is divisible amongst the zemindar and the holders of several subordinate tenures is by ascertaining the value of the interest of each holder of a tenure, and to give him a sum equivalent to the purchase-money of such interest.

In a suit to recover the proportion of money paid into Court as compensation of land taken for a railway, to which the plaintiff, a dur-putneedar, may be entitled, and in which suit the zemindar and putneedar are defendants, the plaintiff cannot claim abatement of rent under Act X of 1859, Section 18, since such a claim is cognizable only in a suit instituted under that Act. Gordon, Stuart, & Co. v. Maharajah Mahatab Chand Bahadoor and others, Marsh., 490.

The plaintiff, as ijaradar, claimed a sum of money as compensation for land taken compulsorily for the purpose of a railway, and which had been awarded and was lying in deposit. A farmer of the lands under him claimed a portion of the same sum as compensation for the residue of his lease. Held that the farmer was entitled to such compensation, and that, in apportioning the costs of a suit brought to try the question, in which the ijaradar was plaintiff and the Government and the farmer defendants, the farmer was entitled to receive from the ijaradar the costs of his demand to the extent to which it was established, and the plaintiff to receive of the farmer the costs applicable to an excess in the demand of the farmer beyond that which he succeeded in establishing; and that Government was entitled to receive the costs which it had incurred from both parties, in the proportion in which each had failed in establishing his claim. Nusseroodeen Ahmed v. The Railway Commissioners and others, Marsh., 91.

A putneedar is entitled to compensation on account of lands in his putnee taken for public purposes, although there was no agreement to that effect. Joy Kishen Mookerjee v. Reazoonissa Beebee, 4 W. R., 40.

Held that the principle laid down in the case published at page 328 of the Sudder Decisions for 1860 (vide foot-note) to regulate compensation for land taken for public purposes, is not applicable to the division of compensation in every case. It would not provide for the case of several putnees where the land is taken from the holder of the lost enure, and where the grantors of the several intermediate tenures have received a sum of money as a bonus for the grant. Maharajah Mahatab Chund Bahadoor v. The Bengal Coal Company and others, 10 W. R., 391.

In a suit to recover compensation for certain lands taken by the magistrate for roads, where plaintiff had applied for compensation in the usual course, but, after various delays on the part of Government, had been refused compensation, and referred to the Civil Court after the period of limitation had expired,—Held that plaintiff was not entitled to any consideration for his delay in instituting a suit, which was the best remedy prescribed by law, and that the mere fact of Government receiving revenue for the estate in which the lands are situated did not prevent the Law of Limitation operating in its favour, as it would in the case of any private individual in adverse possession. James Hills v. The Magistrate of Nuddea, 11 W. R., 1.

A portion of the area of two villages having been taken under Act VI of 1857, and compensation deposited in the Collectorate, the dur-putneedar sued for the same, contending that the zemindar was entitled to twenty times the rental payable by the dur-putneedar, less expenses of collection. The zemindar claimed twenty times the profits he derived from the putneedar, less revenue paid to Government.

Held that as the plaintiff's calculation secured to the zemindar a more favourable result than that for which the latter himself contended, it was sufficient to decree the suit without determining the proper principle on which compensation should be allowed. Bengal Coal Co. v. Muhtah Chund Bahadoor, 12 W. R., 340.

Government took for public purposes a quantity of land, which included four cottahs leased by M. to plaintiff as the site of an iron foundry. Proceedings with a view to compensation were duly laid, pursuant to Act VI of 1857, and the arbitrators awarded a sum for the whole land and premises, of which sum they gave plaintiff a small part, and the rest to M. Plaintiff, who did not appear before the arbitrators, brings a suit to reimburse himself for loss sustained by having been turned out of his holding, and deprived of the machinery, &c., of his foundry. Held that M. as lessor is not answerable for plaintiff's eviction, or for damages on any other ground. William Minto v. Kalee Churn Doss, 8 W. R., 327.

When land was taken by Government for public purposes, and in consequence of the claim of the defendant the amount of compensation was invested by the Collector, under Section 29, Act VI of 1857, in Government securities, the plaintiff was declared not entitled, over and above the principal of the sum of compensation and its accruing interest in the hands of the Collector, to demand interest from the defendant at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum upon the principal sum from the date it might have been payable to him, but for the counter-claim of the defendant. Syud Keramut Ali Mutwalee v. Rajah Suttochurn Ghosal, W. R., 1864, 329.

When the railway company takes lands for public purposes, the party in possession at the time is primâ facie entitled to the money paid for it, until some one else establishes a prior claim. Chundee Churn Chatterjee v. Biddoo Bodone Banerjee, 10 W. R., 48.

When land is taken by the Government, under Act VI of 1857, the land is absolutely vested in the Government under Section 8, free from any right of way previously enjoyed by the public over such land. Fenwick, H. B., in the matter of the petition of, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 47, and 14 S. W. R., Cr. R., 72.

When land is taken up for a railway company, under Act VI of 1857, the owner should claim for all damages likely to be caused to his adjoining lands by the works of the company; and no suit will lie for damages so caused if they could reasonably have been foreseen at the time of the fixing of compensation.

Whether such damages could reasonably have been foreseen or not is a question of fact to be determined by the lower Court. Tapidas Govindbhai v. The B. B. and C. I. Railway Company; B. B. and C. I. Railway Company v. Tapidas Govindbhai, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 116.

A Collector who, after making proper enquiries, pays compensation-money for land taken under Act VI of 1857 to the person "deemed by him to be in possession as owner" (the amount of such compensation having been settled under Section 5), is not liable to be sued by the real owner of such land for the amount of such compensation-money.

It is in the discretion of the Collector whether he will take advantage of the provisions of Section 29 or not. Yesoba Dumodhur v. Secretary of State for India in Council, 7 Bom. Rep., O. C. J., 12.

By a Government notification of the 3rd of June, 1863, published in the Gazette, it was declared, under the provision of Act VI of 1857, that a certain strip of land passing by the mill of the defendants was required for a public purpose, the B. B. and C. I. Railway, a plan of which land was to be seen in the Collector's office.

On the 4th of November following the secretary of the defendants' company received a notice signed by the Collector, requiring the owner of the mill to call at the Collector's office to signify his acceptance or otherwise of the compensation for the land required.

The secretary went to the Collector's office, and there saw a plan, from which it appeared that an adjoining well from which the engine of the mill was supplied with water was intended to be taken, but no compensation for the well or land required was then agreed upon.

On the 28th of November a notice was served upon the defendants, signed by the Collector, stating that he had appointed an arbitrator on behalf of Government, and requiring the defendants to appoint a second arbitrator to determine the amount of compensation for the land (describing it) required by the B. B. and C. I. Railway Company.

The defendants' secretary wrote in reply that the defendants had appointed an arbitrator on their behalf to determine the amount of compensation for their land required for the B. B. and C. I. Railway Company.

Semble,—That a contract was entered into by the last-mentioned notice and letter of reply to it, of which specific performance could be enforced.

Held that the defendants had, by appointing their arbitrator to determine the compensation for the land required, waived any irregularity in the previous proceedings, and precluded themselves from claiming to have the whole manufactory taken under Section 32, Act VI of 1857, though no proceedings were taken in the arbitration for nearly twelve months subsequently, and the defendants had shortly before such proceedings made such a claim.

A well in a mill compound, from which the mill's engine is by means of a pipe supplied with water, is part of a manufactory within the meaning of Act VI of 1857, Section 32. Kharshedji Násarvanji v. The Secretary of State in Council of India, 5 Bom. Rep., O. C., p. 98.

II.—EASEMENTS.

8.—Generally.

A user "all along" or "from before" does not necessarily prove a right. Its existence must be proved from a time from which the right would be gained or presumed to have been gained. Mooktaram Bhuttacharjee v. Hurro Chundra Roy and others, 7 W. R., 1.

A user for four or five years is not sufficient to show a right by prescription. Hurro Soondery Debia and others v. Ramdhon Bhuttacharjee, 7 W. R., 276.

A wrongful interruption of right of water does not necessarily destroy the right of user, unless such interruption has been acquiesced in by the party wronged. Roy Luchmee Persaud v. Mussamut Fuzeelutoonissa Bibee and others, 7 W. R., 367.

Where a right of user of a drain or passage is incidental to a house, that right is not affected by the owner of the house letting the house to a tenant. Mussamut Amjudee Begum and others v. Syud Ahmed Hossein and another, 6 W. R., 314.

The law of easements in England, being derived from the civil law, has no peculiarities to debar its being applied to British subjects in India. Culliandoss Kirparam v. H. Cleveland, 2 Ind. Jur., O. S., 15.

A grant, either express or implied in prescription, is necessary to establish an easement. Conclusive evidence is required to prove an easement the result of which is great damage to the servient tenement. Without an uninterrupted user there can be no claim to an easement. Moonshee Zumeer Ali v. Mussamut Doorgabun, 1 W. R., 230.

A finding by the lower Appellate Court that the special appellant had failed to prove his user as of right of an easement on the special respondent's land, cannot be interfered with in special appeal. Moonshee Zumeer Ali v. Mussamut Doorgahim, 2 W. R., 212.

Where the house, the right of easement to which was claimed, was not and had not been in existence for several years, nor was the intention shown of rebuilding it within a reasonable time,—Held that the right of easement which is acquired by prescription and enjoyment, and continues so long as the person enjoying it continues the enjoyment, and shows an intention to continue it, has thus been lost by discontinuance; and that by the destruction of the tenement the servitude has been extinguished, and the plaintiff has no right to maintain the suit for the right of easement. Teeka Ram v. Doorga Pershad, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 196.

If the plaintiff's privacy was invaded, and the defendant could not establish his right by long usage, the former was entitled to have the windows closed, and the latter cannot be allowed to open new windows, merely because the comfort and ventilation of his own building would be increased. Goor Dass v. Monohur Dass, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 269.

If a party has ancient right to the discharge of water from his roof on a certain piece of land, it is not competent for a purchaser of the land to exercise his right thereto in such a manner as to interfere with the easement, and impose the trouble and expense on the owner of the easement of procuring some new mode of discharge. Sheo Nauth Singh v. Bishonath Singh, 2 Agra Rep., 191.

Held that uninterrupted enjoyment for a period of more than thirty years was necessary in order to acquire a title by prescription to an easement in the mofussil of the Bombay Presidency; the law applicable to such cases being Regulation V of 1827, Section 1, Clause 1, and that Act XIV of 1859 had made no alteration in this respect. Anaji Dattushet v. Morushet Bapushet, 2 Bom. Rep., 354.

In a suit to remove an obstruction to the enjoyment of light and air and for damages,—Held by Markby, J., that, in cases where English law is applicable, the Law of Prescription is that existing in England prior to the passing of the Prescription Act. Although the enjoyment of light and air as of right for upwards of thirty years is evidence from which an enjoyment from time immemorial may be presumed, yet inasmuch as the period of legal memory is about 700 years, the claim by prescription in this country is defeated by the fact that English law has only been introduced here for about 200 years. Where an easement has been enjoyed for upwards of twenty years, the presumption of a grant is a question of fact, and not of law. Distinction drawn between positive and negative servitudes.

Held by Peacock, C. J.—A right to air may be acquired by express grant, but it cannot be acquired merely by presumption arising from user, whether the presumption is a presumption of prescription or not. The only amount of light which can be claimed by prescription or by length of enjoyment, without an actual grant, is such an amount as is reasonably necessary for the convenient and comfortable habitation of the house. The uninterrupted enjoyment of light for twenty years acquiesced in by the owner of the servient tenement raises a presumption of right which, in the absence of any evidence to rebut it, ought to be acted upon by those who have to determine the facts. Such presumption is one of law, and not of fact.

Held by Norman J.—Servitudes are known and recognized both in Hindu and Mahometan law. A right to the unobstructed access of light is not a property or interest in the light itself, nor a right to be enjoyed in or over the soil of the adjacent owner. By analogy to the Law of Limitation, an adverse and uninterrupted use of an easement for twenty years confers a right to it: therefore where the access of light and air, through the windows of a house, has been enjoyed for twenty years, and there is nothing to rebut the presumption of title, the law implies an obligation on the part of an adjoining owner not to interrupt the free access of necessary light and air through such windows. Bagram v. Khettranath Karformah, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 18.

A party claiming the right of user by prescription over the property of another must show not only that the right has existed from ancient days, but also that it has been exercised as of right, and has not been interrupted. Mullik Jawad-ul-huq v. Ram Prasad Das, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 281.

No period has been definitely fixed to create a right of prescription.

There is no decision which says either that a finding that the user has lasted for at least 12 years is necessary, or that such a finding of a user for 12 years would be conclusive. Rupchandra Ghose v. Rupmanjari Dassi, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 325.

In a suit to recover possession of a piece of land on which defendant had erected a stall for the sale of commodities on market days, it was held that defendant's right of resort to the market as a member of the public did not warrant his having a stall located in a particular spot, and that the latter right could only be acquired either by grant or by prescription. Ram Manick Roy and others v. Sheikh Asgur, 11 W. R., 112.

A suit to close doors recently opened in the house of a neighbour, on the ground that such doors overlook the Zenana, or female apartments, of the plaintiff, does not lie. Sheikh Golam Ali v. Kuzi Mahomed Zahur Alam, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 76.

When in Gujerat a householder's privacy is invaded by the opening of new doors and windows in his neighbour's house, his right of action is not altered by the fact that a public road runs between the dominant and the servient tenements. Mani Shankur Hargovan v. Tri Ram Narsi followed. Kuvarji Premchand et al. v. Bai Javer, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 143.

Held that in accordance with the usage of Gujerat, an invasion of privacy is an actionable wrong, and that a man may not open new doors or windows in his house, or make any new apertures, or enlarge old ones, in a way which will enable him to overlook those portions of his neighbour's premises which are ordinarily secluded from observation, and so intrude upon his privacy.

The doctrine of English Law, which has been followed by the High Court of Madras, is different. Mani Shankur Hargovan v. Tri Ram Narsi et al., 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 42.

Where a house-owner in a street changed the arrangement or construction of the upper part of his house, so that the alteration gave him a wider range of vision than before, but in a manner otherwise consistent with his rights of enjoyment, no legal right of suit is given to a neighbour living on the other side of the road complaining of loss of privacy. Joogul Lal v. Mussamut Jadsodu Bibee, 3 N. W. R., 311.

A person claiming a right of easement over another's property is bound to prove continuous enjoyment without interruption not merely by presumption but as of right. Heeralall Kooer v. Purmessur Kooer, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 401.

In a suit for the removal of a pucca building recently erected by defendant upon land lying between the premises of the two parties to the dispute, where plaintiff's claim to use the land had been put upon his title as owner,—Held that having failed to make out the case originally set forth in the plaint, plaintiff had no right to fall back upon a title by prescription. Held that plaintiff's claim must stand or fall upon the strength of his own right, not upon any such finding as that defendant was not entitled to the exclusive use of the land. Bhoobun Mohun Mundle v. Rush Beharee Paul, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 84.

No suit lies for obstructing a public road, unless the plaintiff can show that he has suffered particular inconvenience from such obstruction.

An objection as to the plaintiff having no cause of action may be taken at any stage of the suit. Parbati Charun Mukhopadhya v. Kali Nath Mukhopadhya, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 73.

Water falling on A.'s land and collected in a reservoir there used to flow into B.'s land. Held that B. had no right to the use of the water, and that A. was entitled to erect on his own land a bund to prevent the water flowing on to B.'s land. Bunsee Saboo v. Kalee Persaud, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 414.

The mere fact of user for any number of years will not be sufficient to confer a right, if the user be from time to time interrupted by the owner resuming as occasion may require the exclusive use of his land. In such a case the user will be treated as permissive merely, and not as the exercise of a right. Aukhoy Coomar Chuckerbutty v. Mollah Nobee Nowzu, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 449.

9.—Right of Light and Air.

Ancient lights cannot be obstructed by the owner of the adjacent land building on it, so as to obscure the light and air always enjoyed. Whether the party has or has not other windows on another side of his premises is immaterial. Puran Mudduck v. Ooday Chand Mullick, 3 W. R., 29.

To acquire by prescription a right to the uninterrupted access of light and air through the windows of a dwelling-house, it is sufficient that the building in respect of which the right is claimed has assumed the appearance and outward aspect of a dwelling-house for more than twenty years before the time of the commencement of the suit, though not completed or used as a dwelling-house for the full period of twenty years before that time.

When a building is so far completed as to show an intention to use it as a dwelling-house, with certain windows or openings for light and air, from that time it becomes the duty of those who are concerned in preventing a prescriptive right to the access of light and air from arising in respect of such windows, to take steps to challenge and hinder the acquisition of such right.

When an injunction has been granted restraining a person from interrupting the access of light and air to certain windows, and the Court considers that the injunction has been infringed, an attachment will issue, even though the defendant has proceeded according to the advice of his surveyor and legal adviser in constructing the building complained of as a breach of the injunction. The Court in such cases does not consider itself bound by the opinion of surveyors, but will form its own judgment as to the probable effect of the structure complained of. Pranjivandas Hurjivandas v. Myaram Salmaldus and others, 1 Bom. Rep., 148.

A. having built on his own ground a wall which blocked up the apertures in B.'s house for the egress of smoke and ingress of air, A. was required to make corresponding apertures in his wall, and the pulling down of the wall was not considered necessary. Beharee Sahoo v. Mussamut Ajnus Koonwar, 6 W. R., 86.

A person cannot be allowed to maintain a wall to the injury of his neighbour.

A. built an upper story to his house overlooking B.'s inner apartments, whereupon B. built a wall which A. complained deprived him of light and air. Held that as A. was the first and greater wrongdoer, he was entitled to no relief even if he proved that B.'s wall deprived him of light and air. Sreenath Dutt v. Nund Kishore Bose, 5 W. R., 208.

A person is entitled to the free use of his ancient light and air. When any person wilfully and intentionally obstructs that light and air he is liable for the removal of the obstruction. Money damages will be no compensation for the injury. Syud Mahomed Hossein v. Syud Jafur Ali, 4 W. R., 23.

The invasion of property by opening windows is not treated by the law as a wrong for which any remedy is given. Komathi v. Gurunada Pillai, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 141.

The defendants having opened certain windows and erected a verandah in their house which commanded a view of the plaintiffs' female apartments, the plaintiffs brought a suit against them to have the windows closed and the verandah removed. Held that no such suit was maintainable. Mahomed Abdur Rahim v. Birju Saha, 5 B. L. R., 676; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 103.

In a suit for enforcing the removal of an obstruction to the alleged right of the plaintiffs to the light and air through certain windows in a room of a house, contiguous to the house of the defendants, it was proved that the plaintiffs had purchased the premises in 1847, and that the building of the room in which the windows in question were had been subsequently commenced in 1849; and the Judge of the Court below found on the evidence that the room and windows had been completed and in use for a period of twenty years prior to the date of suit, May 18th, 1870; that the plaintiffs had enjoyed the light and air through the windows for a period of twenty years without any interruption by the defendants; and it being proved that the defendants had by buildings obstructed the light and air coming to the plaintiffs' windows, he granted an injunction commanding the defendants to take down so much of the wall as rose to the height of more than five feet above the level of the plaintiffs' floor, and restraining them, the defendants, from continuing their building above the height of five feet.

Held, on appeal, per Couch, C. J.—By the English law before the Prescription Act (which is the law governing the case), the presumption of a grant, in the case of a claim to the access and use of light for a building, was a presumption of fact, the presumption being founded on the consent or acquiescence of the owner of the servient tenement. Acquiescence implies knowledge, and knowledge may be presumed where the owner is in possession. There must be knowledge for twenty years, at any rate; if the knowledge were for a lesser period, whether there was a grant would be a question of fact, and no presumption could arise. The question of whether or not there was knowledge is one preliminary to the consideration whether or not a grant is to be presumed. Held on the evidence that there had been no knowledge on the part of the defendants during the whole time, and therefore there had not been a twenty years' enjoyment of the light and air with their acquiescence.

Held per Markby, J.—The presumption of a lost grant is one of fact. An uninterrupted user for twenty years would be evidence from which, taken with other circumstances, it might be inferred that a grant had existed. No "patientia," or "submission" on the part of the defendants being shown so as to constitute an acknowledgment of the existence of the right of the plaintiffs to the light and air, the defendants were entitled to succeed. Bhuban Mohan Banerjee v. Elliot, J. S., 6 B. L. R., 85.

10.—Right of Water.

No proprietor can lawfully pen back the water of a stream by erecting a bund upon his own land, so as to inundate the land of his neighbour, without his license and consent. Becharam Chowdhry v. Puhubnath Jha, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 53.

The owner of two properties may conduct through troughs the rain-water accumulating on one property over a watercourse to the other property before it reaches another watercourse into which the rain-water, unless diverted, would naturally flow. Ramruttun Neogee v. Phool Singh, W. R., 1864, 147.

A person has no right to tap another's canal and abstract the water therefrom for his own land, unless he has acquired that right by grant or prescription Run Bahadoor v. Poodhee Roy, W. R., 1864, 319.

No presumptions of law in regard to rights of water are known in this country, but proof of ancient reasonable user by particular recognized means is sufficient to give the right. Sreemutty Bundhoo Sookoolany v. Maharajah Joy Prokash Singh Bahadoor, W. R., 1864, 367.

The right which a riparian proprietor has, under certain restrictions, to the use of the water of a natural watercourse has no application to a watercourse artificially constructed; and the mere fact of riparian proprietorship gives no rights whatever over such a stream. Bhoop Narain Singh and another v. Kazee Syud Keramut Ali, 6 W. R., 99.

Exposition of the right of discharging the rainfall on one's land through a watercourse over another's, and of the abandonment of such right. Khettur Nath Ghose v. Prosono Ghose Gowalah, 7 W. R., 498.

The right to take water is governed by established use. No one can open a new conduit to take additional water to the injury of his neighbours. Athur Ali Khan v. Sekundar Ali Khan, 4 W. R., 29.

A proprietor who by erecting a bund in his own land impedes the flow of surface drainage water from the higher land of another proprietor, is liable to pay damages on proof of actual substantial resulting loss. Hameedoonissa v. Anundmoyee Dossee, W. R., F. B., 25.

The plaintiff claimed a prescriptive right to the flow of the surface drainage water from the land of the defendant into his land. Held that such an easement can be acquired only where the water flows in a definite channel.

In a suit for interrupting the flow of water from the land of the defendant to the land of the plaintiff it appeared that, eight years before suit, the defendant had diverted the water, and that it had been diverted ever since. Held that the right if acquired would not necessarily be lost by the interruption, but that if the plaintiff acquiesced during that time in the interruption it might be some evidence of an abandonment of the right. Kena Mahomed v. Mohutoo Sircar, Marsh., 506.

The defendant closed up the outlets of a bank upon his own land, whereby the surface drainage water had immemorially flowed from the plaintiff's land into and over the defendant's land, and so escaped. By reason of the closing of these outlets the water was unable to escape, and the plaintiff's land became flooded and the crops therein damaged. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to maintain a suit to recover from the defendant the amount of damages he had sustained by reason of the ancient flow of the water from his land being thus impeded. Held also that in a suit for damages sustained by such an act done on the defendant's own land, actual damage to the plaintiff must be shown in order to sustain an action; and that the liability of the plaintiff to remit the rents of ryots whose crops were spoiled was sufficient damage. Mussamut Anundmoye Dassee and others v. Mussamut Hurroodonissa and others, Marsh., 85.

When a tenant by his lessor's permission erected a dam upon his holding, and thereby obstructed the natural flow of the water to other lands of the lessor,—Held that the mere permission did not amount to a grant.

Held also that there was no implied grant of the right to use water so as to derogate from the rights of those through whose lands the stream would otherwise flow.

Held also that the right under the permission might be terminated by revocation of the latter, but that such revocation would only be permitted on the terms of the landlord paying to the tenant the expenses which that permission had led him to incur.

Even when the dominant and servient tenements are the property of different persons, a man may license an act in its inception, and yet be entitled to relief when the act is found to have injurious consequences which he could not have contemplated at the time of the license. Kesava Pillai v. Peddu Reddi, 1 Mad. Rep., A. C., 258.

A suit for a declaration of prescriptive right to the use and enjoyment of the water of a watercourse can be maintained without the specification of any particular amount of damage sustained by the plaintiff.

The general rule of law in a case of this description is that, although proprietors of an estate through which a watercourse passes have the right to make use of the water for irrigating purposes, they must do so only to such extent as will not interfere with similar rights possessed by parties holding land lower down on the same watercourse. W. Sardawan and others v. Hurbuns Singh, 11 W. R., 254.

Where a party suing for the use of a water-way was found to have allowed it to be filled up without objection, and another of the same description to be constructed, which he had used for a year or two, he was held to have abandoned his right of user to the former water-way. Jugutbundoo Chuckerbutty v. Jugut Chowdhry, 12 W. R., 519.

In a suit to close up an outlet of water opened by the defendant, the lower Appellate Court found that the "outlet or sench (ছেঁচ)" was used barabar (বরাবর) all along, and that therefore the defendant had a right of user.

Held that an enjoyment for at least twelve years is necessary to create a right by user, and that user by the defendant for that period, at least, had been found. Kartik Chandra Sirkar v. Kartik Chandra Dey, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 166; 11 W. R., 522.

The proprietor of a pyne has a right to allow or to deny the use of water flowing through it to other persons, unless they have also a clearly defined right enabling them to control the water and convert it to their own use, a right clearly found to have originated in some grant or valid contract, or to have been exercised for so long a period that such title may be presumed. Maharanee Indurjeet Kooer v. Luchmee Kooer, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 349.

A suit may lie for damages for obstruction in the exercise of a right of usucapio over water, &c., although no property in the tank, &c., be asserted.

And Section 197 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not apply to suits for damages of this nature, and consequently the question of the amount of damages must be determined at the trial, and cannot be reserved for determination in execution of the decree. Ram Juheel Lall v. Baboo Sheo Nath Singh, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 24.

In a suit to establish a right of water and for damages for interruption of the same the facts were as follow: Plaintiff and defendant by agreement between them constructed a dam across a main channel, and from thence a smaller channel was made through the land of the defendant to the plaintiff's land, by means of which it was agreed that the plaintiff should be at liberty to irrigate the fields. The agreement was acted upon for a long course of years. Held that the agreement was not a mere parol license revocable at the pleasure of the defendant, but an agreement which created a right of easement, unlimited in point of time, to the use of the water by the plaintiff, and imposed upon the defendant the corresponding duty of allowing the accustomed supply to flow. A mere license differs in its effects from a license coupled with the creation of an interest. The former is revocable, but the latter is subject to the same incidents, and is as binding and irrevocable as any other contract, gift, or grant. Krishna v. Rujappa Shunthiga, 4 Mad. Rep., 98.

The plaintiff brought a suit to establish his right to an uninterrupted flow of water through a channel which ran into a tank in a village which was the plaintiff's property, and to compel the removal of sluices erected across the said channel by the first defendant's predecessor in office, and used for the purpose of diverting the flow of the water. Held that acquiescence in the sense of mere submission to the interruption of the enjoyment does not destroy or impair an easement. To be effectual for that purpose it must be attributable to an intention on the part of the owner to abandon the benefit before enjoyed. Held also that the diversion of the water was a continuing injury down to the time of the institution of the suit, and that the plaintiff's suit was not barred. Held also that it must appear from the circumstances in evidence in such case that the interference or obstruction complained of is not a trivial but a substantial injury in order to warrant relief by way of injunction. Held also that the right to an easement in the flow of water through an artificial watercourse is as valid against the Government as it is against a private owner of land. Held, per Scotland, C. J.—That the grant of an easement may be presumed from mere continued user of the privilege openly enjoyed by the occupiers of the dominant tenement as of right throughout any long period of time without interruption on the part of the proprietor of the servient tenement, but with this qualification, that the user should be for at least the period of adverse possession which is prescribed by Section 1, Clause 12 of the Act of Limitations, as a bar to the enforcing of title to corporeal property.

Per Innes, J.—That no precise period of uninterrupted enjoyment can be fixed as sufficient of itself to establish a right to an easement. Ponnusawmi Tevar v. The Collector of Madura, 5 Mad. Rep., 6.

The Magistrate had, on the complaint of the defendant, passed an order, under Section 320 of the Criminal Procedure Code, forbidding the plaintiff to retain possession of a piece of land to the exclusion of the public, until he had obtained the decision of a competent Court adjudging him to be entitled to such exclusive possession.

The plaintiff accordingly brought his suit in the Moonsiff's Court to recover possession of the land. The Moonsiff gave him a decree for exclusive possession of the land. On appeal the Judge held that the Moonsiff had no jurisdiction to try the question whether the public had a right of way over the land. The Judge's decision was reversed in special appeal, and the case remanded to the Judge to try the issue whether the plaintiff was entitled to the exclusive use of the land. Rooke v. Pyari Lall distinguished. Mahes Chundra Mookerjee v. Ramutum Palit, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 68; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 163.

II.—Right of Way.

By the terms of an arrangement come to by the parties in the proceedings before the Commissioner in a suit for partition of real property it was agreed that "T. (one of the parties) is to be paid the price of a privy which is to be pulled down for the purpose of the new pathway to be opened on the west side of the premises, which price is to be ascertained (by the Commissioner) on inspection, and paid by all parties, T. being at liberty to take over the materials at a valuation."

In a suit by the purchaser from one of the parties to the partition suit against T., charging that he obstructed the pathway, &c., such obstruction being the not removing the privy,—Held (reversing the decision of the Court below) that the payment to T. of the price of the removal was a condition precedent to the obligation on T. to remove the privy. Tarruck Nauth Ghose and others v. Kalee Pershad Khettry, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 210.

In cases of obstruction the Court will hold that the words "lanes, walks, gangways, or other thoroughfares," must be restricted to mean those spaces over which the public, by consent or dedication of the owner, enjoy the right of passing and repassing for market purposes. In re the Justices of the Peace for the Town of Calcutta v. The Maharanee of Burdwan, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 102.

It is necessary to show that the owner of a bazar in Calcutta actually permitted an obstruction in the paths of the bazar, in order that a conviction may be sustained against him under Act VI of 1863 (B. C.), Bye-law VII. In the matter of the Justices of the Peace for the Town of Calcutta v. Heralall Seal, Bourke's Rep., O. C., 412.

Where a person for having repaired a public road without having previously asked for leave to repair it was, on simple petition, charged with having obstructed the road, and the complainant never appeared,—Held that the Deputy-Magistrate ought to have dismissed the complaint. Queen v. Bhola Nath Banerjee, 7 W. R., Cr., 31.

The obstruction of a drain into which the sewage of complainant's premises fell does not fall either under Section 308 or 320 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, but is matter for a civil suit and injunction. In re Troylaknath Bose, 5 W. R., Cr., 58.

Where a jury is appointed under Section 310 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to try whether an order passed by a Magistrate for the removal of a nuisance or obstruction is reasonable or not, the Magistrate is bound under that section to be guided by the decision of the jury. The Queen v. Poholee Mullick and others, 12 W. R., Cr., 28.

Where A. complained merely to the Magistrate that "a certain road had been obstructed by B. and others,"—Held that the Magistrate was not bound to enquire into the matter under Section 320 of Act XXV of 1861. The Queen v. Rassul Nusby and others, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 9.

Held, in concurrence with a former decision, that no one has a right to institute a civil suit for the removal of an obstruction to a public road without showing that he has sustained some particular inconvenience beyond that which is sustained by any other member of the public in consequence of that obstruction. Raj Luckee Debia v. Chunder Kant Chowdry, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 173.

The owner of the land over which there is right of way by an ancient pathway cannot, without the consent of the parties entitled to the right, substitute another path and shut up the ancient pathway. Tarineechurn Chuckerbutty v. Tarineechurn Chuckerbutty and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 6.

In a suit for declaration of a right of way over the land of another, the plaintiff must prove the particular line over which he claims the right. Mere proof of a right to pass over the land without proving the particular route will not entitle a plaintiff to a decree. Radhanath Sugracharji v. Baidonath Seal Kabiraj, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 118.

The finding that a right of way had been "formerly" exercised is not a sufficient finding to indicate the length of time for which the right had been exercised, and is therefore insufficient to prove a right of user. Krishna Chundra Chuckerbutty v. Kishna Chundra Banik, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 211; 12 W. R., 76.

A plaintiff claiming a right of way over land taken possession of in execution of a decree cannot intervene under Section 230, Act VIII of 1859, but must bring a regular suit to establish his right. Nobin Chunder Mozoomdar v. Jutadharee Haldar, 2 W. R., 289.

A right of way cannot by the provisions of Act VI of 1867 continue to exist over land acquired by a railway company under that Act with the aid of Government. If however the railway company by their representations and conduct lay themselves under legal obligation to provide a way, such obligation may be enforced. Collector of the 24-Pergunnahs v. Nobin Chunder Ghose, 3 W. R., 27.

A. had a right of way over B.'s land. He allowed B. to erect a house on the pathway and enjoy it for seven years. He then brought a suit to have the pathway re-opened by pulling down B.'s house. Held that A. must be taken to have acquiesced in the interruption of his right of way, and his claim was one that a Court of equity and good conscience would not enforce. Beni Madhub Das v. Ram Joy Rokh, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 213; 10 W. R., 316.

A right of way by sufferance over another's land cannot create a permanent right. Ashootosh Chuckerbutty v. Teetoo Haldar, W. R., 1864, 293.

On a dispute taking place before a Magistrate as to right of way, if he repairs to the spot, and, with express consent, alters an existing path to one more convenient to the public generally, the party who gives the consent is bound by the Magistrate's act, and has no right of adverse action. Muddon Mohun Mookerjee and others v. Nilmoney Banerjee and others, 11 W. R., 304.

Whether in India or England time and user create a right of easement over the property of others. A.'s right of way over B.'s homestead is not affected by the fact of there being another pathway by which access to the main road may be obtained by A. Sham Bagdee v. Fukeer Chand Bagdee, 6 W. R., 222.

User during previous ownership is no evidence of a right of way which relates to the land of another. Abhoy Churn Dutt v. Nobin Chundra Dutt and others, 10 W. R., 298.

A right of way may be created by use continued for many successive years, even though use is limited to one particular season of the year alone. Oomer Shah v. Ramzun Aly and others, 10 W. R., 363.

Where defendant was occupying a plot on which stood his house, and had all along used (without any objection on the part of the plaintiff) a pathway which was the only mode of access to his house, and where it was found, by the lower Courts in a suit of which the subject-matter was the pathway, that the user of the defendant and of the persons who preceded him in the enjoyment of the plot had covered a period of considerably more than twelve years, it was held that defendant had a right of way as against the owner, the plaintiff. Quære,—Ought a Court to infer from user alone that a right of way has been conferred by the owner of the land upon the person exercising the user, unless that user has extended over a period as long as that which the law would allow to the owner for bringing an action of ejectment, if absolutely excluded from possession? Mohim Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Chundee Churn Gooho and another, 10 W. R., 452.

In a case of dispute concerning a right of way, the Magistrate, instead of deciding against the complainant, on the ground that he has another way of approach to his house, ought to enquire whether or not the disputed road has been in the use and occupation of the complainant, and for how long; and if he holds him to be in possession to retain him in it, leaving the owner of the land to determine the question of right to the easement in the Civil Court. Queen v. Toyluckonath Sircar, 2 W. R., Cr., 64.

Held that enjoyment without interruption for a period of more than thirty years was required in order to establish a right of way by prescription in the mofussil of the Bombay Presidency. Rambhan Bopushet v. Bhai Babushet, 2 Bom. Rep., 352.

A right of way is ordinarily a right of passing, and not a general right to pass from one point to another point. Goluck Chunder Chowdhry v. Tarinee Churn Chuckerbutty, 4 W. R., 49.

A right of way in this country need not be proved by user for a definite period of twenty years in order to give a right by prescription or presumption of a grant. Proof of well-established and fixed user will be sufficient. Bhugwan Chundra Chowdhry v. Sheikh Khosal and others, 7 W. R., 271.

The relinquishment of all rights and interests in land exchanged does not necessarily involve loss of right of way over the land. Kalee Kishore Roy v. Deen Doyal Singh, 4 W. R., 83.

The owner of a piece of land between a village and the public road, who allows his neighbour's cows to pass over it on the way to pasture, does not thereby create a right of easement over the land so as to deprive it of all value by rendering its cultivation impossible. Gooroochurn Goon and others v. Gungagobind Chatterjee, 8 W. R., 267.

Suit by members of a joint family to enforce their right to a pathway through a door (which had been blocked up) leading to a joint thakoorbarree. Held that this was not a case in which the plaintiffs claimed the right of user, but only complained of the obstruction of a passage belonging to them jointly with the defendants. Chunder Kant Chowdry v. Nund Lall Chowdry, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 277.

A right of way need not have its origin in an express grant, but may be established by continued user for a certain period constituting adverse possession. Ram Gunga Dass v. Gobind Chunder Dass, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 284.

A right of way may be created either by grant or by immemorial custom or by necessity, and it is necessary for a party seeking to establish a right of this kind to prove its existence, and that it is ancient and has been exercised without interruption. No specific time is sufficient to establish a right of user. The determination of the existence of the right is a question depending on the evidence in each case, the right being inferred from the evidence. Imambundee Begum v. Sheo Dyal Ram, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 199.

The purchaser of a house acquires the right to the use of a way to a road which has been enjoyed with the house by the vendor if it is not merely a right to a way of necessity, but a particular right over a defined path. Nubeen Chunder Bullub v. Bhoobun Chunder Mundle, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 526.

If a person has a right of way from one place to another over a particular line he cannot be compelled to use a different and substituted way. But where the right is simply to pass from one point to another the party desiring to exercise the right cannot claim to pass in a particular tortuous and indirect course between the two points. Syud Hamid Hossein v. C. Gervain, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 496.

In order to establish a right of way the person claiming must prove uninterrupted user for a certain length of time, and if his right is interrupted must go into Court at once. No length of time can give a party such a right as destroys all the ordinary uses of the servient property, e.g., a general right to the promiscuous use of a whole property for the purpose of driving cattle over it. Joy Doorga Dassee v. Juggernauth Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 295.

A general right of thoroughfare includes a right of way for marriage or other processions of the like nature, unless at the time of the first inception of the right it was restricted to a right of passage and such processions were interdicted. Raj Manick Singh v. Ruttun Manick Bose, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 46.

To constitute a right of way there must have been an uninterrupted user as of right, and not one exercised at the mere will and favour of the other party. Futteh Ali v. Asgur Ali, 17 S. W. R., 11.

A right of way over the land of another must be kept up by constant use. After a discontinuance of such use for a period of six years no suit can be brought to re-establish it. Huridas Nandi v. Jadunath Dutt, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 66; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 79.

There is no rule of law that a certain period of enjoyment is required to establish the right of user. Mullick Kurim Buksh v. Harrikar Mandar, 5 B. L. R., 174; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 440.

A suit for declaration of right of way by a public road will not lie where there is no allegation of special injury or inconvenience to the plaintiff. Ramtarak Karati v. Dinanath Mundle, 7 B. L. R., 184.

1.—EFFECT OF POSSESSION.

Semble,—That Reg. XVII of 1827, and Bombay Act I of 1865, were not applicable to building-sites in towns and cities, until Bombay Act I of 1865 was expressly made applicable to such sites by Bombay Act IV of 1868.

The law obtaining in India requires that in actions of ejectment the Courts should always enforce the rule that a plaintiff must recover by the strength of his own title; and a party who might have shifted the burden of proof, if he had proceeded under Sec. 15 of Act XIV of 1859, cannot, if he let slip that opportunity, obtain the same advantage in an action of ejectment.

Semble,—Mere possession as a trespasser is not sufficient to entitle a plaintiff to recover in a suit brought under Sec. 15 of Act XIV of 1859. There must be in the plaintiff juridical as opposed to mere physical possession. Dádábhái Narsidá v. The Sub-Collector of Broach, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 82.

If the plaintiff does not show possession within twelve years of suit it does not follow that defendant must have a verdict. Possession must be weighed with other evidence for the party proving it, and with reference to the tendency to rebut it, as the evidence adduced by the opposite party.

The plea of adverse possession for more than twelve years is another point for adjudication in bar. Goopeenath Mookerjee v. Issur Chunder Banerjee, 9 W. R., 365.

When lands which are not in their nature capable of actual occupation (such as a khal) appertain to lands which are occupied, the possession of the former in point of law necessarily follows that of the latter; but when a khal dries up and becomes culturable, if any one to whom it does not belong takes actual possession of it, a cause of action accrues to the person in possession of the land to which the khal appertains from the time of the wrongful possession, and not from the time of the khal becoming culturable or cultivated. Sunnud Ali v. Mussamut Kuroofunissa, 9 W. R., 124.

Where property purchased benamee at a sale for arrears of revenue remains for more than twelve years from the date of the sale in the adverse and undisturbed possession of the beneficial purchaser, such possession is not only sufficient to extinguish the title of the nominal purchaser, but it creates a title in the former capable of devolving upon his legal heirs and representatives.

Held (by Mitter, J.) that Section 21, Act I of 1845, and Section 36, Act XI of 1859, do not apply to a purchaser under Act XII of 1841. Booa Russoole and others v. The Nawab Nazim of Bengal, 11 W. R., 382.

Long adverse possession by defendant in the face of a powerful zemindar, without any opposition on the part of the latter, was held in the absence of any evidence to prove plaintiff's possession within twelve years, to establish clearly the fact that defendant had an independent title. Dino Bundhoo

Suhaye and others v. The Court of Wards, 11 W. R., 347.

A suit for a portion of land granted in trust for purposes connected with the preservation of a Mahometan saint's tomb, where plaintiff claimed as son of the last mutwallee, on the allegation that he (plaintiff) had been dispossessed during his minority, defendant's case being that the grant had never been in the possession of mutwallees, but had been divided among the original grantee's heirs, from one of whom the portion in dispute had come into the possession of his (defendant's) vendor. Held that the material point to try was whether plaintiff's ancestors had from the time of the grant been in possession, or whether the land had been inherited according to the ordinary rules of Mahometan inheritance by the heirs of the grantees. Reasut Ali v. J. C. Abbott and others, 12 W. R., 132.

A person in possession of land is primâ facie entitled to it, and to all increments to it. Mothooranath Mozoomdar and others v. Tarinee Churn Singh, 8 W. R., 164.

Where a plaintiff sued to recover certain property as wuqf, on the ground that the mutwalee and his ancestor (a former mutwalee) had misconducted themselves by selling to some of the defendants the property which was the subject of the endowment, and where it appeared that the plaintiff lay by for nearly twelve years from the time when the vendees purchased and were put into possession, it was held that he was not entitled to the assistance of the Court. Bhurruck Chundra Sahoo and others v. Golam Shureeff, 10 W. R., 453.

Where a party who, partly with his own funds and partly with Rs. 100 subscribed by the village, erected a building for a school, never gave the property to the school, and never even acquiesced in the managers of the school entering upon it,—Held that the managers entered upon it as trespassers, and that although the proprietor acquiesced in their having taken possession he did not thereby convey every property in the school to the subscribers, and was not bound to repay that portion of the money which he expended himself in building the house, or to do more than return that portion of the funds which were subscribed by the village. Sreehurry Roy v. James Hills, 7 W. R., 476.

A long possession would not confer any title on the occupant if it be proved that the possession was a permissive one. Gunga Deen Chowdhry and others v. Hur Sahai Singh, 4 Agra Rep., 261.

The mere possession of one person of another's land does not render the former liable to account for the profits. For these he is liable only where he has held tortiously, or under an agreement, express or implied, to make them good. Mahammad Ali Bává Labbi and another v. Mohiadin Nainair and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 107.

In a suit for possession of property the plaintiff relied on his previous twelve years' possession, and gave no further evidence of his title. Held that a previous possession for twelve years of the property sought to be recovered did not dispense with the necessity which lay on the plaintiff to prove his title to that property. He is not on that fact alone entitled to be replaced in possession of the property, without regard to any right which may be alleged by the defendant. Lakhi Kumar v. Ram Dutt Chowdry, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 44.

In a suit brought to recover a share in land alleged to be joint family property, where the defendants pleaded possession as proprietors for more than thirty years,—Held that it was not necessary that actual separation should be proved; but that it was enough to show that the defendants had been in uninterrupted possession for more than thirty years. Guravi v. Guravi, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 170.

In a suit brought for a share in an hereditary family allowance, where the defendants pleaded possession for more than thirty years,—Held that the lower Appellate Court was in error in holding that "if a claimant is proved to be one of the sharers of the defendants, no lapse of time, since the active enjoyment of the privileges, would bar his claim to such a share as he would be entitled to." S. A., No. 4268, 7 Bom. S. D., 372, followed. Raw v. Raw, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 173.

A party recovering possession of land in virtue of a decree under Section 15, Act XIV of 1859, recovers the land with the crop growing upon it, and is fully entitled to cut the same. Shirajdee Poramanick v. Emam Buksh Biswas, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 104.

A. got a decree for possession, but before she obtained possession B. obtained a decree declaring him jointly entitled with A. to a particular share of the same property. Held that when A. got possession that possession inured to the benefit of B. as well as to herself, and B.'s cause of action in a suit against A. in respect of the same property dated from the time when A. obtained possession. Gooroo Churn Sircar v. Goluckmonee Dassee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 188.

The mere fact of possession, as tenants for a certain number of years, cannot create any right to retain possession as against a person to whom the proprietor has granted a lease. Na Zir Lushkur v. Golapoodeen Lushkur, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 410.

For the purposes of settling actual possession, Section 18 of Act XIX of 1841 declares the Judge's decision to be final; but when questions arise in the execution of a decree or order passed upon an application under the Act such section does not apply. Dhunput Ojha and another v. Musamut Ondha Kooer, 3 N. W. R., 151.

The possession of a tenant is in the eye of the law the possession of his landlord. Grish Chunder Roy v. Bhugwan Chunder Roy, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 191.

In a suit to recover from the minor son of the late possessor of a polliem, of which the guardians of the minor were in possession by virtue of a fresh grant made by the Government to the minor after the death of his father, the late possessor, money lent to the father of the minor to pay off arrears of peishcush for which the polliem was about to be attached, and for reproductive work done upon the land,—Held that the income of the polliem was not liable for the debt. Arbuthnot v. Ooluguppa Chetty, 5 Mad. Rep., 303.

Zemindars and poligars and others in a like position, and occupying tenants, possessed different proprietary rights in land by recognition of the Government before the passing of Regulation XXV of 1802. By it the Government declared with the force of law their acknowledgment and confirmation of such rights as they were then enjoying, and in order to quiet all uncertainty and disquietude respecting them, and to establish general certainty of tenure in the holders of the same, provided for the permanent assessment of all lands liable to pay revenue to Government; and for the issuing thereupon of express hereditary grants to every zemindar and other intermediate proprietors, and written engagements between them and their tenants: and therefore the Regulation does not operate to exclude or disfavour the maintenance of a claim against the Government to an hereditary or other estate in land which has not been secured the benefits of a settled title under the Regulation, because, for political reasons, the Government has thought it inexpedient to give full effect to its enactments. But claims of title to such estates are merely left without the conclusive proof of hereditary title afforded by an istimrari sannad. It was never intended that the Government, by delaying to do in regard to some estates what the Regulation enacts should be done in regard to all lands, for the purpose of setting at rest all uncertainty as to titles, should secure the power to treat all such estates as held by no permanent title whatever. The existence of a proprietary estate in polliems or other lands not permanently assessed, and the tenure by which it has been held, are therefore matters judicially determinable on legal evidence, just as the right to any other property. Lekkumani v. Srimut Runga Kristna Mutta Vira Puchaya Naikur, 6 Mad. Rep., 208.

2.—Effect of Dispossession.

When a person forcibly dispossessed sues to recover possession, the burden of proving title is on the party by whom he was forcibly dispossessed. Shama Soonduree Debia v. The Collector of Maldha and others, 12 W. R., 164.

The plaintiff sued to set aside certain survey proceedings by means of which he had been dispossessed of land by the defendant. It was found he had been dispossessed by the defendant, but not by means of the survey proceedings. Held that the manner of dispossession was immaterial so long as the fact was proved. Rajah Joy Mungul Singh v. Rajah Mohendur Narain Singh, 2 W. R., 154.

A tenant dispossessed by order of a Magistrate, under Section 318 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, is not bound to sue for the reversal of that order in order to recover possession. Sreemutty Luckhee Debea Chowdhrain v. Gooroo Doss Sein, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 54.

Plaintiff having sued under Section 15, Act XIV of 1859, for possession of a parcel of land of which he alleged himself to have been dispossessed by defendants building a hut upon it, the Court of first instance determined that as the land was part of a village, and plaintiff had not sued for possession of the village, it could neither declare his possession of the entire village nor of the particular parcel.

Held that there was no reason why the Court should not try whether the plaintiff was dispossessed as alleged, and whether he should not have possession. Omarchand Mohata v. The Nawab Nazim of Bengal, 11 W. R., 229.

A plaintiff can sue for the profits of property from which he has been dispossessed by the defendant, without being obliged to sue for possession. Dyamoyee Dassee v. Modhoo Moodun Mytee, 3 W. R., 147.

Where in a suit to recover possession of land the plaintiff succeeded in proving that he had been in possession up to a recent date, and that he had been forcibly dispossessed by the defendants, the lower Appellate Court threw upon the defendant the burthen of proving his title, and on his failing to do so, decreed the case. Held that this was a fair inference of title, and of a right to be replaced in possession, without going further into the title, that is, to the mode of its acquisition. Trilochan Ghose v. Kailas Nath Sidhanto Bhowmik Bhuttacharjee, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 291; 12 W. R., 175.

Where plaintiff alleges forcible ouster in a certain year, he is bound to prove such ouster before defendant need be called upon to prove anything. Rajaram Kalita v. Roopa Kagatee Kalita, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 113.

Where the decree-holder in execution took khas possession, and then a purchaser from the judgment-debtor tendered payment of the arrears of rent due under the decree, it was held that there was no equity established between the two which would warrant the dispossession of the decree-holder. Sheikh Gunnee Mahomed v. Baharoollah, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 240.

Where a zemindar so interferes with the possession of a tenant not personally occupying the land as to induce the under-tenants to pay rent to him (the zemindar), his interference amounts to dispossession. Mussamut Heymobutty Dassee v. Sreekissen Nundee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 58.

3.—Title by Possession.

Following a decision of the Privy Council, it was held that possession of land without payment of rent for twelve years is sufficient to establish lakheraj title. Bissonath Komilla and others v. Brojomohun Chuckerbutty and others, 10 W. R., 61.

A person in possession of property ought to be presumed to be in lawful possession until the contrary be shown. Beyond this possession is only evidence to be taken conjointly with other evidence to establish or impugn a title. Selam Sheikh v. Boidonath Ghattak, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 312; 12 S. W. R., 217.

Possession is evidence of title, and if a plaintiff proves that he had possession and that the possession has been forcibly disturbed by defendant, he makes out a primâ-facie title which it is for defendant to rebut. Ayesha Beebee and others v. Kanhye Mollah and others, 12 W. R., 146.

Possession need not be long in order to be some evidence of title. Puran Chunder Mookerjee v. Protap Narain Paul, 9 W. R., 120.

Plaintiffs cannot reasonably be required to prove the specific source (whether from their own funds or not) from which they acquired properties which were admittedly acquired about a century ago; long possession being not only evidence of title, but a good and valid title by itself. Rung Lall Misser v. Roghoobur Singh and others, 9 W. R., 169.

Possession, except where it is of such a length and character as of itself to constitute title, is merely evidence of title, and is so only because undisturbed possession without anything more is presumed to be referable to rightful title and to absolute ownership: it is open to the other side to show that such primâ-facie presumption is ill-founded. Kalee Churn Scin v. Adoo Sheikh, 9 W. R., 602.

A person in possession with a bad title is entitled to remain in possession until another person can disclose a better title. Gopee Nath Doss and others v. Dyanidhee Sundoora Mohapatur, 7 W. R., 485.

A zemindar has no right to restrain the persons of his officers. If he does so he is liable to more than merely nominal damages. Nor can the zemindar eject his officers from their house of which they have had long possession without clear proof of title on his part. In India the title of possession must prevail until a good title is shown to the contrary. Raja Pedda Vencatapa Neddoo Bahadur v. Anoovala Soodrapa Naidoo and another, 6 W. R., P. C., 13.

A decision in an Act IV of 1840 case is no evidence of title one way or the other. Gudadhur Koondoo and others v. Ramcoomar Bose and others, 6 W. R., 155.

Long and undisturbed user or possession confers title by prescription, because it is presumed to be founded on title. Gooroo Persaud Roy and others v. Bykunto Chunder Roy and others, 6 W. R., 82.

In a case for recovery of possession after ouster in which the plaintiff is held to have a bad title, whilst the title of the defendant in possession has not been enquired into, the plaintiff cannot oust the defendant in possession simply by proving anterior possession, but must prove title. A possessory suit, under Section 15, Act XIV of 1859, should in such a case be brought within the proper time. Mussamut Tukroonissa Begum and others v. Mussamut Mogul Jan Bebee, 8 W. R., 370.

A. originally owned two zemindaries between which lay a bil, or marsh, of which he also owned the fisheries. One of the zemindaries was sold and purchased by B., but the bil fisheries still continued with the remaining zemindary held by A. After the sale, certain lands reclaimed from the bil were for some years held by B. as part of his purchased zemindary. A. instituted a summary suit under Act IV of 1840, and was by an order of the Magistrate put in possession of these lands. B. brought a regular suit against A. to recover the lands and set aside his order. Held (reversing the decisions of the Courts below) that it was necessary for B. to show a better title to the land than A. could produce. It was not enough for him to prove possession anterior to the Magistrate's order under Act IV of 1840. The presumption was that the land of the bil belonged to A., who had admittedly owned both estates before, and had retained the fisheries of the bil after the auction-sale. B. ought to have shown when and how, if at all, the right to the fisheries and the right to the soil were severed. Baroda Kanto Roy v. Chundra Coomar Roy and others, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 1; 11 W. R., P. C., 1.

Where a plaintiff seeks to recover possession upon a title recently acquired, he is not invariably required to prove the origin of his vendor's title. Long and undisturbed possession on the part of the vendor, when positive evidence of title cannot be had, may in many cases constitute proof of title. Joykishen Mookerjee v. Raj Kishen Mookerjee, 12 W. R., 315.

Possession is evidence of title, and gives a good title as against a wrong-doer; but a person who has not had possession cannot without proof of title turn another out of possession, even though that other may have no title; for possession is a good title against every one who cannot prove a better.

In a suit to recover the possession of land, the petitions of alleged owners, through whom the plaintiff claimed title, presented to the Collector and to the Principal Sudder Ameen, and which respectively stated the conveyance from the one to the other, and from the last supposed owner to the plaintiff, were tendered as evidence of the plaintiff's title, without production of the deeds, or even evidence that such alleged owners had ever been in possession of the property. Held that the petitions were not admissible in evidence. Clarke v. Bindabun Chunder Sircar and others, Marsh., 75.

Where a party, originally a mortgagee out of possession, has been put into possession by the act and permission of the mortgagors, he has really (inasmuch as a parol contract is sufficient in this country to pass immoveable property) obtained a new title altogether different from that which he possessed before, and having its foundation in the act of the parties themselves when they put him into possession. Runjeet Naran Singh and others v. Mussamut Shurefoonissa and others, 10 W. R., 478.

There may be such possession of waste lands as to protect a suit from being barred by limitation, and where the question of possession is doubtful a presumption will arise in favour of the party who proves title. Mahomed Busir and others v. Kureem Buksh and others, 11 W. R., 268.

4.—What Constitutes Possession.

Occasionally visiting and making use of a house is ample evidence of possession, unless shown to have been done by the claimant in the capacity of a visitor, and not in his own right. Unonto Ram Seal v. Brojo Bullub Seal, 11 W. R., 136.

A witness's statement that a party "is in possession" is no evidence of the fact. The question of possession is a mixed one of law and fact; and the evidence produced must give the various acts of ownership which go to constitute possession, so that the Court may arrive at its own conclusion. Ishan Chunder Behara v. Ram Lochun Behara, 9 W. R., 79.

Possession obtained and continued by fraud is not possession within the meaning of Act X of 1859. Bhoobunjoy Acharjee v. Ram Narain Chowdhry, 9 W. R., 449.

At the time of the Permanent Settlement the northern boundary of the pergunnah Shoosung, (situated in Mymensingh, at the foot of the Garrow hills) was not defined by Government. From before that time, and certainly for more than sixty years, the zemindars of the pergunnah have always, but in an irregular and uncertain manner, exercised certain rights in the Garrow hills and over the inhabitants, who are half savages, such as hunting elephants, cutting wood, levying cesses on the inhabitants when possible (including in some parts of the hills a tribute of one rupee per hut), and exacting occasional services from them. Government held a survey, and declared the northern boundary of pergunnah Shoosung to be a line running along the base of the Garrow hills. The zemindar thereupon sued to set aside the survey, and for a declaration that the northern boundary lay many miles further north, and that the intermediate hill country belonged to him as forming part of pergunnah Shoosung.

Held, per Macpherson, J. (Seton-Karr, J., contra), that the acts of possession proved by the zemindar were not sufficient to entitle him to a decree, being acts of mere easement independent of possession. The Government v. Rajah Raj Kishen Singh Surmona Bahadoor, 8 W. R., 343.

So long as the relation of landlord and tenant exists, the omission by the tenant to pay his rent does not constitute an adverse possession so as to make limitation applicable. Troylukho Tariny Dossea v. Mahimma Chunder Mutluck and others, 7 W. R., 400.

Possession as a trustee for a brother's widow is not adverse possession against her. Chunder Kant Surmah and others v. Bungshee Deb Surmah, 6 W. R., 61.

The possession of a manager for the rest of the family is not adverse. Mahomed Muddun v. Khodezunissa, 2 W. R., 181.

Possession must be presumed to be of right and adverse, until that presumption is rebutted by evidence. Biressur Banerjee v. Onoda Churn Banerjee, 3 W. R., 12.

In a suit for possession of certain lands purchased by plaintiff at a sale, in execution of a decree of the Sudder Ameen's Court, the lower Court held that "possession by proclamation of sale, through the Sudder Ameen's Court, was possession through the Court," and that the suit being brought within twelve years of that proclamation was in time. Held, on appeal, that such imaginary possession was no possession at all, and that the suit was barred by limitation. Jowher Aly v. Ram Chand and others, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 29.

Where certain sharers took in lieu of their proportion of profits a piece of land rent free, with an agreement that on relinquishing the land they might claim their share of the profits, it was held that they could not be said to have been at any time out of possession of their shares so long as they held the land, and that on relinquishing the land they might sue for profits. Sutul Singh v. Luchnun Singh, 3 N. W. R., 23.

5.—Suits for Confirmation of Possession.

In a suit for confirmation of possession and declaration of title a decree cannot be given to the plaintiff without a clear finding that the plaintiff was in possession of the land in dispute. Shibchunder Bhuttacharjee v. Juggut Tara Chowdhrain, 6 W. R., 64.

There can be no decree for the plaintiff in a suit for confirmation of possession without proof of his actual possession. Agum Misra v. Pullukdharee Misra, W. R., 1864, 187.

A suit based upon an allegation of possession must be at once dismissed if the plaintiff be shown to be out of possession. Sukram v. Kala Kahar, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 105.

A plaintiff who sues only for declaration of title and confirmation of possession has no right if he obtains such declaration to turn the defendant who was found to be in possession out of possession, but must bring a fresh suit for that purpose under Act X of 1859. Gugun Chunder Ghose v. Raj Chunder Kur and others, 8 W. R., 281.

A suit for confirmation of possession must be dismissed if the allegation of possession is found to be wholly unfounded, but not if the plaintiff is found to be in possession of a part of the land in dispute. Roopa Koonwar v. Juggolall Oopadhya and others, 11 W. R., 257.

A decree for confirmation of possession cannot be executed so as to give the decree-holder possession of anything of which he is not already in possession. Umbica Churn Banerjee v. Digamburee Dabee, 12 W. R., 429.

In a suit for confirmation of possession where it was found that plaintiff had executed a fraudulent mokurruree conveyance, under which however possession did not pass but continued with her for three years, after which there was some disturbance by the plaintiff's husband of the possession by an Act X decision,—Held that as the intention of the conveyance was not carried out by actual transfer of possession to defendant there was a locus penitentiæ left to plaintiff, who was consequently entitled to ask to be quieted in possession, which had either been prejudicially affected or even invaded by the fictitious decision obtained under Act X by her husband for his own ends, and not by reason of the carrying out of the original fraud. Lall Mahomed v. Bibee Furhutonissa, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 312.

The legal principle which holds that no suit for confirmation of possession will lie if possession at the time of the institution of the suit is not shown, refers to cases where no possession of any kind is shown within a reasonable time before suit, and not (as in this case) where legal possession under a decree has been found. Beejoo Roy v. Bal Mokund Misser, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 421.

Where a plaintiff in form seeks for confirmation of possession treating himself as being in possession, yet sets out and states circumstances which are in themselves a dispossession, namely, that a suit in which he intervened under Section 77, Act X of 1859, had been decided against him and the rent adjudged to defendant, the suit should be treated as one really for recovery of possession. A suit for confirmation of possession in adjudication of a particular and specific title distinctly alleged, where defendant also puts forward a pedigree supported by evidence at variance with pedigrees put forward by plaintiffs, is not sufficiently disposed of by the trial of the mere question of possession for twelve or twenty years before the suit. Moulvie Abdoollah v. Shaha Mujusooden, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 27.

6.—Adverse Possession.

Held that the mere fact of the property being settled with defendants, by reason of their paying up the arrears of revenue, does not constitute adverse possession so as to reckon limitation. Bheema v. Pahlad and others, 2 Agra Rep., 38.

Held that as the settlement of rent-free land belonging to plaintiff's ancestor was made with the defendant in the character of mortgagee, his (defendant's) possession of the land was not adverse to the plaintiffs, the mortgagors. Ram Dial v. Shah Baz Khan, 1 Agra Rep., 15.

Suit for reversal of a survey award demarcating certain land as ghatwalee, and as held under the Government. Held that in such a suit adverse possession and limitation can be pleaded by the Government and the ghatwals (dissentientibus Trevor, J., and Norman, J.)

Adverse possession may be pleaded to bar a claim as regards uncultivated lands in the same manner and to the same extent as regards cultivated lands. R. Watson and others v. The Government, 3 W. R., 73.

A widow (a life-tenant of an ancestral estate) having executed an ikrar transferring a share to N., her granddaughters afterwards sued to set it aside on the ground that N. had not conformed to its terms. While the suit was in the appeal stage the widow died, and her reversioner applied to be made and was admitted as her kaem mukam to carry on the appeal on her behalf. He afterwards sued to recover possession of the share as reversioner, alleging that the succession opened out to him on the death of the widow. Held that the life-tenancy having been made over to N. with the widow's consent to share during the grantor's life-time, N.'s possession was not adverse to the reversioner. Deonanel Koowar v. Mussamut Inderjeet Koowar, 12 W. R., 234.

When property is placed in the hands of another by way of trust, no cause of action arises to the owner until there has been a demand by the owner for the restoration of the property and a refusal by the trustee to give up the property. The period of limitation begins to run from the date of such refusal or distinct assertion of adverse right, and not from the date the trustee enters into possession. Rakhaldas Madak v. Moodoosoodhun Madak, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 409; S. C., 12 W. R., 319.

Adverse possession for more than twelve years not only bars remedy but extinguishes right, and confers title on the party holding such adverse possession. Rajah Baradakant Roy Bahadur v. Prankrishna Paroi, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 343.

A daughter succeeded to a share of her father's estate, and transferred it in full property by a formal instrument or ikrarnamah, dated March, 1849, to her granddaughter, expressly naming her and treating her as her heiress; the transfer being in the nature of a release, reserving maintenance and other advantages to the donor.

Upon the application of the granddaughter before the Collector for the mutation of names according to the terms of the ikrarnamah, the reversioners (collateral heirs of the father) affected to contest the unauthorized nature of the alienation, but dropped their opposition. In 1857 the diaras, or alluvial lands attached to the estate, were perpetually settled with the granddaughter.

The alienor quarrelled with her granddaughter, and in 1857 brought a suit against her to set aside the ikrarnamah, upon the ground of the non-performance of a condition subsequent. The plaintiff succeeded in the first Court, but the judgment was reversed (October, 1858) on appeal to the Zillah Judge. Pending the appeal the plaintiff died (February, 1858), and the reversioners applied to be, and were, admitted as her heirs, to conduct the appeal.

The granddaughter remained in possession from the date of transfer until 1866, when she died.

In April, 1867, the present suit was brought by the surviving reversioner, who claimed to be entitled to recover possession of the property by right of inheritance from the alienor's father. He was one of the reversioners who had been admitted to conduct the appeal in the former suit upon the death of the alienor.

Held (on special appeal and review) there had been no adverse possession, the instrument enured as a transfer of the donor's life-interest only; the judgment in the former suit brought to set it aside did not bind or affect the reversioners, who in that suit merely represented the interest of their predecessor, the life-tenant.

In the first Court an issue was raised whether or no the hearing of this suit was barred by the Law of Limitation. One of the grounds of appeal to the Judge was that the Principal Sudder Ameen ought to have held the suit barred as regards the diaras under the special limitation of three years from the date of the Collector's settlement. The Judge did not notice this ground in his judgment. The same ground of appeal was repeated in the special appeal to the High Court, but that Court refused to entertain it for the reason that it did not appear to have been raised in argument before the Judge or in the first Court. On application for review it was urged that the Court ought to have listened to this ground, but the Court adhered to its former decision.

Counsel should not be heard to re-argue a case on review upon the same points as were argued in special appeal. Mussamut Raj Kunwar v. Mussamut Indirjit Kunwar, 5 B. L. R., 585; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 52.

Mere entry in the Collector's records of the names of absentees cannot of itself avail to alter the character of an otherwise adverse holding. Doorjun v. Chaina, 2 N. W. R., 43.

Where occupation was originally permissible its conversion into an occupation of a wholly adverse nature is not to be presumed in the absence of evidence to establish this change.

To make out a complete legal bar the occupation should be proved to be adverse during the whole of the twelve years before suit, and it should be ascertained with what persons the actual possession has been during that time. Wahee-ood-deen v. Thungoree and others, 2 N. W. R., 16.

Where widows' possession was primâ facie not adverse, such possession until shown to be otherwise, will be presumed to have continued a possession of that character. Ammur Singh v. Murdun Singh, 2 N. W. R., 31.

7.—Suits for Recovery of Possession.

A suit to recover possession of land on the ground of forcible dispossession, in which it was pleaded by defendant and found as a fact that the defendant's holding was of a permissive character, should be dismissed at once, the defendant's possession not being a wrongful one of the kind alleged by plaintiff. The right mode of action in such a case would have been for plaintiff to serve the defendant with notice to quit the land, and thereby put an end to the permission relied upon by him. C. J. Phillips v. Nundcoomar Banerjee, 8 W. R., 385.

A suit to be restored to possession does not involve questions of valid lakheraj title or enhancement of rent. Rajah Pertaub Chunder Singh v. Sheeb Doss Kayet, 1 W. R., 111.

A suit for possession with wasilat is cognizable in the Civil Court, and need not be split into two suits, viz., one for possession under Act X of 1859, and one for wasilat in the Civil Courts. Ram Chand v. Chundee Churn Doss, 1 W. R., 161.

A suit will lie for the separate possession of a share of an estate in proportion to the plaintiff's share. Goloke Chunder Chuckerbutty v. Kallee Kinker Chuckerbutty, 1 W. R., 164.

Suit for land land lying between the plaintiff's homestead and the defendant's tank. The Court having omitted to decide the question of title and having decreed on other grounds, the decree was held defective. Gobind Chunder v. Khossaul Chunder, 1 W. R., 205.

Section 25, Act X of 1859, does not prevent a suit being brought in the Civil Court for possession with mesne profits. Roy Oodit Narain Singh v. Ram Surun Roy, 1 W. R., 221.

In a suit for possession by two ryots claiming under different pottahs from the same zemindar, when the defendant's pottah fails, he still has a right to have a judicial determination of his claim to occupancy. Bydnath Shaha v. Jaduh Chunder Shaha, W. R., 1864, 208.

A suit for possession of land will not lie against a single shareholder for a particular portion of a joint estate held separately under an existing arrangement acquiesced in by the plaintiffs and agreed to by the other co-sharers, nor can the plaintiffs let to a tenant the property in the lawful possession of such shareholder. Chowdhry Nil Kant Pershad Singh v. Ahlad Singh, 5 W. R., 287.

The purchaser of a house sold under Section 110, Act X of 1859, is not bound to bring a regular suit to obtain possession. R. Solano v. Bulbhudhur Singh, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 51.

Where, under colour of buying A.'s rights and interests sold in execution, the purchaser usurps the shares of A.'s partners, they need not sue to reverse the sale but merely to recover their shares, nor are they bound to sue to establish their right as part owners of the land within the time allowed for actions to set aside sales in execution. Bibee Athuroonissa v. Rughoonath Banerjee, W. R., 1864, 322.

In a suit to recover possession of land, where plaintiff alleged that he had entered into possession under a lease, and had been dispossessed by defendant, the first Court, finding that the plaintiff had been dispossessed, and that the defendants had no valid title to the land, gave the plaintiff a decree. The lower Appellate Court remarking that the lease had not been registered under Act XX of 1866, held that it was not admissible as evidence, and dismissed the suit.

Held that it was not necessary for the lower Appellate Court to go into the plaintiff's title until it found that there were grounds for believing that the case set up by the defendants was a good one. Dabjee Sahoo and others v. Sheikh Tumezoodeen and others, 10 W. R., 102.

In a suit for immoveable property under a kobala more than twelve years old, where defendant pleads that plaintiff was only a benameedar and was never in possession, plaintiff must prove not only title but also possession within twelve years of the filing of the suit. Kedarnath Mehata v. Kadumbinee Dabea, 10 W. R., 239.

Where a plaintiff sued to recover possession of certain lands under a mourosee pottah which had been lost, and proved ten years' possession,—Held that such possession alone would not entitle him to recover possession of the land, but that he must prove the specific title set up by him. Bholai Mundal v. Jarif Gazi, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 93.

The plaintiff sued for possession of one-third share of certain land after demolition of the buildings erected thereon by the defendants who were her co-sharers.

Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for demolition of the buildings, as she had no right to compel her co-sharers to adopt her views of the enjoyment of the property. She could only get a decree for possession of an undivided one-third share. Bindabasini Debi v. Patit Paban Chattapadhya, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 267.

D. sued R. for an arrear of rent, but R. denied his tenancy and D.'s title to the land, and was successful in that defence. D. then sued in the Civil Court to recover possession with wasilat, which he estimated at the rate of the rent previously claimed, and obtained a decree for possession without wasilat.

Held that the second suit was not for the same thing as the first under a different name, and that plaintiff was entitled to wasilat as well as possession. Dataram v. Ram Kristo and others, 9 W. R., 594.

No suit for possession will lie against a zemindar, or any one holding a title under the zemindar, until the plaintiff has been recognized by the zemindar as tenant, or has been registered as such in the zemindar's sherista. Mooktakeshee Dossee and others v. Peary Chowdhrain and others, 7 W. R., 158.

In a suit to recover possession under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, the plaintiff must prove when his cause of action commenced, when and how he was dispossessed, and whether he has sued within time. Ram Narain Singh v. Sheo Parsun Lal, 4 W. R., Act X R., 24.

A. had sued alleging that he was in possession of the estate of his uncle from the time of the death of his uncle's widow, and that he had since been dispossessed on a particular date. Held that the suit being for possession within twelve years of the death of the widow, he was entitled on proof of his title to succeed to his uncle to recover possession, though he had failed to prove his alleged previous possession. Chundro Sheekur Roy v. Nobin Soondur Roy, 2 W. R., 197.

In a suit to recover possession it was proved that plaintiffs had purchased shares in a joint property and had held possession. The lower Appellate Court, thinking they had done so separately, without being at the time aware of their ijmali rights, held that it could not decree to them the joint possession sought for.

Held that it matters not what position plaintiffs considered themselves to have occupied originally whilst in possession. If they can establish their right they are entitled to recover possession, whether that possession were originally joint or separate. Rajbullub Shammee and others v. Waris Mahomed and others, 8 W. R., 450.

A plaintiff who has not a present right to possession cannot sue to eject. Where plaintiffs, divided members of the family of defendant's husband, sued the defendant, a widow, for possession of property which she had received from her husband on the ground that she was improperly alienating it,—Held that the Court could not grant the relief asked for. D. Bangaraiya v. D. Balabhadra Raja and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 386.

In a suit for possession of land which had once formed the bed of a nullah of which defendants held a julkur settlement, but which was situated within plaintiff's settled estate,—Held that as defendants had failed to show that their settlement extended beyond the fishery rights, plaintiff was entitled to recover possession. Monohur Chowdhry and others v. Nursing Chowdhry and others, 11 W. R., 272.

A person whose suit for khas possession is dismissed is not entitled to a declaration of his right to receive possession of the proprietary title, i.e., to receive rent from those who admit tenancy. Gopee Mohun Gossain v. Issur Chunder Banerjee, 2 W. R., 237.

Where certain zemindars sued to recover khas possession of certain shares of land, alleging that defendants were wrongfully in possession, it was held that, though bound to prove their right to khas possession, yet whether they proved themselves to have been recently in khas possession or not, they had a right to a decision as to the alleged wrongful possession of the defendants. Joykisto Mookerjee v. Hurreehur Mookerjee, 12 W. R., 365.

In a suit to recover possession on the allegation that the plaintiff, having been in possession, was suddenly and recently ejected, the sole question for decision is the right to possession, apart from any question of the validity or otherwise of the lakheraj title under which the plaintiff claims. Boodha Mirdha v. Sheikh Khyrut Ali, 5 W. R., 269.

In a suit for recovery of possession of certain land which the plaintiff claimed under and by virtue of a sunnud (grant) from the zemindar, and from which he had been dispossessed by the defendants, the lower Appellate Court held that the execution of the sunnud was not satisfactorily proved, but that it was not a forgery, and that there was the corroborative evidence (such as the dakhilas produced before it) to prove the case of the plaintiff. Held that when a claim is based upon a sunnud, and the plaintiff fails to prove the execution of the sunnud itself, he may prove his claim by other means. In a suit for mere possession it is unnecessary to state or prove a particular title. The reception of papers and documents by the lower Appellate Court, unless objected to at the time, cannot be made a ground of special appeal. Rajah Rash Behari Lall Singh v. Nabyi Poddar, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 99; 11 W. R., 465.

In a suit to recover possession, the plaintiff alleging that the land in dispute from which he had been ousted had been settled with him by Government in 1833 as part of his zemindary, and the defendant alleging that the land was part of his lakheraj garden land, which had been released by Government from assessment, the Courts below found that the lands in dispute were part of those which had been settled with the plaintiff. On appeal to the Privy Council, the defendant attempted to show that, assuming the lands in question to have been part of those settled with the plaintiff, that settlement had been improperly made.

Held that this contention was not open to the defendant upon the record, never having been taken in the Courts below. Srimati Dassi v. Rani Lusunmani, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 64.

The plaintiff purchased a mauza from the proprietor in 1869, and now sued to obtain possession from the defendant, who was proved to have held under a ticca lease down to 1856, and who now claimed to hold under a mokurruree lease, which he said was granted by the former proprietor in 1859. The plaintiff failed to prove possession by his vendor within twelve years of suit brought, and therefore the Courts below dismissed his suit. On special appeal it was held that the defendant, before succeeding on the question of limitation, ought to have shown that the plaintiff had notice of the mokurruree title set up. The case was sent back to the Court below to try the validity of that title. Dhanuk Dhari Singh v. Gupi Singh, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 151, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 191.

In a suit to recover possession of land plaintiff's failure to prove his allegation of wrongful dispossession from an anterior date cannot deprive him of a decree for possession if he proves he is entitled to it at the time of bringing the suit. Meer Mobaruck Khan v. Lookba Sindhoo Banerjee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 111.

In a suit to recover possession on the allegation that plaintiff had been illegally ousted though holding under a lease from defendant, the latter urged that though plaintiff had been allowed to hold the tenure as a tehsildar or collector of rents, he had never been the ijaradar or farmer in possession. The Judge found that the estate was really let out in ijara to the plaintiffs by the defendant, who had recovered rents and granted him receipts on account of the ijara mehal. Held that this was a complete finding in favour of the plaintiff's title, and that it was not necessary for him to sue for the pottah which had been wrongfully denied him by defendant. Joheerooddeen Mahomed v. Dabee Pershad Singh, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 21.

In a suit to recover possession of the beds of tanks which, though gradually reclaimed and made fit for cultivation by defendants, were situate within plaintiff's mâl estate, and had been measured and recorded in the zemindary chittahs as the khas khamar and unfit for cultivation,—Held that plaintiffs being unable from the nature of the ground to show any direct acts of ownership, the presumption was that until the act of defendant dispossessing them they were sufficiently in possession to enable them to maintain their right of suit. Rufautoollah Chowdry v. Shushee Shikur Banerjee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 57.

In an ordinary civil suit not brought under Clause 6, Section 23, Act X of 1859, or under Section 15, Act XIV of 1859, a plaintiff cannot recover possession as against the undisputed owner merely by proving his previous possession and dispossession. But he may claim damages for the value of crops taken away which had been raised by him on the land, whereof he was at the time in lawful possession. Ram Mohun Doss v. Jhupproo Dass, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 41.

A suit by a sharer to set aside a sale having been dismissed on the ground that plaintiff being a defaulter the suit would not lie, plaintiff brought a second suit to claim possession of his share of the dur-putnee talook, on the ground that the sale must be inoperative inasmuch as the purchaser, a co-sharer, was also a defaulter. Held that until the sale was set aside plaintiff was not in a position to claim possession of his share. Gouree Komul Bhuttacharjee v. Raj Kristo Nath, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 369.

In a suit to recover possession of land alleged to have been purchased from two parties (R. and D.), one of whom (D.) had appeared before the Registrar, admitted the sale, and allowed the deed to be registered so far as her interest was concerned, but the other (K.) when he appeared before the Registrar had denied the deed and subsequently sold his share to the defendant by a registered kobala,—Held that as there was no evidence of fraud on the part of the defendant purchaser, or that he had purchased with notice, plaintiff was not entitled to a decree for K.'s share. Srcenath Churn Dass v. Dwarkanath Ghose, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 318.

A plaintiff's failure to prove dispossession on the particular date mentioned in the plaint is not a sufficient ground for the dismissal of the suit. Huro Chunder Chowdry v. Gobind Chunder Moitro, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 178.

In a suit to recover possession of property from which plaintiffs have been ousted by defendants who have no title at all, the latter cannot set up the claim of a third party so as to defeat that of the plaintiffs, whose rights moreover are not in any way affected by the fact of the suit not having been brought within the time limited by Section 15, Act XIV of 1859. Kumul Dutt v. Mohun Mullee, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 278.

A claim to occupy a building cannot be maintained on the ground of a previous tenant's long occupancy of the land as against a landlord who has since the death of such tenant exercised rights of ownership over the land. Sufdur Ali Khan v. Jeo Narain Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 161.

Plaintiff sued for possession of a tenure on the allegation that his father had held it on a mokurruree pottah of 1857 till his death in 1864, when plaintiff, a minor, and his mother, a widow, were ousted by defendant, the present lessee of the zemindar, both of whom put forward a common defence to the effect that on plaintiff's father's death and plaintiff's inability to pay rent plaintiff abandoned the tenure. Though plaintiff's mokurruree pottah was found to be inadmissible and invalid, yet plaintiff was held entitled to possession of the tenure which admittedly was his father's, and which it had not been proved the son ever abandoned. Kalee Coomar Pattur v. Khetter Nath Bang, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 47.

If a tenant in a suit to recover possession of land from which he has been ejected finds it necessary to implead a person other than the person entitled to receive the rent of the land, he must sue in the Civil not in the Revenue Court.

Suits by ryots for confirmation of possession in a tenure which is threatened are cognizable in the Civil Courts.

The same rule applies to claims by ryots for mesne profits of the nature of damages for dispossession. Rittoo Raj Rae v. Juggeshur Rae, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, p. 40.

8.—Decree for Possession.

For the restoration of possession with mesne profits of lands made over in execution of a decree subsequently reversed on appeal, a specific order is not necessary to be inserted in the decree of the Appellate Court. Gooroochurn Bose v. Bykuntnath Acharjee, 5 W. R., Mis., 38.

A Deputy Magistrate's order awarding absolute possession of the land to the plaintiff was quashed because the Deputy Magistrate was bound, under Section 318 of the Code of Criminal Procedure to enquire into the fact of possession and decide accordingly, and according to his own statement the possession was found in the defendant; and because the plaintiff only claimed a right of way over the land, and not the possession of it. Queen v. Sager Mahomed, 1 W. R., Cr., 25.

Held by Macpherson, J. (Jackson, J., contra), that a decree for possession does not necessarily involve a right to mesne profits, and that the plaintiff suing for mesne profits must prove his title. Zumurudoonissa v. Radha Churn Ghuttuck, 9 W. R., 590.

A. and B. had a dispute about possession of a certain muth. A. was declared by the Magistrate, under Section 318 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to be in possession. Subsequently B. got a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860, and applied to the Magistrate for possession, which was given to him.

Held that the Magistrate's order giving possession to B. was irregular, and must be set aside. Mahunt Dhunrajgiri Goswami v. Sripoti Giri Goswami, 2 B. L. R., A. Cr., 27; 11 W. R., Cr., 23.

In two suits in which the prayer was substantially to have certain property which had been included in a butwarra before the Collector excluded from such butwarra, it was held that as plaintiff's possession was admitted, and defendant had failed to prove his plea that such possession was in the quality of tenant under him, plaintiff was entitled to a decree. Bepin Behary Luskhur v. Sheikh Ghasoo and others, 11 W. R., 16.

To entitle a plaintiff to a decree for possession of a julkur, as part of a julkur estate settled with him, but of which the defendant has obtained possession under an Act IV award, the plaintiff must show not only the original boundaries of his estate, but also modern possession. Ranee Radha Chowdhry v. Kishen Soondery Dossia, 2 W. R., 304.

When a Collector, by order of the Board of Revenue, sells a khas mehal as of a specified area and jumma, and borne on the towjee under a certain number and name, it is the duty of the Collector to point out and give possession of that which he has professed to sell. R. Watson and Co. v. Ranee Shurnomoyee, 9 W. R., 259.

In a suit for possession, where plaintiff came into Court upon his mourosee jote, leased on a pottah at a fixed jumma which was not proved, the lower Appellate Court was held to have erred in law in decreeing to him a statutory right of occupancy under Section 6, Act X of 1859. Jannobee Chowdhrain v. Genda Turrufdar, 12 W. R., 203.

When a tenant sues to recover possession of his holding, from which he alleges he has been illegally dispossessed by his zemindar in favour of a new tenant, and the landlord acknowledges the genuineness of the old tenant's pottah and dakhilas, the plaintiff is entitled to a decree against the landlord, and is not bound to produce evidence to refute the new tenant's statement that the pottah and dakhilas are forgeries. Suttrooghun Doss v. Narain Sahoo, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 134.

Unless a plaintiff can prove the particular title set up by him he is not entitled to a decree for possession. Ramdhan Chuckerbutty v. Srimati Komaltara, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 99; S. C., 11 W. R., 301.

In a suit by one of several shareholders to recover possession of land, the defendant, even though he be in wrongful possession, may object to the decree extending beyond the plaintiff's share. Urjoon Sahoo v. Kishen Dyal Singh, W. R., 1864, 246.

A Court has no power summarily to deprive a decree-holder of possession of lands which have been decreed in his favour, and of which he has been put into possession under his decrees, and to which the parties seeking possession of the lands in question laid no claim when the decree-holder took possession, though they claimed other lands. Rajah Leelanund Singh Bahadoor v. Motee Singh and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 107.

The original plaint claimed less land than was shown to exist between the boundaries, and a supplemental plaint was put in for the correct quantity. Held that it was not improper or irregular to give a decree for that larger quantity. Rajah Joy Mungul Singh v. Rajah Mohendur Narain Singh, 2 W. R., 154.

A decree restoring possession of a share of property held in joint possession does not necessarily confer separate possession. Modhoosoodun Mookerjee v. J. Beckwith, 1 W. R., 206.

Plaintiff obtained a decree for possession, which was reversed by the High Court on appeal, and restitution of the property was ordered. Plaintiff having appealed to the Privy Council, applied to be allowed to remain in possession of the property upon the security which he had already given. Held that the High Court had no power, under Section 4, Regulation XVI of 1797, to suspend the restitution, and that the defendant was entitled to enforce restitution without giving security. Rajkissen Singh v. Baroda Debee and another, 6 W. R., Mis., 111.

9.—Re-entry.

It is not absolutely necessary for a lessor to take legal measures for obtaining possession of the demised property on accrual of right of re-entry for breach of covenant. He may (if he can do so peaceably and quietly) take possession thereof without having recourse to civil proceedings (which are only necessary in case he apprehends resistance) and if he does so re-enter he cannot be sued for trespass, inasmuch as the interest of the lessee becomes forfeited, and the lessor enters on what is in fact his own property. The requirements of the Common Law of England cannot, unless made applicable by legislation or sanctioned by well-established judicial usage, be imported into the construction of the contract that the parties at the time they entered into it had such requirements in view, and intended that the contract should be controlled by them.

The mere fact of demanding rent in one year is not sufficient to create an obligation to make such a demand in subsequent years, or on failure thereof to debar the right of re-entry.

Relief may be granted by the Courts in India against forfeiture for non-payment of rent. A lessor who has re-entered on the demised property for breach of a particular condition can, when called upon to defend his position, plead other breaches which might have justified the re-entry, and cannot be restricted to prove only that under which he originally claimed re-entry. The Eastern Hotel Company v. The Collector of Allahabad, 2 Agra Rep., O. C., 1.

10.—Ejectment.

Dependent talookdars re-admitted to temporary settlements for a certain number of years are not liable to ejectment at the close of those settlements. Hurogobindo Doss and others v. Kala Chand Shaha and others, 6 W. R., Act X R., 26.

To bring a case of ejectment within the jurisdiction of the Collector's Court there must be some direct act on the part of the person entitled to receive the rent, either by ejecting the tenant personally or by his servants, or by joining with those who actually do so. J. P. Wise v. Huro Chunder Shaha, 6 W. R., Act X R., 90.

The act of digging a well or planting trees may not necessarily imply or assert a proprietary right in the land in which the well is dug or the trees are planted; yet by the general law of the North-West Provinces a ryot, even having a right of occupancy, being prohibited from doing certain acts, such as planting of trees or digging wells, without his landlord's consent, makes himself liable to ejectment, unless protected by local usages, from his holding if he were to dig a well or plant trees without the landlord's consent. Section 6, Act X of 1859, which provides that a ryot who has held or cultivated the land for more than 12 years acquires a right of occupancy in it so long as he pays rent for the same, must be read consistently with Clause 5, Section 23 of that enactment, which provides that a ryot is liable to ejectment from his holding for breach of contract, and not as importing that a ryot having a right of occupancy, so long as he pays the rent claimable from him, is at liberty to use and deal with the land as he pleases. The useful or beneficial nature of an act is not a justification of it if it be a breach of contract. A condition, not expressly made between the parties to a contract, may nevertheless be attached to such contract by custom. The general rule that a ryot is liable to ejectment on the digging of a well without the consent of the zemindar, may be varied by particular local usage or express contract. Koonj Behary Patuck v. Shiva Balunk Singh, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 119.

In a suit to eject the special appellant from a portion of a house which he claimed to be in possession of as part owner,—Held that the lower Appellate Court was wrong in laying down that it was not called upon to decide whether the defendant was entitled to share in the house, as the onus of proving an exclusive title to the property lay on the plaintiff. Isubji v. Khatiza, 2 Bom. Rep., 189.

A plaintiff who has not a present right to possession cannot sue to eject. D. Baugaeaiya v. D. Balahhadra Ruju, 2 Mad. Rep., 386.

A suit of ejectment for arrears of rent will not lie if brought before the close of the Bengal year. Where the rent is under Rs. 100 the Judge cannot exercise any jurisdiction, and consequently the Appellate Court has no jurisdiction either. Sreeram Biswas v. Juggernath Doss Mohunt, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 187.

Held that, unless it be proved that by express contract or local custom an alienation by the tenant by way of sale or mortgage renders the holding liable to be forfeited, a suit in the Revenue Court for ejectment on such ground will not lie, but that the remedy of the zemindar is by suit in the Civil Court to have the transaction set aside. Ramdyal v. Jankey Dobey, 3 Agra Rep., 274.

One of the several joint proprietors who is not a lumberdar, or otherwise authorized to sue on behalf of the other joint proprietors, cannot sue to eject a ryot. Mussamut Balashee Begum v. Khooshal, 3 Agra Rep., 221.

Proprietors are not entitled to oust their co-proprietors from lands which the latter have, as tenants, brought into cultivation. Pran Kishore Gossain v. Dinobundhoo Chatterjee, 9 W. R., 291.

A party in legal possession under a lease from a lakherajdar cannot be summarily evicted by the zemindar without the intervention of the Court, even if the zemindar is entitled to resume the land as invalid lakheraj, or as lands which have lapsed on non-performance of stipulated service. Indrabutty Koonwaree v. F. Holloway and others, 9 W. R., 168.

A lessee of only one of several co-parceners cannot be legally ejected by any of the others as a trespasser. Luchmun Sahae Chowdhry v. Seami Jha, 5 W. R., Act X R., 93.

In a case of ejectment (even though the dispute be merely as to which of the two parties the land belongs) the plaintiff must succeed by the strength of his title only, and not by the weakness of the defence. Rajah Sutto Surn Ghosal v. Dhone Kristno Sircar, 1 W. R., 88.

A tenant is liable to ejectment if he has been admitted to possession by some only of the co-parceners of a joint property without the consent of the others, unless there is some special custom giving some of the co-parceners authority to make such admission. Ghunshyam Singh v. Runjeet Singh, 4 W. R., Act X R., 39.

No act of temporary dispossession by a third party can take away the right of a part owner of an estate to her share of the rent from the tenant. Mussamut Woolatun v. Jeetun Lall, 1 W. R., 325.

An ouster by the zemindar of a defaulting owner of a tenure, transferable by sale without application to any Court, is illegal under Clause 7, Section 15, Regulation VII of 1799. The proper course is for the zemindar to apply to the Dewanny Adawlut to have the tenure sold in satisfaction of the arrears. Narayunee Dossee v. Rajnarain Ghose, 2 W. R., 154.

One of several joint lessors can eject a lessee after expiry of the lease. Mudun Singh v. Nurput Singh, 2 W. R., 291.

Where a tenant has been admitted to possession by all the co-partners in an estate, a suit for ejectment cannot be brought against him, unless all the partners join in the action. Gouree Sunkur Surmah v. Tirtho Monee and others, 12 W. R., 452.

When all the co-sharers have allowed a tenant to enter and occupy land the tenant cannot be ejected without the consent of all. Held further that one or more co-sharers cannot allow a stranger to occupy a portion of the mouzah without the consent of the other co-sharers, unless they are authorized to act on behalf of the other co-sharers, and the dissentient co-sharers may sue to eject him. Lutchmun Pershad and others v. Dabee Deen, 4 Agra Rep., 264.

II.—MESNE PROFITS.

11.—MISCELLANEOUS.

A decree of 1854 for possession and mesne profits having been confirmed in appeal, in February, 1855, was duly executed in part up to 1861, when the decree-holder applied for execution as for mesne profits to the extent of Rs. 81. Failing in the Court of first instance, the applicant was declared by the Appellate Court, in 1863, entitled to the amount, with interest, by virtue of his decree. The judgment-debtor contested the case in the Civil Court, but his suit was dismissed on the 12th August, 1865, and on the 12th July, 1866, the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree for Rs. 81, the balance of mesne profits. This application was disallowed, on the ground that there was no provision in the original decree awarding mesne profits, and that an agreement to which that decree-holder had referred was not forthcoming.

Held that as the original decree of 1854 evidently intended to give mesne profits of some kind, the Courts in 1862 and 1863 had jurisdiction, under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, to determine what mesne profits were due; and that as the decree-holder was seeking to maintain the order in the Civil Courts in 1864 and 1865, his application of July, 1866, was in time, and he was entitled under an order of a competent Court to receive the mesne profits claimed. Huro Soondery Dossee v. Noroodeen and others, 11 W. R., 325.

The sale by a decree-holder of the right to recover possession under one decree does not affect his right to recover under another decree mesne profits collected during the time of the judgment-debtor's illegal occupancy. Seetul Chunder Shaha v. Brojo Soondery Dossee, 4 W. R., 12.

A Court executing a decree has no power to assess mesne profits, unless it is ordered by the decree that the mesne profits are to be assessed in execution, and it is an essential part of a decree which orders mesne profits to be assessed in execution to fix the period in respect of which such mesne profits are to be assessed. J. P. Wise v. Jagendro Coomar Roy and others, 11 W. R., 200.

A set-off is not admissible in a suit for mesne profits, which is not a suit for a debt within the meaning of Section 121, Act VIII of 1859. Rotee Romun Oopadhya v. Greeja Nund Oopadhya, 5 W. R., 160.

A decree for lands with wasilat (the lands having been held and claimed by the defendant as shebait of an endowment, and the profits of the lands having wrongly gone into the treasury of the shebait) is not a decree against the defendant personally, but against the defendant as shebait. Ranee Shibshuree Debia v. Mothooranath Acharjee, 5 W. R., 202.

Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, does not bar a separate suit for mesne profits when there was no adjudication whatever in the matter of mesne profits in the former suit for possession. Issur Dutt Singh and others v. Alluk Misser and others, 7 W. R., 429.

Before the plaintiff can succeed in a suit for mesne profits against the defendant, on the ground of the defendant's wrongful appropriation of the profits of howalas and neem howalas, it must either be admitted or proved that the plaintiff holds them. If he holds them as subordinate tenures in the ousut talook of a third party the owner of the ousut talook should be made a party, and the plaintiff's claim to the mesne profits should be decided in his presence, whether he denies or admits the existence within his ousut talook of the plaintiff's alleged howalas and neem howalas (dissentiente Steer, J., who held that if the owner of the ousut talook denied the existence as above, the plaintiff's suit should be dismissed at once, for in a suit simply for mesne profits against a stranger for wrongful possession, the title of the plaintiff and of the owner of the ousut talook cannot be tried). Mahomed Kadur v. Puddomala, 2 W. R., 185.

Where execution is ordered to be taken out against the estate of a deceased judgment-debtor, and the property is sold, the representative of the debtor cannot be called to account in execution for the mesne profits of the property while in his hands. Muzhur Aly, alias Sat Cowrie Meah, v. The Nawab Nazim of Bengal, 7 W. R., 308.

A suit by a ryot against another for damages on account of illegal appropriation of the produce of the land, including the ryot's profits, by the defendant during certain years, is not a suit for mesne profits, and is therefore unaffected by Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861. The question regarding amount cannot be settled in execution, but by separate suit. Joy Kissen Mookerjee v. Jodoonath Ghose, 3 W. R., 1.

A person made liable under a decree for mesne profits cannot get rid of the effect of that decree by bringing a fresh suit to set aside the compromise entered into by his legal guardian, when execution of that decree was taken out against him. Bissessur Naran Mohunt v. Soobah Junnuk Lall Jha and others, 7 W. R., 77.

A suit for mesne profits, alleged to be due upon land between the institution of a former suit and the execution of the decree, cannot be maintained. Narayana Aiyan and others v. Srinivasa Aiyan, 2 Mad. Rep., 435.

Even with the permission of the Civil Court, a separate suit cannot be brought for mesne profits between the institution of the original suit and the execution of the decree thereon. Act XXIII of 1861, Section 11, commented on. Chennapa Nayudee v. Pitchi Reddi and another, 1 Mad. Rep., 453.

Where a decree awarding possession of immoveable property is silent as to mesne profits accruing between the filing of the plaint and the execution of the decree, the Court executing the decree has no power to award such. The proper course for the plaintiff to adopt, under such circumstances, is to apply to the Court which passed the decree for a review, or else to file a separate suit. Radhabai v. Radhabai, 4 Bom. Rep., A. C., J., 181.

A defendant who, upon an enquiry into wasilat, absents himself at the time of enquiry by the Commissioner, and withholds his accounts and papers, and who lays before the lower Court no materials on which it can come to any decision as to the expenses at which he has been, is not entitled to invoke the assistance of the Court on appeal. Jodoo Nath Roy v. Ram Buksh Chulungee, 8 W. R., 203.

The cause of action in suits for mesne profits arises from the date when they became annually due. Ram Chundra Roy v. Ambica Dossea, mother and guardian of Busonto Coomar Roy, minor, and others, 7 W. R., 161.

A presumption arises against a claim for mesne profits from non-claim for seven years. Modhoosoodun Sundyal v. Suroop Chunder Sircar Chowdhry, 7 W. R., P. C., 73.

The recital in a deed of mortgage executed in 1845 cannot be taken in 1866 to be conclusive as to the amount of mesne profits which have accrued due subsequent to a decree for possession passed in 1859, and finally confirmed by the High Court in 1863. Roy Mohun Lall Misser and others v. Mussamut Sheo Soondery Debia, 6 W. R., 297.

The plea that wasilat cannot be recovered for more than six years, though not taken below, may be entertained at any stage of the case. J. P. Wise v. Poornima Chowdhrain and others, 6 W. R., 129.

Mesne profits can only be recovered for six years prior to the institution of suit. Balum Bhutt, alias Rajah Ram Bhuth, v. Bhoobun Lall and others, 6 W. R., 78; Munseram Acharjee v. Sreemutty Surrunyo, 7 W. R., 273.

Mesne profits for the period during which the decree-holder was executing the decree and was kept out of possession by the opposite party may be awarded by the Court under Section 2, Act XXIII of 1861. Mussamut Hookum Bebee v. Kalah Mahomed Moosa Khan and others, 6 W. R., Mis., 13.

A. obtained a decree declaring him entitled to possession under a mortgage of one-third of the property in dispute, with mesne profits. B. subsequently obtained a decree against A. and the other co-sharers for possession of the whole estate, with mesne profits, under another mortgage; but instead of taking full advantage of his decree he received from all the co-sharers the amount due to him on the original transaction, and restored the property to them. Held that A. was entitled to recover mesne profits due to him under the original decree.

Bisnoo Chunder Biswas v. Toyluck Nath Banerjee, 6 W. R., Mis., 28.

Under a decree which provided for possession with mesne profits from 8th Bysack, 1264, the plaintiff was held entitled to the rents of 1263, and whatever else was realized by the defendant after 8th Bysack, 1264, during the period of his wrongful possession. The decree simply gave mesne profits from a certain date anterior to the suit, but as it was silent as to the mesne profits accruing subsequently,—Held that this Court could not, under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, give mesne profits not expressly provided for by the decree, and that the proper course for the decree-holder was to apply to the Court which made the decree to amend its order regarding mesne profits. Hurronath Roy and others v. Rajah Indoo Bhusun Deb Roy, 6 W. R., Mis., 33.

A decree for mesne profits to be ascertained in execution is a decree for money within the meaning of Section 232, Act VIII of 1859; and there is no irregularity in the decree-holder applying for attachment of the judgment-debtor's property pending the ascertainment of the mesne profits. Sharoda Moyee Burmonee v. Wooma Moyee Burmonee, 8 W. R., 9.

Following a Full Bench decision (9 W. R., 407), it was held that a decree of the High Court technically for possession only, which reinstates a party in the position he was in when ousted, also gives a right to wasilat, on ascertainment in execution, under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861. Chowdhry Sib Narain Pohraj Mandhata and another v. Chowdhry Kishore Narain Pohraj Mandhata, 10 W. R., 131.

A Hindu by a deed dated in 1840 gave his daughter, a childless widow, an estate for life in certain property, with remainder on her death to brother's grandsons. The daughter was put in possession, was dispossessed in 1858, and died in 1862. Under the terms of the deed, the property then went to the survivor of the two grandsons, who in 1864 sold his rights and interests in the property. In 1865 the purchaser brought a suit, and recovered possession from the defendants. His representatives now sued for mesne profits of the property from 1860 to 1865. Held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to mesne profits which had accrued due but were uncollected in the lifetime of her daughter; that such mesne profits would go to her heirs, who would alone be entitled to them. Gooru Prasad Roy v. Nafar Dass Roy, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 121.

It is well established that when a party obtains a decree for possession he may sue for the wasilat (of the estate decreed to him) for a period of twelve years prior to the decree, and he may delay to sue for it for twelve years after the decree for possession has given him the right to sue for wasilat.

The party in possession is the only person legally competent to sue for wasilat. Khetturmonee Dossee v. Gopeemohun Roy, 1 Ind. Jur., O. S., 83.

Wasilat or mesne profits cannot be recovered in a suit for the recovery of the possession of land instituted under Act X of 1859, Section 23, Clause 6. Ruttunmoney Dassee v. Trilocho Chunder Chuckerbutty, Marsh., 280.

In a suit for wasilat the stamp in the plaint will be sufficient if it cover the amount claimed for wasilat, notwithstanding the defendant may deny the title of the plaintiff to the land. Kadir Buksh v. Wise, Marsh., 165.

The plaintiff was possessed of an estate situate on the bank of a river, and of certain chur lands which had accreted thereto. The Collector took possession of the chur lands in 1818, upon the default of the proprietor to appear to answer a claim made by Government to assess the chur land. In 1824 a suit was filed by Government under Regulation II of 1819, for the resumption of these lands; the Government officers however continuing to hold possession and collect the rents. In 1847 the Collector, in conformity with a general order under Act IX of 1847, "for the abatement of all suits for the resumption of alluvial lands then pending," struck off the suit and restored the lands to the possession of the zemindar. The proprietor claimed the wasilat enjoyed by the Government during his dispossession; and the Government again dispossessed him, under the assumption that the lands were an island in the river, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to them as an accretion. The plaintiff having brought a suit in 1854 to establish his right to the lands in question,—Held that the Statute of Limitation was no answer to the suit, because the pendency of the suit for the resumption and assessment of the lands between 1824 and 1848 prevented the proprietor from commencing a suit during that period, and that during such period the limitation did not run; and further, after that period the necessity for a suit was obviated by the restoration of the lands to the proprietor. Held also that a fresh cause of action accrued under the second ouster. Held further, that the churs being accretions to an estate in respect of which engagements had been entered into by the proprietor with the Government at the time of the Decennial Settlement, the occupation of the Government was without title, and the plaintiff was entitled to an account of rents and profits during the period of his being kept out of possession. Ranee Surnomoye v. The Collector of Rungpore, Marsh., 13.

Plaintiff and defendant and certain others were co-sharers of an abad. Each agreed to cultivate certain portions and afterwards to give up any excess land cultivated by him. Defendant cultivated 399 beegahs in excess of his share. Plaintiff sued him and got possession of the excess land on payment to the defendant of a compensation for the expense of cultivation, and then brought his suit for mesne profits. Held that he was not under the circumstances entitled to mesne profits. Debnarayan Deb Mitter v. Kali Das, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 70, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 397.

Where the plaintiff is cultivator, or himself uses or wishes to use the land, the principle on which wasilat decreed to him ought to be calculated is what he would have made by himself holding possession. Any produce of the land of whatever kind that the wrongful possessor has appropriated to his own use in the course of his possession may be treated as mesne profits which the plaintiff is entitled to recover. Soudaminee Dabee v. Anund Chander Haldee, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 37.

The cause of action in respect to mesne profits accrues on the date on which, but for the fact of dispossession, the plaintiff would have been entitled to receive them. Lakhi Kant Das Chowdry v. Ram Dyal Das, 5 B. L. R., Ap., 61 ; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 82.

Where, in a suit for land, the Court decreed to the plaintiff possession of the land, but made no decree in respect of mesne profits,—Held the plaintiff could not, under Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, obtain an order from the Court executing his decree declaring him entitled to any or what amount of mesne profits. Under Section 11 the question must relate to something comprised in the decree. Ekouri Singh v. Bijaynath Chattapadhya, 4 B. L. R., A. C., 111 ; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 11.

The plaintiff brought a suit for possession of land with mesne profits. The suit was dismissed. He appealed on the question of possession only, and obtained a decree for possession without any mention of mesne profits ; and afterwards, in execution of the decree, he obtained possession of the land. Held the plaintiff could afterwards bring his suit to recover mesne profits from the date of decree for the period of six years next before the commencement of the suit, exclusive of the period during which the plaintiff was in possession. Sections 2, 7, and 196 of Act VIII of 1859, and Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 were no bar to such suit. Pratap Chundra Burua v. Rani Swarnamayi ; Rani Swarnamayi v. Pratap Chundra Burua, 4 B. L. R., F. B. R., 113, 13 S. W. R, F. B. R., 15.

A plaintiff who obtains a decree for possession is not ipso facto entitled to wasilat. In a suit for wasilat, where the Ameen's enquiry was not completed on account of the laches of the plaintiff,—Held (Glover, J., dissenting) that there had been no local investigation at all, and that the defendant had no opportunity of producing his evidence. Kalee Dass Mitter v. Deb Narain Deb, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 412.

Where a decree awards mesne profits up to the date of the suit, the Court executing it has no power to give more. Janokee Nauth Mookerjee v. Raj Kisto Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 292.

Where wasilat is decreed, the mode of ascertaining it is rightly reserved for the proceedings in execution. M. H. Gule v. Maharanee Sreemutty, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 133.

In this case the decree did not specify the period or the amount for which mesne profits were awarded, and it was contended (upon the authority of 11 W. R., 200), that plaintiff was not entitled to any mesne profits at all. Held that both the amount and period were left to be ascertained in execution, and that as the suit was instituted after Act XIV of 1859, the decree-holder was not entitled to mesne profits for more than six years prior to date of suit. Hureehur Mookerjee v. Molla Abdoolbur, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 209.

The jurisdiction in the case of a claim to mesne profits is in the Civil and not the Revenue Court.

The decision of this Court is against the maintenance of a separate suit for mesne profits accruing subsequently to the commencement of a suit. Shunkur Lall v. Ram Lall, 1, 11 N. W. R., 177.

Held that where the plaintiffs made over the management of their lands to their bankers, but did not part with the property in the lands, even for a temporary period, they were entitled to maintain a suit for mesne profits against the defendants who trespassed on and occupied the lands whilst the estate was under the management of the bankers. Ramrutton Rul v. Dwarka Dass, 2 N. W. R., 193.

A party holding a decree for possession has a right, under Section 10, Act VIII of 1859, to bring a separate suit for wasilat which accrued prior to his decree. Where a suit for possession by partition of kamut (nij-jote) lands and for wasilat is decreed, it is the duty of the Judge, in drawing up the final decree after the Ameen's report, to state the boundaries of the shares of the parties, the interest of each share, and the exact amount due as wasilat. Chowdry Imdad Ali v. Boonyad Ali, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 92.

12.—Amount of Mesne Profits.

Held that the amount of rent actually received together with that which might with reasonable diligence have been collected, form the amount of mesne profits to which a decree-holder is entitled. Evidence that the land was let for a certain amount is a primâ-facie proof of the amount of mesne profits, and may be accepted by the Court unless the contrary be proved. Rugho Nath Dobey v. Huttee Dobey, 1 Agra Rep., M. A., 17.

Mesne profits are in themselves simply damages which do not exist as an obligation to be discharged until they have been awarded by a Court competent to do so. Therefore, according to Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861, mesne profits payable at the time of execution must mean "mesne profits which have been at that time directed to be paid by a decree of Court." The two portions of Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 are in direct connection with Sections 196 and 197 of Act VIII of 1859.

A. obtained a decree against B. for recovery of possession of certain property and for mesne profits up to the date of the suit, but the decree was silent as to mesne profits after that time. Held that A. was not barred by the provisions of Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861 from bringing a suit against B. for mesne profits during the time that A. was kept out of possession after the decree. Haromahini Chowdhrain v. Dhanmoni Chowdhrain, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 138 ; S. C., 10 W. R., 62.

When a cultivating ryot is ejected by his zemindar, the mere rent of the land realized by the zemindar from another tenant is not necessarily the measure of the damage sustained by the ryot, and recoverable by him as mesne profits. Bhiro Chandra Mozoomdar v. Bamundas Mookerjee, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 88 ; S. C., 11 W. R., 461.

The principle upon which wasilat should be determined is that the party who may be found to have been wrongfully in possession shall refund to the party wrongfully ousted such sums as the party wrongfully in possession had collected, or might with due diligence have collected. J. P. De Silva v. Syed Teharanee and others, 9 W. R., 374.

The principle on which wasilat should be assessed where defendant has been compelled to relinquish possession is, that he should be made to pay that which plaintiff (decree-holder) would have enjoyed if he had not been kept out of possession by the wrongful act of defendant. Erfoonissa Chowdhrain v. Mussamut Rukheeboonissa, 9 W. R., 457.

Where a party is decreed entitled to mesne profits the trespasser cannot be allowed to urge that the owner would not have realized as much from the land as he (the trespasser) did; but if he had obtained extraordinary profits by the expenditure of capital on the land, allowance should be made for such expenditure. Sreenath Bose v. Nobin Chunder Bose, 9 W. R., 473.

The mesne profits which, under the provisions of Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, are assessable by the Court executing the decree, are only such as have been by the decree made payable in respect of the subject-matter of the suit between the date of the suit and the date of the execution of the decree. Any question of mesne profits not determined by the Court making the decree is not properly cognizable by the Court executing the decree. Ram Lochan and others v. Munsoor Ali Chowdhry and others, 11 W. R., 339.

Where the amount of mesne profits is not expressly admitted, the Court is bound to deal with it as if disputed, and either to determine the amount at the trial or to reserve it for assessment in execution. Dhurm Narain Singh v. Bundoo Ram, 12 W. R., 75.

The mesne profits payable in respect of the subject-matter of the suit under Section 11, Act XXIII of 1861, are only such as are made payable under an order of the Court which passed the decree. In respect to mesne profits due after the decision of the first suit, the decree-holder is entitled to institute a fresh suit. In the matter of Shumboo Mohun Roy v. Tripoora Sunker Roy and others, 12 W. R., 126; Promothonath Roy v. Tripoora Soondery Dabee, 10 W. R., 463.

Mesne profits should not be estimated on the gross produce of an estate except when all other means of ascertaining them fail. The rents due from the actual cultivators, or if he cultivate the land by his own servants, the value of the produce, should be taken as the amount of the mesne profits. Khemon Kuree Debia v. Modhoomutty Debia, 4 W. R., Mis., 23.

A decree-holder may recover as mesne profits such sums as may have been collected and appropriated by others in wrongful possession, or such sums as he himself would have collected had he been in possession, and which he was prevented from collecting by being kept wrongfully out of possession. Bishessuree Debia v. Mohun Chunder Bose, 5 W. R., Mis. 35.

A decree-holder is entitled as mesne profits to whatever the wrong-doer has collected, though it be more than the decree-holder himself might have ordinarily collected. Chunder Coomar Roy v. Kasheenauth Roy Chowdhry, 5 W. R., Mis., 37.

Mesne profits liable in execution of a decree are the rents of an estate, minus costs of collections, Government revenue, losses by desertion and death of ryots, by drought, &c. The proper means of ascertaining their amount is to require the party who has held possession, and against whom the decree has passed, to produce his accounts, and if necessary to compel him to do so. On him lies the onus of proving the actual amount of mesne profits, and if he fail to produce his accounts he will only have himself to blame if the amount awarded by the Court is larger than the actual mesne profits. Dinobundhoo Nundee v. Keshub Chunder Ghose, 3 W. R., Mis., 25.

On the appeal of the judgment-debtor and without a cross-appeal by the creditor, the Appellate Court should not increase the amount of mesne profits decreed by the first Court to the creditor. The rents which the party in possession might have realized with due care and diligence should be taken as the amount of mesne profits. Ramnath Chowdhry v. Digumber Roy, 3 W. R., Mis., 30.

Decree of Sudder Court estimating the amount of mesne profits from the average of two preceding years, as ascertained in a former suit (the evidence in the present suit being unsatisfactory on both sides), upheld. Sooriah Row v. Rajah Enoogunty Sooriah, 5 W. R., P. C., 125.

Where the custom of collecting rents from mustagirs prevails, the mustagiri jumma is to be the basis of account of mesne profits to be recovered from a judgment-debtor. Syud Ahmed Rezah v. Rajah Syud Enaet Hossein, 1 W. R., Mis., 20.

Mesne profits are not limited to the amount actually collected from an estate by the judgment-debtor, but must be calculated according to the assets which might have been realized with due diligence. Mary Smith v. Sona Bibee, 2 W. R., Mis., 10.

The value of trees cut down and appropriated by a judgment-debtor, against whom a decree with mesne profits has been given, may be included in the mesne profits for which the judgment-debtor whilst in wrongful possession is liable. Buneead Singh v. Sudaseeb Dutt, 2 W. R., Mis., 50.

The sum to be recovered in any case of a suit for mesne profits is of the nature of damages to be assessed by a proper exercise of the judicial discretion of the Court which is charged in the trial of the case on its merits; and it is impossible to lay down a rigid rule according to which those damages should always be calculated. Charles Swinton Hogg v. Dinonath Sreemanee, 8 W. R., 447.

The purchaser at a sale in execution of a decree obtained by a mortgagee in satisfaction of his mortgage debt, is not bound by leases executed by the mortgagor, after decree, unless he has recognized the leases after his purchase by receiving rent from the lessees as such.

When a party is declared entitled to a decree for mesne profits he is entitled to recover as those profits such sums as may have been collected and appropriated by others in wrongful possession, or such sums as he would have collected had he been in possession, and which he was prevented from collecting by having been kept wrongfully out of possession. Hunooman Doss v. Koomeroonissa Begum, W. R., F. B., 40.

Where a defendant had, with apparent right, occupied newly-formed lands from which the plaintiff ejected him by establishing in a civil suit his superior title, the onus was held to be on the defendant to account to the plaintiff for those profits which the defendant had derived from the lands, and which the plaintiff, if he had been in possession, would himself have received. Abdool Kureem Biswas and others v. J. D. Campbell, 8 W. R., 172.

In estimating the amount of mesne profits where a decree-holder could not give satisfactory evidence as to the rates at which he received rents and the collections he made, the judgment-debtor was held liable for the amount stated in the Collector's jummabundee, minus the cost of collection, leaving him to recover from Government what he has paid on account of revenue, unless the sums so paid had already been refunded by Government to the decree-holder. Charles Palmer v. Mohunt Bal Gobind Doss, 7 W. R., 230.

Principle on which mesne profits should be calculated. Ram Dhul Singh v. Pormessuree Persaud Narain Singh, 7 W. R., 78.

In a suit for mesne profits, where the wrong-doer had prevented the plaintiff from cultivating the land, it was held that he was liable to pay for such lands as he cultivated himself or allowed to remain waste, what would have been a fair and reasonable rent if the land had been let to a tenant during the period of its unlawful occupation. Tripoora Soondery Dabea v. Coomar Promotho Nath Roy, 11 W. R., 533.

Where the Government and a farmer were both jointly liable for mesne profits as joint wrong-doers, it was ordered that they should in the first instance be severally charged with the amount of mesne profits which each had realized. The Collector of Bograh, on behalf of Government v. Shama Shunker Mozoomdar and others, 6 W. R., 230.

In a case of wrongful dispossession, the principle upon which wasilat should be assessed is to ascertain what the actual rents or proceeds of the estate were, and to make the wrong-doer account for them to the party dispossessed, everything being assumed against the wrong-doer. Doorga Soondery Debia v. Maharanee Shibeshuree Debia, 8 W. R., 101.

Mesne profits mean those profits which the person in actual wrongful possession of the land did actually receive, or might with ordinary and due diligence have received from that land. Dwarkanath Mitter v. Ramdhun Biwas and others, 8 W. R., 103.

Where one party illegally dispossesses another and lets his estate in farm, the amount of the rent which the party wrongfully ousted might have ordinarily received had he been in possession, and not the amount of the farm rents received during the wrongful possessor's incumbency, will, unless any special custom be proved, be the measure of mesne profits to be awarded. Jugurnath Singh v. Sheikh Ahmedoollah, 8 W. R., 132.

In estimating mesne profits, not merely the amount of rents actually received by the defendant, but also those which he might have received, and which can no longer be collected, ought to be charged against him. On the other hand, the reasonable expense of collecting the rents may be allowed to him; and if he has paid rent to the zemindar, allowance may be made for such payments. But he cannot be charged with payments of rent made by the plaintiff to the zemindar. Mussamut Bessumessooree Dabea v. Mussamut Tarasoonderee Brahminee; Mahomed Hajra v. Tarasoonderee Brahminee, Marsh., 201.

The proper principle applicable to a case in which the person liable to mesne profits has not let the land to tenants, but has himself occupied and cultivated it, growing on it indigo and other crops, is not to assess wasilat according to the value of the manufactured indigo or other crops, but according to what would have been a fair and reasonable rent for the land if the same had been let to a tenant during the period of the unlawful occupation of the wrong-doer. Ranee Asmed Kooer v. Maharanee Inderjeet Kooer, 9 W. R., 145.

Where a suit is decreed as one for possession with mesne profits, the decree-holder is not barred from asking the Court, under Section 197, Civil Procedure Code, to enquire into the amount of mesne profits in execution. In decreeing mesne profits a Court has no right to disallow the costs of collection on the assumption that a large zemindar can collect rents without costs. Gooroo Dass Roy v. Annund Moyee Debia, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 203.

A superior holder who dispossesses a ryot is liable, not merely for the profit which he makes by letting out the land, but to make good the loss which the ryot sustains by being dispossessed. Huruck Lall Saha v. Sreenibash Kurmokur, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 428.

The rule for the assessment of mesne profits is, that the right of the true owner is to all the profits of the land, and not merely to the amount of the cash collections during the time that he is illegally kept out of possession, and the trespasser must be held responsible for all that he has realized and receive credit for everything for which he is entitled to credit, such as rents paid and charges for collection. He does not lessen his responsibility by remitting rent or neglecting to make collections. Kalee Dabee v. Madoo Soodun Chowdry, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 171.

Where the party recovering possession of land of which he was wrongfully dispossessed, and claiming wasilat, is himself the cultivator, he is entitled to recover the profits which he would have made out of the land by the cultivation, had he not been dispossessed. Nur Singh Roy v. Anderson, J., 16 S. W. R., C. R., 21.

A decree for wasilat for a larger sum than that mentioned in the plaint was upheld in appeal, on the ground that the plaint did not profess to do more than give the approximate value of the produce of the land, and that the sum decreed had been found due after two careful local investigations. Pearee Soonduree Dossee v. Eshan Chunder Bose, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 302.

The mode of calculating mesne profits in cases of decrees for and against each of the parties, is to calculate and rateably divide them and then to allow a set-off to the extent of the profits actually received by each sharer, the deficit in each year being made good by the party who received in excess of his share. Bijoy Gobind Naik v. Kalee Prossono Naik, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 294.

In a suit for wasilat where it was decreed that the value of the produce of a julkur should be ascertained in execution, the Lower Appellate Court was held to have come to a right conclusion without any error of law in taking the nearest approximate value of the produce indicated by the evidence and the plaintiff's statement. Shaik Enaet Ali v. Baboo Sobhneeth Misser, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 258.

In calculating the six years' mesne profits which the decree-holder was entitled to recover in this case, the cause of action was held to have arisen at the end of the year in which the ouster took place.

In the case of endowed lands, the judgment-debtor is entitled to a deduction, from the amount of mesne profits ascertained to be due, of the expenses incurred by him in carrying on the worship of the idols. Thacoor Doss Acharjee Chuckerbutty

v. Shosha Bhoosun Chatterjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 208.

The loss of the party wrongfully kept out of possession must generally be measured by the actual profits arising from the usufruct of the land during that time, on an occupation of the same character as that of the party wrongfully kept out of possession at the date of his ouster or of the last legal occupant whom the plaintiff claims to succeed to, if the plaintiff himself never entered into possession.

As regards the produce and value of the lands in such cases, it is the duty of the judgment-debtor to produce his accounts and to prove what were the real assets of the property. Mussamut Rookeemee Kooer v. Ram Tuhul Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 157.

Where application was made for execution of a decree for possession with mesne profits of five mouzahs situated within the Court's jurisdiction, and Government revenue was so assessed upon these five mouzahs and two other mouzahs situated in another district that the amount paid on account of the five mouzahs and the two mouzahs respectively could not be apportioned, the Court had no jurisdiction to determine and award mesne profits for the latter two mouzahs not within its jurisdiction but to have made an apportionment to the best of its ability.

Nor ought the Court to have assessed the mesne profits by relying upon certain jummabundee papers made by the Government revenue officers some thirty years ago, without enquiring into the actual rents or proceeds of the estate during the period of dispossession. Puran Chunder Roy v. Juggessur Mookerjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 298.

An ordinary cultivating ryot, recovering possession after ejectment, is entitled to get as mesne profits the net amount that he himself would have got from the land had it remained in his own cultivation. Shistee Pershad Chuckerbutty v. Kumla Kant Roy, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 348.

If a Court finds that a plaintiff has been dispossessed of property, he is primâ facie entitled to mesne profits in respect of the period during which he was dispossessed, and it is not necessary for him to prove the actual collections made during his dispossession. It is sufficient to show what is the annual profit which in ordinary years can be collected. Thus it is sufficient to show the profits for the years preceding or subsequent to the period of dispossession. Bhawanee Deen Sahoo v. Mohun Sahoo, 1 N. W. R., Par. 12, p. 188.

Held that the mode of estimating the amount of mesne profits in respect of a talook held by plaintiff under defendant was to ascertain the amount of profits which plaintiff could have realized from the talook if he had not been dispossessed therefrom by the wrongful act of defendant; and that as there was no necessary relation between those profits and the amount of revenue payable by the latter on account of the inferior holding, such revenue could not be treated as an element in the calculation; but that the amount of rent payable by plaintiff to defendant ought to be deducted from the gross calculation of the talook. Held also that there seemed no reason why the same rule should not be adopted in this case merely because the wrong-doer was the landlord. Bhyrub Chunder Mojoomder v. Huro Prosunno Bhuttacharjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 257.

The plaintiff brought a suit against the defendant to recover damages for the wrongful taking and detention by the defendant of a coffee estate and certain moveable property belonging to the plaintiff, and for the loss sustained partly by the destruction of the growing "supplemental crop" and partly by neglect of the proper cultivation of the estate. The possession of the estate had been in the first instance given in right of the defendant's claim as mortgagee, and afterwards retained mistakenly in the same right. The Civil Judge awarded the plaintiff Rs. 20,000, as compensation for the injury, privation, and suffering resulting to the plaintiff from the defendant's wrongful acts in obtaining and withholding possession of the estate. Held that the defendant should not have been adjudged to pay more than the value of the profits of the estate, and of any property removed from the estate, and compensation for any injury caused to the estate by the acts or neglect of the defendant or his agents. McIvor, W. G., v. Stainbank, W. H., 5 Mad. Rep., 70.

Where a purchaser of a four-annas' share was kept out of possession of a portion of the property sold, and having recovered judgment in a suit brought for possession and mesne profits against the vendor, an arrangement was come to pending appeal, that within a year the parties should appoint an arbitrator to fix on the shares and make a division, and in default of such appointment an application should be made to the hakim, but that if no such application was made within the year, and a suit should be subsequently brought, the party suing should lose his right to mesne profits,—Held that, under the circumstances, the defendant having prevented the plaintiff from making the necessary application within the year, and proceedings having gone on for years to carry out the partition, the plaintiff was, on the termination of those proceedings, entitled to sue for mesne profits.

Where proceedings were going on to effect a partition, the right to particular properties being in dispute,—Held that the right to mesne profits accrued at the termination of those proceedings, and that the party improperly kept out of possession was entitled to sue for all mesne profits during the period of his non-possession, subject to any grounds which the defendant could show which would entitle a Court of Equity to deprive the plaintiff of his rights.

In a suit brought in January, 1862, respecting property situated in Assam, mesne profits for twenty-eight years, prior to 1854, were decreed subject to any equitable claims for deducting any portion, Act XIV of 1859 not applying to Assam previous to July, 1862.

Where, in a suit for partition, it appeared that the vendor of the portion sued for had kept the vendee out of possession, the vendor, though liable for mesne profits, was not in the position of trustee of the rents for the party kept out of possession. Nil Kamal Lahuri v. Srigunomani Debi and Sri Buroda Sundari Debi, 7 B. L. R., 113, and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 38.

Where the plaintiff, who was a cultivator, sued for possession of certain land, of which he had been dispossessed by the defendant, with mesne profits, and the Judge gave him a decree for possession, and as to mesne profits decreed that the plaintiff should have the actual profits realized from the land, and if that could not be ascertained (as to which the burden of proof, he said, should be on the defendant), then according to the capabilities of the soil in an average season, making the deductions necessary on account of the bad seasons, expense of cultivation, rise and fall of prices, and cost of seed; and in the case of indigo, the value of the raw produce and not of the manufactured article; it was held that the principle on which damages were awarded was a correct principle, where the plaintiff was himself a cultivator. Watson v. Pyari Lal Shaha, 7 B. L. R., 175.

In a suit for possession and wasilat where the plaintiff was the actual cultivator of the land and obtained a decree, it was held that the full Bench Ruling reported in 9 W. R., p. 446, and not in the case in 13 W. R., p. 37, was applicable, and that plaintiff was entitled to such fair and reasonable rent as the defendant might have derived from the land had he left it during the period of his wrongful occupation. Madhub Chunder Dutt v. Haradhun Paul, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 294.

13.—Liability for Mesne Profits.

Where in a former suit for possession the Court decreed possession and wasilat from date of suit to date of recovery of possession, a further suit for wasilat from the date of the plaintiff's dispossession to the date of the former suit was held not barred. Sheikh Afzul Hossein v. Mussamut Misrun, W. R., 1864, 297.

In a suit for wasilat in respect of mâl lands fraudulently included by the lakherajdar with lakheraj lands resumed by Government and afterwards settled with him,—Held that the lakherajdar, and not the Government, was liable; and that as the sum claimed was definite and required no further enquiry to ascertain the amount due, interest had been properly awarded from date of suit. Shew Coomaree Dabee v. Maharajah Mahtab Chund Bahadoor, W. R., 1864, 380.

A separate suit will not lie for mesne profits accruing between the date of decree and delivery of possession. Ram Shunker v. Mussamut Lalee Baie Manick Ram, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 268.

A., in execution of a decree of the lower Court against B., obtained possession of certain land therein mentioned. On appeal by B. the High Court reversed the decree of the lower Court, and ordered restitution of the property to B., but no mention of mesne profits was made in the decree. B. then sued for recovery of mesne profits for a period during which A. had been in possession.

Held that such a suit would not lie. The question of mesne profits ought to have been decided in execution under Section 11 of Act XXIII of 1861. Shib Narayan Pohraj v. Kishor Narayan Phoraj, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 146.

Persons who purchase from one who they know has no legal right to sell, with full notice that the vendor is only a trustee for her minor sons, are liable to pay mesne profits. According to Clause 16, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859, no more than six years' mesne profits can be recovered. Luchmun Singh v. Mussamut Bibee Miriam, 5 W. R., 219.

About the time that judgment was given in plaintiff's favour for possession with wasilat, a third party, in satisfaction of some other claim against the defendant, attached and got possession of the land in dispute. A question consequently arose in executing plaintiff's decree as to the liability for wasilat of the year in which the defendant was put out of possession by the third party.

Held that as under Section 223, Code of Civil Procedure, plaintiff might have executed his decree by removal of the party who had got possession under a title created by defendant subsequent to the institution of the suit, he had the means of recovering possession while defendant had them not. Under these circumstances defendant could not be held liable for the profits. Haradhon Dutt v. Joykisto Banerjee and others, 11 W. R., 444.

A decree for possession in a suit under Section 15 of Act XIV of 1859 is primâ-facie evidence that the plaintiff in that suit is entitled to recover from the defendant therein mesne profits for the period of dispossession. Radha Churn Ghatak and others v. Zamirunnisa Khanum, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 67; S. C., 11 W. R., 83.

A person declared by a decree to be in wrongful possession is liable for mesne profits, which may be recovered from any property in his possession. Beebee Pearun v. Ahmed Ali Khan, 4 W. R., Mis., 7.

A party in wrongful possession of land is liable for mesne profits from the date he withheld possession from the rightful owner. Hera Lall Thakoor v. Gridharee Lall and others, 8 W. R., 450.

Held, dissenting from a ruling of the late Sudder Court, that mesne profits are always recoverable from a person who has enjoyed them, even though he has been in bonâ-fide possession without knowledge of the defect in his title. He would, if he bought with sufficient enquiry, have a remedy against his vendor. Mugun Chunder Chuttoraj v. Surbessur Chuckerbutty and others, 8 W. R., 479.

The liability of the several defendants in this case was assessed in proportion to the amount of profits which each had derived from his wrongful possession. The Nawab Nazim of Bengal v. Raj Coomaree Debee, 6 W. R., 113.

Held that the first auction-purchaser, whose purchase was found to be invalid, was liable to account for the profits of the estate during the time he remained in possession thereof to the second auction-purchaser, whose purchase was declared by the Court to be good and valid. Joy Narain v. Sheikh Torabun, 3 Agra Rep., 216.

A suit for mesne profits held to lie against a party who took an izárá pending litigation, though the decree for possession with profits was against the izárdár's landlord. Bidyamayi Debia Chowdhrain v. Ram Lal Misser, 8 B. L. R., Ap., 80; 17 S. W. R., C. R., 141.

When a suit is brought to recover possession of immoveable property, and the decree does not provide for the mesne profits that accrued during the suit, a separate suit may be maintained for them. Where however it can be shown that the omission in the decree to provide for mesne profits was the deliberate act of the Court, the defendant may set that up as a defence in the separate suit. Sitaram Amrut et al. v. Bhagvant Jagannuth, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 109.

As a general rule a suit for wasilat will lie against parties who have been found in a previous suit for recovery of the land to have been in wrongful possession and against them only. If the plaintiff has recovered a decree against several persons as joint wrong-doers, he is not at liberty to single out one or more of them only as defendants in the suit for wasilat. Suttya Nundo Ghosaul v. Sureep Chunder Doss, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 76.

Obstruction to possession may be the ground of a claim for damages, but it cannot support a claim for wasilat unless there has been dispossession, and the claimant has been prevented from enjoying rents and profits. Churn Singh v. Runghoo Singh, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 221.

14.—Interest on Mesne Profits.

The principle upon which mesne profits are calculated is that a party is entitled to receive from the person but for whose wrongful act he would have realized profits damages in such a shape and to such an extent as to cover his loss. Interest on mesne profits may therefore be awarded from the date of ascertainment thereof. Mobaruk Aly v. Boistub Churn Chowdhry, 11 W. R., 25.

Interest on the mesne profits cannot be awarded for the period previous to such ascertainment where the decree does not give interest on mesne profits. Hurò Gobind Bhukut v. Degumburee Debia, 9 W. R., 217.

Where a decree for mesne profits does not declare whether interest is or is not to be awarded, the Court which executes it is right in refusing to award interest. Becheram Doss v. Brojonath Pal Chowdhry, 9 W. R., 369.

Held that no difference should be made between wasilat paid in kind and wasilat paid in cash; both should be calculated in specie, and bear interest at the usual rate. Sreemutty Baye Kishorree Dassee and another v. Bonomally Churn Mytee, 10 W. R., 209.

In a suit for wasilat brought after a decree awarding possession to the plaintiff, the defendant cannot set up the title of a third person.

Interest on a sum awarded for mesne profits may properly be withheld until the date of the decree, since the amount is not ascertained before that time. Bengal Coal Co. v. Mussamut Dureeonlah Debea and others, Marsh., 105.

The right of action to a person who is restored to possession under a decree of the Privy Council, does not accrue before the decision of the Privy Council; and he is entitled to interest on mesne profits from the time of his ejectment up to one year after the decision of the Privy Council, that being held to be a reasonable time to be allowed to him for commencing his suit. Ranee Asmoodh Kooer v. Joykurun Lall, 5 W. R., 125.

Although the common practice is to make interest payable from the date on which the mesne profits are assessed, yet there is no rule of law by which a party is debarred from suing for the recovery of mesne profits with interest. Sokhee Mara Debia v. Brijoraj Mookerjee, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 228.

Although interest as such cannot strictly be allowed upon mesne profits previously to the institution of the suit, the Court in estimating what loss has been sustained by the plaintiff in being kept out of possession may take into consideration that if he had received the rents year by year he would have been able to make use of the same, and may thus calculate the interest in the damages to be awarded. Protap Chunder Borooah v. Ranee Surno Moyee, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 151.

Where a decree of the Privy Council ordered possession with mesne profits but without interest,—Held that the decree did not interfere with the power of the Judge who executes it to award interest under Section 10 of Act XXIII of 1861 on the aggregate sum adjudged, and costs from the date of decree to date of payment. Rajah Ahmed Reza v. Mussamut Khujoorunnissa, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 469.

1.—MORTGAGE.

While a mortgagee was in possession of the mortgaged premises the lands were sold for arrears of Government revenue, and purchased by the mortgagee. Held that his possession as mortgagee was superseded by his possession as purchaser, and that the Statute of Limitation commenced to run from the beginning of his possession as such purchaser. Bykant Dhur Singh v. Lallah Bhogobut Sahby, Marsh., 3891.

The rule that the date of expiry of the year of grace is the date from which a mortagee's cause of action to obtain possession of the mortgaged estate is to be calculated, applies only when the mortgagor remains in peaceable and undisturbed possession of the estate. But when the mortgagor is dispossessed, and his title disputed, and another person obtains possession of the estate, the possession of the new holder becomes adverse to both mortgagor and mortgagee. The mortgagee's cause of action against the new holder will count from the date on which the latter obtained such adverse possession, unless when the mortgagor contests the title of the new holder, and litigation ensues between them, in which case the mortgagee is not bound to take action upon his mortgage until that litigation is decided. But if the mortgagor's title is rejected, and his possession is disturbed by an adverse one, the mortgagee's cause of action against the new holder commences from the date on which the latter obtains possession on his title adverse to the mortgagor which has been confirmed by the Courts. Ramcoomar Sein v. Prosonnocoomar Sein, W. R., 1864, 375.

An agreement reciting that in consideration of the care which the plaintiff took of the defendant and her property during her infancy, and of the instruction given to her for which the plaintiff expended her own money, the defendant had mortgaged her house to the plaintiff; and stipulating that in the event of the defendant going to live with any man, and similarly after her death, the house would become the plaintiff's property.

Held good in law and in substance an account stated with a mortgage to secure the amount due; and the usual decree for redemption made, reversing the decrees of the Courts below which threw out the plaintiff's claim. Heirs of Husen Reg Bin v. Akubai, 2 Bom. Rep., 357.

A. mortgaged to his brother B. his twelfth share in the immoveable estate of the family. C. at B.'s request became surety for A. to Government. A. having become a defaulter, C. became liable to Government in respect of his defalcations. B., with a view to indemnify C., transferred to him A.'s mortgage, C. at the same time assigning to B. a debt due by D. to A., which had been previously assigned by A. to C. Government sold A.'s interest in the twelfth share, which was purchased at the sale by B.'s son, E.

In a suit brought by C. against B. to obtain possession of A.'s share,—Held that the assignment by C. to B. of D.'s debt was a sufficient consideration for the transfer by B. to C. of A.'s mortgage; that the sale by Government of A.'s share was subject to such pre-existing valid charge, and that E., to whom the equity of redemption only passed by the purchase at the Government sale, was necessarily a party to the suit, which was accordingly remitted to the Court below, in order that he might be made a defendant, and a new decree passed upon the merits. Yashavant S. Kulkarni S. Gopal v. Chandarkar, 2 Bom. Rep., 202.

Held that though there may be a condition for repayment of mortgage debt in money, the mortgagee may bind himself to receive the payment in money's worth, and this orally, notwithstanding that the mortgage debt is created by a written obligation. The mode in which an obligation may be discharged and satisfied by payment is a distinct matter from the obligation itself. Duraya and others v. Mohur Singh, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 163.

G. borrowed money on a mortgage bond, on which the mortgagees sued for and obtained a money decree which did not declare the mortgaged property liable to be sold in satisfaction. While the proceedings in the case were pending G. sold the property. Held that the property was virtually unburdened at the date of the sale; the mortgage lien having been rendered infructuous by the action of the mortgagees in waiving their right of sale and receiving a money decree. Sawruth Singh v. Bheenuck Sahoo, 12 W. R., 522.

Lands descended to three sisters. On a question whether a mortgage of a portion by one of the sisters, thirty years ago, was in her own right, or on behalf of the family, or how otherwise, it appeared that each sister had dealt with several portions as on her own behalf; that one was the family manager for joint interests, but who had not interfered in respect of the portion mortgaged. The mortgagee had held and enjoyed from the first, and had assigned absolutely, and the assignee had again assigned absolutely as owner. In execution for the debt of the widow of the mortgagor's son, her right and interest mortgaged in the premises were sold, and the sheriff's vendee sold to the mortgagee. The son of the surviving sister (not the mortgagor) sued for redemption and possession. Held that as his title accrued (on his showing) on his mother's death, at which time defendants' vendors held adversely, no mortgage relation had been established as between plaintiff and defendants; and more than twelve years having elapsed before suit the suit was not maintainable. Sreemulmoney Bebee and others v. Goberdhone Bermono, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 319.

The heirs of a deceased Mahometan mortgaged some property of their ancestor. After the mortgage a judgment-creditor, in respect of a debt due from the estate of their ancestor, attached and sold the mortgaged property in execution of his decree. Held that the sale was subject to the mortgage. Held also that the question with respect to the powers of the heirs, and the rights acquired by the mortgagee and the purchaser under the execution, in a suit between the latter, was to be determined, not by Mahometan law, but by the principles of "justice, equity, and good conscience."

Semble,—That even if the Mahometan law applied, the sale in execution would be subject to the mortgage. Campbell v. Delaney, Marsh., 509.

A mortgage created by a defaulting undertenant, on account of a debt contracted by him, cannot continue to the prejudice of the auction-purchasers of the tenure sold for arrears of rent under Section 105, Act X of 1859. Kalee Kant Chowdhry v. Romonee Kant Bhuttacharjee, 3 W. R., 217.

A mortgage made by way of security for money advanced remains a mortgage until the debt is satisfied, and the mortgagee-creditor has every right to sue to obtain a decree and sell that which is held by him as security for his money, without any regard to the proceeding of any other subsequent mortgagee or purchaser. A purchaser at a sale in execution of such a decree, under a prior mortgage, as well as the original holder of a prior mortgage, has rights far superior to those of any other mortgagee or purchaser of a subsequent date. A subsequent purchaser, by payment of an earlier mortgage, and obtaining a decree for the money so paid, does not acquire any rights belonging to that mortgage. His payment was a voluntary act, and his decree against his vendor was a personal one for a simple debt, not secured by any security connected with any portion of the land in dispute. Dhone Roy v. Buldeb Narain Singh, W. R., 1864, 345.

The plaintiff had a lien on three estates belonging to his debtor, and a third party having obtained a decree for money due from the same debtor, recovered his money by the sale of one of the three estates mortgaged to the plaintiff. Held that the sale did not release that estate from the mortgage, but that it forced the plaintiff to take measures in the first place to recover the amount due to him from the remaining estates included in his mortgage-deed; and that if a balance remained after he had realized all he could from these two remaining estates, he could then return to the third estate to recover the balance. Mussamut Nowa Koowar v. Sheikh Abdool Ruheem, W. R., 1864, 374.

An estate was bought benamee in the name of A. by the father of A. After the father's death a sum of money was raised by conditional bill of sale signed by A. as proprietor and by his brother B. as motullah. Afterwards, and after the death of B., and after B.'s heirs had separated from A., A. raised a further sum by a bill of sale, reciting the former conditional bill of sale, and that the additional sum was raised to discharge the same. Held that if the grantee took with notice that he was entitled to a half-share only of the estate the additional charge would operate as a mortgage of such half-share only; but that portion of the money for which the original bill of sale was given was a charge on B.'s share as well as on the possession of his heirs. Kishen Chunder Ghose v. Nundo Kishore Singh, Marsh., 651.

Plaintiff borrowed a sum of money for defendant, and executed what he called a "usufructuary mortgage," taking from defendant a lease for nine years, under which the lessee, after paying the Government revenue and a certain rent (claiming no abatement), was to retain the rest of the jumma as interest and principal of the loan until the term of the lease expired, when the balance was to be repaid in a lump sum, the lessor not being at liberty to alienate the property until the debt was paid. The present suit was brought to redeem the property by payment of the principal and interest due, although the term of the lease had not expired.

Held that the document leasing the property was partly "ticca" and partly "zur-i-peshgee," and the plaintiff was not entitled to enter into possession before the expiry of the term of the lease, nor could he then enter even if the transaction were viewed as a zur-i-peshgee. Rajah Lotf Aly and another v. Gugraj Thakoor and another, 11 W. R., 408.

A finding by a Court that a mortgage-deed has been attested by the Registrar of Deeds and proved by witnesses, is a sufficiently distinct finding on the bona fides of the deed. Moorul Singh v. Mohun Kooer, 9 W. R., 167.

Where a mortgage is a charge on the whole of an estate, before the mortgage can be removed from any part of the estate the whole mortgage-debt must be paid off. Moodhoo Singh v. Kishen Chunder Ghose, 3 W. R., Mis., 4.

A mortgage of the revenues of a village was executed by a firm, and the deed stipulated that the mortgagees should station a mehta or clerk of their own in the village to make the collections, who was to receive his monthly salary and daily food from the mortgagors whilst the property remained in mortgage. A mehta was accordingly appointed, who received the rents and profits of the village for a year or two, but afterwards permitted the mortgagors to receive them for four or five years. The respondent, who was one of the partners of the firm, did not execute the mortgage, but was cognizant afterwards of the execution of it, and he sued his co-partners, and obtained a decree for his share of the assets of the firm. In execution of his decree an attachment issued against the estate. The mortgagee sues for the removal of the attachment.

Held that the mortgage was valid up to the time of the notice of the respondent's claim (i.e., when he proceeded to enforce that claim by attachment and when he became in the situation of a second incumbrancer); and that if after that time he permitted the mortgagors to receive any portion of the produce of the estate he ought, with respect to the moneys so received, to be postponed to the subsequent incumbrancer. Jugjeewan Das Keeka Shaha v. Ram Das Brijbookun Das, 6 W. R., P. C., 10.

Where a mortgage is found to be genuine, and the receipt of consideration admitted, the Court is bound to assume, unless it be shown to the contrary, that the transaction was a real one, and that the consideration-money was paid. Radhanath Banerjee v. Judunath Singh and others, 7 W. R., 441.

Certain words in a mortgage-deed stipulating that in the event of the property mortgaged being sold in execution of a decree, or otherwise alienated, the mortgagee should recover from any other property in the possession of the mortgagor, whose person should also be liable for debt, were construed as merely intended to give some supposed further security to the mortgagee, but not to take away his right to issue notice of foreclosure and obtain possession by a suit, even though the mortgaged property were sold away. Achumbit Misser and others v. Lala Nund Ram and others, 11 W. R., 544.

A mortgagor stipulated that he would not sell the property mortgaged during the subsistence of the mortgage-term; but that if he did sell he would sell to the mortgagee at a fixed price. He subsequently alienated a moiety of the property to his wife in lieu of dower; a suit was instituted by the mortgagee to set aside the alienation. Held, on the construction of the mortgage-deed, that the condition did not absolutely prohibit alienation but simply conferred on the mortgagee a pre-emption right to purchase, and that the mortgagee could not sue for avoidance of the alienation to the wife, without claiming or expressing a willingness to purchase. Shiva Churn Doss v. Sheikh Roostum and Mussamut Nujeemoonnissa, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 69.

The principle that a party cannot both approbate and reprobate the same transaction is applicable to Indian cases.

Where a mortgage-deed stipulates for interest at 9 per cent., but other and collateral deeds, forming part of the same transaction, provide for further profits to the mortgagee—Held that the mortgagor cannot, unless there be a positive legal enactment to that effect, be heard to plead that the written engagement, though not extending to the whole profit stipulated, must be adhered to as against the mortgagee, though the mortgagor may go beyond it to show the full extent of the profit, and so to be relieved from the consequences of his actual contract.

Interference with the rate of interest in India was a thing of positive law, and cannot be extended beyond the provisions of the Regulation (XV of 1793). Section 9 of the Regulation does not declare that where an attempt has been made to elude the usury laws the contract is itself void, nor does it direct the return of the pledge without redemption. The mortgagee may retain his pledge until he has received out of it his debt with interest at 12 per cent., the maximum allowed by Section 10 of the Regulation.

In a suit for redemption, on the ground that the debt has been satisfied with interest, the onus is on the plaintiff. A mortgagee is not an assurer of the continuation of the same rate of profits as his mortgagor was able to raise. Hence an estimate of the rental preceding mortgagor's possession is not sufficient proof of the profits in his time.

The nature of the accounts which a mortgagor may call for from mortgagee explained. The mortgagee need not personally attest the accounts if he has no personal knowledge of them.

Presumptions against mortgagees for non-production of accounts must have reasonable limits, and not be mere conjectures or based on inexact data. Shah Makhan Lall and others v. Srikrishna Singh and others, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 44; S. C., 12 W. R., P. C., 19.

By an agreement reciting that A. had executed a bond in favour of B. for a certain sum of money, A., "in order to repay the bond-money in the terms in the bond contained," declared that "until the repayment of the money covered by the bond he should not from the date of the agreement convey the property mentioned therein to any one, by deed of sale, or deed of conditional sale, or mokurruree pottah, or deed of mortgage, or zur-i-peshgi ticca potta. Should he make all these transactions in respect of the said lands, the instrument relating thereto shall be deemed invalid, and as executed in favour of nominal parties for evading payment of the money covered by the said lands."

Held (Markby, J., doubting) that the instrument operated as a mortgage to A. of the lands comprised therein.

No precise form is required to create a mortgage. Raj Kumar Ramgopal Narayan Singh v. Ram Dutt Chowdry, 5 B. L. R., 264; 13 S. W. R., F. B., 82.

The defendants mortgaged certain property in the mofussil to the plaintiffs in April, 1863, and at the same time, as a collateral security to the mortgagee, executed a bond in favour of the plaintiffs, and a warrant of attorney to enter up judgment on the bond. Judgment was entered up, and a decree obtained thereon, soon after the bond was executed. In accordance with a covenant in the mortgage-deed, the mortgagees entered into possession and receipt of the rents and profits of the estate which they were authorized to receive for five years from the date of the mortgage. They remained in possession for six years, and then, more than one year having elapsed since any proceedings in execution had been taken they applied for execution of their decree against the mortgaged property. The property was out of the jurisdiction of the Court. Held that if the application were granted the execution of the decree must be limited to property other than that which was the subject of the mortgage. There being evidence to show that the parties had entered into an agreement for a fresh mortgage of the property for twenty-two years, the application for execution was refused. Semble,—An equity of redemption cannot be taken in execution of a decree for a money-debt under the attachment clauses of Act VIII of 1859. Braja Nath Kundee Chowdry v. S. M. Gobindmani Dasi, 4 B. L. R., O. C., 83.

The following terms in a deed, "that for the security of the payment of the debt the lands mentioned in this deed are pledged by me; and that until the principal money and the interest recited in this deed are paid off, I would not on any account transfer the property pledged to anybody by sale or hibabilawaz, or gift, or mortgage, or in any other way," were held to amount to a mortgage. Lala Ramdhari Lal v. Janessur Das, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 14.

A member of a joint Hindu family granted a usufructuary mortgage, and subsequently, without the knowledge of the co-partners, released the equity of redemption; on hearing of this the co-partners contested the validity of the release. Held that the parties claiming from the person to whom the release was made took, so far as the co-partners were concerned, a title only as mortgagees.

Act XIV of 1859, Section 1, Clause 13, is intended to apply to suits between members of a joint family, not to a case where a mortgage having been made by one member on behalf of all to a stranger, that member afterwards, against the will of his co-partners, releases the equity of redemption.

To entitle a purchaser to claim the benefit of Act XIV of 1859, Section 5, he must prove, 1st, that he is a purchaser of what is represented to him and what he fully believes to be not a mortgage, but an absolute title; 2nd, that he purchased bonâ fide, that is to say, without a knowledge of the title having been originally a mortgage, and of a doubt existing as to the mortgage having ceased; and 3rd, that he is a purchaser for valuable considerations.

A pleading setting up as a defence a purchase for valuable consideration should aver the seisin of the vendor and the sale of his absolute title for good consideration.

Where an estate having been originally mortgaged by K., a member of a joint Hindu family, he subsequently, without the knowledge of the other members, released the equity of redemption to R., who afterwards sold to H., the owner of a factory, who afterwards sold to G. and Co. the factory with the lands appertaining thereto, amongst which was the property so released, and proceedings had for many years been taken by the other members to assert their rights,—Held, reversing the decision of the High Court, that G. and Co. were not purchasers entitled to the protection of Act XIV of 1859, Section 5. Held also that Section 10 does not apply in such a case, although R. acted fraudulently. Radanath Das v. J. S. Elliot, 6 B. L. R., 530, and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 24.

A. executed a bond in favour of B., hypothecating certain immoveable property. B. recovered a money-decree against A., and caused the mortgaged property to be sold. B. became the purchaser at the sale in execution, and was put in possession. C., who held possession of the property under a decree for foreclosure under a subsequent mortgage of the same property to him by A., brought a suit against B. for recovery of possession, and obtained a decree. B. then brought a suit against C. to enforce his lien under the mortgage-bond, but it was held that the suit was not maintainable. Kasimannissa Bibi v. Hurnissa Bibee, 7 B. L. R., Ap., 8, and 15 S. W. R., C. R., 195.

This was a dispute which arose in 1823 between two branches of a family respecting a Mahratta village. The plaintiffs (appellants) claimed the property on the allegation that the respondents held it as mortgagees, and that they (appellants) were entitled to redeem. The respondents claimed to have held the village in question as an enam free from the payment of Government revenue, and as they had held it on this title since 1824 up to the commencement of the suit, the Privy Council refused to disturb their title, thus fortified by long enjoyment, without clear and unmistakable proof of the alleged mortgage. Ramrudugowda v. Dessai Saheb, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 8.

2.—KANAM-MORTGAGE.

A kanam-mortgagee does not forfeit his right to hold for twelve years from the date of the kanam by allowing the porapad to fall into arrear. Shaikh Rautan v. Kadangot Shupan, 1 Mad. Rep., 112.

A kanam-mortgage cannot be redeemed before the lapse of twelve years from the date of its execution (1 Mad. Rep., 262). A mel-kanamdar cannot eject a kanamdar or his assignee before the expiration of twelve years from the date of the kanam. Pramatan Tupen Nambudripad v. Madatil Ramen, 1 Mad. Rep., 296.

Where a first kanam-holder in his answer to a redemption suit by a second kanam-holder, for the first time denied his own kanam, and alleged an independent janmam right,—Held that he had not thereby forfeited his right to rely upon the option to make a further advance, to which as kanamholder he was entitled, though the denial and allegation were false, and though his documents in support of such allegation were forged. Paidal Kidavee v. Parakal Imbrichary Kidavi, 1 Mad. Rep., 13.

A kanam-holder who denies his janmi's title forfeits his right to hold for twelve years. Ramen Nayar v. Kandapuni Nayar, 1 Mad. Rep., 445.

When the urâlans of a devasvam were four tarawâds,—Held that a sale of the ûrâyama right by one tarawad, without the consent of the others, was altogether invalid, and that the vendee could not redeem a kanam-mortgage of the devasvam land, though the mortgagor was karanavan of the tarawad which assumed to sell the ûrâyama right. Ukanda Varriyar v. Ramen Nambudiri, 1 Mad. Rep., 262.

When the demisor of land under a kanam-agreement is unable to give possession the demisee may repudiate the contract, and recover the amount advanced. Vayalil Pudia Madathemmil Moidin Kutti Ayipa and others v. Udaya Varura Valia Rajah, 2 Mad. Rep., 315.

A kanamdar's right to hold for twelve years depends on his acting conformably to usage and the janmi's interest, and is lost if he repudiates the janmi's title. It makes no difference when this is first done in his answer. Mayavanjari Chumaren v. Nimini Mayuran, 2 Mad. Rep., 109.

Third defendant, purchaser of the interest of first and second defendants, held certain lands under the terms of a permanent kánam (A), which contained the following condition: "And (I have also agreed) that on failure to pay the said quantity of paddy the kanam-amount of 550 fanams shall be received by me, and the land restored." In a suit by the kanamdar to recover possession for non-payment of rent,—Held that this condition of redemption was intended as a penalty to secure regular payments of the rent, and that, such being the original intention of the parties, the penalty was one which ought to be relieved against. Kattal Upi v. Edavaluth Thaltram Nambudiri, 6 Mad. Rep., 258.

3.—Usufructuary Mortgage.

When the original transaction is an usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagee is entitled to nothing beyond the repayment of his principal and interest from the usufruct of the property. The Court will not allow additional advantages to be obtained through the necessity of the debtor, by the conversion of a mortgage into a transaction of a different nature. Once a mortgage always a mortgage, is a principle not to be departed from. Consequently an estate mortgaged is always redeemable. Kasseenath and others v. Bheekaree Lall and others, W. R., F. B., 79.

A suit to cancel a zur-i-peshgee, by which the lessee was to receive the usufruct as interest for his advance, and to repay the principal by the rent reserved, is of the nature of an usufructuary mortgage, and as such cannot be brought under Act X of 1859, but is cognizable only by the Civil Courts. Rutton Singh and others v. Greedharee Lall, 8 W. R., 310.

When a deed is essentially in the nature of an usufructuary mortgage, the reservation of huk ajori to the proprietor, and any other arrangement between him and his lessee cannot alter the essential character of the deed, nor relieve the mortgagee from the liability of rendering an account. Sheikh Hyder Buksh v. Hossein Buksh, 4 W. R., 103.

When an usufructuary mortgagee has compromised his claim to mesne profits from the mortgagor's estate (which was taken into management by Government), by accepting in lieu a money payment from Government, he cannot again claim from the lessees the rents paid by the latter to Government. R. Solano v. Doolhin Umri Koer, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 65.

An usufructuary mortgagee, to whom was pledged as lakheraj land which was not valid lakheraj, and which has since been assessed with revenue, is entitled to a lien against the mortgagor for sums of money paid by the former in discharge of the public revenue. Nuerjoon Sahoo v. Shah Moojeeroodeen, 3 W. R., 6.

A mortgagor may give his usufructuary mortgagee the power to sue him personally, or to sell the land, or both, at any moment.

Since the repeal of the usury laws a mortgagor and mortgagee may make what contract they please with reference to the profits of the mortgaged estate, and the mortgagor may by contract deprive himself of the right to compel the mortgagee in possession to account for the profits. Bonoololl v. Beet Bhoobun Singh and others, 6 W. R., 283.

An estate was mortgaged for Rs. 100; the mortgagee was put in possession, and it was stipulated that he was to enjoy the usufruct in lieu of interest, the mortgagor being entitled to redeem at any time on repayment of the principal. When the mortgagor deposited the principal, the mortgagee set up a false claim upon absolute sale, and forced the plaintiffs into a regular suit, on which possession was decreed to them on payment of the principal. Held that they were entitled to mesne profits for such period as may not be barred by the Statute of Limitation. Held also that plaintiffs were entitled to interest from the date of suit. Luleet Singh and others v. Mirza Ali Reza and others, 8 W. R., 322.

In the case of an usufructuary mortgage executed prior to Act XXVIII of 1855, where the mortgagor sues for redemption on the ground that the usufruct had paid off the debt, and claims mesne profits on the allegation that the mortgagee in possession has already collected more than his legal dues, the mortgagee is bound to produce the accounts of actual collections made by him during his possession. On the failure of the mortgagee in this respect, the mortgagor is expected to adduce some proof to justify a decree in his favour for redemption, as well as for mesne profits. Syud Hossein Ally v. Ramdharee Singh and others, 7 W. R., 82.

If the usufruct of mortgaged property was to be enjoyed in lieu of interest, the mortgagees having had possession is no ground for the inference that any portion of the debt, save the interest, was paid off from the usufruct. Bama Soondery Dossee v. Bama Soondery Dossee, 10 W. R., 301.

A plaintiff in possession under an usufructuary mortgage, and suing for the balance due, is bound to prove that he has not realized the amount due under the conditions of the lease from the usufruct. Chuttar Dharee Singh v. Sheikh Sureer Hossein, 1 W. R., 28.

Held that an usufructuary mortgagee in possession is liable to account for the profits, whether such possession be by himself or by his agent, and that the suit should not be dismissed merely because the mortgagee refused to give the account, but that the Court should give proper directions for the mortgagee's account to be taken, charging the mortgagee with the amount of the ordinary annual profits if received by him or his agent, but not so charging him if the profits were received by the agent of the mortgagor. Mussamut Nawak Jaffree Begum and others v. Mussamut Ujlee Begum, 4 Agra Rep., 153.

An entire mouzah had been mortgaged by way of usufructuary mortgage. The plaintiff subsequently purchased a four-annas' share from the heirs of some of the mortgagors, and sued for possession of his purchased share on the averment that the whole of the mortgage debt and interest had been satisfied. Held that he was not precluded from suing on the ground that he claimed only a portion of the mortgaged property. Held also, that inasmuch as the mortgage was effected many years ago, and the mortgage-deed was not forthcoming, and the parties to it were dead, his suit ought not to be dismissed on the ground that in his plaint he had misstated the date at which the mortgage was made. Lalla Dabee Pershad v. Beharee Lall and others, 4 Agra Rep., A. C., 33.

Held that although defendant, usufructuary mortgagee of a share in a joint estate, would not acquire any right to the trees planted by him in his mortgage term, yet, as co-parcener in the estate, he would be sharer in the trees. Bahadoor Khan v. Kora Mull, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 281.

In an usufructuary mortgage where there is no stipulation for interest the mortgagee is not entitled to it, the usufruct going in lieu of interest. Gunga Pershad Roy v. Bibee Enaet Zahera, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 251.

Where a mortgagee under an usufructuary mortgage has realized a sum of money in excess of the amount due to him, it is an equitable practice to allow to the mortgagor interest on such sum at the same rate at which interest has been allowed to the mortgagee on his mortgage debt. Bechoo Singh v. Roy Sheo Sahoy, 1, 3 N. W. R., 56.

A party who by paying off a mortgage becomes an usufructuary mortgagee in place of the original zur-i-peshgadar does not need to sue for the amount due, but is entitled to remain in possession until the whole debt has been discharged by the usufruct. Shaikh Fyezoollah v. Syud Kuzim Hossein, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 29.

4.—Hypothecation.

A bond which hypothecates property for money advanced is a deed of simple mortgage. Nazina Bibee v. Juggomohun Dutt, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 461.

Where an instrument whereby certain persons describing themselves therein as zemindars and shareholders of a certain named mouzah, declared that for the consideration therein expressed they mortgaged their "respective zemindaree shares," and all other moveable and immoveable property owned and possessed by them, to secure the payment of the debt therein mentioned,—Held to be such an hypothecation as to create an interest in favour of the mortgagees which could not be defeated by a subsequent bonâ-fide purchaser for value. Rae Manick Chund v. Beharee Lal, 2 N. W. R., 263.

It is only when a tenure is sold for its own arrears that there is an hypothecation of the tenure itself. Umurt Lal Bose v. Soorubee Dossee, 2 W. R., Act X R., 86.

Held that the hypothecation of the property to which the judgment-debtor had not acquired absolute title was incomplete and insufficient to create a valid and perfect lien in favour of the hypothecate enforceable by law against actual possessor. Herchund Singh v. Ram Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 286.

Formal words of hypothecation are not necessary to make an hypothecation valid, if the intention of the parties is sufficiently expressed. W. Martin v. Pursram, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 124.

Hypothecation creates an interest in immoveable property such as is mentioned in Clause 12, Section 1 of Act XIV of 1859, and therefore the period of limitation for suits arising out of documents of hypothecation is twelve years. Chetti Kaundan v. Sundaram Pillai (2 Mad. H. C. Rep., 51) followed. Rajah Kaundan v. Muttammal, 3 Mad. Rep., A. C., 92.

An instrument of hypothecation is a mortgage instrument, and may as such be registered under Regulation XVII of 1802, Section 3; and a suit for the recovery of the money lent must be brought within three years, pursuant to Act XIV of 1859, Section 1, Clause 10. Kadarsa Rautan v. Raviah Bibee, 2 Mad. Rep., 108.

When land is hypothecated, the contract gives the creditor an interest in immoveable property, and the period of limitation for actions on such a contract is twelve years under Clause 12 of Section 1 of Act XIV of 1859.

A creditor suing under such a contract must prove that there was an actual pledge, and that the land was part of the debtor's estate at the time of pledge.

The decree will then be for sale of the property hypothecated, unless the debtor pay the amount due with interest within a period to be framed by the Court. Chetti Gaundan v. Shondaram Pillai, 2 Mad. Rep., 51.

An ikbaldawah, containing the stipulation that the debtor shall not alienate certain property till the satisfaction of the decree, does not amount to hypothecation giving the decree-holder a lien on the property. The decree-holder may sue for damages on the breach of contract by the judgment-debtors, but he cannot sue to enforce his lien on the property against a purchaser. Chonee Lall v. Puhulwan Singh and others, 3 Agra Rep., 270.

5.—Otti Mortgage.

A karanavan singly may make an otti mortgage. Edalhil Itti and others v. Kopashon Nayar, 1 Mad. Rep., 122.

During the continuance of a first otti mortgage, the janmi is in the same position as regards his right to make a second otti mortgage to a stranger after, as he was before, the lapse of twelve years from the date of the first mortgage.

Where a janmi made an otti mortgage, and more than twelve years after made a second otti mortgage to a stranger, without having given notice to the first mortgagees, so as to admit of the exercise of their option to advance the further sum required by the janmi,—Held that the second mortgagee could not redeem the lands comprised in the first mortgage. Ali Hussan and others v. Nillakanden Nambudiri, 1 Mad. Rep., 356.

An otti mortgagee has the option to make the further advance (if any) required by the mortgagor. Paidal Kidavee v. Parakal Imbricbin Kedavee, 1 Mad. Rep., 15.

An otti, like a kanam mortgage, cannot be redeemed before the lapse of twelve years from its date.

An otti differs from a kanam mortgage, first, in respect of the right of pre-emption which the otti-holder possesses; secondly, in being of so large a sum that practically the janmi's right is merely to receive a peppercorn rent. Kumini Ama v. Parkam Kolusheri, 1 Mad. Rep., 261; Edathil Itti v. Koparhon Wayar, 1 Mad. Rep., 122.

6.—Equitable Deposit.

The Courts of this country being Courts both of law and equity, it is immaterial for the determination of claims to attached property whether a mortgage is a legal or equitable one.

Where goods are mortgaged and left in the possession of the original owner, the circumstance that they are so left is not to be held as a fraud per se rendering the mortgage liable to be defeated as between the mortgagor and third parties, such as bonâ-fide purchasers or judgment-creditors.

But when possession is left with the mortgagor, this is a circumstance of which the Court should take notice when determining whether the mortgage is bonâ fide or fraudulent.

A mortgagee is not bound to take possession immediately default is made. Deans, Manager Allahabad Bank v. Richardson, 3 N. W. R., 54.

7.—Mortgagee.

To entitle a person to claim as equitable mortgagee it is not sufficient to show that he paid off the original mortgage, but also that it was his own money that was paid, and that he was to stand in the position of the original mortgagee. Pandoorung Buhal Pundit v. Balkrishen Hurbajee Mahajun, 5 W. R., P. C., 124.

It is the mortgagee's duty to keep regular accounts, and the onus lies in the first instance upon him. If he has not kept proper accounts the presumption will be against him; but this does not mean that all statements of the mortgagor against him must therefore be taken as true. Shah Gholam Nuzuf v. Mussamut Emanum and others, 9 W. R., 275.

It is the duty of a mortgagee of a fractional share of an estate held in joint tenancy to see that he receives out of the estate all that the mortgagor ought to have received; not only that all assets are realized and brought to account, but that the expenses are regulated with care.

One of several joint mortgagors can sue alone to redeem, there being no necessity to determine the extent of his share in the mortgaged property. Mirza Ali Reza v. Tarasoonderee, 2 W. R., 150.

The mortgage of certain property having been purchased by S., he sold it to G., who foreclosed, got a decree for possession, and sold to W. W.'s intervention having failed in a suit for arrears of rent by a party setting up a title intermediate between him and the ryot, on the ground of a miras pottah obtained from the mortgagor subsequently to the mortgage, he (W.) sued to have his right declared to the rents payable by that ryot. The suit was dismissed on certain issues in the Court of first instance, but decreed in appeal on the single issue as to the pottah having been granted subsequent to the conditionary sale. Held that this issue arose legitimately, and was one within the lower Appellate Court's discretion to allow and within its jurisdiction to determine. Held that it was not only necessary for plaintiff to prove possession, but the very ground he took was want of possession, his cause of action having been that he had been prevented from enjoying the usufruct. Held that plaintiff was entitled to get the property free from the lease, for a mortgagee taking possession under the terms of the mortgage is entitled to have the property in the same condition as it was in when it was mortgaged. Gobind Chundra Banerjee v. J. P. Wise, 12 W. R., 19.

Held that it was not necessary either that the mortgagee's demand should be for a specific sum ultimately ascertained to be due, or that the accounts of a mortgagee in possession should be produced in the preliminary proceedings in which they could not be investigated, but that the obligation to produce the accounts depends on the circumstances of the case and the nature of the issues raised.

That the Sudder Court's order remanding the plaintiff's suit for re-trial on the production of the accounts was an interlocutory one, and that plaintiff's omission to appeal against it did not preclude him from now insisting that the remand for the production of the accounts was erroneous, or that the cause should have been decided in his favour, notwithstanding the non-production of the accounts.

That the production of the accounts was not necessary in a case in which there was no plea, nor proof that the usufruct had liquidated principal and interest, and no deposit had been made to cover the balance admitted to be due.

That plaintiff was entitled to possession of the mortgaged premises as absolute owner by virtue of the conditional sale which had been duly made absolute, but not to mesne profits. A. J. Forbes v. Ameeroonissa Begum, 5 W. R., P. C., 47.

Where, by a proviso in a mortgage, it is agreed that, "in case of default in payment by the mortgagor of the principal sum, or any one instalment of interest thereon," &c., "then and in any such case the whole of the money so secured by these presents shall immediately thereupon become due and payable with a power of sale on such default," and where the principal sum and interest thereon was also secured by a bond and warrant of attorney to confess judgment thereon, the condition of which was in the same words as the covenant for re-payment in the mortgage,—Held that in an action on the covenant contained in the proviso, and on the bond, brought on default of payment of an instalment of interest, but before the date on which the principal was payable, the plaintiff could only recover on either the covenant or the bond in respect of the interest unpaid. Fool Chund Johurry v. Ramkristo Bose and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 425.

Certain property standing in the name of a wife was mortgaged by her. The mortgage debt was paid off. The mortgagee having a decree against the husband attached and sold the property. Held that though payment of the mortgage debt by the wife might have given her a lien on the property to the extent of any money paid by her out of her own fund, the mortgagee's acting on the wife's assertion of title did not prevent him, when he subsequently discovered that the property was really the deceased husband's, from making it available for the satisfaction of his decree against the husband. Ameeroonissa Beebee v. Benode Ram Sein, 2 W. R., 29.

In a suit for redemption the mortgagee cannot dispute the mortgagor's title to the land comprised in the mortgage, on the ground that a claim to it is asserted by other proprietors. Mahomed Abdool Ruzzak v. Sadik Ali, 4 Agra Rep., 142.

Under the terms of a zur-i-peshgee mortgage,—Held that the mortgagee was not entitled to demand the payment of so much of the balances as had become irrecoverable by reason of his own laches, but that he was entitled to retain possession of the mortgaged estate till the balances recoverable at the time of the commencement of the redemption suit were paid by the mortgagor.

Where there is no sufficient evidence before the Appellate Court for the disposal of an issue which is material to the determination of the suit, the proper course to be followed is to remit the case under Section 354, and not under Section 351. Ram Pershad and others v. Mussamut Kishna, 4 Agra Rep., 146.

The proper sum to be allowed a mortgagee for surinjamee is what he has actually spent as expenses of his management. No decree to be given against a person as being the real mortgagee without evidence of the benamee holding. A mortgagee is entitled to interest on account of the balance of putnee rents paid by him. Brojonath Singh Roy v. Sreemutty Bhugobuttee Dossee, 1 W. R., 133.

There is no law restricting a mortgagee to the receipt by way of interest of the amount of principal lent. The mode of calculation to be followed in such cases is every year to add the amount of interest to the principal sum, and then deduct the value of the usufruct. Syed Enaet Ali v. Kuher Roy, 2 W. R., 289.

A mortgagee in possession is not entitled to recover any share of the sale proceeds of the mortgaged property sold for arrears of Government revenue, except to the extent that he shows that the usufruct of the property, while he held the mortgage, has not satisfied his debt. Hurdeo Narain Singh v. Fuzla Hossein, 1 W. R., 270.

A mortgagee in possession should keep an account independent of the butwarra accounts, which may be used as a test of the accuracy of the accounts filed by the parties. The mortgagee's account must be prepared by himself or by his own agent, and must comprise the gross receipts realized from the tenantry, and the account must be full and complete. Ram Kissen Singh v. Shah Kundun Lall, W. R., 1864, 177.

In a suit for possession of mortgaged lands on the allegation of satisfaction of mortgage from the usufruct, the mortgagee is bound to furnish an account of the bonâ-fide proceeds of the estate while in his possession. Toujees, mehal melanee papers, jaidads, and jumma-wasil-bakee papers, are not per se such an account within the meaning of Section 3, Regulation I of 1798, but may corroborate such account. Goluck Chunder Dutt v. Mohun Lall Sookul, 5 W. R., 271.

A person who is both proprietor and mortgagee is not entitled as mortgagee to claim a deduction on account of Government revenue paid by him to save the estate from sale for arrears of revenue, when after resumption it ceased to be a lakheraj estate, which payment it was his duty to have made in his capacity of proprietor. Doolar Chunder v. Damoodur Narain, 3 W. R., 162.

To enable a Court to ascertain the amount received by the mortgagee whilst in possession, the mortgagee should file his jumma-wasil-bakee papers, and proceed generally in accordance with Section 11, Regulation XV of 1793. Shah Ameerooddeen v. Ram Chund Sahoo, 5 W. R., 53.

The mortgagee of the property sold subject to his mortgage is not entitled to have the surplus proceeds paid to him in satisfaction of the decree which he had obtained upon his mortgage, and upon which he had issued execution. Mirza Futeh Ali, alias Nanna Meah v. A. A. Gregory, 6 W. R., Mis., 13.

Under an English deed a mortgagee is entitled to possession before foreclosure immediately upon default, and he would hold possession subject to his own right to foreclose, and to the mortgagor's right to redeem. The decree in the foreclosure suit would not be binding on a party who purchased bonâ fide the rights of the mortgagor, or a portion of them, before the pendency of any suit against the mortgagor. Khelut Chunder Ghose v. Tarachurn Koondoo and others, 6 W. R., 269.

A mortgagee in possession is bound to give an account of all payments made towards the liquidation of his mortgage. On his refusal or neglect to furnish such account, every presumption will be made against him.

Total payment sufficient to cover all due on three mortgages is payment sufficient to cover what may be due on each or any of them. Sirdar Golab Singh v. Rambuddun Singh, 6 W. R., 127.

A mortgagee who once takes the mortgage-money as deposited by the mortgagor within time, cannot afterwards sue for possession, on the ground that the deposit was made after the expiry of the year of grace, and that he had applied for the money under wrong information from his agent. Khondhar Nowazush Hossein v. Mussamut Woosuloonissa Beebee and others, 6 W. R., 249.

Though a mortgage be not an usufructuary mortgage, the mortgagee in possession is bound to give an account of the profits realized by him from the mortgaged property so long as it was in his possession, whether he took possession with or without the consent of the mortgagor. Nilkant Sein and another v. Shaikh Jamooddeen and others, 7 W. R., 30.

A mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged land, who, instead of letting it to ryots and realizing the rents in the ordinary way, cultivates it himself, is not responsible or liable to account for the whole of the profits arising to him by farming the land, but only for such profits as he would have realized had he let it to a tenant, or as the mortgagor would have realized had he let it. Rughoonath Roy v. Baraik Greedharee Singh and others, 7 W. R., 244.

A mortgagee in possession of mortgaged premises is bound to keep them in necessary repair, and is at liberty to charge for the same with interest. Jogendronath Mullick v. Raj Narain Pallooye, 9 W. R., 489.

It is not necessary before instituting a suit against a third party to obtain possession as mortgagee, to first establish title under the deed of mortgage in a suit against the mortgagor. It is necessary that the mortgagee should show the extent of the rights and interests of the mortgagor in the property sued for. But it is sufficient for this purpose to make the mortgagor a defendant in the suit, and there is no necessity for a separate suit against such mortgagor. Doolay Singh v. Goolam Hossein, 2 N. W. R., 72.

A mortgagee in possession occupies a fiduciary position towards all the persons interested as proprietors in the mortgaged estate, and to all he is answerable for whatever mesne profits he may receive in excess of the amount which he is entitled to receive by law or agreement.

And when some of the proprietors assert claims, and assert such claims in behalf of themselves alone, he is entitled to require the claimants to establish the extent of their claims.

It is the practice of the Courts to accept the junmabundee papers which are filed by the putwarrees under the zemindar's supervision as primâ-facie evidence of the profits of the estate, it being open to the mortgagee in possession to show that the amounts entered could not with due diligence be collected. Rajah Deonarain Singh v. Nuk Pershad, 2 N. W. R., 217.

When in a redemption suit the lower Courts refused to allow to the mortgagee the expenses of repairs made by him on the mortgaged property (there being no provision as to repairs contained in the mortgage-deed), the case was remanded by the High Court, that it might be determined what sums had been expended by the mortgagee in the proper and necessary repairs of the mortgaged property, and that the mortgagee might be allowed in the decree such sums with interest. Rágho Bágji v. Andji Manaji Pati, 5 Bom. Rep., A. C., 116.

The right accruing to a lender of money under a mortgage bond is to have his mortgage lien on the land declared and the property sold in satisfaction; and if after sale the debt is not satisfied to proceed against the debtor for the balance. Lloyd's Bank v. Rinchiden, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 214.

A tenant who with the implied consent of his landlord has mortgaged his holding cannot resign it to the landlord. He may resign to him the equity of redemption. But till the mortgage has been redeemed the mortgagee is entitled to retain possession. Sheoumar Rai v. Sheobhung Rai, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1., p. 45.

The security to which a mortgagee becomes entitled under the ordinary form of mortgage in the mofussil is the right to sell the entire estate of the mortgagor as the same existed at the date of the mortgage, and he cannot be deprived of this security by any subsequent charges on the property or prior unregistered charges which the mortgagor may create or have created. When he brings the property to sale, the sale is an out-and-out sale of the estate of the debtor, and the purchaser takes the property subject only to those incumbrances which were in existence at that date, though such of the subsequent incumbrancers as may, at the time of the sale, have taken out execution may have a right to satisfy their claims from the surplus proceeds of the sale. In applying Section 259 of the Code of Civil Procedure to cases of the above description the words, "the right, title, and interest of the defendant in the property sold," must be understood as meaning the right, title, and interest which the decree ordered to be sold, i.e., the right, title, and interest which the judgment-debtor had in the property at the time of the mortgage. Kasandás Láldás et al. v. Pránjivau Ashú Rám, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 146.

A suit can be brought for the declaration of a person's right to have a mortgaged property put up for sale, notwithstanding a money-decree has already been obtained upon the mortgage-bond, and the property has passed into other hands. Radha Gobind Surmah v. Syud Umber Ali, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 27.

Where a creditor sued upon a bond and got a decree declaring his debt leviable from certain landed property on which the bond gave him a mortgage-lien, as well as for any other property found in possession of the debtor, but having elected to satisfy his mortgage-lien and procured the sale of the landed property subject to that lien, —Held that he was bound to recoup himself from the mortgaged property, and that he could not get any part of the surplus sale proceeds, unless it were shown that the mortgaged land had not produced enough to satisfy his claim. Kalee Dass Ghose v. Lall Mohun Ghose, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 306.

When mortgaged lands are sold for arrears of Government revenue, not accrued through default of the mortgagee, any proceeds which may arise from the sale in excess of the arrears belong to the mortgagee, and he has a right of action for their recovery. Heera Lall Chowdry v. Janokeenauth Mookerjee, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 222.

When a mortgagee sues to enforce his lien on property which has intermediately passed by sale into other hands, he is bound to bring his action, not against the mortgagor alone but also against the parties in possession. Ram Yad Singh v. Lalla Saligram Singh, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 98.

Where money is lent upon the security of immoveable property of a nature incapable of division, and the mortgagee, on one of the instalments becoming due, has to sell the entire property, he does not thereby lose all lien over the surplus proceeds. Ram Kant Chowdry v. Brindabun Chunder Dass, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 246.

Where a decree under which mortgagors obtained possession of mortgaged property is reversed, the mortgagees are entitled to be replaced in possession and to get complete restitution, and to be placed in the same position as they were in before the erroneous decree was made, even if the decree reversing the erroneous decree does not provide that the mortgagees should recover possession. Shah Koondun Lall v. Ram Rucha Sing, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 465.

Where a mortgagee brings a suit upon his bond and obtains a decree for the money due, which decree says that execution shall be had against the property pledged and then against the person, it is competent for him to waive his rights as mortgagor, and resting upon his money decree to seek to have a share in the surplus proceeds of sale under Section 271. Fakeer Buksh v. Chatturdharee Chowdry, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 209.

A mortgagee taking out a money decree is not bound to bring one suit for the whole of the property belonging to his judgment-debtor, if it has passed to different parties under separate title-deeds, but may follow the property upon which he has a lien into the hands first of one purchaser and then of another. Huree Mohun Paramanick, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 486.

Though a mortgagee without any agreement is not allowed to charge the mortgagor with all sums which he may think fit to expend in the repair or the improvement of the mortgaged property, whether such expenditure be made by him voluntarily or in pursuance of some official order which he was not legally bound to comply with, yet he may charge the mortgagor for necessary repairs, and the latter will also be liable for any expenditure which he may himself have sanctioned. Ameerool-lah and others v. Ram Doss Doss, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 187.

If the holder of a simple mortgage obtains a mere money-decree for the amount due to him (without any declaration that the mortgaged property is liable for the debt), he cannot attach and sell the property to the prejudice of a bonâ-fide purchaser for valuable consideration. In such a case the mortgagee must enforce his lien by a separate suit against those in possession of the property. Bindabun Chunder Shaha and others v. Janee Beebee, 6 W. R., 312.

An estate mortgaged was about to be sold for arrears of Government revenue, when it was saved from sale by the mortgagee depositing a sum sufficient to discharge the revenue. The mortgagee brought a suit against the person in possession of the talook, the Hindu widow of the original mortgagor, seeking under Section 9, Act I of 1845, to obtain repayment from her personally of the money paid to save the sale of the talook, not making the reversioners defendants, and not praying that the talook in its entirety might be sold to pay the amount due. A decree was given in that suit to the mortgagee, and on execution of that decree the reversioners intervened.

Held that the mortgagee and those claiming under him have no charge on the estate, and are not entitled to have it sold in its entirety to pay the amount which was paid in to stop the sale of the estate. The action brought under Section 9, Act I of 1845, was only a personal action, and the decree gave no remedy against the land, the sale of which for arrears of revenue had been stopped by the deposit. In such a suit the question is not whether the person who pays the arrears acquires thereby a charge on the talook which he saves from sale, but whether he seeks to enforce that right: he must do so in a suit properly framed for that purpose, and not merely in a suit which is confined to a personal remedy against the person in possession of the talook. If the person who so pays the arrears of rent seeks repayment only, under the section and law cited, as against the person in possession of the talooks, who has only a limited interest therein, and confines his suit to that object, the decree so obtained against the person in possession can only be made effectual against the property of that person, including such interest as he had in the talook. This ruling does not affect the general doctrine that, in a suit brought by a third person, the object of which is to recover, or to charge an estate of which a Hindu widow is the proprietress, she will, as defendant, represent and protect the estate, as well in respect of her own as of the reversionary interest. Nogendro Chundro Ghose v. Sreemutty Dossee and others, 8 W. R., 17.

A. gave a mortgage to B. of certain property as a security for money lent, and covenanted not to alienate the property by gift, ijara, putnee, or otherwise, by which loss might be caused to the existing actual assets of the property. A. subsequently granted a putnee to C. B. obtained a decree against A. for the amount of the loan, and the property was sold in default of payment. D. was the purchaser at the auction-sale. Held that D. could maintain his suit against C. to set aside the putnee and for possession. Brajaraj Kishori Dasi v. Mohammed Salem, 1 B. L. R., A. C., 152; S. C., 10 W. R., 151.

The rule of Courts of Equity in England as to allowance to mortgagee in possession not applied, because the mortgagee was led into a belief by the course of decisions in the late Sudder Adawlut, and the general understanding caused by those decisions, that, upon the non-payment by the mortgagor of the money at the time fixed, he had, according to the terms of the mortgage instrument, become the absolute owner of the property.

Mortgagee allowed benefit for buildings erected, or permanent improvements made by him upon the mortgage premises. Directions for an account. Anandrav et al. v. Ravji Dashrath, 2 Bom. Rep., 214.

Held that a mortgagee in possession was entitled to be allowed for expenses incurred in connection with the revenue survey of the land mortgaged to him. Bapessabin Sadashiv v. Ramji Bin Gopalji, 2 Bom. Rep., 220.

A mortgagee can resort to all his remedies on the mortgage deed at the same time, and is not estopped, in an action on the covenant to pay the mortgage money, by the fact of his having obtained a decree for sale. William Mackinnon and others v. Gunnes Chunder Dey and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 470.

Held that a mortgagee whose bond was registered was entitled, under Section 230 of Act VIII of 1859, to recover possession of the mortgaged land of which he had been dispossessed under a decree obtained against his mortgagor by another mortgagee, whose mortgage bond had been subsequently registered, on condition that he satisfied the claim of the decree-holder; otherwise the defendant to be entitled to possession on his satisfying the plaintiff's mortgage claim. Bhikaji et al. v. Vallabhdas et al., 2 Bom. Rep., 209.

Held that a mortgagee in possession of land was bound to cultivate the best crop which it was ordinarily capable of yielding. Girjoji B. Samar v. Keshavero N. P. Henge, 2 Bom. Rep., 211.

Held that a mortgagee in possession, who also became purchaser of the property for the amount secured by the mortgage under a deed of sale which was neither stamped nor registered, could fall back upon his mortgage and recover the amount thereof, in preference to a subsequent purchaser of the same property whose deed of sale was both stamped and registered. Hirachand Bàbàji v. Bhaskar Ababhat Shende, 2 Bom. Rep., 198.

Where a mortgage bond contained an agreement to repay the money with interest by a certain day, and proceeded thus: "If I, the mortgagor, fail to pay the amount, then I will put you in possession of the land, and you may enjoy it, and when I have the means I will redeem the land and pay the debt with interest, and take back the bond,"—Held that on the mortgagor's default the mortgagee might sue for the money, and that he was not bound to accept the land and forego his right of action. Annasvami v. Narranyan, 1 Mad. Rep., 114.

A mortgagee's rights being confiscated by Government for rebellion were given to defendants. Held, on plaintiff's claim for redemption, that the defendants must account for excess of profits over interest in the years when they were in possession. Syud Mahomed Salamut Hossein v. Mussamut Sookh Dayee and others, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 116.

A mortgagee cannot be bound by a decision relating to the property mortgaged, in a suit instituted long after the date of his mortgage, to which he was not a party; nor can he be deprived of his right to enforce his lien by a subsequent sale of the mortgagor's right, title, and interest. Dooma Sahoo v. Joonarain Loll, 12 W. R., 362.

8.—MORTGAGOR.

Defendant lent plaintiff a sum of money to be paid off on the expiry of a zur-i-peshgee lease which he took from plaintiff, it being stipulated that the lessee (the lender) was to clear off principal and interest from the assets of the property leased; and that, on the borrowers paying a trifle expected to remain due after the period of the lease, the lender was to surrender possession without objection. Plaintiff came into Court with an allegation that he had tendered the money still due under the arrangement, and he asked for immediate possession although the term of the lease had not expired.

Held that he was not entitled to possession until that term expired. Soorjun Chowdhry v. Imambundee Begum, 12 W. R., 527.

Held that a mortgage contract, received as a security for a repayment of loan, does not incapacitate the mortgagor from any other dealing with the property, except in defeasance of the right of the mortgagee. Where therefore a zur-i-peshgee lease had been granted to Doohchore Rai for nine years, containing a stipulation that the mortgagor should not alienate or mortgage the land,—Held that a second zur-i-peshgee to Hedoyutoollah made after the expiration of the nine years' term, for the bonâ-fide purpose of paying off the debt due on the joint mortgage was not voidable as contravening the terms of the first mortgage lease, and Hedoyutoollah was entitled to sue to redeem the first mortgage. Doohchore Rai v. Hajee Hedoyutoollah, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 7.

Held that a mortgage effected for a fixed period subsequent to Act XXVIII of 1855 coming into operation, is not redeemable until the period for which it was effected has expired, and that under the circumstances the mortgagors' remedy was to sue for the balance of the mortgage loan which had not been paid to them. Mun Peary v. Shiva Deen and others, 1 Agra Rep., 91.

When a mortgagor omitted to plead in the foreclosure suit that he did not obtain the whole of the consideration-money, he was not permitted to set up that plea for the first time in the subsequent suit for possession. Afzul Khan v. Chytun Roy, W. R., 1864, 206.

According to Section 10, Regulation XV of 1793, it is the duty of the Court to take an account of the receipts of the mortgagee in possession, and then to adjust the mortgage account of principal and interest. Shumboonath Roy v. Monowar Ali, W. R., 1864, 109.

A mortgagor cannot redeem a share of the mortgaged property. This rule is not affected by the sale of part of the mortgaged lands for arrears of revenue. Syud Hashim v. Aujeet Singh, W. R., 1864, 217.

The mortgagor under a zur-i-peshgee is entitled, under Section 2, Regulation I of 1798, to demand back his land immediately after making his deposit. If by mistake or otherwise he demands more land than is comprised in the mortgage, that is not a matter which can justify the mortgagee in keeping possession of land which is in fact comprised in it. Mohun Lall v. Sheikh Ali Afzul, W. R., 1864, 219.

When property granted in a zur-i-peshgee lease was originally rent free, but subsequently resumed and assessed by Government, the mortgagee was held bound either to make a fresh agreement to take the profits, minus the Government revenue as his security, or to call in his money. His not adopting either course for a long period was construed into assent on his part to receive the profits, minus the Government revenue, as security. Joy Prokash Narain v. Radha Kishen, W. R., 1864, 227.

A mortgagee who executes a lease in favour of a mortgagor, stipulating to pay him a certain amount annually as rent, is, as far as the payment of that sum is concerned, a tenant of the mortgagor, and must be sued for any arrears of such rent under Act X of 1859. Bissoroop Dutt v. Binode Ram Sein, W. R., 1864, Act X R., 93.

A dealing between the ticcadar of the mortgagee and the mortgagor, by which the former becomes the purchaser of the mortgagor's rights, does not of itself necessarily change the relative positions of the ticcadar and the mortgagee, and convert the former into a mortgagor in possession. Syud Mahomed Wahed v. Syud Mahomed Luteef, 2 W. R., 201.

If a mortgagor in possession who is entrusted with the dominion over the mortgaged property by the mortgagee (the mortgage being in the English form) wilfully defaults and causes the property to be sold for arrears of Government revenue, for the purpose of defrauding the mortgagee, and purchases it benamee, he is liable to be punished for criminal misappropriation under Section 405 of the Penal Code. Ram Manick Shah v. Brindabun Chunder Potdar, 5 W. R., 230.

A Judge has no discretion to extend the time allowed to a mortgagor under Section 8, Regulation XVII of 1806. Mahomed Gazee Chowdhry v. Abdool Mahomed Ameeroodeen, 5 W. R., Mis., 31.

A suit for redemption does not bar the mortgagor for afterwards suing the mortgagee in possession for mesne profits payable between the date of suit and the execution of decree. Gour Kissen Singh v. Sahay Fukeer Chand and others, 7 W. R., 464.

The purchaser of the rights of a mortgagor who obtained possession of the property cannot be ousted summarily by a subsequent purchaser of a money decree against the mortgagor. Gopee Mahtoon v. Jhugoo Mahtoon, 9 W. R., 150.

The year of grace allowed to a mortgagor by Regulation XVII of 1806, to tender or deposit the amount due to the mortgagee, includes authorized holidays; the mortgagor not being entitled to the deduction of any holidays which may occur when that year expires. Kumola Kant Mytee v. Sremutty Narainee Dossee, 9 W. R., 583.

A. mortgaged land to B., the mortgage instrument providing that B. should be entitled to purchase the land if it were not redeemed by 12th July, 1843. In 1845 B. accepted from A. one pagoda in part payment of the mortgage-money. Held that this was a waiver by B. of his right to purchase. Vankatchari v. Aananlachari and others, 1 Mad. Rep., 69.

Where a mortgagee had assigned his interest, and agreed to pay rent to the assignee, and subsequently permitted the mortgagor to redeem,—Held that a suit for rent could not be maintained in the Revenue Courts by the assignee against the mortgagor, as the relation of landlord and tenant never existed between them, nor against the representatives of the mortgagee, after they ceased to be in occupation of the land, but that the assignee should proceed under the assignment in the Adawulut Courts. Bhau Bahajit Gholap v. Gopal Kunji et al., 2 Bom. Rep., 183.

The mere settlement of a resumed maâfee estate with the mortgagee does not destroy the mortgagor's right to redeem, nor does it necessarily make the holding by the mortgagee a holding adverse to the mortgagor's right. Mussamut Oomrao Begum v. Mussamut Nizamoonnissa and others, 1 Agra Rep. A. C., 224.

A mortgagor stipulated by an instrument in writing that if he failed to repay the sum lent on mortgage within three years, the property mortgaged was to be held an absolute sale.

Held that the mortgagor was entitled to redeem although the amount lent had not been repaid within three years. Nallana Gaundan v. Palani Gaundan, 2 Mad. Rep., 420.

Where plaintiff's ancestors mortgaged land and the mortgagee obtained possession on condition that the produce should extinguish interest,—Held that the plaintiff's suit was not barred by the Law of Limitation, although the transaction took place twelve years before the passing of Regulation II of 1802.

Held also in such a case no cause of action could accrue until something was done to render the friendly possession hostile. Vanneri Purushottaman Nambudri v. Patanattil Kunju Nenavan, 2 Mad. Rep., 382.

A mortgagor is not bound to give notice to his mortgagee of a transfer of his rights. Madhub Thakoor v. Jhoonuck Lall Doss, 12 W. R., 105.

A mortgagor cannot ask for a decree for possession without tendering the whole of the mortgage debt. Joy Gobind Roy v. Bundhoo Singh, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 342.

The lands in suit having been mortgaged to plaintiff under a bond which covenanted that until the whole debt due under the bond was paid off, the mortgagor should not create any new incumbrance upon the mortgaged property,—Held that the mortgagor had no right, under the terms of the mortgage-deed, to grant a subsequent lease to the defendant in consideration of a loan upon a bond, the rents being assigned over in liquidation of the debt, and that plaintiff's prior mortgage must prevail over defendant's lease. Gossain Mungle Dass v. Rughoonauth Sahay, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 500.

The sale of mortgaged property by the heirs of a mortgagee after it has been held and enjoyed by them upwards of sixty years, does not give a fresh cause of action to the representatives of the mortgagor. Ram Dhun Bhuggut v. Guneshee Mahtoon, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 96.

The defendant mortgaged certain premises to the plaintiff by a deed of mortgage, which contained a condition that the mortgagor should remain in possession so long as the interest was regularly paid. Default in payment of the interest was made, and the mortgagee sued for possession of the mortgaged premises.

Held that the mortgagor was entitled to equitable relief against the entry of the mortgagee on payment of all arrears of rent, together with interest upon each instalment and costs; and three months' time was allowed to the mortgagor to make such payment. Situram Dandekur v. Ganesk Goklen, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 121.

9.—Indivisibility of Mortgage Debt.

A mortgaged property, burdened with the payment of an entire debt to two shareholders, is liable to sale at the instance of both creditors separately so long as their claims remain unsatisfied.

The act of one of two holders of a bond cannot destroy the lien of the other on property pledged to both as security for a joint debt. Indurjeet Koonwar v. Brij Bilas Lall, 3 W. R., 130.

Where sixteen villages were included in one mortgage and the equity of redemption in one village was sold to the plaintiffs,—Held that they were entitled to sue the mortgagee, who had purchased the equity of redemption in twelve of the villages, for redemption of their own and three other villages; a previous suit for redemption of their one village having been dismissed on the objection of the mortgagee that they were not entitled to sue to redeem their one village alone. Nawab Ahmed Ali Khan v. Jawahir Singh and others, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 3.

Mortgage debts are indivisible except where there is a distinct notice on the face of the mortgage-deed of the separate shares of the mortgagors.

One co-mortgagor or his representative may redeem the entire estate, if joint and undivided, by payment of the whole of the mortgage-money. Ram Kristo Manjhee and others v. Mussamut Ameroonissa Bebee, 7 W. R., 314.

Where money is advanced on a mortgage the liability cannot be divided. Mussamut Mujeedoonissa v. Syud Dildar Hossein, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 216.

The rule that if the owner of different estates mortgage them to one person separately for distinct debts, or successively to secure the same debt, the mortgagee may insist that one security shall not be redeemed alone, applies to a Mahometan mortgage. In mortgage transactions in which the mortgage contracts have been entered into before Act XXVIII of 1855 came into operation, and to which Regulation V of 1827, Sections 11 and 12, applies, and in which an account of principal and interest on the one side, and of rents and profits on the other side, is not directed, the arrears of interest must be limited to six years. Vithal Mahudeb et al. v. Dand Valad Mahommed Hossein et al., 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 90.

10.—APPORTIONMENT.

In execution of a decree, the right, title, and interest in two parcels of property of a judgment-debtor, who had previous to the attachment executed a simple mortgage thereof to A., were sold; and B. and C. respectively purchased them at different prices.

A. sued the mortgagor and the purchasers B. and C. for enforcing his lien on the two parcels of property. The suit was dismissed by the first Court, but on appeal the order was "appeal decreed." A. entered into a compromise with B., and entered satisfaction of a moiety of the decree. He afterwards issued execution of the other moiety against C., and compelled him to pay.

C. now sues B. for recovery of the proportion of the amount paid by him to A., but which, according to the valuation of the respective properties, should have fallen into the share of B.

Held that the proper decree in the suit of A. against the mortgagor and B. and C. would have been a money-decree against the mortgagor only, with a declaration that the two properties were liable to be sold, clear of subsequent incumbrances, in satisfaction of the mortgage-bond debt.

Held that debt due upon the mortgage-bond was a general burden upon the two properties, for which no portion of those two properties was more liable than the other.

Held that, as between the plaintiff and defendant, the liability was not joint, but several, in proportion to the respective values of the property; and that the plaintiff, having been compelled to pay money for which the property of defendant was legally liable, was entitled to recover the amount from the defendant.

Held that no arrangement between the decree-holder and one of the judgment-debtors would affect the interest of a co-judgment-debtor, unless by express consent. Bhairab Chandra Madak v. Nadar Chand Pal, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 357; S. C., 12 W. R., 291.

The entire village was mortgaged to the defendants, who subsequently obtained by purchase the equity of redemption as to a portion of it. The equity of redemption in another portion was sold to two other persons jointly, one of whom (the plaintiff) claimed to represent by purchase, the other by descent. The plaintiff having sued to redeem the whole share, the defendants questioned the validity of the sale to the persons through whom the plaintiff claimed, and impugned the plaintiff's right as heir. Held that the mortgagees who, on the occasion of the sale impugned, had sued to establish their claim to pre-emption, were not now entitled to question the sale; and, secondly, inasmuch as the estate, or the portion of it held by the persons whom the plaintiff claimed to represent, was a joint estate, the plaintiff having established his right to one moiety by purchase, was entitled to redeem the whole, whether his title to the other moiety by heirship was proved or not. Bithal Nath and Pursotum Lall v. Toolsee Ram, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 125.

The equity of redemption in two mouzahs (the mortgage being joint) was sold in satisfaction of a decree by a third party, and purchased partly by plaintiff and partly by the mortgagee himself. Held, on plaintiff's claim for redemption of the part of the mortgaged property purchased by him, that under such circumstances the whole burden of the mortgage debt could not be thrown on a portion of the equity of redemption, and the plaintiff would be entitled to redeem the portion of the property purchased by him on payment, not of the whole, but of such portion of the debt as is proportionate to the relative value of the mortgaged properties. Mahtab Singh and others v. Misree Lall and Mussamut Soonder, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 88.

The plaintiffs in this suit were purchasers of the equity of redemption in a portion of certain mortgaged premises which were sold in lots, and they brought this suit against the mortgagees who were also purchasers of the equity of redemption of several of the lots. They made the purchasers of the other lots parties to the suit, and sought to redeem their own portion of the estate and to recover possession of their own portion and the portion purchased by the purchasers other than the mortgagees, on payment into Court of a sum sufficient to cover the proportion of the mortgage debt attributable to the said parcels. The mode of applying the whole of the mortgage debt between the different mouzahs of the mortgaged estate in such a case pointed out. The principle of construction, that when a creditor sues for his principal and interest (the latter being equal or more than equal at the time of the commencement of the suit to the principal) he is not debarred from charging subsequent interest for the period during which he is kept out of his money by his debtor's resistance of the demand, is not applicable to a case in which a mortgagee in possession is not a party suing for the money, but the party resisting by every means in his power a claim to redemption and the final settlement of the account. Nawab Ajimut Ali Khan v. Jawahir Singh, 14 S. W. R., P. C., 17.

Where moneys were advanced to several mortgagors, who owned the mortgaged land in certain defined shares, and the mortgagee by purchasing the interest of some of the mortgagors in such land broke up the joint security, the remaining mortgagors are entitled to redeem on payment of a just proportion of the moneys advanced. Kesree v. Seth Roshun Lal, 2 N. W. R., 4.

11.—Sale of Mortgaged Property.

B. and Co., mortgagees with power to sell, sold the mortgaged property to the defendants. No deed was executed until some years afterwards, when the mortgagor was dead. The deed was in the form followed when a mortgagee is the vendor, and the mortgagees join in the conveyance; but the words of conveyance were by the mortgagees alone, and without any confirmation by the mortgagor. Held that the purchaser did not by the deed acquire an indefeasable estate. T. R. Doucett v. J. P. Wise, 3 W. R., 157.

A property was mortgaged in succession to two different persons. Under the latter of the two deeds a money decree was obtained, and the property sold. Subsequently the earlier mortgagee obtained a money decree, and caused the mortgagor's rights and interests to be again sold.

Held that the purchaser at the second sale purchased, not the estate, but the mortgagor's (extinct) right, title, and interest, and could not sue for possession of the property itself. Durpo Narain Mahatah and another v. Nuleeta Soondery Dassee, 11 W. R., 332.

When a plaintiff asks for the realization of a mortgage, and the judgment, although it does not in terms order the sale of the mortgaged property, yet directs that the plaintiff's claim should be granted, the sale which follows in execution of the decree passes to the plaintiff the actual property which was mortgaged. Mussamut Soujharee Coomar v. Rameshur Panda, 4 W. R., 32.

An objector who wishes to save mortgaged property from sale is bound to pay whatever the mortgagor is liable to pay under the decree. Kishen Kishore Ghose v. Sreemutty Gaitree Debia, 7 W. R., 493.

Plaintiff having asked for and obtained the residue of the sale proceeds after all the judgment-creditors had been fully satisfied, was held not to have abandoned his right as mortgagee. Bolakee Lall and others v. Chowdhry Bungshee Singh and others, 7 W. R., 309.

A purchaser, under a decree for sale obtained by a mortgagee under a simple mortgage, does not purchase subject to a conditional sale executed by the mortgagor, after the prior mortgagee had obtained a decree of sale but before the property was actually sold. Rajnarain Singh v. Sheera Mean, 7 W. R., 67.

Held that a mortgagee's right or lien is not affected by an auction sale of the mortgagor's right, and that the limitation of one year provided by Clause 3, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859, is not applicable to a mortgagee's suit seeking enforcement of his mortgage lien against the property. Rai Purdimun Kishen v. Roushun Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 111.

Suit to redeem against transferee, or (in alternative) to enforce terms of purchase. Usual indigo planter's mortgage, with power of sale. After heavy losses the agents (mortgagees) stop the factories, and sell them, informing the planter (mortgagor) of the sale, and suggesting his concurrence. He, in a written acknowledgment, gives reluctant assent: he is not called on for any formal confirmation or act; the mortgagees write off the greater part of the debt to profit and loss, credit the purchase-money, and close the account. Purchaser takes and retains possession. After two years mortgagor dies, leaving a will, in which he describes his property, but does not mention the mortgaged factories. Conveyance to purchaser produced, in which the mortgagor is made a party, but which is dated and executed after the mortgagor's death. It purports to be, not an exercise of the power of sale, but a transfer of the legal estate by the mortgagees at the request of the mortgagor: it is executed by the mortgagees and purchaser.

Held, firstly, that the mortgagor's heir is not entitled to redeem; also that, on dismissal of the redemption suit, no terms or conditions can be imposed on the defendant, who in this case holds under the original contract of sale to which the mortgagor assented.

Held, secondly, that even had the contract included (as argued for appellant) an undertaking to indemnify from liabilities, the payments sought to be reimbursed are beyond six years, and no fraud is proved; therefore as to these the suit is barred. Thomas Robert Doucett v. Josiah Patrick Wise and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 280.

Where in a mortgage-deed the mortgagee covenanted to re-convey on being paid principal and interest, and "all costs and charges as between attorney and client," and the mortgagee, in default of repayment of the mortgage-money, obtained an ex-parte decree for sale, the Court should award him costs as between attorney and client. Chunder Coomar Chatterjee v. Essen Chunder Chatterjee and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 222.

In a suit for moneys secured by a mortgage of landed property, the decree ordered the sale of that property in satisfaction. Held that the decree-holder was bound to bring that property to sale before he could sell any other property belonging to the judgment-debtor. Bromomoyee Debia v. Boykunt Chunder Gungopadhya, 5 W. R., Mis., 52.

Where a decree-holder sells a mortgagor's rights and interests in property already mortgaged and declared liable to sale in liquidation of the debt for which it was mortgaged, the purchaser purchases merely the mortgagor's right to redeem. Lalla Joogul Kishore Lall v. Bhukha Chowdhry and others, 9 W. R., 243.

Where in a suit to make absolute a conditional sale, and to obtain a share in a certain village mortgaged to plaintiff (the usual year of grace having been given, and money been paid into Court in satisfaction considerably after the term allowed by law), there is no issue respecting the minority of some of the mortgagors, the case will not be sent back to the Appellate Court for enquiry whether certain of the mortgagors were minors, or whether the others mortgaged for such purposes as would bind the minors, notwithstanding one of the lower Courts has found the fact of the minority of one of the mortgagors. Subdul v. Buldeo, 2 N. W. R., 23.

After appellant (mortgagor) had upon foreclosure of mortgage become absolute owner of certain talooks, and obtained a decree for possession, and been put into symbolical possession by the Zillah Court, the zemindar brought a summary suit for rent in the Collector's Court against the heirs of the mortgagee, who allowed judgment to go by default, and an ex-parte decree was made against them. In execution of that decree the talooks were sold to the zemindar's mookhtear at a grossly inadequate price. Both the zemindar and his mookhtear had the fullest notice of the appellant's title and claim to possession before the decree for sale. Held by the Privy Council (affirming in effect the authority of the Full Bench decision in 7 W. R., 260) that, under the Regulations in force at the time, and under the circumstances of this case, such a sale against the real owner was clearly invalid, and that no authority had been shown to satisfy their lordships that by any known law or usage zemindars had the power to sell tenures of this kind for arrears of rent as a right inherent in or incident to the tenure, or that any such power rightfully exists, unless by special stipulation, independently of the Regulations. Forbes v. Luchmeeput Singh Dooghur, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 197.

A mortgagor granted a ticca lease of the mortgaged land for ten years to B. R., and under an assignment executed by the mortgagor it was arranged between him and the mortgagee that the latter should pay himself off the ticca rents at a certain rate annually until the realization of the mortgage-debt with principal and interest. Held that until the mortgagee could prove that something had happened to disturb the arrangement made between him and the mortgagor under the terms of the deed of assignment, he could not, either according to law or the terms of the contract, call upon the mortgagor or his representatives to pay the balance of the mortgage-debt, or to have that balance realized from the sale of the mortgaged property. Junessur Dass v. Lalla Ramdhanee Lall, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 263.

The mortgagee without possession of certain lands in the Dakhan (under a mortgage-deed of the 1st of August, 1864) on the 16th of April, 1867, obtained a decree awarding to him possession of the mortgaged premises. On the 11th of July following the mortgagor sold the mortgaged premises to the plaintiff, who had distinct notice of the mortgage. The deed of sale was duly registered. The plaintiff thereupon claimed to hold the premises free from the mortgage.

Held that though a mortgage in the Dakhan must be accompanied by possession to give it validity against third parties, it is not absolutely void for want of such possession, and that the plaintiff, having notice of it, should not be allowed to hold the premises free from the mortgage. Gopal Yadavrav Keskur v. Krishnappa bin Mahadappa, 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 60.

12.— Redemption.

In a suit instituted in 1853 to redeem a mortgage containing a clause making it an absolute sale in default of redemption by a certain date,—Held that in the Madras Presidency effect must be given to that clause, the Regulation XVII of 1806 not being applicable.

A party is not precluded from succeeding upon a title established by a genuine deed because he sets up a false deed, which if treated as a conveyance and not as a mere confirmation may be inconsistent with that title. Pattabhiramier v. Vencaturow Naicken, 7 B. L. R., 137, and 15 S. W. R., P. C., 35.

In a suit to redeem a mortgage it was proved that the mortgagees and their assignee had fraudulently destroyed the deed by which the property was mortgaged. Held that the mortgagees could not be permitted to prove the contents of the deed or the amount of mortgage-debt by secondary evidence, and that the representative of the mortgagor should be allowed to recover the lands without any payment. Sheikh Abdulla Wullad Sheikhassdivekar v. Sheikh Mahomed Wullad Jaffer Gottye, 1 Bom. Rep., 177.

The mortgagor having the option either of depositing the money in the Judge's Court or of tendering it, if there is sufficient excuse for not depositing in the Judge's Court, he is not bound to tender the money and prove that tender. Dabee Rawoot and others v. Heramun Muhatoon and others, 8 W. R., 223.

Where a mortgagee alienates the mortgaged property while the foreclosure suit brought by him is pending, such alienation cannot be allowed to stand between the mortgagor and those rights to redeem which that suit in its ultimate issue may have left open and affirmed to him. Nowab Syed Munsoor Ali Khan Bahadoor v. Rajah Ojoodhya Ram Khan, 8 W. R., 399.

Where a mortgage has not legally been put an end to the mortgagor (or his representatives) is entitled to come into Court and ask to be allowed to redeem, provided sixty years have not elapsed since the last recognition by the mortgagee of the plaintiff's title to the mortgaged property. Runjeet Naran Singh and others v. Mussamut Shureefoonissa and others, 10 W. R., 478.

When the time fixed for payment of a mortgage, in the nature of a bye-bil-wafa, was the end of 1802, and there was no allegation of tender or deposit of the money prior to that date,—Held that the mortgagor had, under Regulation I of 1798, lost his right of redemption, and that the benefit of Regulation XVII of 1806 could not be applied to mortgages made prior to the passing of that enactment. Mussamut Beebee Ruhman v. Sheikh Shamshooddeen Hyder, W. R., 1864, 183.

In a redemption under the old law, for the possession of land, the subject of an usufructuary mortgage, the plaintiff is entitled to an account, even though the terms of the original agreement exempt the defendant from his liability to an account, and although the principal sum advanced is very small. Doorga Dabee v. Issur Chunder Chatterjee and others, 10 W. R., 367.

Suit for redemption of mortgage. The Zillah Court declared the mortgagors (appellants) entitled to redemption, the mortgagees in possession (respondents) having fully paid themselves by receipt of rents and profits. In special appeal, the Sudder Court reversed the Zillah Court's decisions, on the ground that certain proceedings, taken by the mortgagees with a view to foreclosure, had effectually barred the equity of redemption. Held by the Privy Council that the Sudder Court ought not to have decided the case on the question of foreclosure, because that question, though raised upon the pleadings, had not been made one of the issues settled in the Court of first instance, where alone evidence could be taken; that the Court was wrong in treating the proceedings as an effectual bar to the appellant's right of redemption; and that the question of foreclosure ought therefore to be further fully tried upon an issue to be regularly settled.

The Zillah Courts, in coming to a conclusion as to the state of the mortgage accounts, having proceeded not upon proof of the actual collections which were or ought to have been made by the mortgagees, but upon materials which were in a great measure speculative and conjectural, their decision was set aside. Mohun Loll Sookool v. Goluck Chunder Dutt, 1 W. R., P. C., 19.

The plaintiff executed an usufructuary mortgage of certain land for a term of 22 years to the first defendant, for the considerations stated in a written instrument of mortgage, dated the 21st of January, 1865. The mortgage instrument contained a stipulation that possession should be given to the plaintiff upon his paying the principal and interest due to the first defendant within two months from the date of the execution. Held that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem although the amount of principal and interest had not been paid or tendered within two months. B. Dorappa v. Kundikuri Malljunedar, 3 Mad. Rep., A. J., 363.

Where interest is not reserved by the mortgage-deed, but it provides for repayment of the principal only, a payment into Court within a year after the institution of a foreclosure suit of the principal only without interest satisfies the 7th Section of Regulation XVII of 1806, and entitles the mortgagor to the redemption of the property. Roopnarain Singh v. Radho Singh, Marsh., 617.

The lapse of more than twelve years from the year of grace bars the right of redemption. Lotf Hossein and others v. Abdool Ali and others, 8 W. R., 746.

The payment by order of the Judge into the Collector's treasury, before the expiration of the year of grace, of a debt due to a mortgagee was held to be a deposit in Court entitling the borrower to redeem. Abdool Huq v. Mussamut Myah Bewah, W. R., 1864, 184.

A mortgagee is entitled to hold possession till the mortgage debt is fully paid, and no person representing the original mortgagor, and claiming any portion of the mortgaged property, can sue to redeem his separate share, without proof of the satisfaction of the entire debt. Razzeeooddeen v. Jhubboo Singh, W. R., 1864, 75.

On a mortgage of land, with a proviso that in default of repayment of the money advanced the mortgage should be turned into a sale, a third party joined as surety, undertaking to repay the amount advanced if the mortgagor made default in payment at the stipulated time. Default was made and the surety paid the money, and took an assignment of the land from the mortgagee. Held that the heir of the mortgagor was entitled to redeem, and that as against him the surety could not claim to hold the lands as purchaser. Gorakee Bin Canojee v. Nithoo Bin Appajee, 1 Bom. Rep., 135.

A solemn and bonâ-fide acknowledgment in writing of the mortgage and right of mortgagor made by the mortgagee in 1820 and 1825, for the purpose of suit, through his vakeel, whose act and statement for the purpose of suit were within the scope of his authority according to the law then in force (Clause 1, Section 21, Regulation XXVII of 1814), and were to be considered as if his client were personally present, and consenting was a sufficient acknowledgment in writing of the mortgagor's right to redeem, as provided by Clause 5, Section 15.

Where, in a suit brought by a zemindar to eject a ryot, a person intervenes claiming to be a mortgagee of a portion of the ryot's tenure, the Judge is competent to try the mortgagee's right to oppose the ejectment. Gopaul and others v. Ram Suroop Lall, 1 Agra Rep., R. A., 51.

Where a decree for redemption is obtained, but is not executed within the prescribed period for execution, the mortgagee does not, by omission of the mortgagor to execute the decree, cease to be the mortgagee, but the mortgagor or his representative may still maintain a fresh suit for redemption. Chaita and Oomrao v. Purum Sookh, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 256.

A zur-i-peshgee lease, being nothing but a simple mortgage, may be cancelled on proof of discharge of advance, with interest from the usufruct, or on payment of the money in cash. The purchaser of the proprietary rights in a zur-i-peshgee is not barred from suing to redeem, because he, or those through whom he claims, did not sue for an account within twelve years from expiry of term, or from discharge of the debt by the usufruct. Pultun Singh v. Reshal Singh, 1 W. R., 7.

Held that in cases of redemption of mortgage the mortgagee should not be charged with interest on the money collected by him, but that the money so collected should first be applied in payment of interest accruing due on the mortgage-debt; and if there is any surplus in reduction of the principal mortgage debt.

Held further that the mortgagee is entitled to commission on the gross amount of collection to cover the expenses of collection, &c., and this he is entitled to get at the rate of 10 per cent., unless there is any express stipulation to the contrary, or it is shown to be unreasonable. Roghonath v. Luchmun Singh, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 132.

Held that any one of the mortgagors or his legal representatives is, if the mortgage debt has been repaid, entitled to sue for redemption, and to be put in possession of his own share of the estate, whatever his co-parceners may choose to do in the matter; and that the Judge should not have dismissed the suit merely on account of the majority of the mortgagors who disavowed their claim not being parties thereto, but should have proceeded to dispose of the case according to law. Hurdeo and others v. Guneshee Lall, 1 Agra Rep., A. C., 36.

In 1841 A. established her proprietary right to lands as against B. and an otti mortgagee then in possession. In 1844 B. obtained a decree against the mortgagee in a suit to which A. was not a party, and assigned his rights under the mortgage to C., who continued to hold as B.'s assignee down to 1860. Held that unless A. was aware, or might by ordinary diligence have been aware, of the suit of 1844, her right to redeem the lands was not barred by the lapse of twelve years from the decree in that suit. Pudiyakovilagalla v. Allunannalatta Kaduni, 1 Mad. Rep., 146.

In a suit for redemption of mortgaged property it was held (by Bayley, J.) that the law only requires that the mortgagee's account of receipts and disbursements shall be made out, filed in Court, and then sworn to as correct by the mortgagee.

Held (by Phear, J.) that mortgagees are bound to exhibit the detailed items of all their actual receipts and disbursements to the time of accounting, verified by themselves, and accompanied by all vouchers.

Held (by Bayley, J.) to be a rule of law which had been followed in practice, and which this Court must follow, that no redemption can be decreed in such a suit as long as there is any balance found due.

Held (by Phear, J.) that plaintiff ought to obtain a decree for reconveyance on payment of the balance found to be due, with interest and costs of suits within a time specified, and that the Court is not bound by the previous practice, but has power to mould its decrees in such a way as to meet the exigencies of each case. Mokund Lall Sookul v. Goluck Chunder Dutt, 9 W. R., 572.

A mortgagor of lakheraj land subsequently assessed with Government revenue is not entitled to redeem, except on payment of the amount paid by the mortgagee to Government for revenue, with interest in addition to the money due under the mortgage. But in a suit for redemption, in which the mortgagor deposited before suit the amount of the principal sum borrowed by him, he is entitled to a decree on payment into Court of the further sum paid for Government revenue. Joyprokash Roy v. Oorjlun Jha, 3 W. R., 174.

A plaintiff suing for redemption, on the ground of holding in right of dower, cannot in special appeal claim to redeem on the ground of being heir to the mortgagor. Mussamut Bibee Rohaman v. Mussamut Fuzuloonissa, W. R., 1864, 326.

Where an assignee of land covenants with his assignors to repay all the moneys which they have at any time actually or constructively paid to Government for redemption, a suit against him, where money has not been actually paid, is premature, unless there is some definite agreement with Government as to the amount which Government can enforce. Woodrow v. Schiller, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 90.

Held that a suit for redemption is a suit for land; therefore if the land the subject of the mortgage is beyond the local limits, the High Court has no jurisdiction under the 12th Section of the Charter. An objection to jurisdiction cannot be waived by the parties. Sreemutty Lallmoney Dassee v. Juddoo Nauth Shaw, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 319.

In a suit for redemption of mortgage the mortgagee pleaded an absolute sale by virtue of a registered sale deed, and the mortgagors relied on certain ikrarnamahs of contemporaneous dates which were unregistered, showing the nature of the transaction to be that of a conditional mortgage. Held that the plaintiffs having succeeded in proving the ikrarnamahs to be genuine, the real nature of the transaction was not that of an absolute sale but that of a conditional mortgage, and that the mortgagors were consequently entitled to redeem if the mortgage debt was shown to have been paid from the usufruct. Rai Asapal Singh v. Nunkoo Singh, 4 Agra Rep., 205.

In a suit for redemption of mortgaged land, accounts must be made up before a decree is passed, that it may be ascertained whether or not the mortgage has been paid off, &c. Muthra Dass v. Magh Singh, 2 N. W. R., 207.

On a question of the right of a mortgagee to redeem by deposit of the principal sum due only, the length of possession by the mortgagee is immaterial. Abdulla Khan v. Upendra Chandra, 6 B. L. R., Ap., 53, and 14 S. W. R., C. R., 278.

A. executed an ikrar by way of mortgage, whereby it was stipulated that B., the mortgagee, was to remain in possession of the mortgaged premises for a period of eight years; that the amount due was to be paid off from the usufruct; and that if at the expiry of that period any sum should remain due under the ikrar, A. was to pay the same.

In a suit for redemption brought before the expiry of the period mentioned in the ikrar on deposit of the amount due thereunder,—Held that the suit would not lie. Chundra Kumar Banerjee v. Iswar Chundra Newgi, 6 B. L. R., 562; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 455.

Where a mortgagor brings a suit to redeem mortgaged land on payment of such sum as shall be found due to the mortgagee, the Court is not justified in decreeing possession without payment in favour of the mortgagor, merely because the mortgagee denies the existence of the mortgage.

Where a point is taken on appeal, the Appellate Court should consider and decide it, although the vakil may omit to argue it. Dada Valad Valli v. Bavasha Valad Kasam, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J. 9.

Though it would have been more satisfactory if the Lower Appellate Court, instead of declining to give plaintiffs a decree for possession of certain mortgaged lands on the ground that the sum tendered by them was insufficient to liquidate the mortgage debt, had made a decree in favour of plaintiffs, contingent upon their paying such sum as should be found due, yet the plaintiffs had no strict right to such a decree, and it cannot be said that the Lower Appellate Court had committed an error in law in refusing to make such a decree. Boistub Doss Koondoo v. Huro Narain Haldar, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 409.

In a suit to redeem, the plaintiff produced a mortgage, the genuineness of which the defendants denied, but they produced a mortgage from the plaintiff's ancestors to their ancestors. The Principal Sudder Ameen made a decree for the restoration of the lands according to the terms of the mortgage produced by the defendants. The Civil Judge reversed the decision.

Held in special appeal that the Principal Sudder Ameen was justified in making the decree which he gave. Unicha Kandyile Kunhi Kutti Nair v. Valia Pidigail Kunhamed Rutty Maraccur, 4 Mad. Rep., 319.

Where a decree declared plaintiffs' right to redeem a mortgage whenever within the month of Jeth they paid the mortgage-money, but did not direct that the money should be paid into Court, and plaintiffs brought the money into Court on the first day of the following month, the last day of Jeth falling on a Sunday; but did not, however, take out execution for some months, nor apprize the defendant that they had paid the money into Court, —Held that such payment was not a proper tender, and that to make it a proper tender the plaintiffs should not only have paid the money into Court in the month of Jeth, but were bound to see that the mortgagee in possession had due notice of such payment. Nitia Nund v. Mya Run, 3 N. W. R., 80.

A mortgagor's right to redeem what he has mortgaged is indefeasible, and cannot be interfered with by unauthorized acts of the mortgagees, e.g., a butwarra entered into by the latter. Shaikh Muzhur Hossein v. Hur Pershad Roy, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 353.

The mortgagors of a talook, having succeeded in a suit for redemption against the mortgagees and persons to whom the latter had given a portion of the estate in putnee, were put in possession under the decree. They then brought a suit for a declaration of their right to receive rent from two under-tenants (F. and M.), who had given them a kubuleut, but against whom defendant had obtained a decree for rent in the Collector's Court. Defendant's case was that within the talook was a jumma formerly held by one B. who had sold it to him, and that he (defendant) had been paying rent to the mortgagee's putneedar, and had settled the under-tenants, F. and M., in B.'s dwelling-house at a certain rent. Held that the real question was whether the jote jumma gave defendant a right to possession as against mortgagors re-entering after redemption,—i.e., what was its nature, whether mourosee, mokurrurce, or otherwise. Moulvie Ahmed Ali v. Bhootun Mohun Dass, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 517.

13.—Equity of Redemption.

T. had acted as trustee and agent for M., and F. had acted in the place of T. during T.'s temporary absence. T. and F., as attorneys in partnership, did solicitors' work for M. T., as trustee and agent for M., invested money on a mortgage. The equity of redemption was put up for sale at public auction in execution of a decree obtained by a third party against the mortgagors, and a portion was purchased by T. and F. as attorneys in partnership.

Held that there was no equity compelling T. and F. to hold the equity of redemption for the benefit of M.

Semble,—The agentship could not be separated from the attorneyship. Mackintosh v. Nobimoney Dossee and others, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 160.

A mortgage-deed of gatkuli land contained a clause by which the mortgagor agreed, at the expiration of the period for which the mortgage was made, to give a razinamah of the mortgage land.

In accordance with this stipulation the mortgagor gave a razinamah to Government by which he gave up all claim to the land, which was then granted to the mortgagee.

Held that the equity of redemption of the mortgagor was thereby extinguished. The Government need not be made a party to a suit of this nature unless the interests of Government are affected. Ránee Salad Avaji Mali v. Ramabai Kan Mahadu Mali, 6 Bom. Rep., A. C. J., 265.

The purchaser of an equity of redemption sued to redeem and obtain possession of the land. Held that he was entitled to possession if, on taking the accounts, it appeared that the mortgage debt had been liquidated before the plaint was filed, or upon paying into Court within one month the balance remaining due, if, on taking the accounts, it should appear that anything still remained due. Jokhee Lall and Beharee Lall v. Mussamut Huno Kooer, 10 W. R., 167.

In 1819 A. mortgaged lands in the mofussil to B., and, as a collateral security, gave B. a bond and warrant of attorney to enter up judgment in the Supreme Court. In 1821 execution issued on this judgment; and under a fi-fa the property was seized and sold by the plaintiff. B. was declared the purchaser, and got a bill of sale, and was put in possession. B. having remained ever since in possession, A.'s representatives in 1865 sued to redeem on the ground that the mortgage debt was more than satisfied by the usufruct. Held that the right of redemption still subsisted; that at the time of the sheriff's sale in 1821 an equity of redemption could not be seized and sold under a fi-fa, and therefore no title passed to B. when he purchased; and that as B. had no right to possession, save as mortgagee, he must be deemed to have obtained and to have remained in possession in that capacity. Hurropershad Ghoshal v. Hurromonee Debia and others, 8 W. R., 210.

A purchaser of the right of redemption of a mortgagor may sue without tender out of Court of the mortgage debt to the mortgagee. The tender of the money out of Court only affects the purchaser's right to recover his costs. Dinonath Butobyal v. Womachurn Roy, 3 W. R., 128.

A deposit of the mortgage-money by a mortgagor, accompanied by a protest against the validity of the mortgage itself, and a threat to sue for its cancelment, imposes no condition upon the acceptance of the money so as to render the tender invalid.

A deposit being once duly made, the mortgagor's equity of redemption is saved, quite irrespective of whether the mortgagee has received notice of the deposit or not. Hethan Singh v. Nurkoo Singh, 3 W. R., 184.

The estate in dispute was mortgaged to the defendant in the form of a zur-i-peshgee lease to continue so long as the mortgage-money remained unpaid. The mortgagee, having been evicted by the mortgagor, sued for and obtained a decree for possession and wasilat (the latter to be assessed in execution). He never obtained possession under the decree, but recovered wasilat by execution. Two persons (the plaintiffs in these suits) claiming separate shares in the entire estate by purchases from the mortgagor, subsequent to the mortgage sued separately each to redeem his own share, upon payment of a proportional share of the mortgage-money.

Held that the plaintiffs, as representing the original mortgagor, were entitled to redeem; but that as the mortgage was an entire estate neither of them could redeem upon payment of less than the full amount of the mortgage-money.

Held also that the defendant having been wrongfully dispossessed, was not bound to account for wasilat recovered under his decree, the wasilat or damages so recovered being different from the usufruct enjoyed by a mortgagee. Raja Joymungul Singh v. Bibee Saeedun and others, 6 W. R., 240.

14.—FORECLOSURE.

A mortgagee sold part of the mortgaged property and then foreclosed, his purchaser being no party to the foreclosure proceedings. The mortgagee and purchaser afterwards sued for recovery of possession of the mortgaged property after foreclosure.

Held that the purchaser could maintain his suit, although he had not been a party to the foreclosure proceedings for the recovery of the mortgaged property, which had been purchased by him. The foreclosure conferred an absolute title to the whole property mortgaged on the mortgagee and anybody claiming under him. Raj Chandra Podder v. Srimati Manorama, 3 B. L. R., Ap., 148; S. C., 12 W. R., 353.

When a deed of mortgage is silent as to interest, payment of the bare principal within the year of grace is sufficient to bar foreclosure. Radhanath Sein v. Bungo Chunder Sein, W. R., 1864, 157.

Two persons jointly held a mortgage, each having an equal share in it. The equity of redemption subsequently became vested solely in one of these persons. Held that, under the circumstances, a notice of foreclosure confined to a one-half share only of the mortgage (issued by the mortgagee, who had no interest in the equity of redemption) was sufficient, and that the foreclosure proceedings were not bad, although they related only to a part and not to the whole of the mortgaged property. Hunoomanpersaud Sahoo v. Kaleepersaud Sahoo, W. R., 1864, 285.

Exposition of the law of foreclosure as established by the regulations and the practice of the Courts in Bengal.

The plaintiff purchased a property from the defendant's late husband under a deed of conditional sale and an ikrar. On the day before the date of the bill of sale, defendant's husband granted a beneficial lease of the mortgaged premises, benamee to the plaintiff's son, but really to the plaintiff, who, under colour of it, obtained possession of the mortgaged premises. Plaintiff, although in possession of the mortgaged premises, sues for possession and mesne profits.

Held that as the real object of the suit was to perfect the plaintiff's title as absolute owner of the property, he was not debarred from that relief, if he was otherwise entitled to it, because, under an erroneous view of the effect of the lease, he had asked for it by his plaint in a somewhat different form and with something to which he was not entitled. That, while the lease did not save the plaintiff from the liabilities, at the same time that it gave him the advantages of a mortgagee in possession, still less can it be taken to modify the terms of the conditional sale.

When mortgaged property is sold at auction subject to a mortgagor's right to redeem, the mortgagor's equities follow the property even when it turns out that the purchaser bought as agent, and not as principal. Nawab Syed Munsoor Ali Khan Bahadoor v. Rajah Ojoodhya Ram Khan, 8 W. R., 399.

Where several parties have an interest in a mortgage it is not competent for one of them to foreclose in respect of his fractional share. A party suing for possession of a share of mortgaged property (after its release has been effected by an arrangement made between the mortgagees and mortgagor) on the ground that he had an interest in the mortgage and in the funds advanced by the mortgagees, must show that the mortgagor had notice of such interest. Bhora Roy and others v. Abilack Roy and others, 10 W. R., 476.

According to Section 8, Regulation XVII of 1806, where mortgage-property is situate in two districts, an order of foreclosure relating to the whole property may be obtained in the Court of either district.

The order of foreclosure having been served on the widow of the deceased mortgagor who had a life-interest, and also was the guardian of the minor adopted son and legal representative of the deceased, the service was held to be sufficient. Rasmonee Debia v. Pran Kissen Das, 7 W. R., P. C., 66.

Under Regulation XVII of 1806, the Zillah Judge is judicially required to see it proved before him that the notice of foreclosure has been duly served, and to record a proceeding certifying that the requirements of that Regulation have been duly carried out, and also any elucidating facts necessary to be recorded as occurring within the year of grace. Meer Abbas Aly v. Vund Coomer Ghose and others, 7 W. R., 123.

A mortgagee's "application" for foreclosure, as the term is used in Section 7, Regulation XVII of 1806, means the whole transaction contemplated in Section 8, ending with the notification to the mortgagor; thus the year of grace for payment, and the year necessary for completion of foreclosure, commence to run from the date of the notification. Suroop Chunder Nag v. Bonomalee Pundit, 9 W. R., 116.

Where, in proceedings held before the issue of Circular Order of 22nd July, 1813, a mortgagor had the opportunity in a Court competent to decide the matter, to contest as against the mortgagee all questions of fact necessary to give a good and absolute title to the mortgagees, and, though called upon, did not show that the mortgage was a bad one, but admitted that the mortgagees were not paid off, and that an extension of the year of grace had elapsed without his performing any of the conditions which would have saved the property from being foreclosed, it was held that even if the proceedings did not possess the character of a regular suit, they were sufficient in themselves to effect a foreclosure, if such was their purpose. Kunjeet Haran Singh and others v. Mussamut Shurefoonissa and others, 10 W. R., 478.

A foreclosure decree cannot give the mortgagee a title against a person who was not a party to the suit, or deprive such person of a right to redeem, acquired by purchase of a portion of the mortgaged property. Khelut Chunder Ghose v. Tara Churn Koondoo Chowdhry, 1 W. R., 175.

The omission of the Court to send with a notice of foreclosure a copy of the mortgagee's petition as required by Section 8, Regulation XVII of 1806, was held to be not such an irregularity as made void the foreclosure in a case where, subsequent to the issue of the notice, the mortgagor continued to live in the neighbourhood of the property, and the mortgagee erected buildings on it, and used it as his own, without objection or claim on the part of the mortgagor. Saligram Tewaree v. Beharee Misser, W. R., 1864, 36.

The right of a mortgagee without possession to foreclose does not cease 12 years after his alleged mortgage. The possession of the mortgagor is not to be presumed to be adverse to, but may be perfectly reconcileable with, the subsisting lien of the mortgagee. The question of limitation depends on whether there is a mortgage actually subsisting and acknowledged by the acts and conduct of the parties within 12 years before suit. Kali Coomar Dutt Roy v. Juggut Soondery Chowdhrain, 1 W. R., 239.

The effect of a foreclosure decree in the Supreme Court in a mortgage suit between Hindus, is equivalent to a decree establishing proprietary right in the Mofussil Courts, in similar suits on the like instruments.

The mortgagee in possession and another having sought to deprive the mortgagor of his title to redeem by means of a secret purchase of the mortgaged estate between them, including the fraudulent device of a sale by auction for arrears of revenue, such arrears being designedly incurred by the mortgagee in possession, it was held that a suit for redemption and for possession instituted many years after the sale for arrears was not barred by Section 24 of Act I of 1845. If a mortgagee in possession fraudulently allows the Government revenue to fall into arrears, with a view to the land being put up for sale and his buying it in for himself, and he does in fact become the purchaser of it at the Government sale for arrears, such a purchase will not defeat the equity of redemption. Nawab Sidhee Nazir Ali Khan v. Ojoodhyaram Khan, 5 W. R., P. C., 83.

Where a mortgagee extended the time for payment to the 25th November, and the mortgagor was prevented by the closing of the Court from depositing the mortgage-money in the Judge's Court on that day,—Held that the mortgagor saved his estate from foreclosure by depositing the money in Court on the first day after the 25th November on which the Court was open. Dabee Rawoot and others v. Heeramur Muhatoon, 8 W. R., 223.

It is sufficient to bar a foreclosure suit that the principal money and interest due on the mortgage have been paid into Court within the year of grace, or an extended time agreed upon by the parties without costs incurred by the mortgagor in the matter of the mortgage. Talem Roy and others v. Deb Shahee and others, Marsh., 167.

Where the mortgagor covenanted to pay to the mortgagee the principal sum at a given date and interest in the meantime, and in default of payment of the principal on the date mentioned, interest on so much as should remain due at the same rate, the mortgagee covenanting to re-convey on payment on the given date, and in default of payment of principal or interest at their respective due dates the whole sum to become due,—Held that the assignee of the mortgagee had a right to foreclose on default of payment of an instalment of interest before the date on which the principal was made payable. Prosaddoss Dutt v. Ramdhun Mullick and others, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 255.

A mortgagee has the right of foreclosure. The decisions of the Sudder Court that no mortgagee could ever foreclose the mortgagor's equity of redemption overruled. Venkatchellam Pillay v. Zimmalachary and others, 2 Mad. Rep., 289.

The right of a mortgagee without possession to foreclose does not cease for twelve years after his alleged mortgage. The possession of the mortgagor is not to be presumed to be adverse to but may be perfectly reconcileable with the subsisting lien of the mortgagee. The question of limitation depends on whether there is a mortgage actually subsisting and acknowledged by the acts and conduct of the parties within twelve years before the suit. Kali Coomar Dutt Roy v. Jugut Soonderee Chowdhrain, 1 W. R., 239.

Suits for foreclosure may be dismissed with costs against disclaiming defendants. Mackintosh v. Nobinmoney Dossee, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 160.

The purchaser of the equity of redemption is not entitled to notice in a foreclosure suit, especially if the purchase has not been made until after the institution of the suit. Gooroopersaud Junak v. Bipropersaud Berrah, Marsh., 292.

The purchaser from the mortgagor of the equity of redemption in the mortgaged property is not entitled to notice of foreclosure previous to a foreclosure suit instituted by the mortgagee, but it is sufficient if such notice is given to the mortgagor. Mussamut Kurmofool v. Bissessur Singh and another, Marsh., 337.

The defendant in a foreclosure suit paid into Court the amount due in respect of principal and interest of the mortgage. This payment was made after the day on which, according to the mortgage, the sale was to become absolute, but within a few days of the expiration of the year of grace. The payment into Court was accompanied by a petition praying that the fund might be retained in Court, until the decision of certain objections made by the defendant, disputing the amount due under the mortgage-money. Held that such payment into Court was not a tender of the mortgage-money, and that the mortgagee was entitled to foreclosure. Nubungo Moonjurree Dabia and others v. Goluckmonee Dabia and others, Marsh., 45.

A conditional mortgage-deed was drawn out, stipulating for the repayment of the loan by annual instalments, in nineteen years, and empowering the mortgagee to foreclose if two instalments remained unpaid on any third yearly instalment falling due. Held, on the construction of the mortgage-deed, that the mortgagee was not thereby limited to foreclose as soon as the first default in payment of those instalments occurred, and not afterwards; but that the mortgagee was authorized in proceeding to foreclose if there were subsequent defaults, any previous default notwithstanding; in fact there is nothing in law to limit the time within which a mortgagee may foreclose, if, notwithstanding one or more default, the mortgagee's right is not repudiated but recognized. Mortgagee's right to sue for possession accrues upon such final foreclosure, and he can sue at any time within twelve years from that date, under Clause 12, Section 1, Act XIV of 1859. Buldeen and others v. Mussamut Golab Koonwer and others, 1 Agra Rep., F. B., 102.

Held that a conditional sale may, by agreement and acts of the parties, become absolute without formal foreclosure proceedings taken under Regulation XVII of 1806. Goordyal and others v. Mussamut Honskoonwer, 2 Agra Rep., A. C., 176.

In a suit for foreclosure brought by a mortgagee under a bye-bil-wafa, or conditional bill of sale, it is not incumbent on the mortgagee to produce his accounts; the language of Section 3 of Regulation I of 1798 pointing to an adjustment of accounts in the event of accounting becoming necessary, in which case the lender is to account. A. J. Forbes v. Ameeroonissa Begum, 1 Ind. Jur., N. S., 117.

T. had acted as trustee and agent for M., and F. had acted in the place of T. during T.'s temporary absence. T. and F., as attorneys in partnership, did solicitor's work for M. T., as trustee and agent for M., invested money on a mortgage. The equity of redemption was put up for sale at public auction in execution of a decree obtained by a third party against the mortgagors, and a portion was purchased by T. and F. as attorneys in partnership. Held that under the circumstances, there was no equity calling for a sale in substitution of the foreclosure claimed by M. Mackintosh v. Nobinmoney Dossee, 2 Ind. Jur., N. S., 160.

A suit by a mortgagee for foreclosure must be brought in the district where the land is.

In like manner a suit by a mortgagee who is entitled, not to a foreclosure, but to a decree to establish his charge and for the sale of the specific property charged, must be brought in the Court within the legal limits of whose jurisdiction the property is.

The remedy against the borrower personally under a mortgage-deed must be pursued in the district in which the cause of action arose.

But when the object of the lender is to proceed to enforce his charge against the property (such property being immoveable) his suit must be brought in the district where the property is situated. Buldeo Doss v. Mussamut Mool Kooer, 2 N. W. R., 19.

By a mortgage in the English form, the defendants conveyed certain property to the plaintiff, subject to the proviso that, in the event of the defendants paying to the plaintiff the principal sum on the 4th September, 1868, and in the meantime paying interest on that sum half-yearly, with annual rests, in case of default of such payment, then the plaintiff should re-convey the property. The defendants failed to pay the interest, and on the 4th December, 1866, the plaintiff applied to the Judge of Chittagong for foreclosure; thereupon notice under Section 8 of Regulation XVII of 1806 was issued, and served on the defendants. On the 15th April, 1868, this suit was instituted by the plaintiff for the establishment and confirmation of absolute purchase, and to obtain possession of the mortgaged premises.

Held that the suit was not maintainable; Regulation XVII of 1806 applied to this mortgage; and, under that Regulation the mortgagee could not apply for foreclosure until the time agreed upon for re-payment by the mortgagor, that is, the "stipulated period" referred to in Section 7, and the mortgagee is entitled to one year's grace from notification of the application for foreclosure made after that date. Srimati Sarasibala Debi v. Nand Lal Sen, 5 B. L. R., 389; 13 S. W. R., C. R., 364.

The mortgagors of certain landed property not having paid the money due on the mortgage within the stipulated period, the mortgagees considering it unnecessary to proceed under Section 8, Regulation XVII of 1806, i.e. without waiting to foreclose the mortgage, brought a suit, obtained a decree, and took possession.

Held that as the mortgagees took possession before final foreclosure, the mortgagors were in a position to redeem, and might do so by payment of the advance made on the mortgage, whether such payment was made in cash or realized by the mortgagees from the usufruct of the estate. Ishan Chunder Bannerjee v. Juggut Chunder Doss, 13 S. W. R., C. R., 44.

Where a party bonâ fide purchased from another, as his own property, land in fact mortgaged, and obtained possession and mutation of names, his title was held to be adverse to that of the mortgagee.

Foreclosure proceedings in the Supreme Court as to mofussil property, to which a purchaser from the mortgagor is not made a party, cannot affect that purchaser.

After a bonâ-fide purchaser had been in open possession more than twelve years, and after the lapse of more than twelve years from the accrual to the mortgagee of the right of entry under the mortgage deed (which was in the English form) the mortgagor sued the purchaser to obtain possession of the property. Held the suit was barred.

Quære,—Whether in cases in the mofussil where the mortgagor continues in possession paying rent to the mortgagee, the law of limitation begins to run from the date of the right of entry. Brajanath Kundu Chowdry v. Khilat Chundra Ghose, 8 B. L. R., 104; and 16 S. W. R., P. C., 33.

The effect of a stipulation as to re-payment at a specified time is to entitle the mortgagee, if so minded, to foreclose at that time in the event of re-payment not being then made. Gunga Pershad Roy v. Bibee Enayet Zahera, 16 S. W. R., C. R., 251.

Bye-bil-wafas or kut-kubalas are redeemable like ordinary mortgages, and subject to foreclosure.

It cannot be laid down as a rule universally true, that under Section 14, Regulation III, 1793, a mortgagee's proceeding for a foreclosure under a mortgage of the class of bye-bil-wafa simply, cannot be preferred after 12 years from the expiration of the time which the instrument fixes as the period of redemption by payment, and on the expiration of which the conditional sale will become absolute, for this indiscriminating ground of decision would include alike adverse occupations and those which had not the semblance even of such a character, and would establish a bar arising from simple occupation, and not from the laches of the demandant or of others before him.

When a mortgagee not only seeks the assistance of a Court to give him possession of his pledge, but also to foreclose the mortgage, he must effect that object in the mode prescribed by Section 14, Regulation III of 1795; Section 3, Regulation II, 1805; and Section 8, Regulation XVII, 1806.

Mere words in the form of a protest which may accompany a tender will not defeat it when they can reasonably be regarded as idle words. But the payment into Court of the mortgage money, accompanied by a petition disputing the mortgagee's title to foreclose, and expressing an intention amounting to a notice to sue the mortgagee to recover back the very money tendered, is not a valid tender. Prannath Chowdhry v. Ramrutton Roy, 4 W. R., H. C., 37.

The plaintiff sued after foreclosure for possession of property mortgaged to him. He in good faith advanced the consideration-money to discharge a debt contracted by the original owner, and his security was either wholly or in part a substitution for the original valid mortgage by the said owner. The mortgagor was not a stranger but a nephew of the original owner, and one who produced an apparently valid will, who had obtained a certificate of Court authorizing him to collect the debts of the deceased, who was actually in possession of the property, and to whom the mortgaged property belonged, if not as devisee at least as one of the heirs. Held, under these circumstances, that the plaintiff had a valid title as mortgagee, and having foreclosed his mortgage was now entitled to sue for possession.

Held also that the principal defendant now in possession having purchased at a sale in execution subsequent to the foreclosure proceedings (i.e., after the year of grace), the rights and interests of the original owner and of the mortgagor as his representative, and having by such purchase acquired only such rights and interests as then remained in the judgment-debtor (i. e., nil) was not entitled to withhold the estate from the plaintiff. Madhub Anund Moitee v. Gunesh Persad, 1 W. R., 92.

The legal position of a mortgagee after foreclosure is not impugnable except on clear proof of collusion and fraud. Gooroo Doss Roy v. Romonee Soondury Dossee, 1 W. R., 272.

15.—Notice of Foreclosure.

The prior foreclosure of a subsequent mortgagee does not relieve the property of the lien upon it under the first mortgagee.

Quære,—Whether the second mortgagee is the mortgagor's legal representative for the purpose of the notice of foreclosure under Section 8, Regulation XVII of 1806.

When the first mortgagee had no knowledge or cognizance of the second mortgage, or of the foreclosure proceedings taken under it, the second mortgagee had no just ground of complaint that the notice of foreclosure was served, not on him, but on the mortgagor. Kalee Kishore Chatterjee v. Tara Pershad Roy, 4 W. R., 1.

In what cases notice of foreclosure should be given to the purchaser of a mortgagor's equity of redemption. Bissonath Singh v. Brojonath Doss and others, 6 W. R., 230.

Where the notice of foreclosure was duly served on the mortgagor, no subsequent transfer of the property, whether voluntary or involuntary, could affect the validity of the notice, or impose on the mortgagee any new obligation in the way of causing a fresh notice to be served on the purchaser. The notice having been duly served on the mortgagor, his right and interest were subsequently sold in execution and the mortgagee caused a second notice to be served on the purchaser. The foreclosure took place after the expiry of a year from the first, but within a year from the date of second notice. Held under the circumstances of the case that, as the second notice was merely for greater caution to bring to the knowledge of purchaser that notice had already been issued, and did not supersede the first notice, the foreclosure proceedings were regular, and the suit for possession was maintainable. Zamin Ali v. Hossein Ali and others, 3 Agra Rep., 187.

A purchaser from a mortgagor, as one of his legal representatives, is entitled to notice of foreclosure. Madhub Thakoor v. Jhoonuck Lall Doss, 12 W. R., 105.

After a notice of foreclosure, and shortly before the expiry of the year of grace, a mortgagee allowed the mortgagor six months to redeem the mortgage. The mortgagor subsequently died, and the mortgagee sued his legal representative to recover the property. Held that it was not necessary that fresh notice of foreclosure should be issued. Buzloor Ruheem v. Abdoolah and another, 10 W. R., 359.

It cannot be said that, if a notice of foreclosure addressed to a deceased mortgagor has reached the hands of his representatives, they have not had the notice, nor that they were debarred from paying or were not required to pay the amount of the mortgage upon receiving that notice. Ram Chunder Halder v. Jonab Ali Khan, 17 S. W. R., C. R., 230.

The regulation as to service of a notice of foreclosure does not provide for any mode of service in substitution for personal service, though in some cases it has been held that personal service is not absolutely necessary; but to justify resort to any other mode of service it must be shown that in spite of efforts made for that purpose the notice cannot for some reason be personally served.

A copy of the report of the nazir of the Civil Court, copies of the depositions of witnesses not taken in the presence of the parties to the suit, and a copy of the final foreclosure proceeding, are not legal evidence to prove the service of a notice of foreclosure. Madho Singh and another v. Mahtab Singh and others, 3 N. W. R., 325.

A mortgagee, under a conditional sale, caused notice of foreclosure to be issued, and subsequently by an agreement securing certain advantages to him he extended the term of grace. The terms of that agreement not having been complied with, the mortgagee was held to be entitled to revert to the foreclosure proceedings before instituted. Lall Dhur Rae v. Gamput Rae, 1 N. W. R., Par. 2, p. 22.

A notice of foreclosure, bearing the seal of the Court issuing it, but signed only by a Moonserim, is not a sufficient compliance with the law, which requires that the notice be given under the seal and official signature of the Judge. Seith Hur Lall v. Manickpal and others, 3 N. W. R., 176.

Where notice of foreclosure issues, and the serving officer finds that the mortgagor is not at home, it is sufficient if he affixes the notice on the door of the mortgagor's house, personal notice on the mortgagor not being essential. Soorjoo Kant Banncrjee v. Kristo Kishore Poddar, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 423.

Omission to give notice to the mortgagor or his representative is sufficient to vitiate the whole of the foreclosure proceedings. Mussamut Khukroo

Misrain v. Jhoomuck Lall Dass, 15 S. W. R., C. R., 263.

Regulation XVII of 1806, giving no special direction as to the person on whom notice of foreclosure is to be served, when the person for the time being entitled to the equity of redemption is a minor, and no guardian of such minor has been appointed under Act XL of 1858, service of such notice of foreclosure upon the minor and his mother will be deemed sufficient service. Dabee Pershad v. Man Rhem, 2 N. W. R., 444.

16.—Priorities and Marshalling.

The plaintiffs advanced a sum of money on the security of a simple mortgage of a share in four talooks, and obtained a simple money decree. They then caused the mortgaged premises to be attached, but did not proceed to sale. Afterwards they negotiated a loan to the judgment-debtors from a third party, the present appellant, upon a simple mortgage of one of the same talooks, concealing the existence of their prior lien, and appropriated the money so obtained in discharge of other debts due to themselves from their judgment-debtors. The appellant obtained a simple money decree, and caused the premises to be attached and sold. Before the sale the plaintiffs gave notice of their lien, and in consequence the appellant purchased for a trifle. The plaintiffs brought the present suit for a declaration of their prior lien, and for a re-sale of the premises in satisfaction of their mortgage. The appellant contended in his defence that as fraud was perpetrated by the plaintiffs in inducing him to make the loan without disclosing their prior lien, his mortgage should have priority over them. Held that the appellant must be considered as having the first incumbrance. That the notice of the plaintiffs' mortgage given at the execution sale could only affect the appellant's title as purchaser. Priority as between the appellant and the plaintiffs in respect of incumbrances already existing could not be affected by such notice. Bharat Lall Bhagat v. Gopalsnaran Lall Bhagat, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 1; S. C., 11 W. R., 286.

A. executed in favour of B. a simple mortgage of certain property. He afterwards executed in favour of C. a mortgage by bye-bil-wafa or conditional sale of the same property. C. obtained a decree for foreclosure, and got possession thereunder. B. then obtained a money decree against A., and in execution seized and sold and became the purchaser of the said property, and was put into possession of it. On C. suing B. to recover possession, B. claimed to be entitled to hold the property by reason of the prior lien which he had under the simple mortgage. Held that as B. had only got a money decree and no declaration of his rights as mortgagee, he could not set up a prior lien against C. Kassilunissa Bibee v. Hurunissa Bibee, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 6; S. C., 10 W. R., 468.

Per Seton-Karr, J.—Case remanded for the lower Court to find whether, when property hypothecated for a bond has passed a bonâ-fide purchaser, the same can be declared liable to satisfy such part of a money decree on the bond as cannot be satisfied from any other source.

Per Norman, J.—If A. has a mortgage on two different estates for the same debt, and B. has a mortgage on one only of the estates for another debt due from the same party, B. has a right in equity to throw A. in the first instance for satisfaction upon the security which he, B., cannot touch, where it will not prejudice A.'s right or improperly control his remedies. A purchaser of one of the estates has the same equity as a mortgagee. Bishonath Mookerjee and another v. Kristo Mohun Mookerjee, 7 W. R., 483.

When a person mortgages his property first to A. and then to B., B. takes the mortgage subject to A.'s lien. A. is not bound to warn B. that he has a previous lien; it is the duty of the borrower to give all information to the lender. If A. stood by while the borrower was negotiating a loan with B., and kept silence, though he knew that the borrower had again pledged his property to B., such silence could not be construed into a waiver of his claim, or in any way affect his rights. Luchmun Suhae Chowdhry v. Gujraj Jha, 4 W. R., 45.

A prior security by unregistered contract does not give a preferential title over a second mortgagee who obtained a conveyance of the land for valuable consideration and without notice, and has foreclosed the mortgage. Nobo Coomar Doss v. Gorachand Mookerjee, 2 W. R., 286.

A lien on property obtained by a previous mortgage has legal priority over that arising out of a later mortgage. J. Beckwith v. Umesh Chunder Roy, 3 W. R., 110.

The appellant having asked that plaintiff might be compelled to resort first to the two other properties for the satisfaction of his demand before touching the third, but having given no evidence to show that he was a bonâ-fide subsequent mortgagee without notice of the prior mortgage, the Court declined to accede to the prayer lest they should be prejudicing the plaintiff's rights or improperly controlling his remedies.

Quære,—Should the doctrine of marshalling of securities be introduced into this country? Khetoosee Cherooria v. Ranee Madhub Doss, 12 W. R., 114.

The claimant entered into an agreement for the purchase of certain property, and on the execution of the agreement deposited Rs. 15,000 as earnest-money of the contract and in part payment of the purchase-money. The claimant was not satisfied at that time with the title-deeds supplied by the vendor, but afterwards entered into fresh negotiations for the purchase upon different terms. The vendor died, and the present claim was filed in a suit to administer his estate. Held that the claimant was entitled to be paid in full the Rs. 15,000 in priority to all other creditors; and that his lien was not lost by the failure either of the original contract or the subsequent negotiations. Kenny v. The Administrator-General of Bengal, 3 B. L. R., O. C., 75.

The English law of tacking is not recognized in the Courts of this country. Udaya Chandra Rana v. Bhajahari Jana, 2 B. L. R., Ap., 45.

A mortgagor a few days after hypothecating a mouzah as security to the Government, mortgaged it with other property to the plaintiff. The deed of mortgage was immediately registered. The security deed was not registered till long afterwards. The mouzah having been sold by the Collector on account of a sum due under the security deed, it was held that though the purchaser took the mouzah subject to the prior registered mortgage, yet the mode in which the property had been dealt with by the mortgagor entitled the purchaser to require that the other property should first be applied in satisfaction of the mortgage debt. Toolsee Ram v. Munno Lall, 1 W. R., 353.

The plaintiff had lent money to a Court Ameen, who mortgaged, as security for the repayment of the amount, certain fees due to him then in deposit, and certain fees which might thereafter be deposited on his account. Those fees were subsequently attached by the defendant, who had obtained a decree for rent against the Ameen. After that the plaintiff obtained a simple money decree against the Ameen, and applied, in execution of his decree, to have the fees paid out to him, but his application was refused on the ground of the defendant's attachment.

In a suit to recover the sums in deposit, and to have it declared that the plaintiff's lien on them was prior to that of the defendant,—Held that the plaintiff's mortgage gave him priority, and that he was not barred from bringing the present suit by his having already sued to recover the amount, and obtained a mere money decree. Lalla Tilukdhari Lall v. J. Furlong, 2 B. L. R., A. C., 236.

Fictitious sale.—Right of a subsequent mortgagee with notice.—Issues. Garbhu Bhagat v. Kunglal Singh, 7 B. L. R., Ap., 33.

The mere possession of the title deeds by a second mortgagee, though a purchaser for value without notice will not give him priority. There must be some act or default of the first mortgagee to have this effect. Somasundaree Tambiran v. Sakkarai Pattan, 4 Mad. Rep., 369.

In 1840, A. mortgaged certain lands to B., which he had granted in patni at a rent of Rs. 145. Subsequently, in September, 1844, A. granted a fresh patni at a reduced rent of Rs. 90; and on the 9th October, 1844, A. mortgaged the same lands to C. In 1856, C. obtained a decree for the redemption of the mortgage to B., and he paid off the debt to B., but it did not appear that he took an assignment of the mortgage for the purpose of keeping it on foot as a security against incumbrances created by A. subsequently to the date of that mortgage, and prior to that of the mortgage to himself; and in 1862 he obtained a final decree for foreclosure against A. In a suit by C. to set aside the lease of September, 1844,—Held that it was valid and binding upon him.

Semble,—The English principle of tacking does not apply to mortgages of land in the mofussil. Gaur Narayan Mazumdar v. Brajanath Kunda Chowdry, 5 B. L. R., 463; 14 S. W. R., C. R., 491.

In a suit for the redemption of immoveable property brought by the plaintiff as donee from a Hindu widow of the equity of redemption, the plaintiff's right to the property as reversioner cannot be enquired into, notwithstanding an allegation in the plaint that he was a near relative of the husband of the donor.

A donee of the grantor is a third party within the meaning of Regulation XVIII of 1827, Section 14, Clause 1, and, therefore, as against him a deed of sale of the property given in gift is only valid from the date on which it was stamped.

Precedents on this point questioned but followed.

Where a Hindu widow mortgaged immoveable property to one person, and afterwards gave it in gift to another,—

Held that the deed of gift did not convey to the donee the widow's equity of redemption. Jagannath Vithal v. Apaji Vishnu, 5 Bom. Rep., A C., p. 217.

Plaintiff and defendant No. 5 had mortgages over the same property, the mortgage of the latter being prior to that of the former.

Defendant sued for the money covered by the kistbundee, and obtained a money-decree, in execution of which the rights and interests of the mortgagor were purchased, after notice of plaintiff's lien by defendant No. 5, who entered into possession. Held that under the circumstances the mortgagor's rights and interests sold as above amounted only to the equity of redemption, and the sale did not extinguish plaintiff's right under the subsequent mortgage, and that the purchaser could be entitled to retain possession only in case of his paying off plaintiff's lien. Deo Chaund Sahoo v. Teeluck Singh, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 238.

G. borrowed money from S. He then borrowed money from D., mortgaging as security the property in suit. After that he borrowed from plaintiffs, executing a bond by which he again mortgaged the same property. Subsequently plaintiffs obtained a decree by which the mortgaged property was declared liable to sale for the amount decreed, sold the property in execution, and purchased it themselves. They were disturbed from possession by defendants in execution of a rent-decree under which they ousted plaintiffs, and got their own names registered as proprietors. Plaintiffs now sued for declaration and enforcement of their rights as purchasers at the above sale. Defendants claimed as purchasers in execution of a money-decree obtained against G. by the first creditor S., alleging that they paid off the money due to the second creditor D., and were entitled to hold possession, their purchase having been previous to that of the plaintiffs. Held that in purchasing the rights and interests of G. defendants purchased his right to redeem property already subject to two mortgages, and as they purchased with full notice, they could only retain possession by paying off both mortgages. Held that plaintiffs purchased not merely the equity of redemption, but G.'s rights and interests as they were when the mortgage was created, subject to the mortgage held by D., but free from subsequent incumbrances. Narain Sahoo v. Ochoot Sahoo, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 233.

The prohibition contained in Section 30 of Act IV of 1862, which regulates the Bank of Bengal against making loans and advances on the security of land, is no prohibition against the bank taking land as security for a past loan and an existing debt.

Where title-deeds of land had been deposited by a debtor with the Bank of Bengal, and a letter was given authorizing the bank to sell the land and apply the proceeds in liquidation of a debt then existing and due to the bank, it was held that a valid equitable mortgage was thereby created in favour of the bank as a security for the money due.

The Court declined to entertain the question whether the document relied on was one requiring a stamp, as being a matter not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Courts. Ibrahim Azim v. W. D. Cruickshank, 7 B. L. R., 653.

The firm of C. N. and Co., Calcutta, had an account with a bank, of which R. was the manager, under an arrangement that the bank should discount bills accepted by C. N. and Co. to a certain amount, and that C. N. and Co. should keep in the bank a certain fixed cash balance. In November R., finding that the limit of the discount accommodation had been exceeded and the cash account overdrawn, declined to discount any more bills unless security were given for the amount then due to the bank. A., the only partner in the firm of C. N. and Co. then in Calcutta, verbally promised on 24th November to deposit with the bank the title-deeds of the premises in which C. N. and Co. carried on their business; and in consideration of such promise R. discounted further bills from 24th to 29th November. A. sent to R. a letter on 25th November as follows: "In pursuance of the conversation the writer had with you yesterday we now deposit the title-deeds of landed house property as security against our discount account." The letter enclosed certain title-deeds, of which R. acknowledged the receipt. R. subsequently discovered they were not the title-deeds which A. had promised to deposit, and of this he gave A. notice by letter on 28th November. C. N. and Co., on 5th November, 1870, suspended payment, and by the usual order their estate and effects vested in the Official Assignee, who thereupon finding that the bank claimed a lien on the deeds, brought a suit against the bank for recovery of them. Held that the deposit of the title-deeds was not void under Section 24 of the Insolvent Act.

Held also that the bank was entitled to retain the deeds as security both for the balance of the discount account existing at the time of the promise to deposit, and also for the bills discounted between the 24th and 29th November.

Semble,—The bank was entitled to hold the deeds actually deposited as if they were the deeds which formed the subject of the verbal promise to R. A. B. Miller v. The Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China, 6 B. L. R., 701.

17.—Regulation XV of 1793.

Mortgagees in actual possession should, under Section 11, Regulation XV of 1793, be examined as to the truth of mortgage accounts, excluding persons who, according to the manners and custom of the country, are unable to appear in Court, or others who from their position are not likely to be acquainted with the actual state of facts. Where one of the co-sharers has a competent knowledge of the facts his deposition is sufficient to prove the truth of the accounts. Ram Phul Pandey v. Wahed Ali Khan, 14 S. W. R., C. R., 66.

Section 6 prohibiting the Courts from awarding as interest a sum larger than the principal, is not applicable to a suit instituted after the passing of Act XXVIII of 1855.

Even under Regulation XV of 1793, it was the practice of the Court to allow interest in excess of principal, when the interest had accumulated owing to reasons not ascribable to procrastination on the part of the creditor. Huromonee Gooptta v. Gobind Coomar Chowdhry, 5 W. R., 51.

To enable a Court to ascertain the amount received by the mortgagee whilst in possession, the mortgagee should file his jumma-wasil-bakee papers, and proceed generally in accordance with Section 11. Shah Ameerooddeen v. Ram Chand Sahoo, 5 W. R., 53.

Regulation XV of 1793, Sections 8 and 9, forbids the maintenance of any suit arising out of an usurious transaction. T. B. Wise v. Jugobundhoo Bose, 2 B. L. R., P. C., 69.

18.—Regulation XVII of 1806.

Regulation XVII of 1806 came into operation in the District of Chupra on September 11th, 1806. Sheikh Bukshush Hossein v. Bibee Fuzeelonissa, W. R., 1864, 189.

Regulation XVII of 1806 took effect, not from the date on which it was passed by the Governor-General in Council, namely, September 11th, 1806, but from the date of its promulgation.

Suit in 1863 for the redemption of certain property in Zillah Sarun conveyed to the defendant by a deed of conditional sale in 1806, the day of payment (on failure of which the sale was to become absolute) being the 28th September, 1806. Held that the onus of showing the Regulation was promulgated in Sarun prior to September 28th lay on the plaintiff who sued for redemption; and that as he had failed to give such evidence, his suit must be dismissed. Sureefoonissa v. Sheikh Enayet Hossein, 5 W. R., 88.

The year mentioned in Section 8 of Regulation XVII of 1806 is to be reckoned from the date of the service of the notice under that section. Mahesh Chunder Sen v. Tarinee, 1 B. L. R., F. B., 15; 10 W. R., F. B., 27.

Under Section 7, Regulation XVII of 1806, if a mortgagee has obtained possession at any time before a final foreclosure of the mortgage, the mortgagor's payment or tender of the principal sum due under the mortgage debt saves his equity of redemption. Held that the section applies where the mortgagee has obtained a decree for possession and wasilat, whether he executes it or not. Sakriman Dichut v. Dharam Nath Tewari, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 141.

The purchaser from a mortgagor is his legal representative; and when the mortgagee takes out foreclosure proceedings, the notice enjoined by Section 8, Regulation XVII of 1806, must be served on such purchaser if it issued after the sale; fresh notice to the purchaser would not be necessary if the sale took place after notice to the mortgagor. Achumbit Misser and others v. Lall Nund Ram and others, 11 W. R., 544.

Following precedents of the High Court, it was held that the purchaser from a mortgagor comes within the category of legal representatives under Regulation XVII of 1806. Golam Bustagur Khan v. Jugger Singh and others, 10 W. R., 86.

In order to obtain a decree for foreclosure against a mortgagor, the perwannah to be issued by the Judge under Section 8 of Regulation XVII of 1806 must distinctly notify to the mortgagor that if he shall not redeem the property mortgaged in the manner provided for by the preceding section within one year from the date of notification, the mortgage will be finally foreclosed and the conditional sale will become conclusive. Bhukun Khan v. Bechun Khan, 3 N. W. R., 35.

If a mortgagor deposits money in Court without placing any actual restriction on its being paid over to the mortgagee, but with express notice that the mortgagor denies the existence of any mortgage, and intends to sue to recover back the money so deposited,—Held that this is not such a deposit, within the meaning of Regulations I of 1798 and XVII of 1806, as will save the right of redemption. Abdool Rahman v. Kisto Lall Ghose, 6 W. R., 225.

Under Section 8, Regulation XVII of 1806, a mortgagee is bound to serve notice of foreclosure upon the assignee of the mortgagor, whether such assignee be of the whole or a portion of the mortgaged premises, and whether notice of the assignment has been given to the mortgagee or not. Ganga Gobind Mundul v. Bani Madhab Ghose, 3 B. L. R., A. C., 172.

The notice of foreclosure under Section 8, Regulation XVII of 1806, is not merely a preliminary proceeding leading up to a judgment of foreclosure to be subsequently pronounced in Court. It not only fixes the date from which the period during which the mortgagor is to retain the right to redeem is to be computed, but it is of itself the operative act in the foreclosure proceeding. The service of the notice, therefore, should be evidenced by the clearest proof, and should be in all cases, if not personal, at least such as to leave no doubt in the mind of the Court that the notice itself must have reached the hands or come to the knowledge of the mortgagors. Syud Eusuf Ali v. Mussamut Azumtoonissa, W. R., 1864. 49.

The purchaser from a mortgagor is his legal representative; and when the mortgagee takes out foreclosure proceedings, the notice enjoined by Section 8, Regulation XVII of 1806, must be served on such purchaser if it is used after the sale; fresh notice to the purchaser would not be necessary if the sale took place after notice to the mortgagor. Achumbit Misser and others v. Lalla Nund Ram and others, 11 W. R., 544.

19.—ACT XIX OF 1843.

Held that the term "satisfied" as used in Section 2, Act XIX of 1843, does not merely signify that the mortgage-money may be realized by sale, but that all the stipulations of the mortgage deed are to be performed, and its terms and conditions fulfilled. Pursidh Narain Rai v. Sheikh Mohamed Shookool Huq, 1 N. W. R., Par. 1, p. 38.

Where, when Act XIX of 1843 was in force, a purchaser bought land with notice of a prior unregistered mortgage which was referred to in the purchase-deed, the purchaser agreeing to pay off the mortgage, it was held that the purchaser took subject to the mortgage notwithstanding its not being registered. Kishorbhái Gallabhai v. Jorábhai Dají 7 Bom. Rep., A. C., 56.
